COMMISSION.

VICTORIA R.

L.S. Victoria, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland Queen, Defender of the Faith.

To our right trusty and well-beloved Councillor Sir George Jessel, Knight, Master or Keeper of the Rolls and Records in Chancery; Our right trusty and entirely-beloved Cousin and Councillor Robert Arthur Talbot, Marquess of Salisbury; Our right trusty and right well-beloved Cousin David Graham Drummond, Earl of Airlie, Knight of Our Most Ancient and Most Noble Order of the Thistle; Our right trusty and right well-beloved Cousin Philip Henry, Earl Stanhope; Our trusty and well-beloved Edmond George Fitzmaurice, Esq. (commonly called Lord Edmond George Fitzmaurice); the Right Reverend Father in God Charles Bishop of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe; Our right trusty and well-beloved James, Baron Talbot de Malahide; Our right trusty and well-beloved Richard Monckton, Baron Houghton; Our right trusty and well-beloved John Emerich Edward, Baron Acton; Our trusty and well-beloved Sir William Stirling Maxwell, Baronet; Our trusty and well-beloved Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy, Knight, Deputy Keeper of the Records; Our trusty and well-beloved Charles William Russell, Doctor in Divinity, President of the College of St. Patrick, Maynooth; and Our trusty and well-beloved George Webbe Dasent, Doctor of Civil Law, greeting.

Whereas We did, by Warrant under Our Royal Sign Manual bearing date the second day of April one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and by subsequent Warrants, authorise and appoint Our right trusty and well-beloved Councillor John, Baron Romilly (since deceased), together with the several noblemen and gentlemen therein named, or any three or more of them, to be Our Commissioners to make inquiry into the places in which Documents illustrative of History or General Public Interest belonging to private persons are deposited, and to consider whether, with the consent of the owners, means might not be taken to render such Documents available for public reference, as by the tenor of the first-recited Warrant under Our Sign Manual, dated the second day of April one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, does more fully and at large appear:

Now know ye, that We have revoked and determined, and do by these Presents revoke and determine, the said several Warrants and every matter and thing therein contained:

And whereas We have deemed it expedient that a new Commission should issue for the purposes specified in such Warrant of second day of April one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine:

Commission appointing Commissioners to make inquiry as to the places in which Documents illustrative of History or General Public Interest belonging to private persons are deposited, and to consider whether, with the consent of the owners, means might not be taken to render such Documents available for public reference.

Further know ye that We, reposing great trust and confidence in your ability and discretion, have appointed, and do by these Presents nominate, constitute, and appoint, you the said Sir George Jessel; Robert Arthur Talbot, Marquess of Salisbury; David Graham Drummond, Earl of Airlie; Philip Henry, Earl Stanhope; Edmond George Fitzmaurice (commonly called Lord Edmond George Fitzmaurice); Charles, Bishop of Limerick, Ardfert, and Aghadoe; James, Baron Talbot de Malahide; Richard Monckton, Baron Houghton; John Emerich Edward, Baron Acton; Sir William Stirling Maxwell; Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy; Charles William Russell; and George Webbe Dasent, to be Our Commissioners to make inquiry as to the places in which such Papers and Manuscripts are deposited, and for any of the purposes set forth in the original Warrant under Our Sign Manual, dated second day of April one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine :

And for the purpose of carrying out the said inquiry We do hereby authorise you to call in the aid and co-operation of all possessors of Manuscripts and Papers, inviting them to assist you in furthering the object of this Commission, and to give them full assurance that no information is sought except such as relates to Public Affairs, and that no knowledge or information which may be obtained from their collections shall be promulgated without their full license and consent :

And We do further by these Presents authorise you, with the consent of the owners of such Manuscripts, to make abstracts and catalogues of such Manuscripts :

And We do hereby direct that you, or any three or more of you, shall form a quorum, and that you, or any three or more of you, shall have power to invite the possessors of such Papers and Records as you may deem it desirable to inspect, and to produce them before you.

And Our further will and pleasure is that you Our said Commissioners, or any three or more of you, do report to Us from time to time in writing under your hands and seals all and every your proceedings under and by virtue of these Presents :

And for the better enabling you to execute these Presents We do hereby nominate, constitute, and appoint Our trusty and well-beloved John Romilly, Esquire, Barister-at-Law, as the Secretary to this Our Commission to attend you, whose services and assistance We require you to use from time to time as occasion may require.

Given at Our Court at St. James's, the Seventh day of December one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, in the Thirty-ninth Year of Our Reign.

By Her Majesty's Command.

RICHD. ASSHETON CROSS.

FIFTH REPORT

OF THE

ROYAL COMMISSION ON HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS.

TO THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY,

WE, Your Majesty's Commissioners appointed by Your Royal Warrant bearing date the 7th of December 1875, to inquire what papers and manuscripts belonging to private families would be useful in illustrating constitutional Law, Science, and General History of this country, and to which their respective possessors would be willing to give access, respectfully beg leave to submit this our Report, to Your Majesty.

Your Majesty, by Royal Warrant, dated the 2nd of April 1869, and by subsequent Warrants, did authorise and appoint the late John Baron Romilly, together with the several other noblemen and gentlemen therein named, to be Your Majesty's Commissioners, to make inquiry as to the places in which documents illustrative of History or of general public interest, belonging to private persons, are deposited, and to consider whether, with the consent of the owners thereof, means might not be taken to render such documents available for public reference; and Your Majesty's Commissioners, pursuant to such instructions in Your Majesty's Royal Warrants, did make such inquiries as they were thereby authorised and instructed to make, and did accordingly make four several Reports to Your Majesty, giving a detailed account of their proceedings therein.

Your Majesty's Commissioners also did further pursue their instructions and collect materials for a Fifth Report to Your Majesty of their proceedings therein, but, owing to certain unforeseen occurrences, were not able to complete the same; foremost among them being the unexpected and lamented death of Baron Romilly, the late Master of the Rolls, who had taken great interest and an active and prominent part in the management of the business of the said Commission; the illness and consequent incapacity of one of the gentlemen appointed by the Commission to act as Inspector of Manuscripts in Ireland, and the prolonged illness and ultimate death of their Assistant Secretary. In consequence of these untoward and most unfortunate occurrences, it was deemed advisable by Your Majesty to revoke and determine Your Majesty's previous Warrants, and, by another Warrant, in substitution thereof to issue a new Commission, appointing thereby the same noblemen and gentlemen (with the exception of Baron Romilly, now deceased), of whom three or more were to form a quorum, to perform the same duties as had been entrusted to them by Your Majesty's previous Warrants. In conformity with the duties so devolving upon them by virtue thereof Your Majesty's Commissioners, with the aid of the materials collected by the Commissioners under the late Commission for their intended Fifth Report, and by adopting the substance of that intended Report, are enabled to present and now have the honour of presenting to Your Majesty the following as their Report (herein called the Fifth Report).

The work of inspection during the past year has been carried on by Mr. Alfred J. Horwood, Mr. H. T. Riley, and Mr. J. C. Jeaffreson for England; Dr. Stuart and Mr. Fraser for Scotland; and Mr. Gilbert for Ireland. In addition to which, Professor Brewer has continued his examination of the Cecil documents in the possession of the Marquis of Salisbury. The Rev. Canon J. C. Robertson (assisted by Mr. J. B. Sheppard) has furnished a report on the manuscripts preserved in Canterbury Cathedral.

In accordance with the original circular of the Commission, the Report of every Inspector has been submitted to the owner of the papers to which his Report refers; and no Report has been published of any manuscripts until consent for its publication has first been obtained from the owner of them.

In the course of the past year 70 additional Collections have been examined, and about 60 Reports have been prepared; and your Commissioners have the gratification of assuring Your Majesty that since the issue of Your Majesty's Royal Warrant of 2d April 1869 more than 420 different collections of manuscripts have thus been examined. Besides which, numerous applications have been spontaneously made for the services of the Inspectors, and the utmost willingness has been evinced by many noblemen and gentlemen to assist the work of the Commission.

The Reports of the Inspectors, printed in the Appendix, pp. 1-665, embrace the following collections:—

In England and Wales.—Of the House of Lords; the Duke of Sutherland; the Marquis of Lansdowne; the Marquis of Salisbury; the Marquis of Ripon; Lord Hatherton; Sir Edmund Lechmere; Sir John Maryon Wilson; Sir John Lawson; Sir Henry Mildmay; Sir Alexander Malet; Sir Gerald Fitzgerald; Lewis Majendie, Esq., M.P.; Rev. H. T. Ellacombe; Walter Charles Strickland, Esq.; Reginald Cholmondeley, Esq.; A. C. Ranyard, Esq.; Stanhope Grove, Esq., Commander R.N.; Evelyn Philip Shirley, Esq.; J. R. Pine Coffin, Esq.; Rev. Edmund Field; Miss Conway Griffith; Robert M. Prideaux, Esq.; Canterbury Cathedral; Catholic Chapter of Westminster, Spanish Place; Cardinal Manning; University College, Oxford; Wadham College, Oxford; Magdalene College, Cambridge; Pembroke College, Cambridge; Parish of Alwington, North Devon; Corporation of Rye; Corporation of New Romney; Corporation of Lydd, Kent; Corporation of Folkestone; Corporation of Dartmouth; Weymouth and Melcombe Regis; High Wycombe, or Chipping Wycombe, Bucks; Corporation of St. Albans; Corporation of Sandwich; Parish of Hartland, North Devon; Corporation of Fordwich, Kent; Mendlesham, Suffolk.

In Scotland.—Of the Marquis of Ailsa; the Marquis of Bute; the Earl of Aberdeen; the Earl of Lauderdale; Lord Kinnaird; Lord Wharnclyffe; Sir William Forbes; Sir John Bethune of Kilconquhar; Mrs. Barclay-Allardice; A. D. R. Baillie Cochrane, Esq., M.P.; William Cosmo Gordon, Esq.; A. J. W. H. K. Erskine of Dun; Mrs. D. M. Maxwell Witham, and R. Maxwell Witham, Esq.; Miss M. E. Stirling of Renton; Royal Burgh of Perth.

House of Lords.—Messrs. Monro and Thoms have continued their labours on the manuscripts of the House of Lords, and had at the date of the present Report carried the Calendar to the end of the year 1643. In their Report (App., p. 1) they call special attention to the Minute Books, or rough Journal, kept by one of the Clerks of the Table, and more particularly to the volume containing a record of the Earl of Strafford's trial; which, however, unfortunately ends on the very day that the Bill of Attainder was read a first time in the House of Commons. Many letters have come to light respecting the different incidents in the Civil War, and the most eminent agents who figured in them; also numerous papers referring to the Irish rebellion; letters from Laud, during his imprisonment in the Tower, showing the needless hardships to which he was subjected, and many papers which illustrate the violence of the religious parties of the period. Under the date of Aug. 17, 1643, appears a petition from three messengers, asking for some reward for the number of Papists they have been the means of bringing to trial. In a list of the victims annexed, it appears that six were executed, eight reprieved by the King, while others were outlawed or effected their escape. The outrages committed in Canterbury Cathedral are graphically described in a letter from Dr. Paske dated Aug. 30, 1642, from whose account it appears that the soldiers overthrew the communion table, defaced the screen, violated the monuments of the dead, spoiled the organs, broke down the rails, and destroyed the surplices and prayer books, strewing them all over the pavement. From these and other particulars, it will be seen that the researches of Messrs. Monro and Thoms are of considerable value.

The Duke of Sutherland.—The Duke of Sutherland has at Trentham a collection of several hundred letters which he most courteously sent to London for the use of the Commission. They extend over a period of two centuries, and extracts have been made by Mr. Horwood from such of them as deal with public events. The series opens with the correspondence of Admiral Sir Richard Leveson and his cousin Sir John Leveson. Sir Richard was concerned towards the end of the reign of Queen Elizabeth in taking one of the Spanish carracks, and many difficulties had to be surmounted before the matter of his rich prize could be settled. Sir Richard Leveson, who was present at the siege of Kinsale in 1601, describes how the town was garrisoned by Spaniards, and the defeat of Tyrone and O'Donnell by the English forces. The collection also comprises letters addressed to Lord Cobham, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, in the latter years of the same reign. The letters relating to the Civil War and the Commonwealth contain news of interest. In the correspondence of Francis Newport, M.P. for Shrewsbury, evidence is given of the moderate demand made by Charles I. of Sir John Hotham before Hull. The apprehensions of the Protector Oliver Cromwell and the design to make him a king are here noticed, as also the wedding feast of one of Oliver's daughters, where he drank well, and came out of his chamber in déshabille to answer a petition. The statements in a letter of news at p. 143 respecting Oliver and Lady Claypole, and at p. 150 of the attempt of Heveningham to escape prosecution by throwing on Bradshaw the blame of his attendance during the trial of King Charles, will be read with interest. The various speculations at the Restoration regarding the future Queen are detailed in these papers. These speculations raised the hopes of foreign countries, and eventually ended in a fight between the King's French cook and the cooks of three noblemen (p. 160). The letters from Stephen Charlton are numerous and full of news of the day. He gives instances of the irresolution and yet tyrannical conduct of the Protector in the last years of his life, and of the great dissatisfaction of the people. He mentions an attempt to assassinate Oliver's eldest son Richard (p. 166). In the letters of Sir Richard Temple an account is given of what took place at Whitehall among the officers of the army a few weeks after the death of Oliver (p. 172). The sixteen letters by Dugdale are valuable both for their notices of public affairs and for their allusions to Dugdale's literary labours. The rejoicings at the Restoration, the presents to Charles II., the punishment of the Regicides, his favour to the Presbyterians and neglect of the Cavaliers, are fully related by various writers. Notices are also preserved of the public curiosity regarding Anne Hyde, and of the Duke of York's vexation at her declaration of their marriage. Sir Thomas Gower's two long letters of January 1650 relating to military affairs in the North will be read with interest. A few particulars for theatrical history may be gathered from the letters of Lord Granville (p. 197) and Edward Gower (p. 200). The letters of Lord North, in the last century, show his views with regard to our American colonies at the beginning of the war. Lord Thurlow's letters are very characteristic; and his account of what ensued on the death of Lord Rockingham is curious. His letters on the education which he recommends for a boy are marked by his usual good sense. This collection is extremely valuable for the abundant illustration which it affords for the middle of the 17th century.

The Duke of Marlborough.—The value of the collection at Blenheim is well known to the world at large; and it is with no small satisfaction that Your Majesty's Commissioners announce that his Grace has, in a most liberal spirit, offered to the Commissioners every possible facility for the publication of a detailed account of its priceless contents.

The Marquis of Salisbury.—The list of the Marquis of Salisbury's papers extends from 1588 to the close of 1597. As the first earl entered more into public business, these papers become more numerous and important, increasing in bulk and volume as they proceed. These letters bring to light many facts connected with the history of England, for which the papers either at the Public Record Office or at the British Museum will be searched in vain. As much of this correspondence is connected with Sir Robert Cecil in his private as well as in his official capacity, they afford a closer view of his opinions and those of his contemporaries, and more secret information than can be derived from any other source. When the series is brought down to the close of the reign of Elizabeth, it will add much to the materials for illustrating a period of English history now very imperfectly known.

The Marquis of Lansdowne.—Lord Edmond Fitzmaurice has continued his report (p. 215) on the papers at Lansdowne House. The greater part of it relates to colonial affairs and the peace with America. The most important of these papers will be printed in the concluding volumes of the Life of Lord Shelburne. Several of those at Lansdowne House mentioned in the previous Reports of the late Commissioners have already appeared in the first volume of that work. The few papers at Lansdowne House which still remain to be noticed relate to Irish and Indian affairs, and will be reported on in the future Reports of the Commissioners.

The Marquis of Ripon.—The Marquis of Ripon sent a very early copy of a Latin work on Medicine compiled by Bernard de Gordon, of the celebrated School of Medicine at Montpellier. The volume was once part of the Library of Fountains Abbey. It is described at p. 294 of the Appendix.

Lord Hatherton.—Lord Hatherton's collection is described at p. 294. A deed executed by Justice Littleton, author of the well known book on Tenures, shows his large landed property. Among the autograph signatures is the rare one of King Edward IV.; and there are holograph letters by John Churchill, John Locke, Dean Swift, and George Washington. Portrait collectors will be interested in knowing that an engraving made in Dublin in or before 1726, was thought by the Dean to be the best likeness of himself. Evidence is found among these papers that the translation of Juvenal's Satires, which goes under the name of Dryden, was not wholly made by him. The translation of the eighth satire, which was corrected by Dryden, is due to George Stepney. A note by Pope on Stepney's MS. translation shows how well he appreciated Dryden's talents.

Sir Edmund Lechmere.—Among the manuscripts of Sir Edmund Lechmere the most important is the Taxation Roll for the county of Worcester in the reign of Edward I. From this long and beautifully written document, the names of holders of houses or land in the town of Worcester and in a multitude of manors and villages, and their relative status, can be ascertained. The deeds of the 12th and 13th and 14th centuries relating to the Priory of Worcester are very important. In one of them reference is made to the settlement of a lease by duel. Another describes the furniture and fittings of a chantry in the reign of Edward II. In the reign of Henry V. the Earl of Worcester awards penance to be done by Nicolas Burdet for an offence committed in Worcester Cathedral. (See App., p. 299.)

Sir John Wilson.—Sir John Maryon Wilson, Bart., possesses an early manuscript on parchment of the Code of Iceland Laws known as Ionsbok. Such MSS. are not common. Among his papers is also the diploma, from the University of Ferrara, granting the degree of Doctor of Laws to Sir Thomas Wilson, afterwards secretary to Queen Elizabeth; and a certificate by Gustavus Adolphus, on the occasion of his being made Knight of the Garter. (See App., p. 304.)

Sir John Lawson.—The York Ritual mentioned in the last Report of the late Commissioners as belonging to Sir John Lawson, Bart., has been found and sent by him to London. Mr. Horwood has described it at p. 305 of the Appendix. It is of the 14th century, and believed to be the only copy known. The long passages in English contained in it were thought worthy of transcription.

Sir Henry Mildmay.—Sir Henry Mildmay possesses the original Order in Council signed by Oliver Cromwell (three weeks after the death of King Charles) for the arms and designs "thenceforth to be used on the ships and flags of the Navy;" and a large portion of the original MS. of "The Light of Nature," by Abraham Tucker.

Sir A. Malet.—The remarkably fine collection of Sir A. Malet has been described by Mr. Horwood at p. 308. By reason of Sir Alexander's expression of an intention some day to publish a work in which his MSS. would be used, the extracts in the Appendix are few compared with the importance of the documents. The contents of the letters from Brussels of Sir Thos. Boleyn and Sir Thomas Spinelly to King Henry VIII. are for the present reserved. In Scotch affairs the King roundly accuses Cardinal Beaton of having "powdered his speech with lies." Long letters by Sir Thomas Wharton to the Earl of Hertford relate his ravages in Scotland. In relation to Mary Queen of Scots, the documents are very interesting. Among them is an original letter, in 1567, from the confederate lords to Lord Grey for the deliverance of Mary from her thralldom; a copy of Morton's declaration in 1568 regarding the silver casket; original depositions by Lord Hume and W. Kircaldy touching the death of Darnley; a letter by the Earl of Leicester to the Regent Murray in 1567. In 1561 the Regent writes in strong terms to dissuade his sister Queen Mary from interfering in matters of religion, and in the same year is a letter from him to Mr. Wood at the Court of England. In 1562 a letter from Maitland comments on the execution of Chastelard, and another discusses the proposed meeting between the English and Scottish Queens. In 1567 is a holograph letter by Cecil to Randolph against the proposed marriage of Mary with a Spanish Prince. A letter from King James, in 1582, asks that Archibald Douglas, one of Darnley's murderers, may be given up; and there is an extraordinary letter by him to the Earl of Leicester, a few weeks before his mother was beheaded, showing his indifference to her fate. Other writers are Grindal, Bishop of London and Archbishop of York; Sir John Perrot and Sir Francis Knollys on Irish affairs; Walsingham and the Archbishop of Canterbury, and some bishops in 1582 and 1583 on the proposed alteration of the calendar. In July 1588 a letter from the Council orders the clergy to offer up prayers against the Spaniards. In the time of King James I. there is a pathetic petition by Lady Arabella Stuart (Seymour) to the King, and an original letter asking the Earl of Northampton to interfere with the King on her behalf. A letter from Sir Theodore Mayerne to the King mentions De Thou's desire that Sir R. Cotton should write a continuation of his Memoirs; so that De Thou might have the benefit of them for his great History. In the time of Charles I. there are several original letters by John Selden, and notice of a volume containing upwards of 200 letters addressed to him; also letters by Secretary Windebank to Sir Arthur Hopton in Spain. There are several letters to Whitelock in the time of the Commonwealth. From other papers in Sir Alexander's possession it appears that Brian Walton had a loan of the Codex Alexandrinus in 1653; and there is an approbation by the Archbishop of Armagh and Selden of a proof of Walton's Polyglot. Portions remain of a draft of a project by Cromwell for founding a new College at Oxford. There also is a proposition by James Howell for a new treatise on the sovereignty of the seas. To these must be added original documents signed by King Charles II. in 1652 and the two following years; a letter by Algernon Sydney at Elsinore shortly before the Restoration; a long Latin address by Henry Earl of Rochester to the Emperor urging him to use his influence with the Dutch and the Pope in favour of King Charles. There are also letters by Prince Rupert, the Duke of Albemarle, Sir W. Coventry, the Duke of Ormond, Bishop Burnet, Pepys, and Clifford. There are several letters by Lord Clarendon to Henry Coventry at Breda; also many papers and letters on Navy and Scotch affairs in the reign of Charles II.; a number of letters to the Duke of Lauderdale, some of which relate to the murder of the Archbishop of St. Andrews. There is a series of letters from Sir Thomas Higgon's the King's Envoy at Vienna in 1674 and the two following years. One of the documents appears to be the original note which Charles II. wrote to the Duke of York advising or rather directing him to go beyond sea; it is dated Feb. 28th, 1679. The King's religious proclivities brought him up several Christmas and the New Years' congratulations from Cardinals at Rome. There is a letter from Rushworth stating the cause of certain omissions from his well known Historical Collections. In 1688 there are letters by the Duke of Tyrconnel and the Marquis d'Albeville to King James II. chiefly on the question of religion; and an account of the capture of King James at Faversham. Two of Bishop Atterbury's letters mention Mr. Bedford, the person who was imprisoned as the supposed author of a Jacobite book called "The Hereditary Right of the Crown of England asserted." The doubt as to the authorship of that book has been quite set at rest by the recent discovery of the original manuscript in the handwriting of Dr. George Harbin to whom Atterbury's letters were addressed.

Mr. Majendie.—The manuscripts of Mr. Majendie, M.P., comprise among other things a very remarkable Bede roll of the end of the 12th century; which shows the answers of 120 churches in various parts of the kingdom to the request of the prioress of Hedingham for prayers for the soul of her predecessor Lucy Countess of Oxford. The various specimens of writing in the roll render it very valuable for palæographical purposes. A careful survey made for Lord Burghley shows the extent and parcels of the honour and manor of Castle Hedingham in the time of Queen Elizabeth. In the middle of the last century Mr. J. J. Majendie exerted himself much in obtaining assistance for Protestants abroad; and there are at Hedingham Castle many letters to him from Herring and Secker, successively Archbishops of Canterbury, on the subject. (See App., p. 321.)

Mr. Ellacombe.—Much information as to the early topography of Bristol and the names of its civil officers and residents is furnished by the charters in the collection of the Rev. H. T. Ellacombe, described at p. 323 of the Appendix. The danger of joining a mob merely as a spectator is well shown by the papers relating to Francis Creswick, whose curiosity to know what was going on when the Duke of Monmouth came to Keynsham caused his imprisonment, and (in those days) risked his life. By one of the letters we learn that when Lord Chancellor Jeffreys was captured he had in his possession 35,000 guineas and much silver. Most of the papers and documents mentioned in the report are portions of the family papers of Newton of Barrs Court, in the county of Gloucester, which are very numerous, but chiefly of private interest.

Mr. Strickland.—Mr. Strickland, of Sizergh Castle (whose collection is noticed at p. 329), possesses a series of charters from the 12th century relating to the estates which he and his ancestors have held so long. Among the miscellaneous documents at the Castle, is a portion of a cartulary of the Abbey of Cokersand. One of the very early deeds has for witness William de Daker, Sheriff of Westmoreland, a name not hitherto placed in the list of sheriffs for that county, and in another deed John De Bellocampo is called Sheriff of Appleby. There is a deed of the time of Henry VI. which shows the terms on which the Strickland of that time took service with a great noble and soldier; among other stipulations is one by which when a man of rank was captured by a Strickland the ransom would go to the Earl, he paying a portion to the captor. The Strickland of Henry VIII.'s time was capable of raising from his tenants and servants a troop of 280 armed men. There are a few letters and papers during the Civil War, in which the then Strickland fought for the King. The King's letter to the Yorkshire gentlemen (in 1640) rebukes them for troubling him before they had applied to the Lord Lieutenant, whom they were desired to consider as their Sovereign.

Mr. Cholmondely.—The manuscripts of Mr. Cholmondely, of Condover Hall (described by Mr. Horwood at p. 333), are of much interest. The register of Kingswood Abbey (once in that collection) has yet to be discovered; in the meantime its place is partly supplied by a series of early charters to that house, now at Condover Hall. There are large collections for the history of Cheshire and its families, also for the history of Lancashire and the Isle of Man; also personal memorials of the Earl of Derby and his Countess, the defender of Latham House, and a copy signed by her of the articles for the surrender of Castle Rushen and Peel Castle. The illustrations for the county of Gloucester are numerous. There is a list of nearly all the able-bodied men in the county in 1608; valuable memoranda for the history of domestic life in the rules for the household of Sir Thomas Berkeley and his wife in the times of Queen Elizabeth and King James I. Among the original letters and papers relating to the siege of Berkeley Castle, are the original articles for its surrender to the Parliament. Many letters relate to the transport of troops to Ireland by way of Chester; and in 1642 there is a long letter giving an account of the fighting in Ireland. When the Five Members fled for fear of the King, it was supposed that they would leave the kingdom, and the King's letter to the Mayor of Chester telling him to stay them if they came that way is in this collection, as is also a letter signed by Queen Mary denouncing Lady Jane Grey and her husband. A letter of 1684 under the hand of King Charles II. shows that he expended a large sum from his private purse towards founding Chelsea Hospital. There is a letter by Alexander Pope; and another by Hume shows how gracefully a philosopher could receive correction of an error from a fellow labourer in the field of History.

Mr. Ranyard.—Mr. Ranyard, of Lincoln's Inn, sent his collection of MSS. (described at p. 404) among which is an early copy of one of the Chronicles of the Crusades; also the original certificate of admission to deacon's orders of the celebrated George Whitefield, and the original certificate of his being made a burgess of Glasgow.

Commander Grove.—Commander Grove's papers consist of letters by Monck and other Commonwealth authorities to his ancestor Colonel Pury who held command in Gloucestershire for Cromwell. One of the letters offers a reward of 100*l.* to any officer or soldier who shall capture Lambert, just then escaped from the Tower.

Mr. Shirley.—Mr. Shirley's collection of manuscripts (described at p. 362) is rich in heraldic and genealogical works. The volume presented to Queen Elizabeth is particularly noticeable. There are some interesting papers relating to the unfortunate Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex; original correspondence of James Stanhope, afterwards Earl Stanhope, with Lord Treasurer Godolphin, and numerous original compositions of the second Earl of Chesterfield. Among these papers are the originals of the celebrated Characters, published by the late Earl Stanhope in his edition of the fourth earl's letters; also a tract by Bishop Morley on Transubstantiation supposed to be yet unprinted. A letter of advice by Lord Chesterfield to his godson and heir is remarkable for the strong terms in which he commends to his care Dr. Dodd, who afterwards came to an untimely end. A 16th century volume contains copies of many letters by Roger Marbeck, the compiler of the first printed English Concordance to the Bible. Among the copies of University documents, is a decree appointing what authors were to be read by students and Bachelors of Arts in the University of Oxford, belonging to the house of King Henry VIII. In old times when the King pardoned a man who had slain another he could not thereby abrogate with the private right of the relatives of the slain, and the pardon used to contain words which reserved that right. This rule is well illustrated by the pardon of King Edward III. (among Mr. Shirley's deeds), and the deed following, showing that the slayer paid money to the widow of the dead man in satisfaction of her right to appeal him for the death of her husband.

Mr. Bacon Frank.—The report on the collection of Mr. Bacon Frank, of Campsall Hall, Yorkshire, is completed, but will be reserved for a future Report. It comprises the large collections for Yorkshire history made by Dr. Nathaniel Johnston of Pontefract, in the 17th century, and by Mr. R. Frank in the last century. Dr. Johnston's papers contain original documents obtained by him from Sheffield Castle and valuable letters, including one by Sir Walter Raleigh. Mr. Frank has a fine MS. of Chaucer's "Troilus and Cressida."

Sir Henry Ingilby.—The report on the collection of Sir Henry Ingilby, of Ripley Castle, has also been completed. In it will be found noticed several ancient volumes formerly part of the library of Fountains Abbey, books of accounts and rentals of the abbey, and a very early copy of Ralph de Diceto's Annals. Two volumes contain letters to and from Sir Robert Paston, Viscount Yarmouth, in the 17th century, and from these large extracts have been taken.

Sir Alexander Hood.—The collection of Sir Alexander Hood, of St. Audries, in Somersetshire, has been examined. It contains, among other things, a fine Wickliffe Bible, a 15th century translation into English of Trivet's French Chronicle with a continuation.

Duke of Northumberland.—The Duke of Northumberland very kindly opened to Your Commissioners his evidence room at Syon House. Most of the letters once preserved there have been removed to Alnwick and are described in the Appendix to the Third Report there made by Your Majesty's late Commissioners. Among other MSS. of interest a register of Tynemouth Priory and upwards of a hundred rolls of account of the 16th and 17th centuries are still preserved at Syon House; and from the latter Mr. Horwood has made extracts, many of which illustrate the life of Henry the ninth Earl of Northumberland while in the Tower, and give some account of the Earl's pursuits during his imprisonment. There are also notices of Sir Walter Raleigh, Thomas Hariot the mathematician, and George Peele the poet.

Sir Reginald Graham.—Sir Reginald Graham has sent a very large collection of papers, nearly all relating to the 17th century. These have been examined and a selection has been made, a notice of which will be given in the next Report. There are many accounts of the expenses of the first George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham; several Council letters from Scotland with the signature of King Charles I. impressed by means of a stamp; and many papers on Mint affairs while Sir Henry Slingsby was Master.

Sir Frederick Graham.—The examination of the manuscripts of Sir Frederick Graham, of Netherby, is now in hand. They comprise the letter books and original papers of Viscount Preston while Ambassador in Paris at the end of the reign of King Charles II. and afterwards, and these alone will furnish matter for a large and interesting report. Your Commissioners cannot but think it a matter of congratulation that the examination of Sir Frederick Graham's papers by Mr. Horwood has been the means of discovering and identifying a commonplace book, the greater part of which is in the handwriting of John Milton the poet. A full description of it will be contained in the report on Sir Frederick Graham's MSS.

Mr. Lowndes.—The manuscripts of Mr. Lowndes, of Barrington Hall, in Essex, are now under examination. They comprise many hundred original letters chiefly of the 17th century; among the writers may be mentioned Oliver Cromwell, John Hampden, and John Pym. The affairs of the county of Essex during the Civil War are largely illustrated. There are upwards of 300 early charters to the Priory of Hatfield Regis, a valuable contribution to monastic history, as no cartulary of that house seems to be known.

Lord Leconfield.—Lord Leconfield's manuscripts, at Petworth, have been examined: many of the volumes there belonged to Henry ninth Earl of Northumberland. His Lordship possesses the MS. of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, now being printed for the Chaucer Society; a very interesting register of Ely Priory; a copy of the Black Book of the Admiralty, and some state papers of the last century. The report on these manuscripts is nearly completed.

Miss C. Griffith.—Among the Carreglwyd MSS. (for which Miss Conway Griffith, of Carreglwyd, Anglesey, North Wales, is chiefly indebted to her ancestor, John Griffith, Esq., a lawyer of Gray's Inn, who was for several years private secretary to Henry Earl of Northampton, Lord Privy Seal to James I.) will be found a collection of protestations of loyalty to Queen Elizabeth, signed by Catholic gentlemen imprisoned in Ely Palace, 1588-1590;—a list of the captains cashiered by the Earl of Essex in Ireland;—a survey and description of Romney Marsh, temp. Eliz.;—a copy of Sir Robert Naunton's Fragmenta Regalia;—the patent of a grant (Mar. 12, 1604) of lands, containing minute particulars of the topography of the purlieus of Whitehall and Westminster Palace;—a list of the officers who attended the Earl of Nottingham to Spain (1605);—a list of the lords and gentlemen who attended Lord Hertford on his embassy to the Archduke the same year;—a tract on the abuses of wainage (temp. Eliz. and Jac. I.) written for the information of the Earl of Northampton, Lord Privy Seal, by the King's yeoman-cart-taker;—a declaration of the quarrel between Lord Walden and Sir Edward Herbert;—papers relating to the foundation and early government of Lord Northampton's charitable colleges at Castle Rising, Clun, and Greenwich;—the Earl of Northampton's last testament;—a letter from the Earl of Arundel to the Lord Keeper, Sir Francis Bacon;—two sets of verses written by James I.;—orders respecting the funeral of James I. and liveries of mourning from the Great Wardrobe;—the Earl of Oxford's letter (15th May 1625) to his Countess from Gertruydenberg;—a letter

(7th Feb. 1626) from Lewes, Bishop of Bangor, describing Charles I.'s coronation and the life of his court;—a list of the persons slain at the Isle of Rhé;—a Narrative, by an eye-witness, of the naval and military operations attending the army's landing in the Isle of Rhé;—a Latin letter describing Van Tromp's victories over the Spanish fleets off the Downs;—a copy (made from the original draft) of the speech which the Earl of Strafford intended to deliver on the scaffold;—a set of verses lampooning Sir John Suckling, with his reply;—satirical verses on the Westminster Assembly of Divines;—satirical verses on Presbytery and Parliament;—muster-rolls and warrants exhibiting the strength, equipment, and discipline of the trained bands in Anglesey in the 17th century;—a curious marriage-settlement (20th Aug. 1612) illustrative of manners in North Wales;—James I.'s licence exempting the Bishop of Bangor from attendance in Parliament;—bills illustrative of the price of labour and materials for building in North Wales, temp. Car. I.;—correspondence and papers, exhibiting the attitude and action of the adherents of Charles I., and the supporters of the Parliament in North Wales during the Civil War. (See App., p. 405.)

Cardinal Manning.—The historical MSS. in the official custody of Cardinal Manning have been found upon examination to be more important and more numerous than had been anticipated. They relate for the most part to the fortunes of the Catholics in England from the close of the reign of Elizabeth to the Revolution of 1688 and a little later. There is a long series of original letters consisting of correspondence between England and Rome, of which the longer portion is addressed to the agent of the English Catholic clergy resident in the Papal court. The correspondence is by no means purely official. The writers supplied their agent with such notices of English affairs as were, politically as well as religiously, interesting. Besides these details much light is thrown upon the origin and history of the English Colleges at Rome, Douai, Rheims, &c., as well as upon the monasteries and convents founded in France, Belgium, Spain, and Germany. (See App., p. 470.)

The portion of these MSS. here catalogued forms about one half of the entire collection. Many of these papers are well worthy of a more minute description, especially the correspondence. Nearly identical with the above, and extending over the same period, is the collection of papers now in the custody of Provost Hunt, belonging to the Catholic Chapter of Westminster, in Spanish Place, Manchester Square.

Dodd's Historical Dictionary of eminent Catholics, which has strayed from its fellows in Spanish Place, is safely deposited in the library of St. Mary's College, Oscott, already described in the Appendix to the First Report, p. 89.

Rev. E. Field.—The MSS. in the possession of the Reverend Edmund Field of Lancing College, Sussex, generally reflect the commercial derangement and social inconveniences attending the conflict of the Crown and Parliament in the 17th century. Sir Abel Barker's private letter-book (1642–1665) is a remarkable record of a Rutland squire's doings in business, politics, and society during the busiest period of a long and fully occupied life; his private account book (1665–1677) affords precise information respecting the interests and engagements of his closing years. Another division of the collection consists chiefly of letters written to him by his second wife, his brothers, and others of his domestic circle. There are also documents relating to taxation and public affairs in Rutland, and the adjoining counties, in the times of Charles I., the Commonwealth, and Charles II., writs, ordinary and extraordinary, for the levying of ship-money, receipts for money, horses, cattle, provender for animals and other goods, supplied by Mr. (afterwards Sir) Abel Barker, in submission to military requisitions, for the service of the King and Parliament; General Ireton's order to the army in Rutland; letters of instruction for drilling the trained bands in the same county. Amongst the more recent papers of Mr. Field's collection appear the correspondence of William Whiston, the mathematician, with his children and scientific friends; the register of the minutes of William Whiston's Society for the promotion of Primitive Christianity; and letters by Gilbert White, of Selborne, and his brothers. (See App., p. 387.)

Dean and Chapter of Canterbury.—These archives contain, at least, five thousand original MSS., exclusive of the registers in which are recorded the domestic transactions of the Prior and Chapter of Christ Church, sede plena, and their authoritative acts as custodians of the spiritualities of the archbishopric, sede vacante. Up to the date of this present Report the detached MSS. of the Chartæ Antiquæ only have been examined; the registers are left for another occasion. Almost every chapter in the history of the See of Canterbury is here indicated by contemporary charters and other documents, which are so abundant that from very early days they have furnished the sources from which the ancient chroniclers and church historians afterwards drew much of their materials. Thorne is especially indebted to these documents. One is copied into the MS. of William of Canterbury, and more lately many have appeared in Kemble's "Codex Diplomaticus." Abundant supplies are here found for a domestic history of the great Benedictine Convent of Canterbury, beginning with the narratives of the elections of the Priors, who were summoned to attend the King as Lords of Parliament, and descending through the yearly accounts of the several monastic officers to the small bills paid by the cook for sundries used in his department. Under the title sede vacante is found a large number of MSS. which illustrate the position of the Prior, promoted almost to an Archbishopric, whenever the Metropolitan chair became vacant. Several important papers contain remonstrances and "Articuli Cleri" propounded by the clergy assembled in Synod. There are a few original Papal Bulls, and Apostolical Letters, but the number is not so great as might have been expected. The records of the consecrations of suffragan bishops, with their professions of canonical obedience to the Church of Canterbury, are found in a long continued series, accompanied by letters of "Alibi Consecrari" issued to them by the Prior in those cases in which, by his permission, they were consecrated elsewhere than in the Metropolitan Cathedral. The monopoly referred to was enjoyed by the Priory by virtue of a charter of Archbishop Becket, of which a copy still exists. The dispute as to the precedence and insignia of the Archbishop of York whilst a sojourner in the southern province, was a cause of much debate from the time of William the Conqueror, whose autograph corroborates a composition made between the Archbishops of his day, to the period when Robert Winchelsey, by sheer force of character, almost crushed the northern Archbishop in the province of Canterbury, whilst he himself triumphantly marched through that of York with his cross carried erect before him. The licenses granted on the special occasion, when the Statute of Mortmain was suspended in favour of the Priory, are evidence of the frequency of this indulgence. There are progressive examples of the English tongue from ante-Norman times up to the 16th century. Many of the earliest of these specimens have been printed. For obvious reasons, very few direct allusions to Archbishop Becket remain among these Chartæ Antiquæ, and his charters and letters have all been suppressed, but there still exist a few writs of Henry II. which were attested, and possibly written, by "Tom. Canc." The Archbishop's family—"Consanguinei" and "Nepotes"—are mentioned during a space of fifty years after his death, and always as recipients of alms, or incumbents of small ecclesiastical benefices. One of the four murderers, William De Tracy, made some atonement for his offence by giving the manor of Doccumbe to the convent of which the murdered Archbishop was a protector during his life, and more than a patron after his death. A few papers remain which go to prove how nearly Archbishop Winchelsey, by the zeal of Earl Thomas of Lancaster, attained the honours of canonization. A mortuary roll sent round from Ely, after the death of Bishop Hotham, to all the monasteries which had entered into the bond of "mutual society" with the convent of Ely, heads a considerable number of notices and letters, all relating to the brotherly offices which monks and friars of different houses and orders undertook on behalf of those who were linked with them in the same spiritual tie. Notices of Sandwich and Fordwich, at which ports Christ Church and St. Augustine's respectively landed their imports, afford a glimpse of the commerce of the Middle Ages; and a correspondence between Henry IV. and the Hanseatic League exhibits commercial and international law in its cradle. An interesting series of charters, many of them carrying the great seals of the kings of France, relate how Louis VII. on his pilgrimage gave to the monks of Canterbury a hundred muids of wine, which gift his successors from time to time renewed, the French nobility at the same time allowing a free passage through such of their lands as lay between the vineyards and the sea. The foundation by Archbishop Islip, and the restoration by Prior Chillenden, of Canterbury College in Oxford, are chronicled in the deeds of foundation and endowment, and in the bills for work and materials paid at the time of the rebuilding. The deed of endowment by Henry VII. of a chantry in Canterbury Cathedral is contained in a parchment volume sumptuously bound in blue velvet and decorated with the king's badges of the Rose and Portcullis. The period of the dissolution of monasteries is marked by an inventory of plate, by a deed providing for some of the disestablished monks, and by a complete list of all the real estate of the "late monastery of Christ Church in Canterbury" made in 1540. (See App., p. 427.)

Your Majesty's Commissioners are indebted for the Report on the MSS. of this cathedral to Mr. J. B. Sheppard, of Canterbury, who was recommended to them by the Rev. Canon Robertson as one "who had for many months been employed in the study of these documents." Mr. Sheppard has rendered the Chapter of Canterbury great service by his labours in connexion with their muniments.

Mr. Pine-Coffin.—In continuation of the account given in the Fourth Report of the documents in the possession of J. R. Pine-Coffin, Esq., preserved at Portledge in North Devon, three deeds of the 16th century are noticed by Mr. Riley in the Appendix, containing the names of John Gaye, Thomas Gaye, and a second John Gaye, of Gulworthy (now Goldsworthy) in North Devon, ancestors of John Gay the poet; with those of several of the family of Risdon, also of Goldsworthy, to which Tristram Rysdon (named in the preceding Report), a writer on the laws of England, belonged. From the letters and miscellaneous papers, 600 in number, large extracts have been made. (See App., p. 370.)

The letters are mostly addressed to Mr. Richard Coffin, of Portledge, who was Sheriff of Devon in the eventful year 1685. Among the miscellaneous letters, is one addressed by Edmund Prideaux, of Padstowe, (father of Humphrey, Dean of Norwich), to Ann, his daughter, second wife of Richard Coffin, referring to the Popish Plot; another, addressed to Richard Coffin, as to "the bookes bought for mee at the auction of "Dr. Heinsius in Holland;" a letter from the Mayor of Taunton to the Mayor of Exeter, sent to Richard Coffin, as High Sheriff for the county of Devon, giving an account of disturbances near Taunton, nearly a fortnight in advance of the Duke of Monmouth's landing at Lyme Regis in Dorset; a letter written to Richard Coffin by John Prince, still remembered as the author of the "Worthies of Devon" (1701), a work which at this date (1686) he seems to have been inclined to press Richard Coffin to undertake; a long paper, beautifully written, headed "Reasons humbly offered to "the Duke of Albemarle against his going Governor of Jamaica." The Duke had not shown the requisite aptitude or courage on the occasion of Monmouth's landing in the West; hence perhaps his desire to accept the Governorship of so remote a place as the Island of Jamaica. It is not improbable that Richard Coffin was the author of this Expostulation, from which some extracts are given in the Appendix. Mr. Thomas Northmore, of Exeter, was Deputy-Assistant Sheriff to Richard Coffin during his year of office in 1685; out of his twenty letters extracts from nine are given. They mostly refer to the progress and termination of Monmouth's rebellion, the preparations for opposing it, and the arrangements ultimately made for the punishment of the rebels. The whippings and executions, the boiling and tarring of the quarters, and their proposed transmission to various towns, are noticed without a single expression of pity. From 1683 to within a year or two before the death of Mr. Richard Coffin (in 1699) a correspondence was kept up between him and his brother-in-law, Dr. Humphrey Prideaux, Prebendary, and afterwards Dean, of Norwich. Most of the Dean's letters have probably perished, but selections are given from eleven out of the twelve remaining. In them the politics of the day and the religious aspect of the times are discussed; the characters respectively of the Universities come under review, the Doctor in general giving a very disparaging account of Oxford. He looks upon Wadham as the "best governed" College in the University; of Christ Church he speaks with very faint praise; while in Exeter College he "never knew anything . . . but drinking "and duncery." In more than one of his letters the Doctor alludes to his Life of Mahomet, and says that he is "sorry the wickèdness of the present age makes us "soe much need such bookes." A constant correspondence was also maintained between Dr. Prideaux and his sister, Mrs. Ann Coffin, from 1673 to 1705, probably, the year of her death. Of these letters extracts are given from 27 out of the 66 which still remain. In the first that is quoted (November 1673), he gives a very unfavourable account of "the new Dutchesse of York," Mary of Modena. She is "hunch-back'd," he says, "and "ugly, and the daughter of a poor beggarly Prince." In another letter he tells his sister "You are soe much in love with your Mons. Jureu [Jurieu] that I believe if my "brother were dead you would make him your second husband." In another letter, the Doctor returns to the charge:—"Exeter College is totally spoyld, and soe is "Christ Church, and for that reason when lately chosen Canon of Christ Church "and Professor of the Oriental languages in Dr. Pocock's place, I refused to goe." Walter Moyle, a kinsman of Dr. Prideaux, and still remembered in literature as one of the wits of the day, comes under the lash of his censure more than once. In 1698 it was the Doctor's opinion of the progress made by the Jesuits in China, that they had done nothing more than to "get the Chinese to worship Jesus "Christ, the Virgin Mary, and St. Peter, amongst the rest of their heathen "gods." Upon the Greek Church and its liturgy he is inclined to be severe, and in reference to the Dissenters of his day he says, "I think, never any church was "better established than ours, . . . the toleration which is now allowed them that "doe oppose it, makes only way for the driving of Christianity out of the land, for "the only sect that grows upon it are the Quakers, who are noe Christians. All sects besides begin to dwindle to nothing; I am sure they do so where I am concerned." Within six months after he had lost his wife, Bridget Bokenham, he writes to his sister, "I am mightily pressed to marry again, with abundance of offers and very valuable ones, but considering all things I shall think of making no more changes till I make my great change of this life, as I hope for a better, and I have some reason to apprehend that I am at no great distance from it." Though, probably even then threatened with the stone, he survived no less than 23 years.

From 1683 to 1697 Mr. Richard Laphorne, residing in Hatton Garden, was Richard Coffin's London agent, purchasing books for the library he was then forming at Portledge, and sending him letters of news every Saturday. Of these letters, no less than 409 have survived. They have been all examined for the purposes of this Report, and extracts of a miscellaneous description are given from 139. In one of them mention is made of four manuscripts of the works of Wyclif, which had been recently bought (1687) at an auction by the Earl of Kent for 21*l.*, "od money." Mr. Laphorne "could have almost have wished he had bought them himself at that price." The crimes, accidents, and offences of the time, figure largely in Laphorne's communications. An account is given (14 July 1688) of the great rejoicings in London on the birth of the unfortunate Prince, afterwards known as the Old Pretender. In the same year the Mayor of Scarborough is represented as going to Windsor to complain about a Captain who had tossed him in a blanket, though at this date (Sept. 1688) the Court at Windsor would have something more serious to think of. The people of London, however, in these letters are represented as showing no concern under the impending menace of an invasion. In 1689 mention is made of John Bagford, afterwards well known as a typographical antiquary, and whose collections are now in the British Museum. Of a "gentlewoman in Duke Street near Covent Garden," the following account is given (Feb. 1691):—"There have bin a College of Theologists to make their observations on her; and in order to consult about a way to restore her, (viz.) Dr. Hornick and others. . . Sometimes sitting in her chayre she will be visibly lifted up, together with her chayre, a great distance from the ground, no one touching the same that can be perceived." The fire is described (11 Apr. 1691) which so nearly brought to an end all the glories of the Palace at Whitehall, as originating in the laziness of "a mayd's burning off a single candle from the pound, instead of cutting it with a knife." An account is also given of the Cottonian Library at Westminster as it appeared in 1692, and some few of its more striking curiosities are described. A short account of Slingsby Bethell, Sheriff of London, forms an item in the latest portion of this correspondence.

University College, Oxford.—From such of the early archives of University College as have survived, comparatively few in number, may be gathered various particulars in reference to the halls and other buildings of Oxford in the 14th century. About the year 1400 several of the "Schools" of Oxford are mentioned. Among the visitors entertained from time to time by this College will be found at least one or two names of interest. Most, if not all, of the ancient deeds in the possession of the College, which are very numerous, were transcribed, about the close of the 17th century into a series of quarto volumes by William Smith, Senior Fellow, and afterwards rector of Melsonby, in Yorkshire. He was the author also of a book intituled, "The Annals of University College, proving William of Durham the true founder, and answering all their arguments who ascribe it to King Alfred (1727)." In the earliest Bursar's accounts the house is styled, "The College of Master William de Durham, commonly named Unversite Hall." These accounts contain many curious particulars of the ancient buildings of the College at the close of the 14th century. A service is mentioned in the Report, at considerable length, as having been instituted in this College in 1493 "for the health and wele of the soul" of Ann, Countess of Warwick, deceased. She was the widow of Richard Neville, known in history as "the Kingmaker," who closed his restless career at the Battle of Barnet in 1471. (See App., p. 477.)

Wadham College, Oxford.—The only article that deserves especial notice among the comparatively few archives of Wadham, is a deed, under the seal of the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, London, whereby the Dean and Chapter ratify a grant to Adam Fitz Nicholas by William de St. Mary Church, Bishop of London, of 30 acres of land in the park of Crundene. It bears date about A.D. 1198, and is a beautiful specimen of penmanship, but its main interest lies in the fact that Peter of Blois, the eminent scholar, is mentioned among the attesting witnesses. (See App., p. 479.)

Magdalene College, Cambridge.—In the account given of the archives of this College, some notice will be found of the college career of Samuel Pepys, the Diarist. The names of Samuel Morland, afterwards known as an experimental philosopher, and Orlando Bridgeman (afterwards Keeper of the Great Seal), both Fellows of the same College, are also mentioned. In a letter signed by Queen Elizabeth in the second year of her reign, she signifies her desire that John Dawbney, B.A., and Ciprian Valerie, a Spaniard, then a student in the College, should be admitted to the "King's Fellowships" then vacant. An interesting passage will be found in this Report in reference to College manners and discipline in the year 1679. (See App., p. 481.)

Pembroke College, Cambridge.—(Second Report.)—In a portfolio in the possession of the College, which has been lately brought to light after it had been probably overlooked for many years, a number of letters have been found reaching as far back as the 15th century. A selection has been made from them, and will be found in the Appendix. Among them may be mentioned, letters from Sir John Fastolf, of Caistor, in reference to the ransom and exchange of prisoners taken in France; from Lord Scales, as it is supposed, afterwards Earl Rivers, who was beheaded by order of Richard III.; Thomas Howard, Earl of Surrey, who commanded at Flodden Field (1513); John de Vere, Earl of Oxford (1530), and Anne de Vere, his widow; a warrant signed by the Ministers for the imprisonment of Sir Anthony Kingston, December 1555, accused of conspiring against Queen Mary, for the purpose of putting the Princess Elizabeth on the throne; a receipt signed by Sir Horatio Palavicini, an active man in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, who from being a Papal emissary became a convert to the Protestant faith; a letter to Sir Edward Coke from John Coke, his offending and penitent son; a letter from Francis Walsingham, Secretary of Queen Elizabeth, soliciting a next presentation; also from Sir Edward Coke to Sir Thomas Knevet; with several letters from Archbishop Whitgift and Bishop Bancroft. There is also a letter of some interest written by Sir Thomas Browne, in 1657, to Mr. (afterwards Sir) William Dugdale, making allusion, among other things, to the progress of the Monasticon; also a letter, in somewhat indignant terms, written by Ralph Cudworth. An interesting notice will also be found in the same Report in reference to Dr. Samuel Parker, intended by James II. to be forced on Magdalen College, Oxford, as President; and afterwards promoted to the See of Oxford. (See App., p. 484.)

Dartmouth.—Many particulars are given in this Report in reference to the remote history of the inhabitants and localities of Dartmouth. Some deeds are transcribed, executed by various members of the family of Haule, or Hauley, whose fame was widely extended in the 14th century, as singularly opulent merchants of this place. Mention also will be found of the family of Raleghe in the 14th century, from which, or one of its collateral branches, Sir Walter Raleigh probably sprang. The name also of Guido de Brienne, the powerful Lord of Dartmouth and Lord of Stokenham, in the 14th century, occurs more than once. Several deeds are here transcribed which throw light upon the localities of Exeter as early as the reign of Henry III.; while other deeds preserved in the Corporation chest are noticed, as bearing reference to Blandford in Dorset, and Totnes. A deed of grant by William Fitz-Stephen to Torre Abbey, bears date prior to the year 1208, and another deed to the same abbey, of like purport, is executed by William Briwere, Bishop of Exeter, A.D. 1224 to 1244. Descending to a much more recent date, a map of the time of Charles I. sets forth a description of "the lands that are set out unto the Corporation of Dartmouth, being "the first lot of the Second Quarter of the Barony of Rathconrath in the County of "Westmeath." (See App., p. 597.)

Folkestone.—The papers belonging to the Corporation of Folkestone that have been examined for the purpose of this Report are few in number, and refer to the contest that took place, in the reign of Edward IV. (A.D. 1463), between Thomas Banns, or Banes, and Henry Ferrers, brother of the Earl Ferrers, for the office of Prior of the Benedictine Priory of Folkestone. Banns, to all appearance, was a man of singularly evil character; but having secured the interest of the Sovereign, of the Archbishop of York, and of Cecily, Duchess of York, the King's mother, in his behalf, he ultimately prevailed against his antagonist, and retained the office for 30 years, at the end of which he was removed for dilapidating the property of the house. (See App., p. 590.)

The Parish of Alwington, North Devon.—The Church Books of this parish, though beginning with entries as far back as 1550, are singularly destitute of interest. The earliest Church Rate book now extant begins in 1767, and comes down to 1824. The most noteworthy passages in it probably are the items of payment by the Churchwardens for the killing of foxes. The tariff is at first 2s., but at a later date 5s., per head. In this century "fox ale" came to be substituted for payments in money, and 15s. is an item of payment for "fox ale" as recently as 1816. (See App., p. 597.)

Parish of Hartland, North Devon.—The Churchwardens' Account books of the parish of Hartland, belonging to the period extending from the close of the 16th to the early part of the 18th century, though in a much neglected condition, contain many passages deserving notice, in reference to the usages of those times. In the early part of the 17th century, the "Church Armour," consisting of calivers, muskets, pikes, daggers, corslets, and morions, is frequently referred to, and a chain is bought in 1613 for fastening up a work of Erasmus in the Church. The "dog whipper" was an established officer of the Church throughout this century; and the man who held this office from 1647 to 1676 had the name of William Noy, in common with the more famous Attorney General of Charles I. Subscriptions are entered for redeeming persons in captivity from the Turks; and in 1610 there is an entry of eight shillings "given to two poor men being some time taken " captives by the Turks, and their tongues cut out." Such was the comfort of the seats in the Church in 1680, that "room" (such as "the southern middle room") seems to have been considered the most appropriate name for them. In Hartland Church, down to the close of the 17th century, the women occupied seats and pews apart from the men. (See App., p. 571.)

High Wycombe.—The surviving records of the town of High Wycombe, so far as has been hitherto ascertained, appear to be few in number. In its earliest "Leger Book," which commences in the latter half of the 15th century, are to be found entries of considerable length in reference to church vestments and ornaments in the first and sixth years of King Edward VI. Extracts are also given in this book from a more ancient work, throwing some light upon the history of the town in the 14th century, its ancient buildings and its more influential inhabitants. (See App., p. 554.)

Lydd.—Lydd, now no more than a quiet country village in appearance, was in the 15th century a busy and important town, alike for the fact of it being a member of the Cinque Ports, and for its fishing station at Denge-Ness. A watch here seems to have been constantly kept upon the movements of the French. The "Boy Bishop" repaired to Lydd from New Romney on St. Nicholas' Day in each year. Minstrels attached to the households of the nobility, and players from the towns and villages of East Kent, were continually welcomed by the townsfolk with feasting and pecuniary reward, one of the plays acted being that of St. George. A correspondence was continually kept up with the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports at Dover, or his Lieutenant; but upon Jack Cade's insurrection (which commenced at Ashford or its vicinity) appearing to be a matter for serious consideration, a deputation from the town waited upon "the Captain," as he was called, and asked his acceptance of a porpoise. In the Wars of the Roses, the predilections of the people in this part of the country were evidently in favour of the Yorkists. Mention of the Earl of Warwick occurs more than once, and allusion is made to the town's contingent which fought on the Yorkists' side at the second battle of St. Alban's. In these Records, as also in those of New Romney and Rye, mention is made of a Thomas Caxton, who was Common Clerk of Lydd for about 10 years, from 1458 to 1467 or 1468, and, upon his resignation, became first Treasurer, and then Bailiff, of the town, in 1471 and 1472; after which he removed to Sandwich, where he acted as Common Clerk for several years, but in 1482 or 1483 he seems to have returned to Lydd. The "Custumall" of Lydd, transcribed by his hand from the original, then preserved at New Romney, still exists. Some reasons will be found stated in the Report for suggesting that he was a native of Tenterden, and not improbably closely related to William Caxton, our first printer, who speaks of himself as born in the Weald of Kent. That Thomas Caxton was a man of remarkable ability is shown beyond dispute, in the numerous extracts given from the Records above mentioned. (See App., p. 516.)

New Romney.—(Second Report.)—From the Report upon the archives of New Romney, many particulars hitherto lost to memory may be recovered, in reference to its former harbour, long since silted up, and the ancient course of the Rother, when it still existed as a river, at least in some degree, in its vicinity. The "Slow," or "Sluice," of this town, is a subject of repeated expenditure, but it is probably impossible at the present day to suggest even where it was situate. Several memoranda also occur, in reference to the coronations of our sovereigns in succession, and to that of Queen Isabella of France (the second wife of Richard II.) at the close of the 14th century; in all of which the Barons of the Cinque Ports played an important part. In these records "guns with six chambers" are alluded to at as early a date as 1456. Players from the neighbouring towns and villages are repeatedly mentioned as resorting to the town. Minstrels, as elsewhere in the vicinity, were welcomed with bounteous "reward," and the successful candidates in wrestling matches received their guerdon at the hands of the Corporate authorities. The Jurats and Commons of New Romney, we are told, had been wont from of old to choose Wardens "to have the play of Christ's "Passion" represented, but in 1518 a mandate was sent by the Lord Warden to the "Barons" of that place, informing them "that they ought not to play the play of the Passion of Christ until they had had the King's leave;" the sovereign who seems to have made objection thereto being Henry VIII. In 1408 John Hacche, then vicar, gave to the Jurats of New Romney 3s. 4d. in free gift "on condition that they should not in future hold their session in his church (that of St. Nicholas) while Divine service is being celebrated." It is only at a recent date that the sittings of the Jurats in the church, at other times than during Divine service, have been discontinued. The Mayor, however, is still elected yearly in the Parish Church of New Romney, while in its own Parish Church the Bailiff of Lydd is also elected; the election at each town taking place at the tomb of a member of the family of Stuppeny, for some reason now unknown. (See App., p. 533.)

Mendlesham, Co. Suffolk.—The manuscripts of the parish of Mendlesham, Suffolk, have been inspected. In the church chests, among other things, were found the wills of the two earliest benefactors of the parish,—Robert Cake (temp. Edw. IV.) and Henry Jesope (temp. Hen. VIII.). The Parish Accounts and Parish Registers give a complete picture of the life of the parish for more than three centuries. One of the registers, the "Boake for Registering" (1653–1659) contains records of all the civil marriages performed, before Justices of the Peace, by parishioners of Mendlesham, during the Commonwealth, in accordance with the Marriage Act of the Parliament of 1653. (See App., p. 593.)

Rye.—The greater part, probably, of the archives of Rye were destroyed, when the place was attacked and burnt by the French in 1377, and again in 1448. A not inconsiderable number of documents has however survived, belonging to times even prior to the former date. Until now these seem for several centuries to have been overlooked. The printed list of the Mayors begins no earlier than 1396, whereas from a close examination of the documents in question, the names of the Mayors have been restored to light from the beginning of the 14th century down to 1380, in almost unbroken succession. In the extracts from the archives of a latter date than 1448, several references will be found to the Wars of the Roses, and the aid afforded by the town to the Yorkist cause. Shortly before the second Battle of St. Albans, the Mayor and Common Clerk, in obedience to a summons, set out for Canterbury, to meet the Earl of March (afterwards Edward IV.) and the Earl of Warwick; but by the time of their arrival at Sittingbourne, the Earls had passed onward to the West; they comforted themselves, however, by sleeping at Leene; and enjoyed there, not improbably for the first time, the pleasure of sleeping on a bed made of something better than straw. Apologizing, apparently, for the exorbitance of the sum they had paid for the accommodation, namely, one penny, they call attention to the fact that it was really "worth the money, for it was a feather bed they slept upon." In expectation of an attack by the Lancastrian party, cartloads of stones were laid upon the town walls for hurling down upon the foe. As in the archives of Lydd, allusion is made to Jack Cade's insurrection, prior to this date. Here, as at those places, we find troops of minstrels welcomed from time to time with money and feasting; while the players from the neighbouring towns acted their play not only in the Churchyard but in the Church, Sunday being, sometimes at least, the day selected for the performance. The people of Lydd, as appears by the records of that place, were treated to the sight of a dromedary, passing through the town, while the "man with the baboon" did not miss his reward from the Corporation of New Romney, on a like occasion: 2s. 1d. being the remuneration given by Rye to the bear-ward of George, Duke of Clarence, for treating its inhabitants to a "baytinge of the berys." (See App., p. 488.)

St. Albans.—The archives of the Corporation of St. Albans are comparatively few, and of no great interest. The town only received its Charter of Incorporation as late as the reign of Edward VI. Among the miscellaneous papers in the Corporation chest, is a letter of request giving a description of the ruin that had been wrought by fire in 1583, at the town of Nantwicke (Nantwich) in Cheshire. Mention will be found in the Appendix, p. 566, of a letter written by John Thomas (1583), Master of the Grammar School of St. Albans, a native of Bois-le-Duc, in Holland; with a suggestion, for the reason there stated, that he may have been one of the instructors of Francis Bacon, the particulars of whose early education are comparatively unknown.

Sandwich.—The most important contents of the more ancient among the archives of Sandwich have been exhaustively described by the late Mr. W. Boys, a Jurat of the town, in his Collections for a History of Sandwich. There are three portfolios filled with miscellaneous documents, letters, and papers, belonging to the Corporation, which he does not appear to have noticed. The more important of them will be found described in the Appendix, p. 568. The oldest among them are in a very mutilated condition. One of the most recent documents, probably also of the greatest interest, is a sheet of parchment, containing a list of those of the gentry who in that part of Kent also joined the association for the protection of King William III. from assassination, in 1696; the signatures in autograph are more than 100 in number. There are several charters, granted either to the town or to the Cinque Ports, by King Edward III., but they are mostly in fragments. A letter to the Honourable Leopold Finch, Esq., from John Tillotson, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury, bears date 13 Sept. 1689. There are also several documents and letters in the handwriting of Roger Manwood, a lawyer of eminence in the time of Elizabeth, and letters from Edward, Lord Zouch, John Philipott, Somerset Herald, Secretary Edward Nicholas, and Algernon Sidney, are also to be found in the collection.

Weymouth and Melcombe Regis.—In the present Report, the names of some Mayors of Melcombe, in the 14th century, hitherto lost, have been brought to light. An information, shadowing forth the intended invasion of the Spanish Armada, more than two years before the event, deserves notice. Under the date of 1610 mention is made of a vessel called the "Mayflower," which it seems not improbable was the same vessel that in 1620 carried the Pilgrim Fathers to the coast of Massachusetts. Another paper gives an account of depredations committed, as late as 1636, by Algerine pirates in the Severn, and off the British coast. The account also of various high-handed proceedings in the town, when in the hands of the Parliamentary forces, under the command of Colonel Sydenham in 1646, is well deserving of attention. Members of the family of Pytte, from which the great Earl of Chatham was descended, are not unfrequently mentioned in these records. Few of the archives of ancient date belonging to these towns, seem now to be in existence. (See App., p. 575.)

Marquis of Bute.—The charters of the Marquis of Bute have already been reported on, and the present report is limited to a collection of letters at Mountstuart. The first portion of them consists of a miscellaneous Scotch correspondence ranging in date from 1683 to 1763, addressed to the Earls of Bute. Among the writers are the Duke of Hamilton, Lord Haddo, the Earl of Mar, Earl of Glasgow, the Duke of Argyll, and his brother Lord Islay. They relate to the intrigues and political arrangements of the time immediately before the Union, and also of that which followed on the rising of 1715. The second portion consists of a series of letters addressed by Lady Mary Wortley Montagu to her sister the Countess of Mar. Most of these have been printed in the last edition of Lady Mary's works. (See App., p. 617.)

The Marquis of Ailsa.—The charters of the Marquis of Ailsa form an extensive and interesting series. Among them is a set of documents almost unique relating to a privilege of the early Lords of Carrick, and their successors the Kennedys of Dunure, as head of their kin. The right was frequently confirmed by the Crown, and some of the Royal Charters define it in terms of which the precise purport has been lost. The collection of family muniments relating to their lands is unusually full, and is of great use in illustrating the history of the district. It has also a wider scope in its bearings on national history. Several muniments relate to the foundation and administration of a collegiate church at Maybole by the Laird of Dunure in 1371; others convey the office of heritable coroner of the Earldom of Carrick. Some of the papers throw light on the disputed claims to the abbacy of Glenluce about the time of the Reformation, and among the letters is a series from Queen Mary of Scotland to the Earl of Cassilis, ranging in date from 1562 to 1569. (See App., p. 613.)

The Earl of Aberdeen.—The records belonging to the Earl of Aberdeen consist of an extensive series of charters dating from the end of the 14th century, and a collection of political letters addressed to the first earl while Lord Chancellor of Scotland in the time of Charles II. Some of the charters relate to the church lands of Ellon in the 15th century, which were in the hands of tenants called Scolocs, and were held by a peculiar tenure of finding copes and surplices for certain clerks in the parish church, with wax candles for the perk before the high altar, and a smithy in the village. Among the writers of the letters are the leading public men of the day, and many of them discuss the questions which were then of prominent interest. In the library is a household book of King James V. of Scotland containing an account of the royal expenditure from September 1538 to September 1539, and a volume of the Lord Chancellor's personal expenses from 1682 to 1684. (See App., p. 608.)

The Earl of Lauderdale.—The records belonging to the Earl of Lauderdale comprise many of great age and considerable importance. One portion of them was buried in the ground at Balcarres for preservation after the battle of Dunbar in the year 1650, and were mostly destroyed; but full inventories of them had been prepared with his own hand by the Earl of Lauderdale before they were placed in the ground, and such was the confidence in his integrity that after the Restoration it was ordered by an Act of the Scottish Parliament that the inventories should be of the same value as the original papers. These inventories being engrossed in the Act, the historical materials of the documents are still available. Besides this series of records there yet remains at Thirlestane a large collection, consisting of papers connected with public events in the time of Charles II., a large number of early charters of the barony of Hatton, and other lands in Midlothian, writs relating to the constabulary of Dundee, and grants to the Abbey of Dryburgh. (See App., p. 610.)

Lord Kinnaird.—Among the miscellaneous papers in Lord Kinnaird's possession is a document addressed to General Monk, a few months before the Restoration, containing some remarkable suggestions for the best method of securing the peace and welfare of Scotland. The bulk of this collection comprises family charters dating from the time of King William the Lion. (See App., p. 620.)

Lord Wharncliffe.—The collection of Lord Wharncliffe contains a series of fine charters of early date of lands in the counties of Forfar and Perth, and are remarkable for their illustrations of curious feudal tenures. Some court books of later date throw light on the administration of a barony and on agricultural arrangements. (See App., p. 621.)

Sir William Forbes.—Among the papers of Sir William Forbes at Fintray House are many charters and documents connected with the transmission of lands dating from the 15th century, mostly of local interest. There is also a series of letters addressed to various correspondents by Sir Andrew Mitchell, who was British ambassador at the court of Frederick the Great, with drafts and notes of his letters and dispatches while on his embassy, and also while he was Under Secretary of State for Scotland. Among the letters addressed to Sir Andrew, are some from Frederick himself. In the library is the original MS. diary of Dr. John Forbes, who was for some time Professor of Divinity in King's College, Aberdeen. It ranges in date from 1624 to 1647, and while mainly devoted to a record of what the author designates his spiritual exercises, it contains many historical notices illustrating the position of parties during the great Rebellion. (See App., p. 626.)

Mrs. Barclay Allardice.—The collection of Mrs. Barclay Allardice is very extensive and consists for the most part of the charters and papers relating to the baronies of Allardice and Ury in the Shire of Kincardine vested in the families represented by Mrs. Barclay Allardice.

Among the miscellaneous papers are copies of two letters from the Laird of Ury in 1713 to the Earls of Marr and Argyll, on the subject of a proposal to extend toleration to the Scotch Quakers. (See App., p. 629.)

Mr. Baillie Cochrane.—The collection of Mr. Baillie Cochrane of Lamington consists exclusively of the title deeds of his various estates. The only papers of historical interest relate to a portion of the lands in the neighbourhood of the town of Lanark, which were held by the tenure of baking certain wafers for the king when he happened to reside there. (See App., p. 632.)

Mr. Cosmo Gordon.—In the charter room at Fyvie Castle, belonging to Mr. Gordon are many documents of great historical interest, the series beginning towards the end of the 14th century. There are also many state papers connected with the Earls of Dunfermline in the reigns of Charles I. and Charles II. (See App., p. 644.)

Maxwell of Kirkconnell.—The manuscripts of the ancient family of Maxwell of Kirkconnell, reported on by Mr. Fraser, are very important. Among the letters specially to be mentioned is one of King Henry VIII. of England to King James V. previous to his marriage, reciprocating the Scottish monarch's anxiety for the maintenance of amity between the two kingdoms. Eighteen articles of instruction signed by the Earl of Arran, as Governor of Scotland, to David Pantar, Bishop Elect of Ross and Scottish ambassador at the court of France, propose, among other things, a common catholic bond of union between France and England, and desire the French monarch to send to the Pope for a longer absolution than had previously been sent to the murderers of Cardinal Bethune. A volume preserved in the Kirkconnell library, deserving special attention is a copy, probably unique, of a work by King James II., consisting of 172 pages, entitled "A Collection of several of his late Majesties papers" of devotion copied exactly out of the original manuscripts left by his Majesty in his "own handwriting." The authenticity of the volume is placed beyond all doubt by an attestation in holograph of Mary of Modena, that the manuscript is a true copy of the original papers in her possession, and which when the king, her son, and herself had no more use of them, were to be deposited in the Scots College at Paris with the rest of the king's original papers conformably to his intention.

Another manuscript in the same library contains the two registers of the Scots College of Douay. They afford much varied information respecting the Roman Catholic seminary and its students for nearly two centuries. It is sufficient to state that the first, called in the Kirkconnell library the "Larger Register of Douay," contains the names of the alumni of the Scots College, which was successively established at Pont-a-Mousson, Douay, and Louvain, from 1581 to 1772, with short notes of the character and subsequent career of each student, and notices by the early professors relating to the foundation and history of the institution, its revenues and benefactors. The other called the "Smaller Douay Register," is an abridgment from the Larger of the alumni of the Scots College from 1581 to 1742. Many of the students were connected with distinguished Scottish families. (See App., p. 650.)

Sir John Bethune.—The collection of manuscripts in the possession of Sir John Bethune, of Kilconquhar, Bart., contains various documents of historical interest. Among the charters will be found one attributed to William the Lion, dated 1165, and two others granted between 1189 and 1192. They are of historical value from the names of the persons who were present as witnesses. Among the correspondence are 17 letters from James Sharpe, Archbishop of St. Andrews; three have been extracted in extenso; one of them is "for his much-honoured Patrick Lindsay, of Wormistoun, to be communicated to the Elders of the Session of Craill," written from London in May 1661, whither Sharpe had gone for consecration after his appointment to be Archbishop of St. Andrews. It expresses his affectionate and pious concern that his former parishioners might be provided with a suitable pastor. Another of Sharpe's letters, dated Edinburgh, January 14, 1675, relates to the measures then adopted by the Privy Council of Scotland for the suppression of conventicles. (See App., p. 623.)

Erskines of Dun.—The muniments of the Erskines of Dun supply much biographical and historical information. The correspondence, extending from 1544 to 1753, embraces letters from Cardinal Bethune; Mary, Queen Dowager of Scotland; James, Earl of Murray, Regent of Scotland; King James the Sixth; David, Earl of Crawford; John, Earl of Montrose; John Erskine of Dun; Patrick Maule, of Panmure; King Charles I.; David Leslie, Lieutenant-General of the Forces in Scotland, and others. All these letters relate to the civil and ecclesiastical transactions of the period over which they extend. The same remark applies to the section of royal warrants and commissions, and miscellaneous papers of the Erskines of Dun from the year 1474. The letters and other papers relating to John Erskine of Dun, Superintendent of Angus and Mearns, coadjutor of John Knox the Scottish reformer, furnish varied materials bearing on the history of the times in which he lived.

The act of admission of James Erskine into the parsonage of Dun in 1570 by the superintendent furnishes a specimen of the form observed in such cases by the Reformed Church of Scotland.

The correspondence relates to the family of Riddell, of Haining, in the County of Selkirk, now at Dun, from the year 1674, and the royal commissions and other papers connected with the Scottish Borders from the year 1619. (See App., p. 633.)

The Homes of Renton.—The manuscripts of the family of Home of Renton in the County of Berwick, are mainly historical. From the connexion of the proprietors of Renton with the ancient Priory of Coldingham, many of the Charters relate to that religious house, and contain notices of Henry Belnavis of Halhill, James Kirkcaldy of Grange, Robert Logan of Restalrig, and Sir George Home afterwards Earl of Dunbar, the favourite minister of James VI. It appears by these Charters that James IV. and James V., bestowed the lands of the monasteries on their favourites, proceedings to which the priors or abbots judged it prudent to submit.

The letters in the Collection from James VI. and Charles II. vary in importance. Sir John Home of Renton in his petition to Charles II. after the Restoration, claims to have been the first who to the hazard of his life and estate publicly asserted the interests of that monarch and of his father, and to have constantly adhered to the royal cause through the whole period of the Rebellion. In reward for his faithful services and heavy losses, he was knighted, created a Privy Councillor, and made a Lord of Session and Justice Clerk. (See App., p. 646.)

Borough of Perth.—Among the muniments of the Royal Burgh of Perth, is a series of Royal Charters of incorporation and privilege, of great use for the early history and constitution of Scottish Burghs. They begin with a Charter from King William the Lion which together with the subsequent Royal grants is engrossed in a charter to the Town by King James VI. dated in 1600. The Burgh Record which contains the acts of the Council begins in 1543. In this volume is engrossed a letter from King James I. written on the termination of his imprisonment in England in 1424, requesting pecuniary aid from the Burgh. (See App., p. 655.)

The Report of Mr. Gilbert, the Inspector of MSS. for Ireland, is unavoidably omitted owing to his long and severe indisposition.

In concluding this Report Your Majesty's Commissioners desire to call attention to the extent and literary value of the labours of the late Commission. The notices furnished of the numerous collections of valuable papers and documents in private hands cannot fail, they think, to preserve the knowledge of the existence of such collections and render them more accessible for the purposes of the historian.

Your Majesty's Commissioners have only to add the expression of a hope that their future labours may be attended with a like successful result.

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

HOUSE OF LORDS.
Report.

BEFORE noticing any of the papers in the portion of calendar printed below we wish again to call attention to the Minute books, or rough manuscript journal kept by one of the clerks of the House of Lords. Reference was made to these books in the third Report of the Commissioners, but they appear to us from further examination to require more particular mention.

The following is a list of the extant volumes so far as they have yet been discovered up to the abolition of the House of Lords in 1649:—

- 1620-1, March 22 to May 18, 1621.
- 1623-4, February 12 to March 25, 1624.
- 1624, April 1 to March 15, 1624-5.
- 1625, May 17 to August 12, 1625.
- 1627-8, March 17 to October 20, 1628.
- 1640, April 13 to May 5, 1640.
- 1640-1, January 11 to April 10, 1641, numbered (2) outside.
- 1641, Nov. 29 to 26 March 1642, numbered (5).
- 1642, Dec. 17 to 22 April 1643, numbered (8).
- 1643, April 24 to 4 Dec. 1643, numbered (9).
- 1644, July 22 to 3 March 1644-5, numbered (11).
- 1646, July 4 to 15 February 1646-7, numbered (14).

From 1660 there is an almost unbroken series of Minute books up to 1827.

From Mr. Horwood's report on Colonel Carew's MSS. (fourth Report of Commissioners, p. 369,) we learn that amongst them are seven folio volumes containing "scribbled" notes by Henry Elsynge, Clerk of the Parliaments, of proceedings in the House of Lords of the following dates:—

- Vol. 1, 1621, 17 April to 18 May.
- Vol. 2, 1621, 14 November to 8 February 1621-2.
- Vol. 3, 1623-4, 12 February to 25 March 1624.
- Vol. 4, 1624, 1 April to 29 May.
- Vol. 5, 1625-6, 6 February to 29 April 1626.
- Vol. 6, 1626, 1 May to 15 June.
- Vol. 7, 1627-8, 17 March to 26 June 1628.

It will be seen that some of these volumes run over the same period as that to which those in the House of Lords relate. Mr. S. R. Gardiner, in the preface to the volume of these notes edited by him for the Camden Society in 1870, attributes those in Colonel Carew's collection to Henry Elsynge, Clerk of the Parliaments, and supposes those in the House of Lords to be the work of one of his clerks. The Minute book for the short Parliament, April 13 to May 5, 1640, is in the handwriting of John Browne, clerk of the Parliaments at that time.

We have felt it our duty to call attention to these volumes rather than to compare them with the Journals and other sources of information, which would have occupied much time, but a few instances of the information to be got from them alone will be useful.

We learn from the Journals that on Saturday the 2nd of May 1640, the Earl of Bristol on behalf of Lionel Cranfield, Earl of Middlesex, presented a petition stating that in consequence of the former censure of the House the Earl of Middlesex forbore to come and sit or send his proxy, though His Majesty had sent him a writ of summons to Parliament, and praying that he might be permitted to take his seat.

This petition was referred to the Grand Committee for privileges, "on Monday next the first thing to be handled"; the committee met and agreed to a report in favour of the Earl's petition, as we learn from the Minute book, and the Earl was actually present on Tuesday morning to have taken his seat, but that Tuesday was the fatal 5th of May on which the King dissolved Parliament before the House could proceed to business.

The following is the report* of the Committee for privileges, which is written in the Minute book after the notice of the dissolution.

The Reporte of the Grand Cōmittee for priviledges for the Earle of Middlesex his admittance into the Parliament, being dated according to their Lōpps meetinge and resolucōns in that buisines (vizt.)

Die Lunæ quarto die Maij 1640.

Uppon a Peticōn of the Earle of Bristol on the behalfe of the Earle of Middlesex, that hee might bee restored to his voate and place in Parliament (as by the Peticōn it will more at large appeare, w^{ch} by the Howse was ordered to be entered as of Record) The mocōn and peticon of the Earle of Bristol was referred unto the Grand Cōmittee for priviledges, and they appointed to meete on Monday then next followeing aboute it, as they did, accordingly. And after a serious debate then of the buisines, it was resolved by a unanimous consent of the whole Cōmittee; That they helde it fitt and hono^{ble} for the House to extende their Grace and favour unto the Earle of Middlesex accordinge to the tenor of the Earle of Bristol's Peticōn. And that the next morninge reporte thereof should bee made unto the Howse by the Earle Marshall; And the House being pleased to affirme the opinion and voate of the E. The matter seems to have been again brought up in the Long Parliament, but to have been deferred to make way for more important business, and though the Earl did not die till the 6th of August 1645, he does not appear to have ever taken his seat.

The Minute book for the earlier weeks of the Long Parliament has not been found, but at the end of the volume beginning the 11th January 1640-1, is given a list of peers present on the 3rd of November, the opening day of the Parliament; and the names of peers present each day are given in the Minute books, but are at this period altogether omitted from the Journals.

From the 11th January 1640-1, we have in the Minute book not only a record of all the proceedings on the Earl of Strafford's trial, but also notes of what was said by those who took any part in it, and also of the evidence given by the witnesses. This volume unfortunately ends on Saturday the 10th of April, when after long discussion the Lords decided that whatever favor as to production of fresh evidence was granted to the accusers must be extended also to the accused; this decision was received by the Commons with a murmur of disapprobation, and on the same day the bill of attainder, under which the Earl was executed, was read a first time in the House of Commons. Search has been made, at present in vain, for the next volume of the Minute books, which would in all probability have contained a list of those who voted for and against the bill in the Upper House.

In the later volumes the numbers on each side in divisions of the House are often given, with the names of the tellers, when no mention is made of them in the Journals. Many other instances of the information to be obtained from these notes might be given, but enough has been said, for the present, to draw attention to their importance, and we trust that we may be able to say on some future occasion that the missing volumes have been recovered.

The calendar in the Appendix to the present report is carried up to the end of the year 1643, so we have now reached the period when there was an actual breach between the King and the Parliament, and every Act of State done by the latter was effected by an order or ordinance of both Houses. Amongst the MSS. will be found an immense number of drafts of these orders and ordinances; many of them are given in extenso in the Journals, and these we have dismissed with the briefest possible notice, but some of them are interesting either as showing the amendments made on different stages, or because they were finally rejected, and do not therefore appear in the Journals. For instance, on the 19th of March 1641-2 the King's Counsel were directed to prepare a bill to secure such as have executed any power upon any commission of lieutenancy or array; the draft was prepared exonerating those who had acted upon such commissions, which it declares were in reality illegal; the bill was, however, never read even a first time. On the 22nd of March in the same year is a draft of a bill for asserting of some privileges of Parliament lately broken and to prevent the breaking thereof in time to come, but this vindication of the honour of Parliament against the attempted seizure of the five members did not reach the third reading. On the 9th of April 1642 is a draft of the petition of the two Houses to the King, in which they pray that the ammunition may be removed from Hull, and that the six condemned Roman Catholic priests may be executed. The draft shows that this last wish was an afterthought, for it is in the handwriting of John Browne, clerk of the Parliaments, added probably in the House to a much amended draft of the part about Hull, which is in a different hand.

There are many letters and other papers giving accounts of different incidents in the civil war. Amongst these may be mentioned—(16 Dec. 1642.) Copy of a letter from Colonels Fiennes and Goodwin to the Earl of Essex, Lord General, announcing the surrender of Winchester Castle by Lord Grandison. (17 Jan 1642-3.) A letter from Colonel Bulstrode and Thomas Tyrrell at Aylesbury, to the Earl of Essex, giving an account of a skirmish with the enemy near Brill. (7 Feb. 1642-3.) A letter from the Earl of Stamford at Plymouth, to the Speaker of the House of Lords concerning the proceedings in Devonshire. (21 March 1642-3.) A petition of poor prisoners in the Bridewell at Oxford who were taken at Marlborough, complaining of the harsh treatment they receive at the hands of their captors to compel them to take an oath, that the Earl of Essex and all his adherents are traitors, and that the war raised for the destruction of the Parliament is most just and necessary. (24 July 1643.) A letter from Col. Richard Brown about the taking of Tunbridge, and (7 Sept. 1643), a copy of a very entertaining letter, apparently from one of the soldiers under the Earl of Essex, giving an account of the march of the army from the rendezvous at Bayard's Green to the relief of Gloucester. Full abstracts of these papers will be found under their respective dates.

The following papers relating to the rebellion in Ireland deserve mention:—The examinations of Garrat Aylmer (14 March 1641-2), and Nicholas Dowdall (17 March 1641-2), about the proceedings of the rebels near Drogheda, with accounts of their meetings on the famous hill of Tara and elsewhere. (11 May 1642.) Letter from the Lords Justices of Ireland to the Lord Keeper, stating that Lady Jepson and her son, Sir John Giffard, were upon the breaking out of the rebellion constrained to betake themselves to their castle of Jordan about 30 miles from Dublin; that they have been despoiled of everything they could not bring within the castle gates, and have been obliged to maintain their English tenants out of the little left to themselves; that they have now been long beleaguered, but that Sir John has made several sallies and slain many of the rebels; there is no possibility of their getting to Dublin without an army to protect them, and that Sir John's departure would much prejudice the public service and encourage the rebels. There are also numerous papers relating to the struggle with the rebels in the neighbourhood of Galway, and the submission of that town, under date 27 June 1642.

The following papers may be mentioned as interesting originals.

The letter from the nine lords at York (1642, June 5) excusing their not attending Parliament on the ground that the King had commanded them to remain with him.

Many petitions from Archbishop Laud, some of them in the handwriting of his secretary Dell, but for the most part in his own writing, and in the bold firm hand of earlier years. On the 27th of Oct. 1642 is one not mentioned in the Journals, in which he humbly prays that besides his two servants, which are to make his bed and do other things necessary for his age, going on with threescore and ten years of a weary life, their lordships would favorably allow him a butler and a cook, without which he knows not how to live, being not placed in any house in the Tower, but in a solitary room destitute of all company and other help. Under the dates of 13, 14, and 24 April 1643 will be found three very interesting holograph petitions of the archbishop with reference to his right of presentation to the living of Chartham, Kent.

A paper (28 July 1642) from the Committee for the safety of the kingdom, desiring the Committee for the Irish adventurers to furnish 100,000*l.* by way of loan for the defence of the King, Parliament, and Kingdom, upon the public faith, to be repaid within so short a time that it shall not be diverted from the purpose for which it was intended. This paper is signed by the Earls of Essex, Bedford, Holland, and Pembroke and Montgomery, Lord Say and Seale, Denzell Hollis, Sir Philip Stapleton, Sir Wm. Waller, and John Hampden. It is dated at the top 18th July 1642, and noted at the bottom "read 31 July 1642 and assented." The 31st of July was Sunday. The journals also show that on Sunday the 8th of August 1641 both Houses sat in the morning and afternoon.

Another very interesting paper is a copy of the propositions to the King for a peace, dated 5th August 1643, which the Lords drew up and sent to the Commons for their approval. The Commons, on Saturday the 5th of August, agreed to the first of these propositions, but the next day, Sunday, Lord Mayor Pennington called a Common Council, at which a petition against these propositions, and a draft ordinance for prosecuting the war were prepared, and presented to the Commons on the morning of Monday, the 7th. The Commons thus influenced, proceeded with the consideration of the propositions, and finally rejected them, and appointed a Committee to prepare reasons to be given to the Lords for their so doing. These propositions and reasons are printed in extenso at page 98, as though often referred to they are not to be found, so far as we can discover, in any of the histories of the period.

The following papers bring the state of the times so vividly to light that they cannot be passed over without notice.

A petition (1643, Aug. 17) of three messengers desiring some reward for the number of papists they had been the means of bringing to trial; a list of their victims is annexed to the petition, showing in most cases their sentence and fate; six were executed, eight reprieved by His Majesty, of the rest some were outlawed, some effected their escape. On the 12th of October, upon a certificate of Mr. Recorder Glyn that the statements of these informers were true, the House recommends them to the Lord Mayor and court of aldermen for a speedy reward.

A petition of Michael Miller (1641-2, Feb. 19) is curious, though perhaps hardly a fair picture of the discipline of the trained bands. Miller, one of the captains, complains that though he has about 300 men under his command, he can only muster 32 to attend upon the House, and that the 32 protest, that they will never appear again unless some course be taken to enforce the attendance of the rest. Again, on the 5th of March he complains that a halbert, one of several bought with his own money for the officers of the company, had been pawned at a tavern by John Wayte, one of the soldiers, and that his offence having been in part condoned, Wayte and another soldier, John Bickers, made such base speeches and raised such a riot at the court of guard, that Miller was in danger of his life. A few days later, on the 8th of March, we have a petition of Wayte and Bickers stating that they had merely complained to their officers, and then to some members of the Commons, that Miller had allowed Allen Pricket, late a strong papist (though now a frequenter of the church) to remain in the company, though his wife was still a strong papist, and their son was being educated as such, and that for this they had been unworthily used by Miller, in blows, fearful oaths, and very uncivil language. The House seems to have thought that the soldiers had sufficient excuse for their insubordination, for on the 17th of March, on a report from the Earl of Holland, it was decided that the men were in no way faulty, and that Miller should pay the fees for their detention.

Under date of the 8th of November 1643 will be found a quaint example of the relations in matters of courtesy between the King and Parliament. George Kirk, master of His Majesty's robes, applies for a pass for John Daintrey one of the grooms in the office to go to Oxford with his servant with 4 dozen of gloves which are much wanted by His Majesty, and "4 yds. of taly, 2 ells and " 1 of taffety to be a tennis suit, and 2 pair of garters " and roses with silk buttons and other necessaries for " the making up of the said suit." This application, though not mentioned in the Journals, is endorsed by the clerk "Exped.," and from the Minute book we learn, that though in open arms against the King, Parliament allowed his master of the robes to send him a tennis suit from London. The entry in the Minute book is "Ordered that John Daintrey shall have a pass to Oxon with a servant to carry down some things for the King's Majesty." See also 20 Dec. 1642 and 21 Feb. and 9 March 1642-3, on which dates warrants are granted for sending apothecary's stuffs, wax lights, and gloves to Oxford, for His Majesty's use.

There are several papers graphically depicting the outrages committed in Canterbury Cathedral by the Parliamentarian troopers in August 1642; one a letter from Dr. Paske, dated August 30th, complaining that the soldiers had overthrown the Communion table, torn the cloth, defaced the screen, violated the monuments of the dead, spoiled the organs, broken down the ancient rails and seats, with the brazen eagle that did support the bible, forced open the cupboards of the singing men, rent some of their surplices, gowns and bibles, and carried away others, mangled all the service books and books of Common Prayer, bestrewing the whole pavement with the leaves; a miserable spectacle to every good eye; and further some few zealots exercised their malice on the arras hangings in the choir (representing the whole story of our Saviour) with horrible blasphemies wherever a representation of Christ appeared, and finding a statue of Christ in the frontispiece of the South gate, discharged more than 40 shots against it. We learn from a letter of Dr. Paske's of the 1st of September that Sir Michael Livesey, when he heard of these outrages, which had been committed without his knowledge, expressed the greatest regret, and withdrew his men as soon as possible, but some of the inferior officers justified their men. A certificate very numerously signed, confirming the statements made in Dr. Paske's first letter, will be found under date 17 Sept. 1642, and a further account of the proceedings of these troopers in other parts of Kent under the command of Colonel Sandys, Sir Michael Livesey, and others, under date of September 5, 1642.

At the end of the Calendar will be found a list of places, the returns from which, made under the order of Parliament for taking the protestation, have been preserved. The protestation runs as follows:—"I, A. B., do, in the Presence of Almighty God, promise, vow, and protest to maintain and defend, as far as lawfully I may, with my Life, Power, and Estate, the true Reformed Protestant Religion, expressed in the Doctrine of the Church of England, against all Popery and Popish Innovations, within this Realm, contrary to the same Doctrine, and according to the Duty of my Allegiance, His Majesty's Royal Person, Honour, and Estate, as also the Power and Privileges of Parliaments, the lawful Rights and Liberties of the Subjects, and every Person that maketh this Protestation, in whatsoever he shall do in the lawful Pursuance of the same; and to my power, and as far as lawfully I may, I will oppose and by all good Ways and Means endeavour to bring to condign Punishment all such as shall, either by Force, Practice, Counsels, Plots, Conspiracies, or otherwise, do any Thing to the contrary of any Thing in this present Protestation contained; and further, that I shall, in all just and honourable Ways, endeavour to preserve the Union and Peace betwixt the Three Kingdoms of England, Scotland, and Ireland: and neither for Hope, Fear, nor other Respect, shall relinquish this Promise, Vow, and Protestation." L. J., IV. 234.

This protestation was reported and agreed to in the Commons, and ordered to be made by every member of that House on the 3rd of May 1641. It was agreed to by the Lords, and ordered to be made by every member of their House on the following day. On the 5th of May the Commons ordered the protestation and preamble to be printed, the copies to be attested by the clerk, and then sent by the members to their several counties and boroughs, with an intimation "with what willingness the members of this House made this protestation, and as they justify their taking of it in themselves, so they cannot but approve it in them that shall likewise take it." Subsequently it was resolved that the protestation is fit to be made by everyone, and that what person soever shall not make the protestation is unfit to bear office in the church or commonwealth, and that it is a "Shibboleth to discover a true Israelite." In January 1641-2, the Speaker recommended by letter the making of the protestation to the sheriffs, mayors, and others in general. The returns of the names of those who had made the protestation appear to have come in rapidly after this, for on the 8th of March they are referred to a committee instructed to receive them, and to consider what is fit to be done with those that refuse the protestation. The returns are for the most part dated February or March 1641-2, and contain in almost all cases the names of those persons who have subscribed the protestation, and sometimes also the names of any who have refused. In a few cases the minister of the parish certifies that all have subscribed without giving the names. The return from Oxford University is very interesting, and will be found at page 130.

We have again to acknowledge the assistance of Mr. G. Fulkes and Mr. A. Lowson; the former is now engaged in arranging in chronological order the papers belonging to the period from 1714 to 1760, and the latter has completed a list of them up to the time of the Restoration.

mon Council of the City of Exeter, for the preservation of true Religion, the maintenance of the Privilege of Parliament, the liberty of the subject, the disarming of papists, &c. L. J., IV. 536. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of the Commons of the City of Exeter to the Mayor, Justices, and Common Council of Exeter, praying that their grievances may be represented to the King and the Parliament. This petition is referred to in preceding. See L. J., IV. 536.
2. Petition of the Mayor, Aldermen, Burgesses, and other Inhabitants of Totness, to the Justices of the Peace for the County of Devon; that their grievances may be represented to the King and the House of Commons; they complain of the decay of their trade in woollen drapery, caused by the granting of Letters Patent to several Companies, who under colour thereof exact intolerable taxes. They pray that the Bishops and all recusant Lords may be removed from the House of Peers.
3. Copy of petition of the Mayor, his brethren and the rest of the inhabitants of Clifton-Dartmouth-Hardnes, with the places adjacent, to the Justices of the Peace for the County of Devon. The petitioners, who are chiefly occupied in the Newfoundland fisheries, complain that their trade is likely to be destroyed in consequence of the number of Turkish pirates from Algiers and Sallee, the stagnation in trade owing to the rebellion in Ireland, and still more to the dread entertained of a popish rising: they pray that measures may be taken for redressing these grievances, and desire the removal of the popish Lords and Bishops from the Upper House.

Feb. 4. Petition of Sir Thos. Cary, Knt.; prays that his cause against the Bishop of Ardagh, for reversal of an order of the Council Board in Ireland concerning certain lands and tithes worth 150*l.* per annum, formerly recommended to both Houses in Ireland, may be referred to two or three of the spiritual or temporal Lords now in London to end the same by consent, or otherwise to certify the true state thereof to the House. L. J., IV. 561.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the case.

2. Petition of Sir Thomas Cary, that a day may be appointed for the hearing of his cause, and that the Bishop of Ardagh may be ordered to attend and produce certain deeds. (Undated.)

Feb. 4. Petition of Arthur Magneiss (or Magennis), that competent maintenance may be allowed him whilst he remains prisoner in the Tower. L. J., IV. 561.

Feb. 4. Draft order of both Houses concerning Serjeant-Major-General Skippon, approving his conduct as Captain of the forces guarding the Houses of Parliament, &c. L. J., IV. 562.

Feb. 4. Petition of knights, gentlemen, freeholders and others, inhabitants of the county of Surrey: for a union of the two Houses in providing for the safety of the kingdom, the relief of Ireland, &c. L. J., IV. 563. In extenso.

Feb. 4. The King's answer to the petition of both Houses concerning the forts and militia: has received the message from both Houses and resolves to take it into his mature consideration, as the importance of the matter deserves, and will return a speedy answer by or before Saturday, if he can. C. J., II. 412.

Feb. 4. Petition of Alexander McDonnell: petitioner raised certain men in the North of Ireland to assist in the suppression of the rebellion there, and the better to proceed in that service, repaired to England hoping to obtain some employment; has spent his small means, and fears arrest for the debts of his brother the Earl of Antrim, with whom he stands bound for great sums of money: prays for an allowance out of the Earl's estate in England, and for freedom from arrest until the Earl's debts are paid.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of the creditors of the Earl of Antrim and the Lady Duchess of Bucks, his wife; Archibald Stewart, John Traylman, and others, the sureties for the debts of the Earl and Duchess, cannot go free abroad or take steps for raising money for discharge of the debts, for fear of arrest by some few of the creditors, who will not join with the rest in granting the sureties this liberty: pray for a protection from Parliament for one year for Archibald Stewart and John Traylman. (Undated.)

Feb. 5. Affidavit of Wm. Pargiter concerning gunpowder sent to Mr. Draycott of Panesley (?) in Staffordshire. L. J., IV. 564. In extenso.

Feb. 6. Letter from the King to the Lord Keeper Littleton, read in the House on the 7th, signed by the King. L. J., IV. 566.

Encloses,—

for a thorough reformation of the Church, &c. L. J., IV. 570. In extenso.

Feb. 8. Copy of order of the Commons for setting forth 38 ships for guarding of the Narrow seas. C. J., II. 420. In extenso.

Feb. 9. Draft of "An ordinance of both Houses of Parliament for the ordering of the Militia of the Kingdom of England and dominion of Wales." L. J., IV. 572. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of portion of preceding.

Feb. 9. Three copies of preceding ordinance.

Feb. 9. Petition of divers gentlemen and others, inhabitants of the county of Suffolk, on the behalf of themselves and many thousands of that county that would have accompanied them, but have forborne in obedience to a late order of the House of Commons; pray for reformation of the Church, relief of Ireland, &c. L. J., IV. 573. In extenso.

Feb. 9. Petition of Wm. Cox, gent.; was arrested in January last in the streets of Bristol by Edward Bishop, a serjeant, at the suit of Richard Godwin, in breach of privilege, for they knew that petitioner was solicitor to the Lord Poulett; prays that he may be freed from arrest. Noted; Rejected.

Feb. 9. Affidavits of Richard Glover, Thos. Padmor, and Wm. Simpson, porters, that certain barrels of gunpowder were sent down by carrier to Mr. Leigh of Adlington in Cheshire, from the house of Parnell, a tailor dwelling in an alley near Bow Church. See L. J., IV. 576, &c.

Feb. 10. The King's answer concerning the bill for levying of soldiers, and the bill for taking away Bishops' votes. L. J., IV. 574. In extenso.

Feb. 10. Petition of John Galping, clerk, enforced by desperate extremity though against the late order of restraining of private petitions for a time, humbly to crave leave to implore the compassion of the House for his relief. Petitioner is incumbent of Portisham in the county of Dorset, a place of above 1,300 souls, a vicarage worth 300*l.* per annum; the profits were for many years detained by the patron and only 20 marks paid to the vicar. Petitioner after spending all he had in a suit against the patron, was forced to accept a composition of 75*l.* per annum, and submit to a decree in Chancery accordingly; this decree only bound the person of the patron, not his estate, and as he is already in prison for debt he refuses to pay any part of the 75*l.*, to the utter ruin of petitioner, his wife and children; prays for a hearing of the case and for sequestration of the profits of the living. Noted, "To be retained until the Lords fall upon Petitions." L. J., IV. 574.

Feb. 10. Petition of the gentry, ministry and commonalty of Cleveland in the county of York, that they may be secured, a happy reformation afforded, and the laws of God and the King put in execution against papists. L. J., IV. 574. In extenso. The petition consists of a number of copies all numerously signed; to that signed at Ingleby Greenhow a certificate signed by the minister and churchwardens is attached, that the chief inhabitants that can write have subscribed the petition, and that they who cannot write themselves have willingly consented that their names should be subjoined to the same petition.

Feb. 10. Petition of the knights, gentlemen, freeholders, and subsidy men of the best rank and quality in the county of Oxon; for vindication of the privileges of Parliament, removal of evil councillors, and abolishing of idolatry. L. J., IV. 575. In extenso.

Feb. 10. Petition of the knights, gentlemen and freeholders of the county of Northampton, for the removal of evil councillors from the King, the restraint of recusants, securing of the ports, &c. L. J., IV. 575. In extenso.

Feb. 11. Extracts from two letters of the 23rd of Jan. and 1st of Feb. 1641-2, written from Antwerp to Sir John [Regin]: every one in Antwerp is afraid that there will happen great mischiefs in England, and that suddenly; counsels him to withdraw from the imminent dangers and to come thither, where he will be welcome. Endorsed, "The extract of a letter written from Antwerp to a merchant in London, 11th Feb. 1641."

Feb. 11. Letter from Sir Edw. Rodes to the Right Hon^{ble}. Ferdinando, Lord Fairfax, and Henry Bellasis, Esq., knights of Parliament for the county of York: the inhabitants of the county are in even greater perplexity than when they had two armies in the neighbourhood; they are specially apprehensive, who desire to see the ordinances for disarming of recusants and securing the magazines carried out: in obedience to these ordinances the writer intreated the assistance of Mr. Wm. West, J.P., having heard that Kellam Homer, armour dresser to the Earl of Arundel, had sent for one Chapman to dress arms, and that Homer had said that before May day they should have such a peal rung in Sheffield as had not been heard these hundred years; meaning by the papists against the town of Sheffield: and having heard that Homer and others were papists, they thought it right to make an inventory of the arms in his charge, and to remove the offensive arms to the castle until the pleasure of the House should be known. From York. See C. J., II. 431. L. J., IV. 583.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Kellam Homer; is not guilty of the words and matters in the preceding letter contained against him, hath all his life been a protestant and never papist; he and Chapman are now in the messenger's house at great charges; prays that he may be dispatched according to the justice of his cause. (Undated.) See L. J., IV. 645.

Feb. 11. Petition of Colonel Fitzwilliams: their Lordships lately gave him license to transport three or four hundred men into France as recruits to his regiment there: but with this clause that they should consist only of Irish, which makes the order fruitless, as it would be almost impossible at this time to transport any considerable number of that nation; notwithstanding this, the French King will imagine the order to be sufficient, and conceiving petitioner to be backward in the charge he has undertaken, may ruin him, by disbanding his regiment, the only means for the present left to maintain him: prays to be allowed to transport such of all nations as he may raise here to the number aforesaid. Noted, "Exped. Nothing ordered." See L. J., IV. 554.

Feb. 12. Abstract of a letter from the Mayor of Carlisle about the storing of provisions by private persons, and the number of papists in that neighbourhood. L. J., IV. 579. In extenso.

Feb. 12. Petition of inhabitants of the county of Warwick and city of Coventry, here present in the behalf of themselves and many others of the said county: pray for thorough reformation of the church, punishment of delinquents, vindication of the privileges of Parliament, &c. L. J., IV. 579. In extenso.

Feb. 12. Information of Mr. Monyns, fellow of Peterhouse, Cambridge, against Francis Greene, a professed Roman Catholic, for speaking scandalous words against the Protestant religion: Greene was curate at Arundel in Sussex and bred a Catholic, and was a scholar and Master of Arts of Magdalen College, Oxford, in Dr. Renold's time. See L. J., IV. 586.

[Feb. 12.] Copy of ordinance of both Houses appointing the Earl of Stamford, Lord Lieutenant for the county of Leicester. See L. J., IV. 578. Earl of Stamford nominated. See also ordinance for the Militia. L. J. IV. 572.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of appointment of a deputy lieutenant by the Earl of Stamford.

Feb. 12. Commission for giving the Royal Assent to the "Act for disenabling persons in Holy Orders to exercise any temporal jurisdiction or authority," and to the "Act for the better raising and levying of soldiers for the present defence of the kingdom of England and Ireland." L. J., IV. 580. Signed by the King. Seal wanting.

Feb. 12. Copy of examination of Henry McCartan, major domo to Colonel Owen O'Neale, in Flanders, and by him sent to Ireland with promises of support in men and munitions for the rebels.

Feb. 13. Copy of license from the King to Francis Lord Viscount Montague, with his lady and twelve attendants, to travel beyond the seas. See L. J., IV. 599.

Feb. 14. Draft of the Lord Keeper's speech before the passing of the bills for pressing of soldiers, and for taking away the Bishops votes. L. J., IV. 580. In extenso.

Feb. 14. Draft of the message of thanks to the King for passing the bills for pressing of soldiers and for taking away the Bishops votes. L. J., IV. 581. In extenso.

Feb. 14. Informations respecting words spoken by the Earl of Arundel, that he had advised Mr. Abden not to stay in England. L. J., IV. 581. In extenso.

Feb. 14. Petition of Wolley Leigh, of Thorpe, in the county of Surrey, Esq., to H. C.: about Easter term last petitioner arrested Edward Maria Wingfield for a debt of 2,000*l.*, but by virtue of a protection from the Earl of Peterborough, Wingfield was commanded away by the Earl, though not one of his menial servants. Petitioner has applied to the House of Lords in vain; hears that Wingfield intends to go to Ireland, and so defraud him; prays the Commons to mediate with the Lords, that the Earl of Peterborough may be enjoined to produce Mr. Wingfield, or give bail for his appearance. See C. J., II. 428. L. J., IV. 582.

Feb. 14. Copy of intercepted letter from Lord Digby, at Middleburgh, to Sir Lewes Dives, Jan. 20. Rushworth, Part III., Vol. I., p. 555. In extenso. Also copy of intercepted letter from same to Mr. Secretary Nicholas, dated Jan. 21; his sudden departure from England has given rise to many rumours against him, but his enemies were rancorous before his departure; desires his friends not to judge him rashly; has done nothing but what he considered best for the King's service. These letters were read in the House this day. L. J., IV. 583.

Feb. 14. Copy of intercepted letter from Lord Digby to the Queen, opened by order of the House this day. L. J., IV. 585. Rushworth, Part III., Vol. I., p. 554. In extenso.

Feb. 14. Order of both Houses of Parliament approving of all that Serjeant-Major Skippon has done for the security of the Tower.

This order, which is signed by Elaynge, was made by the Commons on the 12th, and agreed to by the Lords with a verbal addition on the 14th. L. J., IV. 584. In extenso.

Feb. 14. Answer of Sir Philip Mainwaring, Knight, His Majesty's principal Secretary of State within the realm of Ireland, to the transmission of the Commons upon the complaint of Adam Lord Viscount Loftus, of Ely, as also to a petition exhibited into this Honorable House by the said Lord Loftus. Conceives that he is in no way concerned in either the transmission or petition, except as a feoffee in trust of the lands of the Lord Loftus, under a decree of the Lord Deputy and Council of Ireland.

Feb. 15. Petition of Edward Watkins, Esq., and Thomas Aleway, searchers of His Majesty's Port of London: have made many seizures of popish books and reliques, and of gold and jewels, but have frequently been forced to give up the goods so seized through the action of the Archbishop of Canterbury and Mr. Endymion Porter, contrary to law, and have suffered loss and imprisonment in consequence of their activity in their office; about four years since the right of search at Gravesend (a member of the port of London), was unlawfully taken from them, and is still enjoyed by John Robinson and others under colour of letters patent which are void in law; but petitioners are unable to prove this, being restrained from legal proceedings by an injunction grounded upon a dormant bill in Chancery; upon complaint to the House the Commons voted that petitioners had been illegally imprisoned, but have since been too much occupied to proceed further in the business, while some of the popish party have set on one Atkinson, a decayed milliner, to seek the reversal of petitioners' office from the King, contrary to the statute of Edward the 6th; the patent is now waiting to be sealed; petitioners pray that the Lord Keeper may be ordered to make a stay of the grant until their rights are decided by the House of Commons. L. J., IV. 586.

Feb. 15. Petition of the knights, gentlemen, citizens, and other inhabitants within the county and city of York; for the relief of Ireland, &c. L. J., IV. 587. In extenso.

Feb. 15. Petition of John Edwards and Robert Thacker to the Commons; during the troubles with Scotland they were ordered to furnish 500 long pikes, and 1,000 musket rests monthly for the King's service, to be paid for as they delivered the goods; when peace was made they had only received 200l. and had delivered goods to that value; have a large stock on hand, and have become debtors for goods ordered by them; no pikes or rests have been bought from them since, though many foreign pikes which would never stand proof have been brought into His Majesty's stores; pray that their stock may be taken off their hands, and the importation of foreign pikes forbidden. C. J., II. 434.

Feb. 16. Petition of the inhabitants of the county of Leicester: for the punishment of the counsellors, contrivers, and actors of the late surpassing breach of Parliament privileges, &c. L. J., IV. 589. In extenso.

Feb. 16. Petition of the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London: at a Court of Common Council a committee was appointed, in relation to several orders of the House of Commons, to take into their consideration what was still to be done touching the safety of the King, Parliament, and City, with intention that the committee should advise with the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen and not have sole power; yet now the House of Commons intends to settle upon the committee the ordering of the militia which time out of mind has been under the rule of the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, as well in times of greatest danger as in peace: to put this power into new hands would bring the magistrates of the City into disesteem: pray that herein they may enjoy their wonted privileges: (Signed) Richard Gurney, Mayor, and others. L. J., IV. 590. The Minute Book says "The answer was that they petitioned too late."

Feb. 16. Petition of Richard Mack Moyler and Edmund Moore: were by order of 6th November last committed to Newgate, and by order of the 15th of the same month ordered to be kept close prisoners for speaking scandalous words against the Earl of Holland; have made submission to him, and in consequence of their three months imprisonment have become so poor, that they must have starved, if the master keeper had not relieved them at his own charge: pray for enlargement. See L. J., IV. 418, 425, 620.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same: are Irishmen, and were serving abroad as soldiers when they heard of the war between England and Scotland: returned at once and served in the North under the King: pray that they may not be detained in prison, but allowed to enter His Majesty's service under the Earl of St. Alban's [Earl of Clanrickarde], or that they may be sent over into the Low Countries or elsewhere, where they may have some service.

2. Petition of same: pray for an examination of the case between them and Lieutenant Trist, as they are soldiers of no settled force and cannot bear a long arrest without utter ruin.

Feb. 17. Petition of the High Sheriff, Knights, Esquires, gentlemen, ministers, freeholders, and inhabitants of the county of Sussex: that the protestation may be generally taken, the kingdom may be put into a posture of defence, &c. L. J., IV. 591. In extenso.

Feb. 17. Draft message from both Houses of Parliament to the Spanish Ambassador to take care that certain ships laden at Dunkirk with ammunition, &c. for Ireland be stopped. L. J., IV. 592.

Feb. 17. Draft of Petition of Lords and Commons to the King concerning the Lord Kimbolton and the Five Members. L. J., IV. 592. In extenso.

Feb. 18. The vote of the Lords and Commons upon the propositions for the speedy reducing of Ireland. L. J., IV. 593. In extenso.

Feb. 18. Petition of Henry Stewart, Esq., in behalf of himself and others who are interested in the same cause: has set forth in several petitions his sufferings in Ireland; attended (in hope) above a year on Parliament: returned to Ireland to his great hazard by their Lordships' directions to obtain writings, &c. to prove his complaints; has now lost his wife, his house, and all his estate in Ireland by the rebels, some of his tenants have been killed and the rest enforced to flee away; his five children are now in the hands of the merciless enemy: has nothing wherewith to relieve either them or himself, by reason of his long attendance on Parliament, but is in danger of being cast in prison for debt; prays their Lordships either speedily to right him, or else to supply his necessity until they have leisure to hear his case. See L. J., IV. 393, &c.

Feb. 18. Certificate of Justices Heath and Foster, recommending that the cause between Baud and Lane should be left to a trial at law.

Feb. 19. Petition of Michael Miller, Esq., one of the Captains of the trained bands of Middlesex: has 300 men or thereabouts under his command, and this day, as at other times, is come to do his duty in attending on the House, but with a very small appearance, not exceeding 32 men, on other occasions also he has wanted men to perform the duty, and those few men of his company, who have been constant appearers protest never to appear again, until some course be taken with the continual delinquents: prays that some course may be taken either by imposing fines or otherwise to enforce the delinquents to perform their duties, else petitioner will not be able to perform the service. L. J., IV. 596.

Feb. 19. Certificate of Thomas Crompton and George Cradock, that pursuant to their Lordships' order they searched the House of Mr. Philip Dracott of Painsley, but found only a little barrel containing about eight pounds of powder, bought (as he said) to kill hawks' meat, as he has in his house a cast and a half of long winged hawks: they likewise found arms for two lances or quirsassiers, which he stands charged with in the list of the trained horse for the county, and besides a fowling-piece, and four other small pieces to kill birds and hawks' meat. L. J., IV. 596.

Feb. 21. The King's answer concerning the ordinance of Parliament touching the militia. L. J., IV. 509. In extenso.

Feb. 21. Copy of preceding.

Feb. 21. Petition of Henry Fisher: the writ of error which was brought in, in the cause between the petitioner and the Dean and Chapter of Christchurch, Oxford, and others, concerning the Castle there, having been affirmed, petitioner prays that a day may be appointed for the further hearing of the equity of his cause. L. J., IV. 599.

Feb. 21. Copy of order of the Commons for the Lord Admiral to give commissions to merchants to seize ships that belong to, or go to relieve the rebels of Ireland. C. J., II. 446. In extenso. Agreed to by the Lords, with an amendment. L. J., IV. 600.

Feb. 21. Message of both Houses to the King concerning the militia. L. J., IV. 600. In extenso.

Feb. 21. Order of the Commons concerning waggons to be sent from Hull to carry arms to Chester. C. J., II. 447. Agreed to by the Lords. L. J., IV. 600. In extenso.

Feb. 21. The King's answer to the Petition of both Houses concerning the Lord Kimbolton and the five members. L. J., IV. 600. In extenso.

Feb. 21. Petition of Lancelot Lake; as sole executor of his mother Dame Mary Lake, lately deceased, entered upon that part of her personal property, which was in her manor house of Cannons, Middx, intending to remove the same to London, but was interrupted by the servants and friends of Sir Thomas Lake in a hostile manner: prays for an order securing him free ingress and regress upon the lands of his late mother, and peaceable possession of her personal estate. L. J., IV. 601.

Feb. 21. Order for the Lord High Admiral to grant unto William and Ann Pawlett, and others, letters of marque by way of reprisal against the subjects of the States of the United Provinces. L. J., IV. 601.

Feb. 22. Names of those who have killed the King's deer in Windsor forest. See L. J., IV. 602.

Feb. 22. Answer of Sir Edward Herbert, Knt., His Majesty's Attorney General, to the impeachment exhibited against him by the House of Commons in this present Parliament assembled. L. J., IV. 603. In extenso.

Feb. 23. Letter from the King to Lord Mowbray and Maltravers, requesting him notwithstanding his former leave of absence to repair to London and give his personal attendance in Parliament. This letter is the same as that to the Earl of Berks, which is given in extenso. L. J., IV. 612.

Feb. 24. Petition of Charles Lord Stanhope, Baron of Harrington: Robert Knightley, a notorious recusant, has commenced an action in the Court of Common Pleas against Edward Chamberleyn, petitioner's tenant, for recovery of rent which he pretends to be issuing out of the Manor of Calcot [Caldecote] in the county of Warwick, which descended to petitioner free of any such incumbrances, as he conceives: prays for the benefit of privilege, and that the action may be stayed during the continuance of Parliament. Benyon. March 31. L. J., IV. 683.

Feb. 24. Another copy.

Feb. 24. Petition of John Robinson, Richard Ward, and Christopher Dighton, His Majesty's searchers at Gravesend: most seizures of goods prohibited and uncustomed, shipped at London, are made at Gravesend; the offices of searchers there are therefore very important, and have time past memory been distinct from those of London; about forty years since the searchers of London claimed to nominate the searchers of Gravesend to the Lord Treasurer, but Lord Treasurer Buckhurst, thinking this of dangerous consequence, disposed of them as separate offices, but allowed to the searchers of London a recompense of 100*l.* per annum. Petitioners have held their offices for about nine years, and during that time have seized great quantities of gold, silver, and other prohibited and uncustomed goods, shipped at London, and escaped by the connivance or negligence of the searchers there; and have done many other acceptable services to the state, discovering of popish priests and Jesuits going out and coming into the kingdom, and preventing the transportation of divers young children of good birth to be educated in the Popish religion; and have lately seized a quantity of wool shipped at London as goat's hair. Edward Watkins and Thomas Aleway, the present searchers of the Port of London, have tried to oust petitioners from their offices, have molested them in the discharge of their duties, and have now presented a petition to the House on the subject; pray that the parties may be summoned, and petitioners peaceably settled in their offices. L. J., IV. 609.

Feb. 24. Message from the Commons respecting the proceedings against the twelve Bishops, &c. L. J., IV. 609.

Feb. 24. Order for securing payment to the merchants and others who set forth ships for the Summer Fleet. L. J., IV. 609. In extenso.

Feb. 24. Proclamation writ sent to the sheriffs of the several counties of England and Wales to summon George Lord Digby, accused of high treason, to appear. L. J., IV. 611. In extenso. Certificate of publication of notice in the County of Worcester attached.

Feb. 24. Similar proclamation writ, with certificate of publication in the County of [Hereford] attached.

Feb. 24. Similar proclamation writ, with certificate of publication in the County of Gloucester attached.

Feb. 24. Similar proclamation writ, with certificate of publication in the town of [Ross] attached.

Feb. 24. Petition of the Mayor, Aldermen, Gentlemen, Merchants, Citizens, and other inhabitants of the City of New Sarum, in the County of Wilts: that the Lords would co-operate with the Commons for a thorough reformation, &c. L. J., IV. 611. In extenso.

Feb. 25. The King's Answer to the petition of both Houses concerning the Militia. L. J., IV. 612. In extenso.

Feb. 25. Letter from Cambridgeshire, signed by Sir John Cutts and others, to Lord North, Lord Lieutenant of the County, desiring that the militia may be reviewed, and supplied with arms. L. J., IV. 612. In extenso.

Feb. 25. Petition of Edward Trelawny: twelve months since petitioner obtained a judgment in the King's Bench for 400*l.* against Thomas Babb, who to delay execution brought a writ of error into Parliament, which he has since never prosecuted. Prays that the cause may be remitted to the Judges of the King's Bench to proceed therein. L. J., IV. 614.

Annexed:—

1. Similar Petition of same (undated).

Feb. 25. The Lords Justices of Ireland to the Lord Keeper, concerning the Lord Loftus' cause, desiring that the answers of Robert Lord Dillon, Sir Adam Loftus, Vice-Treasurer and Treasurer at War in Ireland, and of Sir Paul Davys, Clerk of the Council, now sent, may be accepted without their personal attendance, as their services are much required in Ireland in these perilous times. This letter which was read in the House this day is dated 11th February 1641[-2]. L. J., IV. 613.

Feb. 26. The joint and several answers of Robert Lord Dillon, Sir Adam Loftus, Knt., His Majesty's Vice-Treasurer and Treasurer at Wars in Ireland, and Sir Paul Davys, Knt., Clerk of the Council in Ireland, to so much as concerns them of the criminal and civil part in the transmission mentioned in the order of the most honorable the Lords House of Parliament, in the kingdom of England, dated the 9th of December 1641, which concerns the right honorable the Lord Viscount Loftus: the Justices and Council in Ireland judge the attendance of the respondents on their duties in Ireland so necessary, that they think not fit to license their repairing to England to present their answer themselves. Robert Lord Dillon and Sir Robert Loftus only acted as trustees in the matter complained of, and are ready to obey any order the Lords may make, so that they be protected therein from action by the heir-general of Sir Robert Loftus. Sir Paul Davys only acted in obedience to the commands of the Council, his duty being to obey commands and not to examine their justice; if they have failed to answer with sufficient fulness, pray consideration in regard of the troubles in Ireland, which leave them hardly time to attend to any of their private affairs. L. J., IV. 614.

of the County of Chester. Peter Heywood (against whom petitioner has a suit), has printed and published a declaration against petitioner, and caused several bundles of papers to be printed here in London in the form of petitions in the name of the County of Lancaster, full of scandal against petitioner as unfit for his place, and reflecting upon Parliament for appointing him; prays for vindication of his honour. L. J., IV.

Annexed:—

1. Printed copy of declaration referred to in preceding.
2. The answer of Peter Heywood, gent., to the charge contained in the petition of James Lord Strange. 22 March 1641-2.
3. Petition of Peter Heywood, prays that he may be dismissed from any further attendance, and be discharged of the pretended scandal.

Feb. 26. Deposition of Richard Francklin, of scandalous words spoken by Henry Stanley against the Parliament. L. J., IV. 615. In extenso.

Feb. 26. Draft of letter agreed to by both Houses, to be sent to the Sheriffs of Counties concerning the propositions about Ireland. L. J., IV. 615. In extenso.

Feb. 26. Articles of Impeachment against George Lord Digby, by the Commons in this present Parliament assembled, in maintenance of their accusation whereby he standeth charged with High Treason in their name and in the name of all the Commons of England. L. J., IV. 616. In extenso. Attached is a memorandum dated 2 May 1642, that the Commons desired to add to the first article the words, "And did 'levy war against the King.'" L. J., V. 37.

Feb. 26. Petition of Thomas Nettervill, Esq., son of the Lord Viscount Nettervill, now a prisoner in the Compter in Wood Street. Was committed to the custody of Sheriff Clerke by their Lordships until he should find security not to go into Ireland. The sheriff, having Justice Berkeley in his house and a large family of his own, pretended that he had no room for petitioner, and committed him to the Compter. Prays that he may be removed to some other place and have some allowance for his maintenance, as he has no friends or kindred in this kingdom to whom to apply. L. J., IV. 617.

Feb. 26. Petition of divers baronets, knights, esquires, gentlemen, yeomen, and others of the County of Derby, to H. C.: thank God for all that has been done in the way of Reformation, desire that the work may go on to perfection; offenders in Church and Commonwealth may be punished; papist lords and bishops removed from Parliament; papists disarmed and their practices disappointed; Ireland relieved, and England put into a posture of defence under persons, whom Parliament and the Kingdom can trust; in support of all which petitioners will make good to the uttermost the protestation so wisely commanded by the House to be taken.

This petition consists of many copies very numerously signed, but no mention is made of it in the journals. It was no doubt presented to the House somewhat later than Feb. 26, on which day the inhabitants of Winhill are stated to have signed the petition.

Feb. 28. Copy of the resolutions of the House of Commons upon the King's answer to their petitions concerning the Prince and the Militia. C. J., II. 460. In extenso. Agreed to by the Lords on the afternoon of the same day. L. J., IV. 619. In extenso.

Feb. 28. Draft of preceding, chiefly in Rushworth's handwriting. (Three papers.)

Feb. 28. Petition of Sir George Clerke, knight, one of the Sheriffs of the City of London; by their Lordship's order of the 9th inst., Mr. Nettervill was committed to his custody, but petitioner's family being large, he has only one spare room in which he has already, by order of the House, Mr. Justice Berkeley his prisoner, he therefore took special order with the keeper of Wood Street Compter for Mr. Nettervill to lodge there. Mr. Nettervill lately making moan to petitioner that he was destitute of means for his maintenance, he sent 40*l.* out of his own purse for his relief; has lately received an order commanding him to attend the House this day to give account why he has not obeyed the former order; humbly conceives that he has not disobeyed, and desires the favourable opinion of the House. See L. J., IV. 617.

Feb. 28. Certificate for poll money for part of the Hundred of Offlow, in the county of Stafford, as also upon review thereof according to order, &c.—Aldridge, &c.

Feb. 28. Certificate for poll money for part of the Hundred of Offlow, in the county of Stafford, as also upon review thereof, according to order, &c.—Alrewas, &c.

[Feb. 28.] Certificate of what hath been done upon the poll money, as well upon the Act of poll money as upon the order of review of the same in the Hundred of Totmanslowe [Totmonslow], in the county of Stafford.

Feb. . Petition of Anthony Hooper and his creditors; the referees to whom were referred the differences between Hooper and his creditors were proceeding rapidly to a settlement, when one Philip Pascall, a Frenchman, pretending to be a creditor, charged Hooper in execution in the Poultry Compter, London, and is likely thereby to frustrate their Lordships' order and defraud the other creditors. Prays for an order for Hooper to attend the House with his keeper de die in diem. See L. J., IV. 329, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of referees in support of preceding.

March 1. Petition of the Bishop of Durham and the Bishop of Coventry and Lichfield. The House of Commons having voted free liberty unto them and the other Bishops to answer for themselves without counsel; pray their Lordships' leave to present themselves before the House of Commons to manifest the truth of their cause. L. J., IV. 621.

March 1. Petition of Gilbert Fitch, one of the Marshals of His Majesty's Hall in Ordinary, to James, Duke of Richmond and Lennox, Lord Steward of His Majesty's Household. Was arrested at the suit of Ezechias Skarning contrary to privilege. Prays for his discharge, and that Skarning and others may be called upon to answer. L. J., IV. 621.

March 1. Petition of Archbald, Archbishop of Cassell, in Munster, in the behalf of Daniel MacCarthy. Signed by MacCarthy, for leave for him to return to Ireland lest he perish with hunger or be obliged to beg from door to door. Noted. To be sent to the Commons. See C. J., II. 462.

March 2. Message from the Commons touching the King's Message concerning the Militia. L. J., IV. 622. In extenso.

March 2. Order of Lords and Commons for the rigging of ships for the defence of the Kingdom. L. J., IV. 622. In extenso.

March 2. Petition of His Majesty's Attorney General touching the Counsel assigned to him. L. J., IV. 623. In extenso.

March 4. Petition of Allan Boteler, Esquire, Cupbearer to Her Sacred Majesty, praying for his discharge, having been arrested contrary to privilege. L. J., IV. 624.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of Order declaring that the Queen's servants are to enjoy the Privilege of Parliament. 6 August 1640.

March 4. Information of Sir John Lenthall and his son, Thomas Lenthall, concerning the riot in the King's Bench Prison. L. J., IV. 624. In extenso.

March 4. Letter from the King to Lord Keeper Littleton concerning the Attorney General. This letter was read in the House on the 8th of March. L. J., IV. 634. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the Articles of High Treason and other High Misdemeanours against the Lord Kimbolton, Mr. Denzill Holles, Sir Arthur Haslerig, Mr. John Pym, Mr. John Hampden, and Mr. William Strode. Enclosed in preceding. L. J., IV. 501. In extenso.

March 4. Acknowledgment by Christopher Elsing of the receipt of 2*l.* from his brother Henry Elsing.

March 4. Petition of Richard Delamain. Several rates of land in the four provinces of Ireland, with the rents reserved to the Crown, are lately published by order of Parliament for the information of such persons as shall be undertakers. Petitioner has prepared a table, whereby it may appear what number of acres will arise for any sum of money proposed. Prays that the table may be published by order of the House.

Annexed:—

1. Table shewing instantly by the eye the number of acres belonging to any sum of money, according to the rate settled by Parliament upon any of the lands within the four provinces of Ireland, or what sum of money is to be disbursed for any number of acres assigned, and what the yearly rent reserved for the King amounteth unto, for any number of acres in any of the four provinces. As also a table to reduce any number of Irish acres of 21 feet to the pole, unto Statute acres of 16½ feet to the pole, or any number of English acres proposed, to find what number of Irish acres they make, all performed by an inspection of the table, calculated by Richard Delamain in the 14th year of his age, and dedicated to the high and honourable Court of Parliament.

March 5. Engrossed ordinance of the Lords and Commons in Parliament, for the safety and defence of the kingdom of England and dominion of Wales. L. J., IV. 625. In extenso. (Parchment Collection.)

March 5. Draft of portion of preceding.

March 5. Petition of Michael Miller, Esquire, captain of one of the trained bands for the county of Middlesex, to the Earl of Holland, Lord-Lieutenant of the County, complaining of the boisterous and insolent behaviour of John Wayte and John Bickers, two, of his company, when on guard at the Parliament House, and praying his Lordship's order in the matter. See L. J., IV. 628.

March 5. Petition of the high sheriff, knights, esquires, gentlemen, ministers, freeholders, and other inhabitants in the county of Berks, praying that the country may be put into a posture of defence. L. J., IV. 627. In extenso.

March 5. Petition of Colonel John Butler. Was with the King in Scotland when the rebellion in Ireland began, and disclaims all interest in rebellious designs and intentions. If their Lordships please to employ him, has great confidence that he shall persuade all the family of the Butlers to lay down their arms and assist in suppressing the rebels, and has no question that the Earl of Ormonde, his nephew, will be answerable for his misactions. Prays for his liberty, and if that cannot be granted, then that maintenance may be allotted to him. See L. J., IV. 533.

March 5. Draft resolutions of the Commons touching Commissions of Lieutenancy. C. J., II. 467. In extenso.

March 5. Copy of certificate of Lord Saville and Sir Peter Wich, that 918*l.* 5*s.* 7*d.* hath been spent for the diet and other expenses of the Lords in Parliament, from the 20th of March 1640-1 to the 31st December 1641, and requesting the Lords and officers of the Exchequer to take present order that this sum may be impressed to Mr. Cofferer.

March 7. Petition of Edward Sydenham, Esquire, praying for an order for quieting him in the possession of certain improved lands in the county of Derby. L. J., IV. 629.

March 7. Copy of the further declaration of both Houses presented to the King. L. J., IV. 629-633. In extenso.

March 7. Draft order of Lords and Commons, appointing receivers of the subscriptions for the speedy reducing of the rebels of Ireland. L. J., IV. 632. In extenso.

March 7. Petition of Lieutenant John Curtis to H. C. Petitioner, being an English protestant, settled in Ireland about seven years since, and gave a large sum as a fine for a lease of lands in the Queen's County, in Leinster. Has been despoiled by the rebels and forced to fly into this kingdom, where he has received the command of a lieutenant's place under the Lord General in the expedition into Ireland, whereby he may be enabled to regain his lost fortunes, but he has not yet received any pay, and is therefore in great distress. Prays for relief out of the monies contributed for the distressed protestants in Ireland. C. J., II. 469.

March 7. Petition of James Cocks, merchant, for relief against Thomas Seaman and others, upon whose suit concerning a bond, he is unjustly detained close prisoner in the Fleet.

March 7. Petition of William Wingfield, gent., with his wife, mother, two sisters, and three children. Their Lordships were pleased to grant passes to petitioners for their peaceable passage abroad. Being in extremity they were compelled to make their wants known to the resident clergy of certain parishes in Essex. Some were helpful to them until they came to Billericay, where they entreated Mr. Bridge, the minister, to recommend their distressed state to his parishioners; he not only refused to do this, but with the assistance of the officers of the town and one Hunter, intercepted and detained their passes, saying that they were hedge passes. Pray that Bridge, Hunter, and the officers of the town, may be called upon to answer.

March 8. Petition of John Waite, freeholder, and John Bickers, both of the Trained Bands under the command of Captain Michael Miller. Complain that Allen Prickett, late a strong papist, was allowed by Captain Miller to appear with part of his arms on Friday last at the Court of Guard, notwithstanding he had been discharged by the House of Commons upon Petitioner's complaint. They further complain of many wrongs done to them by Captain Miller, and pray that the matter may be referred to the Lord Lieutenant, Deputy Lieutenants, and Knights of the County of Middlesex. L. J., IV. 634.

March 8. Petition of Edward Trelawny, Gent., for a speedy hearing of his cause against Babb. L. J., IV. 634.

March 8. Copy of Mr. Serjeant Wyld's speech in opening the proceedings of the House of Commons against Sir Edward Herbert, His Majesty's Attorney General, for exhibiting articles of High Treason against Lord Kimbolton and the five members. L. J., IV. 635. This paper is wrongly endorsed "Mr. Serjeant "Wyld's opening of Mr. Benyon's charge."

March 8. Draft Order of the Commons touching the Protestation. C. J., II. 471. In extenso.

March 9. Petition of Sir Philip Carteret with reference to the defence of the Island of Jersey. L. J., IV. 637. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Memorial of the state of the militia and forts in the Island of Jersey, the wants and defects, and means of defence. L. J., IV. 637. In extenso.

March 10. Petition of James, Earl of Suffolk. Theophilus, late Earl of Suffolk, was indebted to William Geeres, a silkman, for certain wares. Geeres understanding that Marmaduke Moore, a servant of the Earl, was feoffee for divers of the Earl's lands, got Moore to enter into bond to Thomas Masham, who pretended power to assign over debts to the King. Masham accordingly assigned the bond to the King, and not only extended such lands as Moore was feoffee in, but other lands of petitioner's whereih Moore had no colour of interest. Prays that the King's Remembrancer may be ordered to make no further process upon the extent until the abuses complained of have been examined into. L. J., IV. 640.

March 12. Petition of Thomas Gardiner, Knt., Recorder of London, now prisoner in the Tower by their Lordships' order. Acknowledges the justice of his imprisonment and prays for his discharge. L. J., IV. 642.

March 12. Similar Petition of Thomas Bedingfield, Knt., His Majesty's Attorney of the Duchy. L. J., IV. 642.

March 12. Draft Order for payment of 2,000*l.* to Mr. Nicholas Loftus, Deputy Treasurer at Wars for Ireland. C. J., II. 476. In extenso.

March 14. Copy of examination of Garrat Aylmer, of Balrath. At the beginning of the siege of Drogheda he understood that all the Lords and many of the gentry of the County of Meath, met at the Hill of Crostie near Drogheda, with some of the chief of the Northern rebels, and there entered into an agreement with them. Soon after the Earl of Fingall, the Lord of Gormanston, and others, in truth, all or most of the gentry of the county, appeared at the Hill of Tarragh [Tara], summoned there by the Sheriff, by Lord Gormanston's direction; first, to give an answer to a proclamation touching the coming of the said Lords to Dublin to confer with the State (the answer was brought ready drawn by Lord Gormanston, and was agreed upon with little alteration): secondly, to provide victuals for the Northern rebels, that the spoil of the county might be prevented: thirdly, to nominate a governor (Lord Gormanston) and a Council to advise with him for the good and defence of the County. At the next meeting, examinant was absent, but heard that power was given to the Earl of Fingall and others to appoint captains out of every barony, and that it was determined to raise companies for them. The allowance of victual was a beef and a barrel of corn for every hundred men per diem, and the same for the Northern rebels. At another meeting at the Hill of Tarragh about a month ago, the Earl of Fingall proposed to raise horse throughout the County, and a list was accordingly drawn out, and proclamation made, that upon pain of death everyone named in the list should be ready with his horses at a certain day; and accordingly the examinant sent a horse and horseman to the Hill of Tarragh on the day appointed. Being asked whether he was present at any meeting between the Lords and Gentry of the Pale and the Northern Rebels, says that when the shipping first went into the harbour for the relief of Drogheda, there being a general cry in the Country and the beacons lighted, he went to the Hill of Crostie, and there saw Sir Phelim O'Neale and other chiefs of the Northern rebels in consultation on horseback with Lord Gormanston, Lord Slane, and Lord Lowth. Examinant heard much shooting that night, and understood in the morning that a breach had been made in the wall of Drogheda; the day after examinant was obliged to attend Lord Fingall to Platten [Platten], where Lord Slane, Lord Gormanston, and many others met Sir Phelim O'Neale and others of the Irish rebels, when it was agreed that Sir Phelim should be governor of the forts about Drogheda. A short time after various meetings were called, and the inhabitants ordered to bring eight men for every plough land, but few brought any. The reasons for taking up arms were, according to report, liberty of religion, maintenance of the King's prerogative and freedom of the subjects. Lord Louth, Colonel Moore, and others, came more than once with troops to examinant's house, whilst the Irish army lay within two miles of it, and were every day robbing his and his neighbour's houses. He was forced to attend the meetings above mentioned by threats, that his house should be burnt and his head cut off if he failed: he also heard that Lord Gormanston wrote to Lord Mountgarret and others in Munster to procure their assistance.

March 15. Message from the Commons concerning the equipping of a fleet under the command of the Earl of Warwick. L. J., IV. 645. In extenso.

March 15. Letter from the King to the Lord Keeper. Enclosures:—

1. Message from the King concerning Ireland, and declaring against the validity of any Act or Ordinance that has not received the Royal Assent. The Letter and Message were read on the 16th of March. L. J., IV. 646. In extenso.

March 16. Petition of the High Sheriff, Knights, Esquires, Gentlemen, Ministers, Freeholders, and Inhabitants of the County of Bedford, for the Reformation of the Government and Grievances of the Church and Commonwealth. L. J., IV. 647. In extenso.

March 16. Petition of the Merchant Strangers residing in Dover in the behalf of themselves and their principals, subjects to the King of Spain, and other Princes in amity with His Majesty. Petitioners' principals have of late forborne adventuring their estates hither in the same proportion as heretofore, out of apprehension of the present condition of the times. Pray that their bullion, goods, &c. may be secured against the violence of any people whatsoever, and that in case any breach of peace should happen between His Majesty and the King of Spain, or any other foreign Prince, petitioners may have six months respite for the transport of their persons and estates, according to the Articles agreed upon between His Majesty and the King of Spain. L. J., IV. 648.

March 16. Copy of the petition of the Knights, Esquires, Gentlemen, and Commons of the county of Cambridge, and Isle of Ely, for the removal of all unwarrantable orders and dignities, banishing Popish clergy, punishing delinquents, &c. L. J., IV. 648. In extenso.

March 16. Draft order in the cause Burrell v. Burrell.

March 17. Petition of parishioners of St. Leonard's, Foster Lane: William Warde, their late rector, was proved before the Committee for scandalous ministers to be innovating and scandalous, and forced to resign; a Mr. Bevoies was presented, but shortly resigned; and now owing to the delays of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster the right of presentation has lapsed to the Archbishop of Canterbury, though the petitioners had by direction of the Dean and Chapter selected Mr. Smith; pray for consideration. L. J., IV. 649.

March 17. Petition of Henry, Earl of Danby, concerning untrue reports made by Sir William Sant Rave touching the Forest of Whichwood, Oxfordshire. L. J., V. 22. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Articles of complaint against Sir William Sant Rave. L. J., V. 24. In extenso.

March 17. Petition of John Cooper and Daniel Wilgris that the hearing of their cause against Thomas Turner may be put off until next term. L. J., IV. 650.

March 17. Petition of George Benyon, citizen of London; prays for discharge from the Tower. See L. J., IV. 653.

March 17. Copy of the examination of Nicholas Dowdall, of Brownestown, in the county of Meath, taken before the Chancellor of His Majesty's Court of Exchequer by direction of the Right Honorable the Lords Justices and Council. Examinant, who was Sheriff of Meath, gives an account of the meeting of the Earl of Fingall, Lord Gormanston, and many other noblemen and gentry of the county with the Northern rebels at the hill of Crostie. Lord Gormanston, in the names of the Lords and Gentry, demanded of the Rebels what were the grounds of their war, and the reason of their so coming into the country in that hostile manner? Unto which Roger Moore made answer, That their so doing was for their free exercise of the Catholic religion, the restoring of the King unto his prerogative, and the gaining unto the subjects of Ireland the like freedom that the subjects in England have. Lord Gormanston replied, that if those were the true grounds of their war, they likewise would join with them therein, but if they had any other ends they would not, whereupon Moore protested solemnly, that that was their only intention. Dowdall further describes other meetings, and the preparations made for raising men and supplying them with necessities.

March 17. Commission for giving the Royal Assent to the bill for reducing the rebels in Ireland. See L. J., IV. 658.

March 18. Bragg v. Rosewell in error. Transcript of record, &c., brought in this day. L. J., IV. 651.

March 18. Petition of John Bishop of Ardagh in Ireland, praying that he may be dismissed any longer attendance to answer the Petition of Sir Thomas Cary, and that the matter, which relates to tithes and lands of the See of Ardagh, may be left to the ordinary course of law. L. J., IV. 651.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petition of the Bishop to the House of Lords in Ireland, complaining that Sir Thomas Cary has commenced a suit against him without leave of the House, and copy of the order of the House of Lords in Ireland for the Sergeant-at-Arms to arrest Sir Thomas Cary for his contempt in proceeding against a member of the House without license. 28 June 1641.

March 18. Petition of the Mayor, Aldermen, and the rest of the Common Council of the City of London, disavowing the petition of the Citizens of London presented on the 24th of February. L. J., IV. 651. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Answer of the Common Council to the Committee of Lords and Commons delivered in their name by the recorder, desiring that the proceedings upon the first petition presented in their name may be expunged from the journals, now that the second petition has been presented.

March 18. Message from the Commons touching the disposing of money come in upon the Act of Contribution, &c. L. J., IV. 652. In extenso.

March 18. Order for 200*l.* to be paid to Dr. Temple for Irish affairs. L. J., IV. 652. In extenso.

March 18. Petition of Daniel Fairfax and Isaac Legay; that certain tobacco may be ordered to be delivered up to them in accordance with the certificate of the referees, to whom the cause between petitioners and the creditors of Anthony Hooper was referred. L. J., IV. 653.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate mentioned in preceding, L. J. IV., 653.

March 18. Order for securing the bullion and coin of the Merchant Strangers. L. J., IV. 653. In extenso.

March 18. Draft of preceding.

March 19. Petition of George Benyon for his discharge. Duplicate of petition presented on the 17th March. L. J., IV. 653.

March 19. Petition of Katherine, wife of Henry Hughes, Dr. of Physic, that a writ ne exeat regno may be issued against Dr. Hughes. She obtained an order for alimony in the High Commission Court against him; he has now sold his estate and is going beyond the seas. See L. J., IV. 653.

March 19. Draft of "An Act for the securing and freeing all such persons as have executed any power upon any Commission of Lieutenancy or Array." A Bill with this title was ordered to be prepared by the King's Counsel on this date, but does not appear to have been brought in. L. J., IV. 654.

March 19. Propositions of the Commons for an order of both Houses concerning Hull, &c. L. J., IV. 656. In extenso.

March 19. The names of the Lords Lieutenant who are to bring in their Commissions. See L. J., IV. 632, &c.

March 21. Petition of Joseph Atkinson, His Majesty's milliner, and John Dayntrie, gent. In January last His Majesty granted to petitioners the reversion of the office of searchers in the port of London, after the determination of the interest therein of Edward Watkins and Thomas Aleway. The sealing of the grant has been stayed in consequence of a scandalous petition presented by Watkins and Aleway. Pray that the Lord Keeper may be ordered to proceed with the sealing of the grant, and that Watkins and Aleway may be left to the due course of law for their remedy. L. J., IV. 659.

March 21. Petition of Thomas Lord Viscount Baltinglasse, complaining that the Sheriffs of London and the Keeper of the Wood Street Compter refuse to obey their Lordships' order for petitioner's release. See L. J., IV.
654, 660.

March 21. Commission for giving the Royal Assent to the "Act for the raising and levying of monies for the " necessary defence and great affairs of the Kingdom of " England and Ireland, and for the payment of debts " undertaken by the Parliament." See L. J., IV. 674.
(Parchment Collection.)

March 21. Draft order of the Commons renewing former order concerning Lord Macguire and MacMahon.
C. J., II. 489. On the back of this paper is a note from Rushworth to Throckmorton, requesting to know for Mr. Pym's information what has been done "in your " House concerning the inclosed."

March 21. Draft order for Lieutenant Broome to transport thirty recruits for Sir Ferdinando Knightley's Company.

[March 21.] Petition of George Benyon, Citizen of London. Their Lordships after giving order for his discharge have re-committed him to the Tower. Prays that he may receive a copy of the charge against him, if any there be, and that he may have his liberty to prepare his defence.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of Order for his re-commitment. 21 March
1641-2. L. J., IV. 659.

March 22. Petition of Thomas Bowghey, of Brockton, in the county of Stafford, complaining of the oppressions of Sir John Pearsall, a supposed recusant, who vexes petitioner with many unjust suits. Of late many hundreds of noted recusants have resorted to Sir John's house, and his servants have bought the greatest part of the provisions brought into any market near, much more than can be expended by his domestic family, and to the great want of the poor. Petitioner and his family have been beset and assaulted by Sir John's order, and now live in danger of their lives. Robert Low, one of the recusants, has threatened to bring an army of men and flay and salt petitioner and his wife.
Prays for protection and that steps may be taken for suppressing the tumultuous meetings of these recusants.
L. J., IV. 660.

March 22. Draft of "An Act for asserting of some " privileges of Parliament lately broken, and to prevent " the breaking thereof in the time to come." Recites that a great breach of privilege has been committed by Sir Edward Herbert, His Majesty's Attorney-General, in arresting a Peer of the Realm (Lord Kimbolton), and enacts that no peer during the continuance of this or any ensuing Parliament shall be brought to trial for any treason, felony, or capital offence, except in Parliament, and that by impeachment of the House of Commons.
Read 1st. L. J., IV. 660. Bill re-committed. L. J., IV.
665. No further proceeding.

Annexed:—

1. List of Committee, 23 March 1641-2. L. J., IV.
665. In extenso.

March 22. Petition of William Gaye, stationer, praying for his discharge, having been committed by their Lordships for printing a paper, intituled "Some passages " that happened the 9th of March between the King's " Majesty and the Committee of both Houses when the " Declaration was delivered to him." L. J., IV. 652, 660.

March 22. Copy of order of Lords and Commons concerning Hull. L. J., IV. 662. In extenso.

March 22. Petition of the Right Honorable John Earl of Peterborough and the Lady Elizabeth, his Countess, praying their Lordships to take the evidence of witnesses, some of whom are very aged, in their cause against the Lord Mounson touching certain lands, part of the manor of Reigate. The Lord Mounson having insisted upon his privilege as a member of the House of Commons, the Court of Wards forbears to proceed in the suit without the order of this House. L. J., IV. 663.

March 22. A relation of the sea and land forces, that are now preparing in Normandy, Brittany, and all along the Coast of France. Presented by the Lord High Admiral. L. J., IV. 662. In extenso.

March 22. Message from the Commons concerning deputy lieutenants, &c. C. J., II. 492. In extenso.

March 22. Petition of William San Ravy, Knt. The Earl of Danby has exhibited articles against petitioner, for the supposed publishing of false slanders; prays that the matter may be referred to a trial at common law, or that the Earl may be ordered to assign a certainty of place and time, where and when, the supposed words were spoken, whereby petitioner may be enabled to apply his defence. See L. J., IV. 650.

March 22. Petition of the Mayors, Bailiffs, Jurats, freemen, and other inhabitants of the Cinque Ports, two ancient towns and their members, praying for the reformation of the government and grievances in the Church, State, and Commonwealth, and that their Lordships will by some good means obtain His Majesty's Royal person and presence near the Parliament with the Prince His Highness.

March 23. Copy of petition of the Admiralty of Amsterdam. A man-of-war belonging to petitioners was on the voyage from Portugal driven out of its course, and being very leaky was run ashore on the north coast of Wales. Pray leave to carry off their brass and iron ordnance (being 26 pieces) with the ammunition, sails, &c., and that Mr. Griffith, vice admiral of the said coast, may be ordered to receive fair recompence for salvage.
L. J., IV. 665. Noted with order referring the matter to the Lord High Admiral.

March 23. Petition of Colonel John Butler, praying that he may have liberty to go abroad with a keeper to take the air for his health's sake. L. J., IV. 665.

March 23. Letter from the King at York to the Earl of Essex, Chamberlain of the household, desiring his attendance at York, where the King intends to keep both Easter, and St. George's Feast. This letter was read in the House on the 28th of March. L. J., IV. 675.
In extenso.

March 23. Commission for giving the Royal Assent to the Act for granting a subsidy to the King of tonnage and poundage, and other sums of money payable upon merchandizes exported and imported. See L. J., IV.
679. (Parchment collection.) (Much mutilated.)

March 24. Petition of William Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. Was required by their Lordships' order of the 17th instant to give the presentation of St.
Leonard's, Foster Lane, to Mr. George Smith, and has already caused the presentation to be drawn out and sealed. As he is bound by the duty he owes to the church and state to examine the sufficiency of those he presents to benefices, he prays that Mr. Smith may come to him in order that he may in some sort satisfy his own conscience and his duty to the public. The petition is written and signed by the Archbishop. L. J., IV. 666.

March 24. Petition of Sir John Bramston, Knt., Chief Justice of the King's Bench, Sir Humfrey Davenport, Knt., Chief Baron of the Exchequer, Sir Thomas Trevor, Knt., one of the Barons of the Exchequer, Sir Francis Crawley, Knt., one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, and Sir Richard Weston, Knt., one of the Barons of the Exchequer; praying that they may have leave to make their several answers and defences to their impeachments by their counsel, and that certain counsel may be assigned to them. L. J., IV. 666.

March 24. Copy of the answers of the Marquis of Hertford and the Earl of Bridgewater respecting their commissions of lieutenancy. L. J., IV. 666.

March 24. The King's answer to the Declaration of both Houses against fears and jealousies and ill counsels. L. J., IV. 667. In extenso.

March 24. Draft letter from the clerk of the Parliaments to the Earl of Exeter, informing his Lordship that in the ordinance for settling the Militia he is nominated Lord Lieutenant for the county of Rutland. See L. J., IV. 625.

March 24. Affidavit of William Champloll of Greenwich, that he served Jeremy Bagge and Francis Bristow with their Lordships' order of the 13th of May touching the making of glass, and that they treated the order with contempt. See L. J., IV. 669.

March 24. Affidavit of John Jenkins, that he was present when Bagge and Bristow were served with the order. See L. J., IV. 669.

March 25. Three drafts of the ordinance fixing the powers of Lords Lieutenant. L. J., IV. 670. In extenso.

March 25. Three drafts of the "deputations" to be given to Deputy Lieutenants. L. J., IV. 671. In extenso.

March 25. Petition of Frances Countess Dowager of Rutland, and William Willoughby, Esquire: pray that John Earl of Rutland may be ordered to waive his privilege, and answer the Bill in Chancery exhibited against him by petitioners touching the devise of certain lands in the counties of Leicester and Warwick by George, late Earl of Rutland. See L. J., IV. 674.

March 25. The answer of Sir William San Ravy, Knight, to the petition and articles preferred against him by Henry Earl of Danby. L. J., V. 23. In extenso.

March 25. Reasons urged by Conyers Lord Darcy why their Lordships' order of the 23rd of June last made in his suit against Thomas and John Saville should stand as it now is. See L. J., IV. 670.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the proceedings in the cause.

March 25. Petition of Richard Freshfield. Prays that an early day may be appointed for hearing his cause against the Mayor, Aldermen, and Council of the town of Colchester, and that in the meantime he may have protection from arrest by his creditors. L. J., IV. 670.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of Freshfield, detailing at great length the particulars of his various suits against the Corporation of Colchester, and praying that all the parties may be called before their Lordships. (Undated.)
2. Copy of another petition of Freshfield, praying for redress for the wrongs and oppressions he has suffered at the hands of the Corporation of Colchester. (Undated.)

March 25. Order of the Commons to move the Lords to desire six demi-canon of His Majesty for the army in Ireland. C. J., II. 498. In extenso.

March 26. Petition of William Arundell, Esquire, that a writ ne exeat regno may be granted against Lord Baltimore, who is intending to depart the kingdom and go into Mary Land, where he hath a plantation. See L. J., IV. 671.

March 26. Draft order upon preceding petition. L. J., IV. 671.

March 26. Copy of order made upon Report from the Committee for the defence of the Kingdom upon the proposition of Sir Philip Carteret, Lieutenant Governor of the Isle of Jersey, for the safety and defence of that Island, and also upon the Remonstrance of some of the inhabitants of the Island. L. J., IV. 671. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. The heads of such propositions as are humbly presented to the House of Peers by Sir Philip Carteret. L. J., IV. 671. In extenso.
2. Copy of preceding.
3. Petition of some of the inhabitants of the Isle of Jersey. Complain of the oppressions practised upon them by Sir Philip Carteret, and pray for a hearing of their complaints. The petition is signed David Bandinell, and Henry Dumaesq. See L. J., IV. 671.
4. "A word left by the way touching Sir Philip Carteret, of the Isle of Jersey." An unsigned paper containing many charges against Sir Philip Carteret. Endorsed "Lybell."
5. Examination of William Lorting, of Liverpool, mariner. Came out of the River of Bordeaux about six weeks since in a vessel called the "George," of Liverpool, laden with wines, and being homeward bound, was driven into the River of Blewett (?), where he heard from one Mr. Morgan, an Irishman, but a protestant, that the friars who lived about Blewett had informed him, that there was a great fleet of shipping preparing by the French King to come to Ireland. Mr. Morgan also informed him that at Hamboore (?) proclamation was made, that all officers of shipping should upon pain of death repair aboard their several ships at Brest, where the French Fleet then lay. 17 Feb. 1641-2.
6. Examination of George Mason and others, Scotch merchants, at the Castle of Falmouth, the 8th of February 1641-2.
7. Letter from Walter Hungerford [at St. Malo] to Sir Philip Carteret. There are come to St. Malloes 4,000 soldiers, and 8,000 more are expected every day. Those of St. Malloes will not allow them to come into the Town, but have billeted them at Dennant [Dinan] and other Towns near. They write of 4,000 more to come to [St. Brewer], but of that I have no certainty. All our shipping was stayed for 5 or 6 days to transport these soldiers, but now, by the coming home of some shipping of their own, they are released. Some report they are to go to [Barcelona], others to Calais, or some port of Picardy. It behoves us to have a careful eye on these armies. The Commanders, Colonels, and Captains who are to go along with these soldiers are men of good experience, but they have in a quarrel killed the Captain of the Castle of St. Malloes. Knows not whether that will be an impediment to their intended employment. Believes the King is returned from his intended journey to Cattoloney [Catalonia], and is marching towards Picardy. There is no more trust in the Cardinal than in the Devil. The small quantity of the King's wheat which the receiver hath received is intended to be put presently into the King's castles, but it is so small a quantity, that it will not maintain the ordinary garrison one month, nor can there be any assistance had hence.

March 26. Petition of George Benyon that counsel may be assigned to him in his cause against Lord St. John. L. J., IV. 673.

March 26. Petition of Sir Thomas Walsingham, Knight, and Robert Moulton, Esquire, that a day may be appointed for hearing their cause against Sir John Baker, Bart., touching their title to the Manor of Hunton, Kent. See L. J., IV. 674, &c.

March 26. Petition of Wolley Leigh, of Thorpe, in the County of Surrey. Prays that Edward Maria Wingfield, arrested at the suit of petitioner, and subsequently discharged by virtue of a protection from the Earl of Peterborough, and who has gained his name to be entered in the list to go over as a commander for Ireland, may not be allowed to depart this kingdom until he has given petitioner satisfaction for his just debt. L. J., IV. 674.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petition presented by Leigh to the Commons, referred by them to the Lords. L. J., IV. 582.
2. Draft order appointing a Committee to consider the matter. 14 Feb. 1641. L. J., IV. 582. In extenso.

March 28. Petition of Cecil Lord Baltimore that the writ ne exeat regno, issued against him on the petition of William Arundell, may be stayed until he be heard by his counsel. L. J., IV. 675.

March 28. Affidavit of Lord Baltimore that he has no intention of suddenly leaving the Kingdom.

March 28. Information of Francis Jones concerning a petition of dangerous consequence read at the last assizes at Maidstone, Kent, which it is intended to present to both Houses of Parliament. L. J., IV. 675.

March 28. Copy of the petition of the Lords and Commons to the King that the Earl of Warwick may be appointed to the command of the Fleet. L. J., IV. 676. In extenso.

March 28. Copy of petition of the Gentry, Ministers, and Commonalty of the County of Kent, agreed upon at the General Assizes for that County. L. J., IV. 677. In extenso.

March 28. Affidavit of Peter Mackerell, servant to Daniel Farvacke, that he served Anthony Hooper with their Lordships' order of the 18th instant. See L. J., IV. 653, &c.

March 29. Reasons to be sent to the King for staying the Earls of Holland and Salisbury and Lord Savill from going to York. L. J., IV. 680. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Draft Resolutions concerning the staying of those Lords which are sent for to attend the King at York.

March 29. Petition of the High Sheriff, Knights, Esquires, Gentlemen, Ministers and others of good rank, within the County of Rutland; pray that the Kingdom may be put into a posture of defence, &c. L. J., IV. 680. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of a Petition of "Your Majesties Loyal Subjects" in the county of Rutland to the King; pray his Majesty to return and vouchsafe his presence to the Parliament. Noted. This is a copy of the petition presented to His Majesty the 16th of this instant Mareh, as he passed through the County towards York.

March 29. Copy of order in the cause between Sir Philip Vernatti and John Latch. L. J., IV. 682. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of a previous order in the cause, 30 Jan. 1640-1.
2. Petition of Thomas Jenyns and others, sureties of John Latch: pray that the cause may be referred to certain arbitrators.
3. Order of referees to whom the matter was referred appointing a day for hearing, 11 May 1642.
4. Petition of Thomas Jenyns that Vernatti may be ordered to attend the referees, and that a writ ne exeat regno may be issued against him.

March 29. Copy of Ordinance for settling the Militia of London. L. J., IV. 682. In extenso.

March 29. Petition of Annekin Vanhoven, a Dutch woman and stranger. Petitioner's father being Captain of a troop of horse, served under one John Dalbier in Holland, under pay of the King's Majesty that now is, and did lay out in wages for his troop 511*l.*, for which Dalbier gave bond, and received that sum and a far greater out of His Majesty's Exchequer at Westminster. Petitioner's father being slain in the Swedish war this debt was assigned to her as her portion. She was compelled to sue Dalbier upon his bond and obtained a verdict against him, but before execution could be had he procured a Writ of Error, and now has got employment beyond the seas under Sir William Belfore. Prays that a writ ne exeat regno may be issued against Dalbier, that he may not leave the Kingdom until he has satisfied petitioner's just debt. L. J., IV. 681.

Annexed:—

1. Order upon preceding. L. J., IV. 681.
2. Affidavit of Anne Vanhoven, that Dalbier intends to leave the Kingdom.
3. Another petition of Annekin Vanhoven in the matter. (Undated.)

March 29. Copy of petition of a great number of distressed gentlewomen, lately come forth of Ireland, to H. C. Many of petitioners have lost their husbands, and all of them their estates; they have been compelled to fly hither for the safety of their lives; many are sick, and all like to perish for want of sustenance; pray that an order may be given to the Commissioners, appointed for the disposing of the charitable contributions of well disposed Christians, to pay to petitioners a portion of the same.

March 29. Petition of Christopher Harvey, to Sir Thomas Leigh and Sir William Boughton, two of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace in the County of Warwick; they have commended to him the protestation made by the House of Commons, in order that he should take it himself and tender it to his parishioners, but until certain doubts and scruples entertained by him are answered he cannot do this with a good conscience, these he is unwilling to state for fear they should raise doubts in others, and therefore sends a declaration of his fidelity to the doctrine of the church as contained in the 39 Articles, of his allegiance to the King, and his desire to maintain the privileges of Parliament, and the rights and liberties of the subject.

March 31. Draft order appointing the hearing of the cause between the Earl of Danby and Sir William San Ravy. L. J., IV. 683. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Ralph Nowlson, servant to Lord Danby, that he served preceding order on Sir William San Ravy. 27 April 1642.

March 31. Report of the Conference touching the Impeachment of George Benyon. L. J., IV. 684.

March 31. Letter from John Fielder, High Sheriff of the County of Southampton, to []. Has this day received two warrants signed with the King's own hand, for the publishing of certain books and messages in all the market towns of this County, the copies of which are herewith sent. Beseeches that the House may be made acquainted with them, and that he may receive directions in the matter. Encloses—

1. Copy of the warrant from the King to the High Sheriff of Southampton, directing him to publish and disperse in the County all the printed books sent therewith, containing "Petitions and Messages from our Parliament concerning the Militia of the Kingdom, and our several and respective answers to the same." Royston. 5 March 1641-2.
2. Copy of the warrant from the King to the same to publish and disperse in the County the printed copies therewith sent of "our gracious message" of the 15th of March, lately delivered in our "High Court of Parliament upon our removal to the City of York." York. 19 March 1641-2.
3. Printed copy of "The several petitions and messages of Parliament concerning the Militia of the Kingdom, with His Majesty's answers thereunto. Together with an Ordinance of Parliament concerning the same."
4. Printed copy of "Divers Questions upon His Majesty's last Answer concerning the Militia." Resolved upon by both Houses of Parliament.
5. Printed copy of "His Majesty's Message to both Houses of Parliament upon his Removal to the City of York."

March 31. Petition of the Vice-Chancellors of the University of Cambridge and such Heads of Colleges therein as have subscribed their names. By the Statutes all the Heads of Colleges ought to be divines, and the Masterships, except two, are of so small emolument that of themselves they cannot afford any competency of maintenance for persons of a degree and quality fitting for such employment. Most of the Heads of Colleges have hitherto held ecclesiastical livings, with their masterships, and have not been tied to a constant residence upon their livings. Petitioners pray that some provision may be made for them, as the taking of the Masters from their necessary residence in their Colleges, and not affording a sufficiency of means to them, will bring certain ruin to the whole University. The petition was no doubt directed against the "Bill against enjoying of Plurality of Benefices to Spiritual Persons and non-residency," at this time before the House.

March 31. Petition of John, Archbishop of York, and the rest of the Bishops now prisoners in the Tower, as likewise the two Bishops under the Black Rod. Pray that they may be admitted to bail, as the House of Commons has decided not to proceed against them by impeachment, as at first, but in another way. (Signed by all the Bishops.) L. J., IV. 685.

[1641-2.] March. Petition of John Raven, of the Inner Temple, London, "Utterbarister," for leave to proceed against Samuel Gookin for the recovery of a debt, notwithstanding that Gookin pretends to have a protection from the Earl of Dover.

April 1. Petition of William, Archbishop of Canterbury; prays for the approbation of the House upon the persons appointed by him to three livings now vacant and in his gift. L. J., IV. 686. The petition, which is in Dell's handwriting, is signed by the Archbishop.

April 1. The King's answer to the last message of both Houses. L. J., IV. 686. In extenso.

April 1. The answer of George Benyon to a petition exhibited before their Lordships by the right honorable Oliver Lord St. John. L. J., IV. 688. In extenso.

April 1. Declaration of the grievances and evils of the kingdom with the proposition of the remedies and cures. Imperfect. L. J., IV. 689-692.

April 2. Affidavit of David Bevon in the same case. L. J., IV. 693.

April 2. Order for the removal of the arms and magazine from Hull. L. J., IV. 694. In extenso.

April 2. Petition of Thomas Jenyns, Esq.: prays for a ne exeat regno against Sir Filibert Vernatti, whom he suspects of intending to depart beyond seas in order to avoid payment of his debts. L. J., IV. 694.

April 2. Draft order for borrowing 10,000*l.* for the service of Ireland. L. J., IV. 695.

April 2. Affidavit of service of an order of the 29th of March last upon John Dalbeere at the suit of Anne Vanhoven. L. J., IV. 694.

April 2. Petition of James Earl of Suffolke against the heirs of Sir Robert Hitcham and others about lands in Framlingham and Saxted [Saxtead], Suffolk. L. J., IV. 696. In extenso.

April 2. Copy of preceding.

April 2. Draft order referring preceding petition to a Committee. L. J., IV. 696. In extenso.

April 2. Affidavit of service of an order of the House of the 29th of March last upon Anthony Hooper at the suit of Isaac Legay and others.

April 4. Resolution of the Lords that they will support the Lord Admiral and the Earl of Warwick. L. J., IV. 697. In extenso.

April 4. Petition of Edward Maria Wingfield; Wolley Leigh having induced petitioner to become bound for a large sum of money has sued him upon the bond, and obtained a writ ne exeat regno against him. Petitioner has for his support procured himself to be listed as a commander in the expedition for Ireland; prays for discharge of the writ, which if executed will be his ruin. L. J., IV. 698.

Annexed:—

1. List of bonds entered into by Wingfield.

April 4. Answer of George Benyon to the Impeachment preferred against him by the House of Commons. L. J., IV. 698. In extenso.

April 4. Petition of George Benyon, prisoner in the Tower; prays their Lordships to accept bail, that he may have liberty to attend to his domestic affairs, and prepare his defence to the impeachment of the House of Commons.

HOUSE OF LORDS.
Calendar.

April 4. Draft order of the Commons for the Mayor and Aldermen of York to pay to the several persons mentioned the money received into the Chamber of York for the relief of the northern counties. C. J., II. 511. In extenso.

April 5. Petition of Edward, Earl of Sussex; petitioner has the sole right of fishing in Walfleet and the river of Burnham, in the county of Essex, but has been often injured by many of the adjoining inhabitants who pretend to have a right therein; and though this claim has been condemned by trial at law, yet they threaten to destroy the principal fishing in the river by taking the spat of oysters and other fish, and transporting the same to other rivers, and to expel petitioner in a violent manner with sixty sail of great fishing boats; the design if executed is likely to be the cause of great tumults, and of serious loss to petitioner; prays that the Lord High Admiral may be directed to suppress all such disorders. L. J., IV. 699.

April 5. Petition of the Bishops in prison; thank the House for transmitting their former petition to the House of Commons, and pray for a comfortable answer thereto.

April 5. Draft of "An Act to prevent extortions for "burials:" fees to the value of two, three, four, five and sometimes six pounds or more are charged by ministers, churchwardens, and other officers for burying the dead, whereas no fee is due but one to the sexton for digging the grave; the Bill forbids all other fees. Read 1^a. C. J., II. 511. No further proceeding.

[April 5.] Draft order of the Committee appointed to consider of scandalous books and pamphlets, directing the gentleman usher to use his utmost endeavour for the apprehension of offenders. See L. J., IV. 700.

April 6. Petition of Thomas Bushell: petitioner by His Majesty's command, adventured his fortune in the recovery of the deserted mines in Cardiganshire, but, being much molested in the work by Sir Richard Price and others, obtained an order from their Lordships for securing his quiet possession; in spite of this order Sir Richard Price and the others have destroyed petitioner's engines and works, and refused him turf "to make into "charke" by a method of his own invention for the saving of wood, and in other ways molested him; prays that they may be converted to answer for their misdoings. L. J., IV. 700.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Walter Barsbee, "Saye-master" of His Majesty's Mint, county of Cardigan. 5 April 1642.
 2. Affidavit of John Huson; when Mr. Nevell, who formerly worked the mines, heard that Bushell had bought the lease of them, he hired deponent and others to pull up the pumps, and inundated the mines, and stopped them up with rubbish.
 3. Copy of the order referred to in Bushell's petition. 14 August 1641. L. J., IV. 364.
 4. Another copy.
 5. Letter from Sir Richard Price to Mr. Hevitoe; understands that he will interrupt the writer's workmen on the hill, would have him know that his interest is better there than that of any other.
- April 6. Copy of order made on Bushell's petition for his protection. L. J., IV. 700. In extenso.
- April 6. Charge presented by Thomas Bushell, Esq., against Sir Richard Price and others.
- April 6. Petition of John Earl of Rutland; is willing to waive his privilege and answer the Bill of the Countess Dowager of Rutland; she has for her jointure certain woods near Belvoir, and under plea of cutting underwood is cutting timber trees; petitioner has no remedy against her at law because of her privilege, and were she to waive this, she is very aged and not likely to live to see the issue of a suit; petitioner prays for an order enjoining her to forbear from further felling of timber trees. L. J., IV. 701.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of George Grundy in support of preceding.
- April 6. Order for payment of 100*l*. to Mr. Vassall for corn for the poor of Londonderry. L. J., IV. 703. In extenso.
- April 6. Copies of votes of the Commons concerning the impeached Bishops. C. J., II. 513 and 490.
- [April 6.] Copy of letter from the Speaker of the House of Commons to the Lords Justices in Ireland. Thanks the Justices for the unwearied pains, constancy, and faithfulness they have shown in providing for the dangers and necessities of the kingdom, and opposing the insolent attempts of the rebels. Assures their Lordships that it has not been any want of affection to the distressed English there, which has prevented the House sending more plentiful succours, but the manifold distresses caused by the malignant party in this kingdom, and the great burthens they have been consequently forced to lay upon the people. There is now direction given for the raising of 6,000 foot for the further supply of Ireland, and the House is in a hopeful course not only to maintain these and the other succours already agreed upon, but to make a further addition if there be cause. The House observes that the rebels in Ireland speak the same language with the malignant party here, making it one of their motives for taking up arms to vindicate His Majesty's privileges from the encroachments of Parliament. The rebellious Lords of the Pale in their instructions to Lord Dillon taxed the Justices of Ireland with adhering to the Parliament against the King, in which malignant slander the House observes a great congruity between the traitors there and the malignant party here, and as the House doubts not to make clear to the world their uprightness and integrity to His Majesty, so they hold it a great evidence of the sincerity of the Justices that such an imputation should be laid upon them. Prays the Justices to observe all such spirits, as are apt to ferment jealousies betwixt the King and his Parliament, as dangerous incendiaries of the State, enemies of the public peace, and unfit for any place of trust, and to endeavour to punish and suppress them. Desires their Lordships to take especial notice of all councillors and others employed in the service of the State, who stand well affected to the public good, and to give them thanks in the name of the House. Lastly, informs their Lordships that His Majesty has, at the humble desire of the Lords and Commons, granted a commission to divers members of both Houses for ordering and disposing all matters for the defence, relief, and recovery of Ireland. C. J., II. 513.

April 7. Informations and examinations concerning Sir William Willmer; of Peter Lord, John James, and Sir William Willmer. L. J., IV. 704. In extenso.

April 7. Resolution of the Commons that Sir William Willmer, High Sheriff of Northamptonshire, has broken the privileges of Parliament, and endeavoured to disturb the peace of the kingdom. C. J., II. 515.

April 7. Message from the Commons for the Earl of Bridgewater to deliver in the papers he has about the Isle of Anglesea. L. J., IV. 707.

April 7. Answer of Sir George Wentworth, to the declaration or charge transmitted from the House of Commons on the behalf of Adam Viscount Loftus of Ely; hopes to prove that the decree and proceedings complained of, which were confirmed by the Privy Council in England, were according to justice; has himself no interest in the lands comprised in the decree, which are now in the hands of the rebels, for the lands belong to Ann Loftus, an infant of 14 years, to whom her grandmother Lady Jepson is guardian, and if the decree be declared void, Ann Loftus will not have one pennyworth of advancement either from her grandfather, Lord Loftus, or from her father; respondent believes that Lady Jepson and her son Sir John Gifford are now at Castle Jordan, Leinster, in such peril of the rebels, that they cannot appear or make their defence in this cause; to those parts respondent is now going, at the hazard of his life, to attend to the duties conferred on him; all he did under the decree was done by good warrant, as he doubts not to prove, when the troubles and distractions of Ireland have been pacified, and time given for examination of proofs and witnesses. No mention is made of this answer in the journal.

April 7. Petition of John Earl of Bristol, prisoner in the Tower; prays the House, if satisfied that he had no hand in framing or procuring the petition from Kent, to be pleased to grant him enlargement.

April 8. Petition of John Earl of Bristol, prisoner in the Tower; that for the sake of his health and for soliciting of his affairs he may have leave to go abroad, either upon his honour for true imprisonment, or with a keeper, a favour not denied him, when he was formerly a prisoner in the Tower under a high accusation. L. J., IV. 705.

April 8. Order of the Lords and Commons for reformation of the church. L. J., IV. 706. In extenso.

April 8. Declaration of the Lords and Commons for keeping a good correspondence with the Scots. L. J., IV. 707. In extenso.

April 8. Petition of Colonel Philip Hill; prays for the assistance of the House to make certain Irish, whom he has enlisted with their Lordships' permission, take ship for service in France. See L. J., IV. 709.

April 8. A true return of the names of all such Irish as are resident within the liberty of the Rolls in the county of Middlesex. The names of eleven persons are given, of whom only three are papists.

April 8. Petition of William Ward, clerk, rector of St. Leonard's, Foster Lane, London; petitioner agreed with Mr. Beauvoys, rector of Witheham [Withyham], Sussex, to exchange livings, and accordingly resigned St. Leonard's, and now Mr. Beauvoys refuses to perform his part, petitioner prays that no one else may be instituted to the rectory of St. Leonard's, and that his resignation may be cancelled.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Papworth and others in support of preceding.

April 8]. Three copies of a letter from J. Math. Palmer [to the Commissioners and Collectors of the county of Nottingham]; has received direction from the House of Commons to send up a return of what is in arrear of the six last subsidies; desires them therefore to meet him at Southwell, at widow Clarke's house, on Thursday the 14th instant, to give him an account, and meantime to collect as much as possible of the arrears.

April 9. Petition of John Wilson of St. Giles, Cripplegate, London, now a prisoner in the Gatehouse by their Lordships' commitment; his only crime is to have allowed his son part of his house to print such books, as lawfully he might, but not otherwise; prays for discharge. See L. J., IV. 708, &c.

April 9. Copy of the recognizance of Sir William Wilmer. See L. J., IV. 708.

April 9. Printed copy of the petition of the Lords and Commons to the King for leave to remove the magazine at Hull to the Tower of London, and also to take off the reprieve of the six condemned priests now in Newgate, together with His Majesty's answer thereunto. The petition is given in extenso. L. J., IV. 708. The King's answer, April 16. L. J., IV. 722.

April 9. Draft of preceding petition.

April 9. Order for the Earl of Bath to attend the House notwithstanding he has license from His Majesty to be absent. L. J., IV. 709. In extenso.

April 9. Motion for Henry Roseby and his wife to be sent for, for their contempt in continuing to build a house upon the King's ground, where the records of Parliament are kept, in defiance of their Lordships' order of the 6th of September last. See L. J., IV. 709 and 389.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Mr. Serjeant Francis, Justice of the Peace, to Mr. Browne [clerk of the Parliaments]. Upon receipt of their Lordships' warrant went to Roseby's house and did there forbid the workmen then at work. Roseby said nothing, but his wife, who stood by, bid them go on, as she had spoken to some Lords and would speak to some more. Prays further directions. 11 March 1641-2.

2. Affidavit of Joseph Ware in the matter. 29 March 1642.

April 9. Copy of a petition of Allan Boteler, Esq., cup-bearer to Her sacred Majesty, has been arrested contrary to privilege; prays for discharge. L. J., IV. 709.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Allan Boteler; details the circumstances of his arrest at the instigation of Ann Brown and John Handford; prays for redress. (Undated.)

April 9. Petition of parishioners of Goudhurst in the county of Kent; have with the rest of the county enjoyed the fruition of the blessings for soul and body obtained by the sedulity of the House, "and heartily desire one additament more to invest them with a 'fulness of happiness,' namely, that Mr. Edward Bright, a minister of godly life and conversation, may be appointed as lecturer there every Wednesday. C. J., II. 518.

April 9. Order of the Commons respecting the 6,000*l.* advanced by the county of Buckingham upon the Act of Contribution for the affairs of Ireland. C. J., II. 519.

April 11. Draft order for the Marquis of Hertford either to attend to his duties in Parliament, or still to continue his care of the Prince. L. J., IV. 711. In extenso.

Read 1^a. L. J., IV. 716. Read 2^a, and committed, L. J., V. 10. No further proceeding.

April 14. Printed copy of "An Act to enable corporations and bodies politic to participate of the benefit of an Act lately passed, intituled 'An Act for the speedy and effectual reducing of the rebels in His Majesty's kingdom of Ireland to their due obedience to His Majesty, and the Crown of England.'" Brought from H. C. L. J., IV. 716. Received the Royal Assent on the 22d April. L. J., V. 9. See Statutes, 8vo edition, 16 Car. I., c. 35.

April 14. Petition of the parishioners of St. Olave's in Southwark to H. C.; on the 2nd instant the petitioners chose churchwardens for the parish, three of the four old churchwardens being present; since which time about 20 parishioners met and chose other churchwardens, promoters of innovations in the worship of God, who intend to officiate by violence; petitioners pray for an examination of the legality of the election, that the poor may be provided for, and the public peace maintained.

Annexed:—

1. Return of the names of the churchwardens elected for the ensuing year. 31 March 1642.

April 14. Order of the Commons referring the preceding case to two justices of the peace. C. J., II. 527. In extenso.

April 14. Petition of Henry Stanley, prisoner in the Fleet; was accused by a waterman about two years since of speaking scandalous words against the Parliament, for which he was censured by the House; has since discovered that his servant was suborned to give false evidence; prays for liberty on bail that he may take steps to vindicate his innocence. See L. J., IV. 615.

April 15. Petition of John Pulford, His Majesty's servant, agent for the soliciting of the business against recusants: petitioner became bound with others for Sir Peregrine Bartue, deceased, and notwithstanding Lady Bartue's promises to pay, has been arrested: prays privilege of Parliament that he may be free to attend the great services expected of him. April 15. Copy of order for Boteler's discharge. L. J., IV. 722. In extenso.

April 15. The Answer of the Governor and Company of Merchants trading the Levant seas, to a proposition of the Committee for Trade of the House of Commons, viz., whether the Turkey Company would go on buying cloth and sending it to Turkey as formerly, in case they were assured a fleet should not be sent against the Turkish pirates of Algiers for two years next following? The traders can do nothing until Sir Peter Wyche and Sir Sackville Crow, who have unduly possessed themselves of the company's duty, called Strangers Consulate, be ordered to return it, and the company's charters be further confirmed. C. J., II. 528.

April 16. Petition of Rebecca Owen, the wife of John Owen; John Pulford, who became surety for a debt due to petitioner's husband, was arrested on a judgment given against him with his own consent. She hears that he has obtained an order from the House for his discharge without a hearing being given to her husband, who is out of town on the King's business; prays that Pulford may not be discharged until he has paid the debt. L. J., IV. 722.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of George Owen respecting Pulford's insolent conduct. 12 April 1642.
2. Petition of John Pulford that the order for his discharge may be confirmed. [Undated.]

April 18. Petition of Thomas Paramore, Esq. Was appointed one of the collectors of the six subsidies, for which there was an allowance granted to him, which remains unpaid. Was also appointed collector of the poll money to be paid by the nobility of England, but for this there was no allowance. Prays that some satisfaction may be given to him for his services. L. J., V. 1.

April 18. Order of the Commons for payment of 6,000*l.* for Munster. C. J., II. 533.

April 18. Forms for a Colonel's commission, for a Captain's commission of foot, and for a Captain's commission of horse. L. J., V. 4. (Three papers.)

Annexed:—

1. Draft of preceding.
2. Another draft.

April 18. The Sheriff of Pembrokeshire's account of expenses incurred in the maintenance and convoy of Captains Edward and George Darcie, and other Irish prisoners. See C. J., II. 506.

April 19. Petition of Jane, the wife of Captain Edmond Moore; her husband, on whose liberty her own and her children's livelihood depends, has been seven months prisoner in Newgate, on an imaginary supposition that he was intending to join the rebels in Ireland; prays for her husband's discharge on bail. L. J., V. 5.

April 19. Petition of John Archbishop of York; has remained fifteen weeks a prisoner in the Tower, and all that while, in a manner, continually sick; prays for leave to go out with his keeper, returning to prison every night. L. J., V. 6.

April 19. Propositions concerning adventurers by sea for the relief of Ireland; some persons desirous to further the conquest of Ireland, and the relief of their brethren there, propose to fit out five, six, or seven ships and pinnaces, with 500 soldiers, the expenses of the adventurers to be repaid by an allotment of land according to their several subscriptions; they desire a commission securing them entire independence in their proceedings, in division of spoil, &c. L. J., V. 6.

April 19. Petition of John Earl of Bristol, prisoner in the Tower; prays for enlargement, as none of the examinations have shown him to have had any hand in promoting the petition of Kent. L. J., V. 6.

April 19. Petition of Nathaniel Burnand to H. C.; has been chosen minister of Ovingham, in the county of Northumberland, and because of the great want of preaching there is willing, though to his great charge, to accept the duty; but on account of the lamentable ignorance and profaneness of those parts desires the protection of the House. C. J., II. 535.

April 19. Commission for giving the Royal Assent to the Bill for enabling corporations to have the benefit of the Act of the adventure for Ireland. See L. J., V. 10. Signed by the King. Seal wanting.

April 20. Petition of parishioners of Stisted, in the county of Essex; that Mr. John Clarke, now curate, may be appointed their minister. L. J., V. 6.

April 21. Heads for the conference about the Kentish petition, &c. L. J., V. 7. In extenso.

April 21. Petition of William Lord Archbishop of Canterbury; under a promise to Sir Thomas Rowe has nominated Mr. Newsted, who was chaplain to Sir Thomas for divers years in foreign parts, to the rectory of Stisted; prays the House to confirm the nomination. (Holograph.) See L. J., V. 6, &c.

April 21. Certificate of Mr. Justice Heath, in the cause between Wolley Leigh and Edward Maria Wingfield, that Wingfield's lands at Keyston, Huntingdonshire are sufficient security for his debt. Read in H. L., May 3. L. J., V. 39.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of writ of extent. 24 March 1641-2.
2. Affidavit of Robert Hall respecting the value of the lands.

April 21. Petition of Richard Mack Moyler [Mac-miller]; was committed for the same offence as Edmond Moore, and suffered seven months close imprisonment with him in Newgate; Moore has been discharged; prays for like favour to himself. See L. J., IV. 441, &c.

April 22. Order for payment of 3,000*l.* for victuals for Ireland. L. J., V. 9. In extenso.

April 22. Order for payment of 564*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* for caps and stockings for the soldiers in Ireland. L. J., V. 9. In extenso.

April 22. Petition of inhabitants of Broxbourne, Herts, to H. C.; in Sept. 1641, the House made an order that the parishioners of any parish might set up a lecturer: petitioners in pursuance thereof chose Mr. Daniel Evans, but the vicar, Mr. Parlet, will not agree; locks the church and keeps the keys, and says he will not let Evans preach without a direct order from the House. C. J., II. 538.

April 22. Petition of Thomas Stanley, gent., mayor of Maidstone: has attended for a whole week in accordance with the warrant of the House, but cannot learn of what he is accused; prays to be discharged or bailed. L. J., V. 9.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of warrant for attachment of Stanley and his servant Skelton. 15 April 1642. L. J., IV. 721.

April 22. Petition of Robert Robins, of Penrhyn, in the county of Cornwall. Complains that he was violently arrested by Captain Carter in the Island of Providence, banished from the island, robbed, and brutally treated at sea, and finally landed at Bristol sick and almost naked. Prays that his case may be referred to any two of the company for the Island of Providence, excepting the Earl of Warwick, whom he desires to call as a witness. See L. J., V. 10.

April 22. Petition of knights, justices of the peace, gentlemen, ministers, freeholders, and others of the county of Cornwall. Thank the House for casting out the bishops from sitting among them, &c. L. J., V. 10. In extenso.

April 22. Printed copy of similar petition to H. C. See C. J., II. 537.

April 22. Letter from Christian Prince of Anhalt at Bernbourg to the gentlemen of the Parliaments of England and Scotland. Doubts not that they have learnt from other sources, and more particularly from Sir Thomas Rowe, that the dowager Duchess of Mecklenburg, sister to the writer, has been for six years cruelly treated by her powerful adversary Duke Adolph Frederic of Mecklenburg, who has not only torn from her her only son, heir to the principality of his father, Jean Albert, by whose will she was named regent and guardian of the child, but has forcibly detained the child, and kept the Duchess herself like a captive, depriving her of servants, letters, and even the necessaries of life, because she will not cede her rights, which have been so fully assured to her. Her unheard of sufferings, which are amply proved and ought to be known, require to be met with great firmness; while the writer and the rest of her friends are so exhausted with the war, that they have no resource, after God, but in seeking foreign assistance, and they therefore pray for the help of a good sum of money from England and Scotland, to be spent first in aiding the writer's sister, and secondly, in restoring the desolated churches, and assisting the widows, orphans, and others reduced to the last extremity by the calamities of war. If the money could be sent by bills of exchange on Hamburg ample acquittances and grateful thanks would be given, and a return in kind should England and Scotland ever require it, which he prays may never happen. C. J., II. 633. This letter was sent up to the Lords on the 20th of June 1642. See L. J., V. 151.

April 22. Examinations of Thomas Roscarrock and others respecting words spoken against the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland relative to the sale of a captain's commission. See L. J., V. 9.

April 26. Notes of the conference respecting the removing the magazine from Hull, &c. L. J., V. 20.

April 26. Draft of the declaration of the Lords and Commons against stopping the passages between Hull and the Parliament. L. J., V. 21. In extenso.

April 26. Another draft.

April 26. Message from the Commons for Sir John Hales, Sir Thos. Darrell, and others, to be sent for as delinquents. L. J., V. 21.

April 28. List of witnesses sworn for the Earl of Danby in his cause against Sir William San Ravey. See L. J., V. 22.

April 28. Informations of John Hill and another, witnesses in preceding cause.

April 28. Petition of Herbert Finch, Esq.; is sewer to Her Gracious Majesty, as appears by the annexed certificate: has been arrested contrary to privilege: prays for discharge. L. J., V. 25.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate that Finch is sworn sewer to Her Majesty, signed by the Earl of Dorset. 8 May 1635.

April 28. Petition of Isabella Baroness Dowager de Lawarr: complains that she was pulled out of her coach and violently arrested for a debt by one Reade and others contrary to privilege: prays that the suit against her may be stayed, and the offenders punished. L. J., V. 25.

April 28. Draft of the Instructions to the Committee of both Houses appointed to go to Hull. L. J., V. 27. In extenso.

April 28. Printed copy of "The order of assistance given to the Committees of both Houses concerning their going to Hull." L. J., V. 27. In extenso.

April 28. Copy of the King's warrant to Sir Richard Hutton to remain in the county of York.

April 28. Order of the Commons for issue of 2,000*l.* to Mr. Hotham, to pay the garrison at Hull. C. J., II. 545. In extenso.

April 29. Petition of John Hackett, Dr. of Divinity, to Robert Earl of Essex; the King promised to support petitioner's claim to be elected a canon residentiary of St. Paul's, but some few days past Dr. Layfield has implored the King's patronage for the sake of his uncle, the Archbishop of Canterbury, and has obtained answer that the residentiaries shall be left to a liberty of election; Dr. Montfort, one of the electors, is father-in-law to Dr. Layfield, and the King has written saying that a father and son-in-law ought not to be half a chapter in so great a foundation, and besides Dr. Layfield is obnoxious to Parliament as a scandalous innovator; prays that the residentiaries may be directed to elect petitioner and not Dr. Layfield. L. J., V. 28.

April 29. Petition of John Feilder, High Sheriff of the county of Southampton, to H. C.; having received an order of both Houses in March last to proclaim George Lord Digby a traitor in all market towns, petitioner sent Peter Ufman, a bailiff, and one Andrew Seaman to make proclamation at Portsmouth, but Mr. Winter, the deputy mayor there, and others, withstood the proclamation and committed the bailiff and Seaman to custody, and threatened to whip the latter, and said that they would have done as much for petitioner had he come himself; he further complains that he received no assistance from the inhabitants of Andover in forwarding some Irish prisoners from the West towards London; prays for consideration, lest the impunity of such contempts may encourage others to do the like. L. J., V. 28.

April 29. Order for appearance of Mr. Winter and others. L. J., V. 28. In extenso.

April 29. Copy of preceding.

April 29. Petition of Sir Edward Herbert, His Majesty's Attorney General; for release from imprisonment. L. J., V. 30. In extenso.

April 29. Petition of Robert Walsh, Esq.; petitioner, a servant to the Queen, has been arrested for debt contrary to privilege; prays for discharge. L. J., V. 30.

1. Certificate of the Earl of Dorset that Walsh is a sworn servant to the Queen. 25 April 1642.

April 29. Petition of Anthony Etherington, gent., and Dorothy his wife; Dorothy's only brother, a merchant at Lisbon, has made a large fortune, but having neither wife nor child is desirous of conferring the greater part of his means upon petitioners, if they will come and live with him; petitioner Anthony is a younger son with small means; pray that they may have leave with one servant to sail in a ship, which has already dropped down to Woolwich, and is only waiting for a fair wind. L. J., V. 30.

April 30. Interrogatories put to James Jackson, Dr. of Physic, concerning the madness of Sir Archibald Douglas, in the cause of Lady Lucy Hastings against Francis Poulton, with Dr. Jackson's answers attached. The examination was ordered to be published this day. L. J., V. 30.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of part of preceding.

April 30. Affidavit of Thomas Terrill, of Burnham, in the county of Essex; that the fishermen, who claim the right of fishing for oysters, &c. in Walfleet and Burnham Water against the Earl of Sussex, threaten to fish there about the 25th inst. with 60 or 100 sail of boats, and to take away the spat, and breed of oysters, which will destroy the fishing for many years. L. J., V. 32.

April 30. Affidavit of same; of his having found the fishermen fishing, as threatened, in a tumultuous manner, and that they laughed at the order of the House when read to them.

Annexed:—

1. Notes for an order for quieting the Earl's possession.

April 30. Order for discharge of Robert Walsh, servant to the Queen, from imprisonment. L. J., V. 32.

April 30. Petition of the Mayor and Aldermen of the town of Colchester; the cause between petitioners and Richard Freshfield, a man of contentious and refractory spirit, is now ready for hearing in Chancery; pray that the cause may be there remitted for decision, as Freshfield's petition to the House was only presented to annoy petitioners in order to force them to a composition, and is full of falsities. L. J., V. 33.

April 30. Petition of Elizabeth Clarke, widow of Captain Peter Clarke; for appointment of a day certain for trial of her cause against Lord Morley and Mounteagle for killing her husband. See L. J., V. 33.

April 30. Petition of Richard Bruton against Sir John Lenthall; complains of delay procured by Lenthall's potency, and prays that he may not be allowed to bring a second writ of error. L. J., V. 34.

April 30. Petition of Edmund Wingate, in behalf of the inhabitants of Ampthill, Bedfordshire; by an order of the 23d of February 1640-1 (L. J., IV. 170), Hugh Reeve, late parson of Ampthill, for holding popish doctrines, was deprived of all his ecclesiastical livings, ordered to make recantation, and to leave the vicarage house, on doing this he was to receive 10*l.* per annum out of the parsonage, which a noble person of the parish freely offered to discharge; Reeve still maintains two of the tenets that he recanted, converses with papists more than ever, and refuses to give up the vicarage house; petitioner prays that the annuity may be transferred to the present incumbent, as it is unreasonable that Reeve should take any benefit under the order which he has contemned. L. J., V. 34.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Edmund Wingate in support of preceding.

April 30. Draft order respecting the subscriptions of the adventurers for the additional forces by sea for Ireland. L. J., V. 34. In extenso.

April 30. Draft order appointing John Hotham, son of Sir John Hotham, governor of Hull in case of his father's death. L. J., V. 34. In extenso.

April 30. Another draft.

April 30. Draft of the declaration of the Lords and Commons, to be sent into Yorkshire, to prevent the raising of the militia by His Majesty for the purpose of taking possession of the town of Hull. L. J., V. 34. In extenso.

April 30. Copy of preceding.

April 30. Draft order for the Earl of Holland to attend the House, and for the sheriff of Berks to prevent riots, &c., in Windsor forest. L. J., V. 35. In extenso.

April 30. Petition of parishioners of Ackcliffe [Aycliffe]; about September last upon the death of Dr. Carr their late vicar, who was chaplain to the late Earl of Strafford, Mr. Daniel Carwardine was nominated by Mr. Smart, senior prebendary of Durham, according to custom, but the other prebendaries refused to confirm the nomination; the matter was brought before the House and the custom proved, but the great affairs of the kingdom prevented any decision from being come to, whereupon Mr. Smart took institution himself, for fear of a lapse of his right, and appointed Mr. Carwardine his curate till the question should be determined; but Mr. Leke, a scandalous drunken man, who was curate under Dr. Carr, locked the pulpit door, violently broke into the vicarage, and expelled Mr. Carwardine; pray that Carwardine may be secured in possession till the matter be decided. L. J., V. 35.

April 30. Petition of parishioners of Pennard in the county of Glamorgan to H. C.; have never had more than four sermons a year in their parish church, and those by a man of a very scandalous life; pray for the nomination of Ambrose Mosten, as lecturer, a man of godly sort, and one who can preach in the Welsh and English tongues. C. J., II. 551.

April 30. Affidavit of Robert Parkins, that Captain Brough said that he heard 50*l.* was given for a company. See L. J., V. 9.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Jerom Manwood at Maidenhead to Mr. Battiere, secretary to the Earl of Leicester, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; denies the words imputed to him by Captain Brough. 23 April.

April 30. Warrant from the Speaker of the House of Commons directing all mayors, sheriffs, &c. to furnish Richard Eccleston with sufficient post horses, and an able guide to Hull and back. See C. J., II. 551.

[April .] Petition of Joseph Sanders, one of His Majesty's servants; has been arrested for debt contrary to privilege; prays for discharge. See L. J., V. 30.

[April .] Petition of Sir Philip Mainwaring; prays that the cause between him and the Lord Mountnorris, touching the right and possession of the office of one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State in Ireland, may be brought to a determination.

[April .] Petition of Sir William Middleton, His Majesty's sworn servant; complains of arrest at the suit of Sir Henry Garway, and others, contrary to privilege; prays that he may have the same protection that has been been lately accorded to Captain Butler, and Mr. Robert Welshe.

May 2. Petition of Alice Webb, alias Baker, a poor aged widow. In June last her petition to the House against the Bishop of Llandaff was referred to the Judge of Assize, who happened to be Timothy Turnor, an intimate friend of the bishop. The judge examined only three of petitioner's witnesses, pretending he had no time for more. She prays for a hearing before the House, where only she can expect justice, and that she may have a copy of the judge's certificate now in the clerk's hand. L. J., V. 35.

May 2. Affidavit of John Peacocke, under keeper of Newlodge Walk in the forest of Waltham, Essex, and of Richard Stocke. John Browne and others in April last assembled in a riotous manner in Waltham Forest, armed with guns, bills, pitchforks, and clubs, and killed and wounded many of the King's deer, saying they came for venison and venison they would have, for there was no law settled at this time, laughed at the warrant of the Earl of Carlisle, chief keeper of Newlodge Walk, threatened to kill bucks in Lowton Walk, and told deponents if they complained of offenders to complain of good store of them, that if they went to prison they might be merry together. See L. J., V. 37.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of same, that Mr. Russell, minister of Chingford, and others, daily assemble and kill the King's deer.

May 2. Petition of Isaac Legay and Daniel Farvack, merchants, praying for a writ ne exeat regno against Nicholas Philipps, who is largely indebted to them, and who intends to leave the country for a two years' voyage. L. J., V. 37.

Annexed,

1. Affidavit in support of preceding.

2. Another affidavit.

May 2. Copy of an order that the former orders, staying proceedings in the cause between Dr. Featly and Andrew Kirwin, should be taken off and the parties left to the ordinary course in law. L. J., V. 37. In extenso.

May 2. Another copy.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petition of Kirwin, that the preceding order may be carried out. (Undated.)

2. Petition of Kirwin. Dr. Featly has obtained an injunction in equity to stay petitioner's proceedings at law, because the question in dispute is the title to a copyhold of the Prince's manor of Kennington. Prays that the court may be ordered to withdraw the injunction. (Undated.)

3. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

4. Copy of petition of Daniel Featly, D.D., that their Lordships would explain whether their order of 2nd May referred to proceedings both in law and equity. (Undated.)

May 2. Petition of Eesechias Scarning against Gilbert Fitch, one of the Marshals of the Hall, His Majesty's servant, to whom petitioner leased a house and lands in Wolvey, Warwickshire. Fitch not only failed to pay the rent, but has done great damage by cutting down trees. Petitioner applied to the officers of His Majesty's green cloth for leave to proceed against Fitch at law, unless he should show cause to the contrary within a specified time: after which petitioner caused him to be arrested, but by a false surmise he obtained an order from the House for his discharge on the ground of privilege. Petitioner prays for discharge of their Lordships' former order, and for leave to prosecute his suit at law. L. J., V. 38.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. L. J., IV. 621.

2. Affidavit of service of the order made May 2 upon Fitch. 6 May.

May 2. Copy of an order for issuing arms from the Tower for Munster. L. J., V. 38. In extenso.

May 2. Two lists of the arms to be sent to Munster. L. J., V. 38. In extenso.

May 2. Resolution that the Committee of Lords and Commons, to whom the last messages concerning Hull were referred, be desired to expedite the answer to His Majesty, &c. See C. J., II. 553.

May 2. Petition of William, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. In March last petitioner nominated Richard Howlett to the rectory of Lachynden [Latchingdon], Dr. Gaudyn to the rectory of Bockyn [Bocking], and Mr. Newstead to the rectory of Stistead [Stisted]. Their Lordships approved of the first two, but recommended a Mr. Clarke instead of Mr. Newstead, in consequence of a petition of the parishioners of Stistead. Petitioner is under promise to Sir Thomas Roe for Mr. Newstead, his chaplain for many years. Prays that the nomination may be approved. See L. J., V. 38.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of William Isaacson, and others, that Mr. Christopher Newstead, Bachelor in Divinity, is an orthodox divine, a laborious preacher, and a man of civil life and conversation. 18 April 1642.

May 3. Draft resolutions, &c. in Lord Loftus' [Viscount Ely's] cause. L. J., V. 38. (Two papers.)

May 3. Petition of William Lord Viscount Grandison, and the Lady Mary his wife, Philip Lord Herbert and the Lady Penelope, Viscountess of Bayninge of Sudbury, his wife, Francis Lord Dacre, and the Lady Elizabeth his wife, and Sir Thomas Glemham, Knight; pray that while their cause concerning Sutton Marsh is depending before their Lordships, no division of the lands may be made amongst the commoners, and that the arrears of interest may be paid into the hands of some indifferent persons.

Annexed:—

1. Abstract of order made on preceding petition. L. J., V. 39.

May 3. Petition of Dr. John Scott, Dean of York, and Christopher Scott his brother, distressed prisoners in the King's Bench, against Ralph Cooke; pray that they may have copies of the evidence taken before the commission for examination of witnesses, and that a day may be appointed for hearing.

May 3. Copy of order for the publication of the depositions in the preceding cause. L. J., V. 40. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Christopher Scott, a poor prisoner in the King's Bench, administrator of the goods and chattels of Dr. John Scott, late Dean of York, his brother, deceased; Bathurst and Cooke have received a large sum out of the late Dean's estate over and above the debt due to them, as has been proved before the commission for examination of witnesses, but petitioner still continues in prison; prays for an early day for hearing, and that meantime he may receive such rents and fines as still remain in the tenants' hands, and were due before the Dean's death. (Undated.)

2. Balance of account between the plaintiffs and defendants, certified by auditor Darell. 21 June 1642.

May 3. Petition of Sir Philip Mainwaring, Knight; petitioner has been summoned to answer a complaint of Henry Stewart concerning a sentence made in the Castle Chamber in Ireland. The sentence was passed by many of the Lords of the Council, and prime judges in Ireland, and petitioner prays that the case may be respited till the answers of all concerned are put in. L. J., V. 40.

May 3. Copy of order for the exercising and training of the trained bands of London. L. J., V. 41. In extenso.

May 3. Resolution of the Commons respecting Edward Lord Herbert's offer to advance money. C. J., II. 554. In extenso.

May 3. Affidavit of Richard Panton of Burnham, in the county of Essex, that George Asser, fisherman, of Barking, declared that he would fish for oysters in Burnham river and Wallfleet, in spite of their Lordships orders declaring the fishing to belong solely to the Earl of Sussex: that Asser and others have dredged there in a tumultuous manner and done great damage to the brood of oysters.

May 4. Petition of parishioners of St. Peter's in the Borough of St. Alban's; complain that for 60 years their vicars have not resided in the vicarage, and that the present vicar is non-resident, a pluralist, and accused of many crimes; he will now under the Act against pluralities have to give up one of his livings, which they hear will be St. Alban's, the patron is Matthew Wren, Bishop of Ely, a man charged in Parliament as a delinquent for many heinous crimes, who will, they fear, appoint some undeserving minister; petitioners pray that no presentation may be made unless approved by their Lordships. L. J., V. 41.

May 4. Statement that William Marsh, arrested at the suit of Thomas Harrison and Mrs. Stoiner, is a menial servant and receiver general to the Lord Marshal and Lord Mowbray; his discharge is desired. See L. J., V. 41.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate to the same effect, signed by Lord Mowbray and Maltravers.

2. Note from John Griffith to Throckmorton, for a copy of the order for Marsh's release.

May 4. Petition of Agmondesham Pickayes, servant to Robert Earl of Lindsey; his Lordship, on going into the North left petitioner to despatch his business in his absence; petitioner has been arrested by Kellam Smith, sergeant at mace, at the suit of Thomas Umfreville, and Smith has further charged him with two vexatious actions for trespass at the suit of James Vickers, though petitioner told Smith that he was the Earl's servant; prays for discharge. L. J., V. 41.

May 4. Affidavit of Abell Pryor of Marson, in the county of Lincoln, that since the inclosure and division of the south fen of Balderton in the county of Nottingham, the inhabitants and many of the tenants have broken down the fences, and depastured their cattle there. Endorsed, "Queen's Tenants, Balderton Fens." See L. J., V. 42.

May 4. Engrossment of the Bill for the forfeiture of the lands and estates, and for the punishment of John Archbishop of York, and the other impeached bishops. Brought from H. C., and read 1^a this day. No further proceeding. L. J., V. 42, 43.

May 4. Paper from the Scottish Commissioners concerning the payment of "the brotherly assistance." The paper, which was read in the House this day, is dated, Westminster, 25 April 1642. L. J., V. 42. In extenso.

[May 4.] Petition of Edward Maria Wingfield to Robert Earl of Essex; prays him to cause Sir Robert Heath's report in the case between petitioner and Woolley Leigh to be read, that the ne exeat regno may be taken off, otherwise he and the sergeants, drummers, and others, whom he hath entertained for service in Ireland, will be cashiered. See L. J., V. 43.

May 5. Petition from the county of Kent to the Lords and Commons; disclaim a former petition presented in the name of the county, and declare the determination of the petitioners to support the King, and the privileges of Parliament, according to their protestation. L. J., V. 44. In extenso. Endorsed, "1. Militia. 2. "14 days. 3. 6,000 hands and upwards and all Canterbury. 4. Many hundreds more have subscribed."

May 5. The Lord Keeper's answer, by direction of the House, to the gentlemen who brought the preceding petition. L. J., V. 44. In extenso.

May 5. Petition of John Archbishop of York, praying that he may be bailed. L. J., V. 44. In extenso.

May 5. Petition of the Bishops in restraint, praying that they may be bailed. L. J., V. 45. In extenso.

May 5. Order respecting the repayment of 20,000*l.* lent by the Merchant Adventurers. L. J., V. 46. In extenso.

May 5. Draft answer of Parliament to the King's messages about Sir John Hotham's refusal to admit him into Hull. L. J., V. 46. In extenso.

May 5. Copy of preceding.

May 5. Order of the Commons for the payment of 10,000*l.* for the service of Ireland. C. J., II. 559.

May 5. Petition of certain merchants and seamen; there are many causes in the Court of Admiralty long since ready for sentence, but stopped by rules from the King's Courts at Westminster: petitioners pray that until the House have time to determine the matters in dispute between the Admiralty and the other Courts, the Judge of the Admiralty may have leave to determine the causes there now depending. Endorsed, "Nothing done."

May 5. Copy of a warrant from the King to suppress the printing of his messages, &c., to Parliament.

Annexed:—

1. Another copy; and on the same paper a copy of warrant against printing libellous and seditious books. 6 Jan. 1641-2.

May 6. Message from the Commons requesting the Lords to issue a proclamation for the apprehension of Daniel O'Neale. L. J., V. 48.

April 6. Petition of Sir Edward Herbert, His Majesty's Attorney General: prays for enlargement from the Fleet, not so much on account of his health (wherein he is not free from suffering), as on account of the King's service, and his own sorrow to have incurred their Lordships' displeasure. See L. J., V. 58.

May 6. Order of the Commons respecting the removal of the magazine at Hull to the Tower of London. C. J., II. 562. In extenso.

May 7. Message from the Commons requesting the Lords to appoint a convenient place for the members appointed to manage the evidence at the trial of Mr. Justice Berkeley, &c. C. J., II. 562. In extenso.

May 7. Petition of Sir Richard Price, Richard Newell, Thomas Lloyd, James Vaughan, and John Fox: have been in custody since the 18th of April last; were yesterday brought up to appear before their Lordships, but could not be admitted because of the more weighty matters in hand. Pray to be dismissed from custody on bail. L. J., V. 53.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Richard Newell and Thomas Lloyd, gentlemen, and John Fox: were with Sir Richard Price apprehended by a messenger, and brought from their homes 160 miles away, to answer a supposed contempt of an order of their Lordships procured by Thomas Bushell; petitioners were cleared of all such contempt on examination of the charge, but Newell and Lloyd have since been apprehended and detained until they should pay 35*l.* a piece for the messenger's fees; Newell has paid the fees, but Lloyd is still in custody. Pray for redress, and that Bushell may be ordered to satisfy the messenger. (Undated.)

May 7. Petition of John Bromley, of Garsington, in the county of Oxford. George Melsam is now in custody of the sheriff of the county, by virtue of an outlawry from the King's Bench for riots and other misdemeanours. He and his brothers, Francis and John Melsam, have often been suspected of killing the King's deer, and petitioner, having lately got possession of a house which they had forcibly withheld from him, found venison in the house, and guns and other things "fit for destruction of a forest;" and hearing George Melsam boast that he had cut off the heads of 300 deer with his wood knife, petitioner searched a well and found the bottom filled with stags' and other deers' heads. The Melsams pretend to be protected by the Earl of Lindsey, but without truth.

May 7. Letter from Henry Earl of Bath, at Mereworth Castle, in Kent, to the Lord Keeper Littleton. On account of the dangerous illness (suspected to be plague) of two of his servants, he has withdrawn himself to a house, borrowed from his brother, the Earl of Westmorland. Prays the Lord Keeper to move the House to excuse his absence, and to give him leave to be away for some time to recover his health impaired by long residence in London.

May 7. Warrant from the Speaker to all mayors, sheriffs, &c., to furnish Richard Eccleston, employed on special service from the Parliament, with post-horses and an able guide to any part of England and back again.

[May 7.] Petition of Anthony Hooper and his creditors; Nicholas Phillips, a correspondent of Hooper, was found by the referees in the case, to be indebted to Hooper in a large sum of money, and was arrested; but having procured his release on bail has left the country on a long and hazardous voyage. Pray that the bail may be ordered to deposit the money due in indifferent hands.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the referee in the cause.

May 9. Petition of John Hacket, Doctor of Divinity; prays that Dr. Montfort and Dr. Turner may be called upon to elect him a canon residentiary of St. Paul's, according to the King's and their Lordships' direction, before they go in progress to visit the lands of their church. L. J., V. 55.

May 9. Message from the Commons with an order for sending ordinance to Munster. L. J., V. 55.

May 9. Petition of Sir William Killebrew, Knight, Edward Heron, Esq., Richard Ligon, and other participants, with the Earl of Lindsey; complain that they have been turned out of their possessions in the Earl of Lindsey's level in Lincolnshire by a riotous multitude of people, who have destroyed works and drains that cost near 60,000*l.*, have pulled down houses upon the tenants' heads, assaulted the sheriffs and others, who attempted to enforce their Lordships' former orders; and have appointed the 13th instant for completing the work of destruction. Pray their Lordships to take measures for preventing further mischief.

May 9. Copy of order on preceding petition. L. J., V. 55. In extenso.

May 9. Petition of Arthur Magneiss [Magennis]; prays that as their Lordships will not give him his liberty on the only security he can give, that is his oath not to go into Ireland or anywhere else to the prejudice of the Crown, they will direct the Lieutenant of the Tower to give order that he may have such allowance for his meat, clothes, and other necessities, as other prisoners of his quality, condition, and distress. L. J., V. 56.

May 9. Report concerning Hull, &c. C. J., II. 564.

May 9. Copy of order of the Commons upon a petition of the Mayor and Aldermen of Bristol, for payment of money for the relief of the distressed protestants fled thither out of Ireland. C. J., II. 565. In extenso.

May 9. Petition of Sir John Conyers, Lieutenant of the Tower; Colonel Beeling, committed to his custody by warrant from their Lordships, is unable to maintain himself on account of his losses, and has ever since his commitment been supported with his servants by petitioner, who prays their Lordships to appoint him a competent maintenance.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same for a competent allowance for the maintenance of Colonel Beeling, Mr. Arthur Mageinze [Magennis], and Henry Walker. (Undated.)

May 9. Petition of Henry Walker; has spent most part of his estate in prison about a petition touching the King's Majesty, for which he is heartily sorry. Prays for consideration of his deplorable condition and for enlargement.

May 10. Order for John Chaundler, English Consul at Lisbon, who, with his wife, is accused of being a papist, and seducing the King's subjects from their religion, to appear before Parliament and answer the charges against him. L. J., V. 57.

May 10. Report of the conference about removing the magazine from Mounmouth, and for suppressing the growth of popery. L. J., II. 57. In extenso.

May 11. Petition of Sir Edward Herbert, His Majesty's Attorney-General. Prays for enlargement on the ground of daily growing ill-health. L. J., V. 58.

May 11. Copy of the King's warrant to the officers at Hull, not to put any of the arms in the magazine there on board ship. L. J., V. 70. In extenso.

May 11. Motion in the cause of Henry Fisher against the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford, Henry Thorpe, Gabriel Thorpe, John Steevens, and others: the defendants, who are tenants to the Dean and Chapter, have, in contempt of their Lordships' order of the 27th of July last, continued to commit waste upon the lands in question: it is requested that the defendants may be sent for as delinquents.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Mathias Woods respecting words spoken by Gabriel Thorpe, in contempt of their Lordships' order. 2 June 1642.

2. Similar affidavit of Timothy Simpson. 15 June 1642.

3. Similar affidavit of Henry Fisher. 9 May 1642.

May 11. Letter from the Lords Justices of Ireland at Dublin Castle to the Lord Keeper: not long after the breaking out of the rebellion, Lady Jepson and her son Sir John Giffard were constrained to betake themselves to their Castle of Jordan, in the county of Meath, about 30 miles from Dublin; they have been despoiled of everything they could not bring within the castle gates, and have been obliged to receive and maintain their English tenants out of the little left to themselves; they have been long beleaguered, but Sir John has made frequent sallies, and slain divers of the rebels: the ways are so blocked with rebels that there would be no possibility for Lady Jepson or her son to come to Dublin without an army to guard them, while Sir John's departure would greatly prejudice the public service and encourage the rebels. Prays his Lordship to make these things known to the House. Endorsed, Lca. 4 Junii. L. J., V. 104.

May 12. Petition of John Hinton: is a doctor of physic and sworn physician to Her Majesty: has been arrested by one Osborne, a sergeant, in breach of privilege, though petitioner produced the Earl of Dorset's certificate of his appointment. Prays for protection. L. J., V. 60.

May 12. Copy of order against killing the King's deer within the limits of the forests of Windsor and Waltham. L. J., V. 61.

May 12. Another copy.

May 12. Petition of William Hawkes, a sergeant of the Mace, to Lady Isabella Delaware, praying for forgiveness for his rash act in arresting her ladyship, and for his discharge. Noted,—“Tis the sense of the House ‘that unless the petitioner do make an humble submission upon his knees to the Right Hon. the Lady Delaware, as well as this his submission by petition, that he ‘shall be remanded to prison, and no ways from thence ‘released till he do so.’” L. J., V. 61.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of William Hawkes, prisoner in the Fleet: in arresting Lady Delaware he acted in ignorance of her privilege, confesses his error, and prays for release from prison without any corporal punishment or disgrace.

2. Duplicate of preceding.

May 12. Petition of Sir James Levingston: his petition to be restored to the possession of 1,016 acres in Sutton Marsh, has long been depending before their Lordships, if no decision be come to, the tenants will keep back their rents. Prays that they may be ordered to pay them into some safe hands. L. J., V. 61.

May 12. Votes to indemnify persons acting under the ordinance for the militia, &c. L. J., V. 63. In extenso.

May 12. “A note of their names that have received ‘the monies raised by the lottery.’ It is desired that an order be made that none of ‘the assurers about the ‘aqueduct’ be released, until the money they have in their hands be brought in, and that a commission may be directed to Sir Robert Heath (who when Attorney-General drew the patents of the aqueduct and lottery), and to Sir John Wolstenholme for examination of the whole matter. See C. J., II. 567.

May 12. Letter from Lord Duddeley, at Duddeley Castle, to the Earl of Dorset; want of health preventing his personal attendance, he prays the Earl to move the House for the release of an old servant, Agmondesham Pickis, who has been arrested and laid in prison contrary to privilege. See L. J., V. 78.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Agmondesham Pickayes: has for many years been a servant to Edward Lord Dudley, but has lately been arrested at the suit of James Vickers contrary to privilege. Prays for discharge. (Undated.)

May 12. Printed copy of His Majesty's speech to the gentry of the county of York attending His Majesty at the city of York this day. Parliamentary Register, X. 517. In extenso.

[May 12.] Petition of Elizabeth Clarke: implores justice against Lord Morley and Mounteagle for killing her husband, which was the ruin of herself and her children; she has spent all her small means in prosecuting her case, and prays for a final determination of it on Saturday next. See L. J., V. 64.

May 13. Petition of Thomas Warren, clerk; was lately presented to the parsonage of St. Stephen's, Walbrook, by the Grocer's Company, the undoubted patrons, but some few of the parishioners refuse to receive him, and by locking the church doors and keeping the keys away, do hinder him of the enjoyment thereof. Prays for an order to put him in quiet possession. L. J., V. 62.

May 13. Petition of Sir George Strode, that Mr. Hackwell and others may be assigned him as counsel, that he may have a copy of the impeachment, &c. L. J., V. 62.

May 13. Note respecting the discharge of William Marsh, menial servant to the Lord Marshal. L. J., V. 62.

May 13. Petition of Elias Alleyn (or Allen), of the Strand, mathematical instrument maker. Edward Alleyn founded a college at Dulwich, to consist of one master, one warden, four fellows, six poor men, six poor women, and twelve poor boys, all single persons, and, in the statutes for the management of the college, directed that the master and warden for the future should be both single men of his blood and surname, and for want of such, of his surname only: the place of warden is now vacant, and one John Alleyn and one Edward Alleyn were competitors, but the former has been dismissed as a married man. On Monday last, the utmost day limited for the election, Edward Alleyn, to advance his cause, pretended that he was kinsman to the founder, but not being able to produce any evidence of this, time was granted for him to do so; this petitioner believes to have been illegal, and that, now that the time for the college to elect is past, the power has fallen to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and by his suspension to their Lordships: petitioner, who is aged, of the surname of the founder, and single, prays that he may be appointed warden of the college, as his competitor is a young man and a soldier, and of no kin to the founder. L. J., V. 63.

May 13. Petition of Henry Bell, Scotsman, that a day may be appointed for the hearing of his case. See L. J., V. 63.

May 13. Draft order for grant of letters of reprisal to Hnett Leat, son of Nicholas Leat, for recovery of losses suffered at the hands of the Spaniards. L. J., V. 63.

May 13. Petition of John Montfort and Thomas Turner, canons residentiary of St. Paul's, in answer to the orders recommending Dr. Hacket to them for the vacant residentiary's place in their church. They humbly state:—1. That they did not sooner answer because of their Lordships' order prohibiting further proceedings in private business, on account of the weighty matters in hand. 2. That the King when rightly informed of their customs was pleased to leave them full liberty of choice. 3. That they thereupon promised the place to another, before Dr. Hacket was a suitor for it. 4. That the King when informed was again pleased to leave them to their liberty of choice. Pray the House now rightly informed of the state of the case to imitate the King's example, and leave them to their former engagement.

May 14. Petition of Henry Stewart, Esq., and James Gray, merchant; in 1639 petitioners, and the wife and two daughters of Henry Stewart, were sentenced by the Earl of Strafford and others of the Council in Ireland to pay fines amounting to 1,300*l.*, and to be imprisoned for life, for refusing to take an oath, proved afterwards on the Earl's trial to be illegal; petitioners were released from prison by the King's special order, and about fifteen months since came to London to seek redress for the wrongs they had suffered, and have presented divers petitions in the matter, while Henry Stewart has, at his great cost and in peril of his life, travelled to Ireland by their Lordships' direction to procure documents material to his case; after long attendance the 29th of April was appointed for the hearing, but none of the defendants appeared except Sir Philip Mainwaring, some one pretending on behalf of the others that they had had no formal warning, and so the committee proceeded no further at that time, but on the following Monday reported, that the cause should be referred to the now Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; petitioner, however, despairs of his Lordship finding time for hearing of the cause; petitioners' cause has been often recommended to their Lordships by the Scotch Parliament and their Commissioners in England; pray their Lordships not to expose them to further misery, but to appoint a speedy day for the hearing, and determining of the matter. L. J., V. 65.

Annexed:—

1. Memorandum of the grievances of Henry Stewart and others.

May 14. Lord Capel's report from the committee appointed to consider the petition of Sir Thomas Cary against the Bishop of Ardagh. L. J., V. 65. In extenso.

May 14. Certificate of Mr. Justice Heath in the case between Woolley Leigh and Edward Maria Wingfield. See L. J., V. 75.

May 14. Letter from the Earl of Kingston to the Earl of Essex; would gladly attend Parliament if his health would permit, but has now with other distempers a lameness in his leg, so that if he came to London he would have to come in a litter, and be fit for no place but his chamber when there; prays the Earl of Essex to obtain leave from the House for him to stay in the country till his health permit him to come up. See L. J., V. 76.

May 16. Petition of Francis Bristowe and Jeremy Bagg, glassmakers: having been several times summoned to appear before their Lordships, have attended to their very great loss, and have suffered grievous wrongs and insults at the hands of Sir Robert Mansell, patentee for glass: pray that a day may be fixed for the hearing of their cause, or that they may be permitted to work till a day for hearing shall be appointed, or that they may be referred to the House of Commons, where they are also petitioners for relief. See L. J., V. 66.

May 16. Petition of Sir William Russell and of Richard George, and John George, and others, tenants of the manor of Eckington, in the county of Worcester. Petitioners claim a right of common of pasture in several lands in the parish of Eckington, and about 12 years since attempted to pasture their cattle upon them; but Francis Hanford, Esq., obtained an injunction in Chancery, and not only so, but broke open lands of petitioners, claiming common of pasture, until he also was restrained by injunction; the right of common was tried at law, when petitioners obtained three verdicts in their favour, but were defeated in Chancery and ordered to pay costs, as if they had claimed that which by law was not due to them; they have no remedy in Chancery, but by bill of review "which in the formality thereof will spend too much time and charge, and yet the merits of the cause at the end of that way be no riper for a determinate hearing than now." Pray their Lordships to recommend the cause to be fully heard before the Lord Keeper.

May 16. Petition of divers of the knights, esquires, gentlemen, ministers, freeholders, and other inhabitants of the county of Stafford, praying the House to present to the King their loyal and humble desires that he would settle the militia, that he would lean upon the hand and follow the counsels of Parliament, and that succour may speedily be sent to their brethren in Ireland. There are upwards of two thousand signatures. L. J., V. 66.

May 16. Petition of George Asser, Richard French, and William Thompson, of the county of Essex, fishermen. Time out of mind fishermen have had free liberty to take oysters in an arm of the sea called Burnham Water, but the Earl of Sussex has lately claimed the sole right of fishing there. Petitioners, who are in custody by their Lordships' order, pray that the charge against them may be heard, or that they may be released. L. J., V. 66.

May 16. Order for payment of 10,000*l.* for Dublin. L. J., V. 67. In extenso.

May 16. Petition of William Wheatley, mariner of Dover. As master of the "Willing Mind," of 120 tons burthen, sailed in Dec. 1641, from Bilbao in Biscay, laden only with bags of wool, and anchored in the Downs on the 17th of Jan., waited there for advices till the 23rd, when he set sail for Rotterdam, but was carried out of his course by stress of weather, and seized by a Flemish frigate, the captain of which put a prize crew on board, and forced him and some of his men to serve on board the frigate. Petitioner took proceedings at Dunkirk against the captain and owners of the frigate, but is utterly unable to prosecute the suit. Prays that the Earl of Warwick may be ordered to stay Flemish ships and make satisfaction to petitioner, or that letters of marque may be granted to him.

May 17. Petition of George Benyon, prisoner in the Tower. In the cause between him and Lord St. John, he conceives he has just exceptions to some of the witnesses, and prays leave to except before the commission or before their Lordships at the hearing. L. J., V. 68.

May 17. Petition of Sir Filibert Vernatti, that no proceedings may be had upon the petition of Thomas Jennings, who is merely acting as substitute for his father-in-law, John Latch, until Latch shall have answered petitioner's bill against him.

May 17. Draft order upon preceding petition. L. J., V. 69. In extenso.

May 18. Examination of Ellis Nicholls, of Wiltsford, near Honiton, in the county of Devon; was arrested by Francis Bassett, Esq., Vice-Admiral of the north parts of the county of Cornwall, on account of his likeness to the description given by Parliament of O'Neale, lately escaped from the Tower, and because he had been travelling in Devonshire and in Wales without any apparent object, and without taking the shortest routes. L. J., V. 70.

May 18. Petition of Edward Stanford, of Puryhall, in the county of Stafford, for leave to go beyond seas with his wife and servants for recovery of his health. L. J., V. 71.

May 18. Copy of letter from the Parliament to Sir John Hotham at Hull, approving his conduct, &c. L. J., V. 71. In extenso.

May 18. Copy of the order to indemnify the captains of ships at Hull for removing the magazine. L. J., V. 72. In extenso.

May 18. Warrant from the Speaker to all mayors, sheriffs, &c., to furnish Richard Eccleston, employed on special service from the Parliament with post-horses, and an able guide to any part of England and back again.

May 19. Message from the Commons respecting the charge against the Recorder of London, &c. L. J., V. 72.

May 19. Draft list of the Committee appointed to join with a proportionable number of the House of Commons to consider of putting the militia of the kingdom into present execution. L. J., V. 73.

May 19. Another draft. Neither list agrees with that in the Journals.

May 19. Copy of order to the Commissioners appointed to treat with the Scots. L. J., V. 73. In extenso.

May 19. Draft order for punishment of delinquents. L. J., V. 75. In extenso.

May 20. Petition of inhabitants of Harlton [Harleton], in the county of Cambridge: petitioners have for a long time been destitute of a preaching minister, because there is a division amongst the patrons, the master and fellows of Jesus College, Cambridge; some wishing to appoint their Master, Dr. Sterne, a man complained of in the House of Commons, and a promoter of superstitious innovations, others wishing to appoint the senior fellow, who would add no more to petitioners' happiness than the Master. The right of presentation has now lapsed to the Bishop of Ely, suspended from exercising his power by their Lordships: pray that neither the master and fellows nor the Bishop may be permitted to put over them any man to whom it is not fit the souls of men should be committed, until the petitioners have offered a grave, learned, and orthodox divine for the approbation of the House. L. J., V. 76.

Annexed:—

1. Recommendation in favour of Mr. Ansell.

May 20. Order for payment of 10,000*l.* for the affairs of Ireland. L. J., V. 77. In extenso.

May 20. Copy of preceding, and of order for payment of 200*l.* for relief of the English in Bandonbrigg. L. J., V. 77. In extenso.

May 20. Order for attendance of witnesses in Mr. Justice Berkeley's case.

May 21. Petition of Edward Herbert, Baron of Cherbury and Castle Islands: prays for a benign interpretation of those words of his which gave offence, and for release. L. J., V. 77. In extenso.

May 21. Answer of Sir George Strode to the impeachment of the Commons; is accused of having hindered the execution of the ordinance concerning the militia on the 16th of March last, but did not then know of its existence; confesses to have signed a petition the same in effect with that sent up with the impeachment, but expected that the petition would have been brought to the next general quarter sessions for revision, when errors might have been corrected; he denies that he is guilty of the other offences with which he is charged.

May 21. Similar answer of Richard Spencer, Esq.

May 21. Deposition of John Barnes, of Windlesham, in the county of Surrey, constable; having received warrant to apprehend certain persons for killing a stag in Swinley Walk, Berks, he went with assistance so to do, and meeting the men on the highway bade them surrender to his warrant, but they said they cared neither for King nor Parliament and made off, and as he was pursuing them on horseback one of them shot his horse under him, and has since been heard to make his brag in an alehouse at Chertsey, that they thereby escaped.

May 21. Deposition of Francis Beard, underkeeper of Swinley Walk, that he saw William Crockford and others shoot a stag there, and when he asked them how they durst do it, they threatened to shoot him too if he would not begone.

May 23. Petition of Thomas Bushell, farmer of his His Majesty's mines royal, in the county of Cardigan; is unable to fulfil his contracts with merchants for supply of lead, in consequence of the interference of Sir Richard Price; petitioner prays the House to mediate between him and the merchants, that they would give him further time for completion of his contracts, and for prosecuting his suit. L. J., V. 78.

May 23. Petition of John, Bishop of St. Asaph; prays that the time for his appearance before the House after notice given may be enlarged, as the present period of three days prevents his visiting his charge.

May 23. Order on preceding, extending the period to three weeks. L. J., V. 79.

May 23. Petition of Morgan Bishop of Llandaff, similar to that of the Bishop of St. Asaph.

May 23. Petition of Mathew, Bishop of Ely, in answer to their Lordships' order of the 20th instant, recommending him to institute Mr. Ansell to the parsonage of Harleton, the right of presentation having lapsed to him, the Bishop says that he had already restored the right of presentation to the Master and fellows of Jesus College, who have since made an unanimous election, and he is therefore unable to interfere further. L. J., V. 79.

May 23. Petition of George Benyon; prays for further liberty, and time to instruct counsel in the cause between him and Lord St. John. L. J., V. 79.

May 23. Copy of order for payment of 500*l.* for the relief of the distressed protestants come out of Ireland into the county of Devon. L. J., V. 79. In extenso.

May 23. Copy of order for payment of 150*l.* for the relief of the distressed protestants come out of Ireland to Exeter. L. J., V. 79. In extenso.

May 23. Order of the Commons for payment of 1,000*l.* to Captain Armstrong and 27 officers. C. J., II. 582. In extenso.

May 23. Ordinance for raising a thousand volunteers by beat of drum, to be employed in the reduction of Ireland. C. J., II. 583.

[May] 23. Warrant to all mayors, sheriffs, &c., to furnish the bearer, employed on the service of Parliament, with post-horses, a guide, &c. Signed by Henry Earl of Manchester, Speaker, pro tempore.

May 23. Copy of a letter from Sir Edward Nicholas, conveying the King's commands to the Lord High Admiral, to provide a ship to carry home the Portuguese Ambassador. Read at a conference, 4 July. L. J., V. 179. In extenso.

May 23. Petition of the undertakers and purchasers of the improved fen grounds in the Earl of Lindsey's level, in the county of Lincoln; notwithstanding their Lordships' orders for securing to petitioners quiet possession of their lands tumultuous multitudes, marching many hundreds in a troop after captains, continue to destroy the public drains, burn and pull down houses, and throw men and women into rivers intending to destroy them; pray their Lordships further consideration and assistance. See L. J., V. 82.

Annexed:—

last in pursuance of their Lordships' order they went to Little Hall Fen and turned out Christopher Quell, and other pretended commoners, and put Thomas Heron in possession, but Quell and the others returned the same day and forcibly entered on the lands; the same thing happened at Horbling and other places: in April last they went to Bullingbrooke [Bolingbroke], having heard of a riot there, and found John Pishey and others, to the number of 300, pulling down houses, and destroying the dikes and crops of cole, and rape seed; the rioters, who laughed at their Lordships' orders, continued the work of destruction, and were too many to be interfered with; the next day the sheriff and justices were at Boston to perfect the record of the riot, when Pishey and other rioters came in a braving and daring manner near the house, while the Mayor of Boston refused in any way to interfere; the sheriff however succeeded in arresting some of the rioters, upon which a mob of more than a thousand persons attacked the house where the sheriff and justices were, broke in the windows, and having procured from the church the instruments used to pull down houses in case of fire, threatened to pull the house down unless the prisoners were released, and further insulted the sheriff and justices as they rode away from the town; George Banfield was similarly turned out of possession of lands in Pinchbeck Fen, and when evidence was given in court to prove the indictment some of the jury said, that, whatever evidence might be given, they would not find a true Bill, for it was their own case; the rioting and destruction still continue, and the sheriff, justices, and their servants, though acting in obedience to their Lordships' order, have themselves been indicted for their conduct.

2. Copy of Sir Edward Heron's warrant for suppressing riot on Gedney Marsh.

May 24. Petition of Lucy Lady Hastings, wife to the Lord Ferdinando Hastings, on the behalf of her distressed mother, the Lady Elianor Douglas; petitioner lately exhibited a complaint to their Lordships on behalf of her mother against Francis Poulton, concerning the rectory of Purton [Pirton], Herts, her mother's jointure settled upon her by petitioner's father, Sir John Davis, and afterwards assigned for a long term by Sir Archibald Douglas, when not of sound mind or memory, and when Lady Elianor was under imprisonment; Poulton is now dead and petitioner cannot proceed in her suit until his will is proved; she herself is obliged to return to the country, but desires to represent her mother's distress to their Lordships, her jointure thus sold, her dower in Ireland possessed by the rebels, and petitioner unable to help her, as Lord Hastings has also lost the greater part of his estate by the rebellion in Ireland: prays that Sir Archibald Douglas, who has bought himself an annuity of 100*l.* with Lady Elianor's jointure, may be ordered to allow a portion to her. L. J., V. 80.

May 24. Copy of order of both Houses to their Committees, at York, to publish the votes and orders of Parliament. L. J., V. 83. In extenso.

May 24. Order of the Commons for payment of the 500*l.* loan from Middlesex into the hands of Sir Robert Pye and Mr. Wheeler. C. J., II. 584.

May 24. Petition of inhabitants of St. Olave's, in Southwark, to H. C.; a former petition respecting the election of churchwardens was referred to two neighbouring justices, who accordingly made certificate to the House, but since then some of the opposite party in the vestry have, contrary to their promise to wait the determination of the matter, officiated by violence as churchwardens at the distribution of the sacrament to the disturbance of the church; pray for a speedy determination of the matter. C. J., II. 585.

[May 24.] Babb v. Trelawney. Petition of defendant that the hearing of the cause may be postponed. See L. J., V. 83.

May 25. Petition of the Commissioners of the Prince His Highness revenue; notwithstanding their Lordships' order of the 6th April 1641, for securing them in the quiet possession of certain improvements on the Prince's manors of Berkhamstead, Mere, Fordington, and Stoake Clymsland [Stokeclimsland], the fences and hedges have again been pulled down at Berkhamstead and Mere; pray that till a legal determination can be had they may be secured in possession.

[May 26.] Petition of Joseph Hawes; in March 1638-9, Sir Henry Martin, late judge of the Admiralty Court, certified that the "Elizabeth," bound for Virginia with passengers and merchandize, was taken by eleven sail of the Spanish West India Fleet, and that the damage was above 1,200*l.*; letters of State were thereupon sent to the ambassador in Spain, but no redress obtained; petitioner formerly arrested certain silver of the King of Spain's subjects in England, but by procurement of Roger Kilvert it was first bailed and then released; there are now in England several parcels of silver belonging to subjects of the King of Spain, but the judge of the Admiralty will not give order for their seizure without the leave of the House, for which petitioner (having been long a prisoner) prays, and for which he can show precedent. L. J., V. 84.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

2. Petition of same; complains that Benjamin Newland, of the Isle of Wight, hath in his custody gunpowder, sails, &c., and eight pieces of brass ordnance, belonging to a ship called the "Angel," of the King of Spain, now adjudged to petitioner in the Court of Admiralty in part satisfaction of the great losses done to him by the Spaniards; Newland has got possession of these goods on pretence of satisfying a debt of far less value intending to defraud petitioner, who has no remedy against Newland at common law, and therefore prays that he may be allowed to join in the sale of the goods, in order that he may receive what remains after satisfaction of Newland's claim. (Undated.)

3. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

May 26. Deposition of Francis Merlin [or Marley], that he served the Earl of Newport, the Earl of Lindsey, and the Lord Savile with the orders of the House, and was told by Secretary Nicholas that it was His Majesty's pleasure that none of the said Lords should depart the Court until His Majesty had justice upon Sir John Hotham, and when he served the Earl of Lindsey with the order, the Earl called to two or three of the King's guards to take deponent into custody. L. J., V. 85.

May 26. Petition of William Ebborne, William Cross, George Thacker, and George Reginalds, poor prisoners in the Fleet; were fetched up from Lincolnshire, and charged by Mr. Kirke and Mr. Walron for casting down dikes, which they only did in a peaceable way to try their right, not knowing of their Lordships' order to stop such courses; have spent all their substance in prison and have wives and children dependent on them; pray for discharge. L. J., V. 85.

May 26. Order for the arms at Harwich to be restored to the county of Essex. L. J., V. 85.

May 26. Report of the conference about the King's intent to remove the term to York, &c. The report was made on the 27th. L. J., V. 85. In extenso.

May 27. Petition of Ralph Skipwith, Esq., His Majesty's servant in ordinary; complains of arrest, in breach of privilege, by order of Dame Bridgett Kingsman for pretended trespass, and prays for reparation. L. J., V. 86.

May 27. Certificate of Robert Phillips, that he summoned Sir Francis Wortley and others, to appear before their Lordships, pursuant to order of the 25th of April last. L. J., V. 86. In extenso.

May 30. Petition of Thomas and Symon Osbaldeston, His Majesty's sworn servants; have been arrested for pretended debts, contrary to privilege, by Thomas Bunting, of Greenwich, vintner, and others; pray for discharge. L. J., V. 92.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of David Ramsay, one of His Majesty's servants in ordinary; has been arrested by his creditors, and is now prisoner in the Gatehouse, though large arrears of pay are due to him from his Majesty; prays that he may have the like protection which has been granted to Osbaldeston and others. (Undated.)

May 30. Order for the appearance of the Lords who have gone to York. L. J., V. 92.

May 30. Petition of Edward Lord Littleton, Keeper of the Great Seal, expressing his inability to obey their Lordships' order for his return to London, on account of his ill health, and the King's command to the contrary. L. J., V. 93. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Tobias Peaker, servant to the Lord Keeper, respecting his master's health. L. J., V. 93. In extenso.

Majesty at York. Entered in extenso on the 3rd of June. L. J., V. 101.

May 30. Letter from the King to Philip Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery to attend His Majesty at York. Similar to preceding. L. J., V. 101.

May 30. Letter from the King to Philip Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery giving him licence to be absent from Parliament. Similar to the licence to the Earl of Northumberland, which is entered in extenso on the 3rd of June. L. J., V. 101.

May 30. Interrogatories and depositions in the cause between Lord St. John and George Benyon. See L. J., V. 90, &c.

May 31. Petition of Sir Peter Osborne, Lieutenant-Governor of Guernsey; two ministers have been chosen out of the island to attend the assembly of Divines; the island, which has ten parishes, will then be left with but six ministers, the several parishioners every Sunday expecting two sermons, besides a constant lecture upon one of the week days; petitioner prays that if both ministers cannot be forborne, then one of them may be chosen from Jersey, as the islanders are well content with the discipline of France so long enjoyed, and have not the curiosity to intermeddle in the government of other churches.

May 31. Copy of preceding.

May 31. Copy of order on preceding petition, dispensing with both ministers. L. J., V. 94. In extenso.

May 31. Petition of Edmund Harrington, Giles Johnson, and Thomas Marshall; in consideration of the unjust oppression suffered by petitioners at the hands of Robert Taylcot and Thomas his son, their Lordships referred the case to two justices, who have made the annexed certificate; pray that the case may be referred to a committee of their Lordships to settle. L. J., V. 94.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Edmund Harrington and Elizabeth his wife, Giles Johnson and Grace his wife, Thomas Marshall and Anne his wife; petitioners in right of their wives claim certain lands and tenements in Colchester, mortgaged in Queen Elizabeth's time, and afterwards fraudulently conveyed to Robert Taylcot; a suit in the matter in Chancery was dismissed by Lord Coventry, but with a direction that Taylcot should pay petitioners 20*l.* for a release of their interest, the property in question being worth 2,000*l.*; petitioners are thus cut off from relief except from their Lordships, whom they pray to grant them satisfaction. 22 May 1641. L. J., IV. 255.
2. Order referring preceding petition to two justices. 22 June 1641.
3. Certificate of the justices stating the facts of the case and exonerating Taylcot (mayor of Colchester) from fraud in the matter. 8 July 1641.
4. Affidavit of Thomas Rider that he served Taylcot with an order in the cause. 15 June 1642.

May 31. Draft order for raising a thousand men for service in Ireland. L. J., V. 95. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to preceding.

May 31. Petition of John Lord Balmerino; King James in the first year of his reign granted to James Lord Balmerino, petitioner's father, the office of chief clerk or prothonotary of the King's Bench in reversion after the death of Sir John Roper, afterwards Lord Roper; the said Lord Balmerino, by agreement with Mr., afterwards Sir, Robert Heath, in the fifth year of the late King's reign, surrendered the office to His Majesty, and obtained a new patent to himself and Sir Robert Heath for their lives, upon trust that Sir Robert should execute the office, and pay one moiety of the profits, amounting to at least 2,000*l.* per annum, to his Lordship; but in the tenth year of the late King's reign Sir Robert made an entire surrender of the office without Lord Balmerino's will or knowledge, by which means petitioner, heir and executor to his father, has been deprived of the profits of the said moiety ever since the death of Lord Roper, twenty-six years ago; petitioner can prove the truth of the premises by Sir Robert Heath's own handwriting, from whom he prays for satisfaction. L. J., V. 95.

May 31. Petition of Peter Smart, prebendary of Durham; the great charge he has incurred in maintaining witnesses has quite ruined him in estate and credit; prays that an early day may be appointed for the hearing of his case, or that the evidence of Nicholas Hobson, an old man of ninety-two, and of Robert King, who is obliged to return to the country, may be taken down in writing and sealed up till the hearing. L. J., V. 95.

May 31. Petition of the churchwardens and parishioners of St. Mary Magdalen, Bermondsey; Dr. Paske has for seventeen years been parson of their parish (being also Master of Clare Hall, Archdeacon of London, Prebendary of Canterbury, Prebendary of York, Parson of Great Hadham and of Little Hadham), he has scarce preached once a year, has always received the tithes but spent nothing for preaching or reading in church, or for a dwelling for a curate, the whole expense of which has fallen on the parish; petitioners have lately bought the next presentation to the living, and have elected Mr. Whitakers, a godly minister, their lecturer for the time being, but he is much opposed by the present curate, Mr. Kenn, who is also parson of Little Chart, in Kent, and vicar of Low Leyton, in Essex: petitioners who were the more induced to elect Mr. Whitakers in the hope that pluralities would have been abolished by Parliament, pray that their choice may be confirmed. L. J., V. 95.

May 31. Petition of gentry of Chertsey; that Mr. Boden may be ordered to preach there every market day, and also on Sunday when the minister of the parish preacheth not himself. C. J., II. 596.

May 31. Order of the Commons for 100*l.* to be paid to Lord Dungarvan for the relief of the distressed protestants of Youghal out of the contribution money collected at Dover. C. J., II. 596.

[May .] Request to Mr. Rushworth by some person not mentioned, that if there should be any proceedings in Parliament against Robert Hartpoole upon petition of Sir Edward Loftus, or others, that Mr. Rushworth would send word to Mr. Hussey, or write himself to Hartpoole by the ordinary post, "which is at Bartholomew Lane, in backside of the old Exchange, a known place from whence any one may send letters into Ireland." Hartpoole it is stated had recovered certain lands in Ireland from Sir Edward Loftus, by petition to the Lord Deputy and Council in Ireland.

[May .] "List of the last ten 'Linares' for Ireland, 1642, set forth by the Parliament." The names of the ships are given.

[May .] Petition of John Squire, merchant, now prisoner in the King's Bench: in consequence of the protection granted by their Lordships to Edward Abbotts, and Agmondesham Pigars (Pickayes), debtors to petitioner, he has been unable to satisfy his creditors, and has been himself arrested; prays for release and for liberty to prosecute his suit against Abbotts and Pigars. See L. J., V. 78.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same.
2. Another petition.

June 1. Petition of Henry Lord Morley and Mounteagle; by order (by consent) in a cause long depending in Chancery between petitioner and Sir George Strode and others, petitioner agreed to repay the purchase money of the manor of Martock, with interest, expecting Lord Pawlett (to whom the manor lay commodious) to find the money; but now Lord Pawlett will have no dealings in the matter, and no one will purchase land in such distracted times; petitioner prays the House to grant him the relief that cannot be had elsewhere. L. J., V. 95.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Harris of the Inner Temple, and others, in the matter. 3 May 1642.

June 1. Copy of order of both Houses about the sale of the crown jewels by the King. L. J., V. 96. In extenso.

June 1. Notes of the conference concerning the amendments in the propositions to the King, &c. L. J., V. 96.

June 1. Message from the Commons with resolutions of that House respecting an indemnity to those who have exercised the militia, &c. L. J., V. 97. In extenso. (Three papers.)

June 1. Copy of order to the committees at York respecting the presentation to the King of the petition from Parliament. L. J., V. 97. In extenso.

June 1. Draft of the 5th proposition respecting the marriage of any of the King's children contained in the petition of both Houses to the King. L. J., V. 98. In extenso.

June 1. Copy of information of Gilbert Yeildall and Francis Beard, keepers, charging Leonard Finch and Edward Barnard, of Warfield, with killing a stag on Warfield Heath.

[June 2.] Lord St. John v. George Benyon; charge against Benyon of assigning his own private debts to the King under colour of his receivership in order to recover them in that illegal way. L. J., V. 99.

Annexed:—

1. List of witnesses for Benyon.
2. Certificate of Thomas Brinley, one of the auditors of the Court of Exchequer, respecting the accounts between Lord St. John and Benyon.

June 2. Petition of George Rookes; upon petitioner's complaint Robert Tockley was imprisoned for contempt in refusing to pay 145*l.* as ordered by their Lordships: prays for Tockley's discharge as they are now agreed. L. J., V. 100.

June 2. Letter from the Earl of Monmouth at York to the Lords now sitting in the House of Peers. I received your Lordships' order to appear on the 27th of this present month, to make answer to the impeachment of the House of Commons. I am infinitely sensible of my misfortune in being so impeached, though I doubt not, were it in my power to appear I could largely acquit myself, but I am kept here by the observance of the same allegiance which brought me hither, and not being able to appear, I am not so good a lawyer as to know what answer to make. I do further humbly beg your Lordships to believe that wheresoever I am, all my endeavours shall tend to the reconciling and bringing together again of our King and Parliament.

June 3. Draft order as amended by the Lords to the officers of the ordnance to receive the arms and ammunition sent from Hull. L. J., V. 100.

June 3. Petition of Thomas Burwell; stands impeached on pretence that he signed a warrant with the now Bishop of Durham, by which Mr. Smart was brought up prisoner to London in a cart; the Bishop, the principal, was dismissed on transmission of the impeachment by the House of Commons, but Smart is now suing petitioner for the same imprisonment before the Barons of the Exchequer; petitioner prays their Lordships to detain or dismiss the cause pending before them, that he may not be vexed in two courts at the same time. L. J., V. 101.

June 3. Order for the hearing of Henry Stewart's cause against Lord Cromwell and others of the Council in Ireland. L. J., V. 102.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Fenton Parsons on the behalf of Sir William Parsons, Lord Justice of Ireland, and others, who by their counsel have often attended the hearing of the cause, in which they have been made defendants by Henry Stewart and James Gray, before the Committee for Petitions, but have never yet obtained a hearing though the cause has been reported to their Lordships, and 1,900*l.* damages is alleged to be due to Stewart and Gray; the Lord Justice and the others pray to be heard by counsel at the Bar on the points of law that arise in the cause.

June 3. Draft letter from the Parliament to Lord Willoughby [of Parham] thanking him for his activity in putting the ordinance for the militia into execution in Lincolnshire. L. J., V. 103. In extenso.

June 3. Order of the Commons, upon the information of Mr. Nathan Wright and Mr. Jacob Fawtree, respecting the payment of certain bills of exchange from Holland to Mr. Adrian May. C. J., II. 602. In extenso.

June 3. Petition of George Payler, late paymaster of the forces in garrison at Berwick, and of the works and fortifications there. C. J., II. 602. (Illegible from damp.)

June 3. Letter from Sir Thomas Stanley of Bickerstaffe to John Holcrofte at Mr. Heywood's house near Westminster. Lord Strange is this day gone to York, Mr. Gerrard is come home, and is raising a troop of horse out of Lancashire and Cheshire to go to York; would be glad to hear of the health of his friends. See L. J., V. 121.

June 4. Petition of Colonel John Butler; thanks the House with the utmost humility for continuing his commitment at the Lord Mayor's; has no present means but what the House allows, and nothing in the future but what his own endeavours can procure; prays for liberty and that the House would grant him such means as would bear his charges out of the kingdom, he giving security to depart and never to set foot in Ireland during the rebellion there. L. J., V. 103.

June 4. Ordinance for securing the sum of one hundred thousand pounds agreed to be lent to the Parliament by several companies, and citizens of the city of London, for the use of the kingdom. L. J., V. 105. In extenso.

June 4. Two copies of the order for the deputy lieutenants to attend the musterings. L. J., V. 106. In extenso.

June 4. Three printed copies of preceding.

June 4. Depositions of John Loftus (May 31 and June 4) that he had several times waited upon Sir Philip Mainwaring, pursuant to their Lordships' order, with a reconveyance of the trusts conveyed to him by Lord Loftus, but Sir Philip had constantly made excuses of delay to avoid executing the same. L. J., V. 106.

June 4. Order to the Earl of Warwick and Lord Brook to stay, and search, all ships suspected of going to Ireland to relieve the rebels. L. J., V. 106. In extenso.

June 4. Petition of Mary Bagshaw, Margaret Wright, and Henry Bagshaw: pray for relief against their brother Thomas Bagshaw, who has not given them security for the payment of their portions, or for their present maintenance, pursuant to their Lordships' order of June last. L. J., V. 102.

Annexed:—

1. Motion to be made in the cause.
2. Abstract of the petition, &c.

June 4. List of Lords Committees added to the Commissioners for the Scotch affairs. See L. J., V. 103.

June 5. Letter from the nine Lords at York to the Speaker of the House of Lords, excusing their non-attendance. L. J., V. 115. In extenso.

June 6. Petition of the gentry, ministers, freeholders, and other inhabitants of the county of York, to the King's most excellent Majesty. One sheet of signatures. L. J., V. 109. In extenso.

June 6. Copy of petition of the gentry, ministers, freeholders, and other inhabitants of the county of York, assembled there at his Majesty's command, the third of June 1642, to both Houses of Parliament, respecting His Majesty's non-acceptance of a petition offered by them, &c. L. J., V. 110. In extenso.

June 6. Draft resolution of both Houses upon the preceding petitions. L. J., V. 111. In extenso.

June 6. Draft declaration of both Houses in answer to the King's proclamation forbidding the militia to assemble in obedience to the ordinance of Parliament. (Much amended.) L. J., V. 112. In extenso.

June 6. Petition of the greatest part of the parishioners of Hemel Hempstead, to H. C.; that Mr. Philip Goodwin may be appointed lecturer to preach on Sunday afternoon and Thursday morning (market day) without hindrance from the vicar, John Taylor. C. J., II. 608.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of John Ashton of Hemel Hempstead, ironmonger, to H. C., for relief against several sentences of the High Commission Court, by which he has been fined and imprisoned at the suit of Mr. Taylor, the vicar, for playing at "Stoole" ball with the curate and others on a holiday, &c. Taylor having been proved to be a man of a scandalous life. (Undated.)

June 6. Proclamation writ to summon George Lord Digby, accused of high treason, to appear; directed to the mayor, &c. of the city of Exeter, with certificate of publication attached. L. J., V. 37. In extenso. Returned this day.

June 7. Letter from the Portuguese Ambassador to the House of Lords on his departure from England. (Latin.) L. J., V. 114. In extenso.

June 7. Draft order of the Commons for repayment of the loan advanced by the gentlemen of Buckinghamshire. C. J., II. 611. In extenso.

June 7. Petition of Sir William Willmer, high sheriff of the county of Northampton; upon complaint to the Commons that petitioner had distributed some petitions of the House of Lords to the King, with the King's answer thereto, and that he had spoken certain words respecting the militia, he was apprehended, and has attended on bail, de die in diem, for almost three months; prays leave to go down into the country, the rather that he may expedite the sending up the contribution money delayed by his absence.

June 8. Message to the Commons in commendation of Lord Willoughby's conduct in raising the trained bands in Lincolnshire. L. J., V. 117. In extenso.

June 8. Draft of preceding.

June 8. Letter from the Earl of Warwick to his brother the Earl of Holland concerning the state of the militia in Essex. Dated 7th, entered 8th June. L. J., V. 117. In extenso.

Encloses:—

1. Petition of the Essex militia and volunteers to the Earl of Warwick, tendering their persons and estates for the support of Parliament. L. J., V. 118. In extenso.

June 8. Printed copy of petition of gentry, ministers, freeholders and other substantial inhabitants of the county of York; deplore the sufferings of their county on account of the late and present troubles, and pray the Parliament to give such assurances against tumult to His Majesty, that he may be allured to return to his great Council, and that Parliament would give such consideration to His Majesty's message of the 20th of January, as may give hopes of an effectual concurrence, and save petitioners from being distracted by contrary commands. "Imprinted at York and reprinted at London for Richard Lownes, June 7, 1642." Lownes is ordered to appear before the House for re-printing this petition. L. J., V. 118.

June 8. Declaration of the Lords and Commons in commendation of the Essex petition. L. J., V. 119. In extenso.

June 8. Copy of preceding.

June 8. Draft resolution concerning the letter of the nine Lords who had withdrawn themselves to York. L. J., V. 119. In extenso.

June 8. Draft order for payment of 10,000*l.* to Mr. Loftus for Ireland. L. J., V. 119. In extenso.

June 8. Petition of Lady Elizabeth Sidley, to H. C.: on pretence of seeing pearls and hangings for sale at Madame Nurst's house, petitioner was drawn to a solitary house not inhabited, belonging, as she has since heard, to John Griffith the younger, a member of the House of Commons, where she was wickedly and violently assaulted by him to the endangering of her life and honour, but providentially escaped, whilst he, conscious of his foul attempt, has fled; prays liberty to prosecute him, and that order may be given to stay his departure from the country. C. J., II. 613.

June 8. Examination of Michael Shaw of Wapping, master of the "Lydia" of London, and Nicholas Cook of Rood Lane, respecting words spoken by Wm. Odoron, an Irishman, master of the "John and James" of Dover, who, in the tavern of Madam Susanna at Rochelle, "when he had drunk too much, but was not drunk," said that there were no rebels in Ireland so great as the Parliament in England, and when rebuked came to blows with Shaw.

June 8. Examination of William Odoron, who denies that he said anything except that he was for the King, but confesses that he and Shaw came to blows.

June 9. Draft ordinance for bringing in plate, money, and horses for the service of Parliament. L. J., V. 121. In extenso.

June 9. Petition of divers of the inhabitants of Shepton Mallet, to the Commons. The parish is exceedingly populous, consisting of 2,000 communicants, but Mr. Cooth the parson does not preach in the afternoon on Sabbath days, and none preach for him. Petitioners pray that Mr. Robert Balsome, a pious and orthodox minister, for whom they are content to make a competent allowance out of their own purse, may be settled as their lecturer. C. J., II. 617.

June 9. Letter from [] to Samuel Vassall in London: has had occasion to go twice to Dunkirk in the last five weeks, has observed many youths and maidens brought over from England by every packet, the youths to St. Thomas' to the Jesuits, the maids to divers cloisters; Sir Richard Weston and others who come over to Dunkirk vilify Parliament, terming the members roundheads, and hoping they will all soon be hanged; a frigate laden with powder for Limerick is lying at Dunkirk, but she is so watched by the Holland fleet of twenty-four sail, that her design of going to Ireland is for the present defeated.

[June 9.] Notes respecting certain votes this day.

June 10. Petition of Sir Philip Mainwaring; is ready to execute deeds of reconveyance to Lord Loftus of Ely pursuant to their Lordships' order, but expresses his exceptions to those tendered to him for signature as not giving him security from future actions, and prays that the deeds may be referred to such persons as their Lordships shall think fit for perfecting the same. L. J., V. 123.

June 10. Petition of Mr. Justice Heath: has received His Majesty's commands to attend him at York, hopes His Majesty will dismiss him in a few days, when he will with all speed wait on their Lordships. L. J., V. 124. In extenso.

June 11. Draft resolution of Lords and Commons that the departure of the nine Lords to York is an affront and contempt of both Houses of Parliament. L. J., V. 126. In extenso.

June 11. Another draft.

June 11. Order for stopping and staying of all arms, ammunition, powder, light horses, or horses for service in the wars, and great saddles, that are or shall be carried towards the north parts of England without the direction of one, or both Houses of Parliament. L. J., V. 126.

June 11. Copy of preceding.

June 11. Draft order of the Commons for departure of ships and pinnaces to guard the coasts of Ireland. C. J., II. 619. In extenso.

June 15. Petition of Samuel Thomas, Esq., and other undertakers in the fen lands north-east of the river of Witham, in Lincolnshire; pray their Lordships to make a further order for securing petitioners in their possessions. See L. J., V. 79.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)
2. Draft of an order to the sheriff, &c., with the power of the county and failing that by force of arms with the assistance of friends and others, to secure to the owners quiet enjoyment of their possessions in the fens.

3. Affidavit of Michael Broughton of Boston and Peter Taylor of Sibsey respecting the destruction of houses, drains, and crops upon the drained lands within the undertaking of the late Sir Anthony Thomas in Lincolnshire by a riotous multitude under the captaincy of John Hall.

June 15. Petition of his Majesty's late Commissioners for causes ecclesiastical; now that the Commission under which they acted has been declared void by Act of this present Parliament, the Commissioners are liable to be vexed with suits for their judicial proceedings; they pray that as they acted without fee or benefit to themselves, where no bribery or misdemeanour (other than the illegality of the Commission) can be proved against them, they may be protected from all actions or suits for their proceedings. Signed by Sir Nathaniel Brent.

June 16. Petition of James Halsall, servant to Thomas Worseley, clerk of the papers of Wood Street Compter; petitioner's master is by his place bound to read all proclamations commanded by the Lord Mayor of London to be read, and petitioner, in his master's absence (who was not at that time in town), was commanded by the Lord Mayor to read the late proclamation concerning the militia, and did so read it, and the common crier proclaimed the same without a thought of giving offence to Parliament; for this petitioner was on the 10th instant committed to the Gatehouse, and there now remains to his great charge and almost ruin; prays that as he was only obeying the Lord Mayor's command, in his master's absence, in ignorance of any inconvenience that might ensue, or distaste to their Lordships, they would accept of his humble submission and discharge him from prison. L. J., V. 139.

June 16. Instructions concerning the propositions for raising of plate, money, and horses. L. J., V. 140. In extenso.

June 18. Order for the Earl of Antrim to be committed to the Castle of Carrickfergus. L. J., V. 146.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of preceding.

June 18. Letter from Lord Grey de Ruthin and Sir Arthur Haslerig to the Speaker of the House of Commons, respecting their proceedings at Leicester in raising the trained bands, and Mr. Leicester's in publishing a Commission of Array from the King. Dated 16th. L. J., V. 147. In extenso.

Enclosing:—

1. Copy of warrant from the Commissioners of Array to the high sheriff of Leicestershire to call out the trained bands. L. J., V. 148. In extenso.

2. Copy of the Sheriff's warrant to the petty constables to put the commission of array in execution. L. J., V. 148. In extenso.

June 18. Draft declaration of the Parliament to the sheriff of Essex not to publish the King's proclamation against the militia. L. J., V. 149. In extenso.

June 18. Report from the Committee appointed to consider of Commissions of Array, declaring after a long examination of Statutes on the subject that the Commission of Array for the county of Leicester "is not warranted by any Act of Parliament, is contrary to the law and customs of the realm, destructive to the liberty and property of the subject, contrary to the petition of right and the Statute made this present Parliament." (26 pp.) L. J., V. 150. Rushworth, Vol. I., Part III., p. 661. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the Statute of 5 Hen. 4., whereby the Commission of Array is supposed to be warranted.

June 18. Resolution that the Commission of Array for Leicestershire is illegal. L. J., V. 150. In extenso.

June 18. Order requiring the Lord Mayor not to publish the King's letter for staying the bringing in of money. L. J., V. 150. In extenso.

June 18. Order of the Commons for the Chamberlain of London to pay 10,000*l.* to the treasurer of the Irish Adventure. C. J., II. 631. In extenso.

June 18. Petition of Thomas Carne, Lieutenant-Colonel to Sir John Merriok, to H. C. Petitioner was employed upon the late expedition in the North parts. Prays that he may receive the arrears of pay due unto him. C. J., II. 632.

June 18. Petition of Edmund Winstanley and Dorothy his wife: in July last their petition against Wm. Bullock was referred to the Lord Keeper, and after various delays the cause is now set down to be heard before him on the 27th of this instant June. Petitioners pray for an order directing the cause to be heard by such judge or judges, as shall sit in Chancery on that day.

June 18. Petition of Morgan, Bishop of Llandaff. Petitioner's charge and place of residence are distant above 130 miles; he has been absent a long time and cannot go thither, whilst he is bound to appear before their Lordships within three days after notice. Prays that this time may be extended.

June 18. "A computation and list of the equipage, carriages, and horses necessary to a marching train of the following ten pieces of ordnance, which we humbly desire may be supplied out of the King's store." Year uncertain.

[June 18.] Statement of the Lord Mayor of London respecting the King's letter to him and the aldermen and sheriffs, concerning the loans of money for the relief of Ireland. See L. J., V. 145.; C. J., II. 630.

June 20. Affidavit of John Venn, captain of the trained bands of Christ Church parish in the ward of Farringdon Within, that Exuperius Turner and others, though summoned to do His Majesty and the Parliament service, have neglected to attend without showing cause for their absence. See L. J., V. 158.

June 21. List of officers of all grades chosen by the adventurers for Ireland, to serve under Philip Lord Wharton as Colonel General, with the alterations since the return of the list, names of other officers listed, and of the Reformed officers, and also a calculation of the charge per diem for horse and foot. See L. J., V. 153; C. J., II. 630. (14 pp.)

June 21. Draft letter from the Speaker of the House of Lords to the Mayor of Exeter, commending his conduct with regard to the militia. L. J., V. 154. In extenso.

June 22. Draft order for disposing of the arms, &c. brought from Hull. L. J., V. 155. In extenso.

1. Paper of amendments.

June 22. Petition of the Lord Mackquaire, Hugh MacMahowne, and Lieutenant Colonel Reade, now close prisoners in the Tower of London. Pray that they may be supplied with clothes and linen, and have necessary diet and attendance, as they are in extreme want and like to perish without relief from their Lordships. L. J., V. 155.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Owen O'Connally to Hugh MacMahowne. I wish you would have taken the advice I gave you at Lord Enniskillen's lodging last Friday, seeing the matter has been partly brought to light by me from no disaffection to you, or to the natives of this land, but out of conscience, and loyalty, and pity to the innocent who would have been out off. I now offer my best assistance for your preservation and life, not remembering the danger I was in when I last left you. I desire to speak with you before I go into England, which will be speedily. Do not slight this advice, for I perceive that favour will be shown you by the Lords Justices at my suit. (Undated.)

2. Petition of Lient.-Col. Reade to the Earl of Leicester, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, &c.; though petitioner was a prisoner in the Castle of Dublin, he was not a close prisoner like those with whom he has come along; if the Earl's pleasure is that he should be committed he desires that he may speak with him first. (Undated.)

June 22. Copy of Lord Willoughby's letter to the Speaker of the House of Lords about the Lincolnshire militia. Dated June 19th. L. J., V. 155. In extenso.

Encloses:—

1. Copy of declaration of the county. L. J., V. 155. In extenso.

June 22. Petition of George Benyon, a prisoner under their Lordships' order: understands that he is to be removed to Colchester, but on account of his wife's extreme sickness, and his necessary occasions to dispose of his estate, petitioner prays, that if what he has already suffered is not sufficient to expiate his offence, his removal from London may at least be dispensed with for a time, and that before judgment he may be further heard. See L. J., V. 155.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same that the evidence of auditor Phelps may be received, and petitioner further heard before judgment be given in the cause between him and Lord St. John. (Undated.)

2. Certificate of Thomas Winton, Doctor of Physic, of the extreme illness of Benyon's wife. 21 June.

June 22. Warrant from Philip Lord Wharton, Speaker of the House of Lords pro tempore, to all mayors, sheriffs, &c., to furnish the bearer with post-horses and a guide to York or elsewhere.

June 23. Petition of Oliver Cloberry, George Fletcher, and Henry Taverner to the Lords Commissioners for the affairs of the Kingdom of Scotland. Petitioners formerly exhibited a petition to the House of Commons complaining that the ship "Martha," of London, laden with tobacco from St. Christopher's, put into the river Clyde for relief, a little before the troubles began between England and Scotland, and was there with her lading seized and sold by the Scots, being worth upwards of 2,000*l.* Petitioners were by order of the House of Commons referred to their Lordships for redress, but have had none, though it is now almost three years since the seizure. Petitioners pray that they may have relief out of the money payable by Parliament to the Scottish nation. L. J., V. 156.

June 23. Deposition of Henry Willis respecting words spoken against the Parliament by John Escott of Launceston. L. J., V. 156. In extenso.

June 23. Petition of Sir Robert Heath, one of the justices of the Court of King's Bench, for further time to answer the petition of Lord Balmerino respecting the office of prothonotary of the court. See L. J., V. 156.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Sir Robert Heath, that he is by the King's special command attending His Majesty at York, who will not give him leave to come to London, saying he might have need of his counsel. 17 June.

2. Copy of a petition of Sir Robert Heath. Lord Balmerino is now properly barred in the matter by the Statute of Limitations, and might long ago if he had had just cause have proceeded at common law against petitioner, who could have produced witnesses, since dead, to have proved his case. It has never been the custom of the House to interfere in any matter in which the parties could obtain relief in law, when there has been no failure of justice. Petitioner is now by the King's special command, attending on His Majesty at York, and therefore unable to produce the proofs of his case which are in London. Prays the acceptance of this answer, and that the complainant may be left to his remedy in law or equity.

June 23. Affidavit of Lewis Carre, that he served Sir Robert Heath at York, with a copy of Lord Balmerino's petition and their Lordships' order in the cause.

June 23. Copy of the King's order to the Lord Mayor, &c., of London, to publish His Majesty's proclamations. (Latin.)

June 24. Certificate of Mr. Justice Foster in the cause between Lord Viscount Loftus and Sir Philip Mainwaring, that Sir Philip is ready to execute the deeds of reconveyance of the trust estates, if he be saved harmless against the heirs of Sir Robert Loftus. L. J., V. 157.

June 24. Petition of Gabriel Thorp, a poor distressed servant, now prisoner in the Gatehouse by their Lordships' order. Stands committed upon misinformation given by Henry Fisher. Petitioner never laid any claim to the messuages and lands in dispute between Fisher and the Dean and Chapter of Christchurch, Oxford; he has never used any words disrespectful towards Parliament; has already laid thirty-six days in prison, and prays their Lordships to accept bail, until they have leisure to hear the case. L. J., V. 157.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Thorp in support of preceding.

2. Order to one of the clerks of the Upper House to send for Thorp, and take his own bond for his appearance when summoned.

June 24. Petition of the captains, officers, and soldiers of the trained bands, and volunteers of the county of Bucks, assembled at Aylesbury, June the 17th, praying for the appointment of a Lord Lieutenant in whom they can confide. L. J., V. 159. In extenso.

June 24. Draft order for the issuing out of ordnance for Ireland. L. J., V. 159. In extenso.

June 24. A list of such ordnance, ammunition, arms, and necessities, as are requisite for the train of artillery to be sent into Ireland. L. J., V. 159. In extenso.

June 24. Letter from Mr. Alexander Rigby, at Manchester, to the Speaker of the House of Commons. On the 20th about 5,000 persons met on Preston Moor at the summons of the high sheriff, Sir John Girlington, who was accompanied by Lord Strange and others, and who read to the people the Commission of Array, and the King's two last declarations, &c., but refused to read the declarations of Parliament, or to deliver up the Commission of Array; before the reading was ended the multitude, except about 700, went away; the writer and Mr. Shuttleworth, another deputy lieutenant, called upon the sheriff to forbear the execution of the Commission of Array, but the sheriff and others cried out, "All that are for the King follow us," and followed by about 400 persons rode up and down the moor crying out for the King, when the writer and Mr. Shuttleworth explained the instructions of Parliament to those that remained. They have heard that some powder was secretly removed from Preston, but the quantity was not large enough to justify them in seizing it by force. They think that their conduct at Preston Moor tended to the peace of the kingdom, but considering the number and position of those opposed to them, they pray for further support from Parliament. This letter was read in the House on the 27th. L. J., V. 166.

June 24. Letter from Sir William Brereton, at Chester, to the Speaker of the House of Commons: since his coming into these parts he has distributed the deputations, and instructions to the several deputy lieutenants, and appointed them to meet on Monday next; meantime hears that the King is expected shortly; that he has issued a Commission of Array to Lord Strange and others, which they will attempt to put in execution at the same time as the ordinance for the militia; desires more ample instructions, as any attempt to apprehend persons persisting after warning in executing the Commission of Array, cannot be effected without violence, which once begun may not be easily composed, and cannot easily be made good whilst the powder is in the hands of the other side; he will use his best endeavours for Parliament. This letter was read in the House on the 27th of June. L. J., V. 167.

June 24. Letter from the Lords Justices and Council in Ireland to the Speaker of the House of Lords, in answer to their Lordships' order that Lord Cromwell, and others, should appear before the Committee for Petitions on the 1st of July, to answer the petition of Henry Stewart and James Gray, complaining of a sentence given in the Court of Castle Chamber in Ireland. They state that the persons complained of are almost all Privy Counsellors, and were only doing their duty (for there is no imputation of corruption); that the sentence was just and necessary at the time it was made; and that to recognise such a complaint would cause great inconvenience in Ireland, and would infringe the privileges of the Irish Parliament. L. J., V. 227. This letter is almost identical with one of the 30th of July 1641. See Calendar of that date.

June 24. Copy of preceding.

June 25. Petition of Benjamin Newland; the ordnance in dispute between petitioner and Joseph Hawes was mortgaged to petitioner long before Hawes made claim to it, while his charge that petitioner is contriving with the Spanish Ambassador to send the ordnance beyond seas is untrue; petitioner would have obtained a prohibition from the Court of Common Pleas preventing the Court of Admiralty, an improper place for this trial, from proceeding in the matter, had it not been for their Lordships' order, and he now prays that he and Hawes may be left to try the question at Common law. L. J., V. 160.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of Court of Common Pleas in the cause.

June 25. Motion of the King's counsel that one Walker, a prisoner in the Tower by order of the House, may be removed to Newgate, and that counsel may proceed against him by indictment there, as the author and publisher of a seditious libel against the peace. L. J., V. 160.

June 25. Petition of Richard Harding, gent., servant to the Earl of Nottingham; has been violently arrested by William Dormer one of the Marshal's officers and kept in custody though he produced his protection, and though Mr. Browne, the clerk of the Parliaments, told Dormer that he had received a letter from the Earl of Nottingham certifying that petitioner was his servant, and employed on his affairs; prays for release on the ground of privilege. L. J., V. 163.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of William Tull, Francis Adderley, and John Barker; Richard Harding, when arrested for debt, pretended to have a protection from the Earl of Nottingham, but could not produce it; at the time of the arrest he attempted to rescue himself and so seriously wounded petitioner Tull in the hand, that he cannot work at his craft; pray that Harding may be compelled to relinquish his protection that petitioners may proceed against him at law.

2. Petition of same to Robert Earl of Essex, praying him to speed the reading of their petition before the House.

Star Chamber in Ireland; defendant knew not where the Star Chamber of either kingdom stood, or the oath urged, or Mr. Henry Stewart, nor had any thought of intermeddling in anything of that nature, till about six o'clock overnight he received a peremptory command from the Lord Lieutenant to speak at nine o'clock the next morning in the cause, with a printed copy of the oath refused by Stewart; this command and other like expressions auguring the Lord Lieutenant's disaffection towards the defendant restrained him from daring to absent himself when so commanded; he conceives the Bishops were only to speak on the lawfulness of a promissory oath, and of that then urged, and not to censure, and this was all that he did.

June 25. Copy of warrant from the King to Mr. Henry Hastings, thanking him for his activity in the Commission of Array, declaring the opposition of the Earl of Stamford thereto to be treason, and authorising the Commissioners of Array to apprehend the Earl, and all arms, &c. intended for the supply of his followers.

June 25. Petition of James Wade and John Wentworth, Esquires: John Harwood and others make a practice of enticing young men of fortune, when they first come to town, selling them goods at exorbitant rates, inducing them to convey their lands upon secret trusts upon promise of easy redemption, and in other ways enrich themselves in an iniquitous manner, to the ruin of petitioners, and the great danger of all inexperienced young men; pray for relief and for an example to be made of these evildoers.

[June 25.] Letter from Ralph Ashton, John Moore, and Alexander Rigby, at Manchester, to the Speaker of the House of Commons: the high sheriff of Lancashire having surprised the powder at Preston, they took immediate measures for securing that at Manchester, and succeeded in so doing, thereupon Lord Strange, who on Monday had seized a great quantity of powder at Liverpool, repaired to Bury with such a number of armed followers, that all the townsmen of Manchester put themselves in a posture of defence under the writers, and other deputy lieutenants, when, in order to prevent bloodshed, though the stronger party, they proposed some terms for surrender of the powder, which, however, came to nothing. Yesterday Lord Strange dismissed most of his followers, so the writers did the same; this morning they hear of new proclamations sent from York against their proceedings, and rumours that the King is coming with large forces. They have discovered a foul design from an intercepted letter, sent from Sir Edward Fitton, of Gawsworth, in Cheshire, to Sir Thomas Aston, which they have inclosed. Sir Edward came yesterday, and very uncivilly demanded the letter, and he and others threaten them for seizing it, while the high sheriff is always ready to oppose them, and an insurrection of malignant persons is daily to be expected, to prevent which they desire speedy assistance. This letter was read in the House on the 27th of June. L. J., V. 166.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Sir Edward Fitton, at Gawsworth, to Sir Thomas Aston; thanks him for his favour at York, and for his bringing him to kiss the hand of His Majesty, for whom he is ready to spend his life and fortune; he and his fellow commissioners have met about the gathering of the subsidies, and have appointed collectors; if there be any doubt about the money going the true way, he will do his utmost to stop it for His Majesty, if His Majesty will send him a commission for that purpose. Hears that Sir William Brereton will be at Chester on Saturday to settle the militia for the Parliament; he is so near his decoy that he may send out his ducks every way to fetch in others; feels sure that the major part of the hundred of Macclesfield will stand right; desires a brief answer by bearer. This letter was also read in the House on the 27th of June. L. J., V. 166.

June 27. Copy of the votes of both Houses concerning the canons made by the synod. These votes were made on the 12th June 1641 (L. J., IV. 273. In extenso), but were ordered to be printed and published this day. L. J., V. 163.

June 27. Petition of Edmond Harrington and Elizabeth his wife, Giles Johnson and Grace his wife, and Thomas Marshall and Anne his wife: petitioners' suit against Robert Taylcot was referred to Lord Stamford and others; Taylcot is dead, and his son Thomas, who now holds the property in question, refuses to appear before the referees on the ground that he has not been made a party; pray that the order of reference may be revived against Thomas Taylcot. L. J., V. 164.

June 27. Draft order for Sir John Girlington, Sir George Middleton, and Sir Edward Fitton to be sent for as delinquents. L. J., V. 166. In extenso.

June 27. Resolutions respecting the surrender of Galway to the Earl of Clanrickard and St. Alban's. L. J., V. 166. In extenso.

June 27. Resolutions of the Commons that, when the town of Galway was in open rebellion, as appears by letters of the Lords Justices, by a declaration from Captain Willoughby, Governor of the fort, and by letters of the Earl of St. Alban's to the Lords Justices, the Earl of St. Alban's entered into treaty with the town, when the town in the name of the corporation and gentry presented seven propositions, the effect of which was, that they should have freedom of religion, be pardoned for all that was past, and be protected for the time to come in their lives, liberties, goods, and chattels, and so for all that should submit thereafter; that the Earl of St. Alban's granted a protection accordingly until His Majesty's pleasure should be declared; that the House of Commons conceives this protection to be destructive of the Protestant religion, dishonourable to the Crown of England, and subversive of the Act for the speedy and effectual reducing the rebels of Ireland. These resolutions, with others on the same subject, were agreed to by the Lords this day. L. J., V. 167. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from the Lords Justices of Ireland at Dublin Castle to the Lord Lieutenant. After the defection of Galway the rebels laid siege to the King's fort there, whilst the Earl of St. Alban's gave the place all the assistance he could; by letters of the 19th of April we informed him that we doubted not soon to send forces enough to make the rebels repent their disloyalty, and finding by his letters of the 25th of April last that the rebels were treating for submission, we warned him not to engage himself by promising anything, but that they should be left in a condition to be dealt with according to His Majesty's justice; but these letters were burnt by the messenger, who was intercepted by the rebels, and in any case they could not have reached the Earl in time to prevent the submission, for by letter of the 18th of May the Earl informed us that the Mayor of Galway made his public submission and delivered up the keys, that the young men laid down their arms, and that upon promise of their future loyalty, he then received them into His Majesty's protection until His Majesty's pleasure were further declared. The particulars of these proceedings will be found in the enclosed papers. We conceive the protection to be only till the King's pleasure be declared in Ireland or elsewhere. We wish that the Earl had provided that all arms and ammunition should have been put into the fort, and not left in the hands of the rebels; that a garrison should have been placed in the town, and the hostages secured in the fort. We say this not to blame the Earl, but to acquit ourselves of any negligence, for we consider that the protection should only have been granted until our pleasure were known; but as the Earl has hitherto done good service against the rebels, and was, as it may seem from his letters, necessitated to grant those terms, we have not repudiated them, though we consider them destructive of the authority and honour of the Crown; especially in the case of Galway, a harbour which lies open to Spain and France, and is the principal conduit of good or evil to the whole province of Connaught, and many other counties adjoining, and which might now be secured by placing a number of English there instead of the rebels. 9 June 1642.
2. Copy of the "Propositions made by the Right Hon. Ullick, of Clanrickard and St. Alban's, Lieutenant Governor for the county and the town of Galway, and Captain Willoughby, and consented unto by the town of Galway." 6 May 1642.
3. Copy of the submission of Galway. 6 May 1642.
4. Copy of the seven propositions made by the town of Galway, and of the protection granted to the inhabitants. 11 May 1642.
5. Copy of "Captain Willoughby's declaration of the carriage of the town of Galway from the 23rd of Feb. 1641-2." About that time a ship from St. Malo came with powder and arms, when the townsmen boarded her, and though called back by a great shot from the fort, brought the goods on shore uncustomed. The next day came a ship from Rochelle, under Captain Clark, when the same thing happened, and when Captain Willoughby would have interfered the town gates were shut, and all egress or regress refused to the English, some of whom were kept prisoners in the town, and allowed to suffer the extremity of want. Meantime, intending revolt, the townsmen got up a declaration setting forth the loyalty of the town which by fraud or force they induced the English to sign, and this they intended to forward to the state, in order to prevent any forces or supplies being sent to the English. On the 19th of March they surprised Clark's ship, murdering two of the crew, after which they disarmed all the English and Protestants in the town, and suffered so many rogues of "Er Co-naght" to be about, that the English were robbed and stripped at their very gates without interference; they kept much of the provision of the fort in the town, and yet made pretence of giving it up. On the 31st of March they sent for the rebels of the country under Sir Valentine Blake, and besieged the fort and used the town bell, usually rung when the gates were opened, to warn the rebels of any sally from the fort. On the 20th of April came a ship from France with powder and arms, which exchanged shots with an English pinnace which came two days after, upon which the townsmen also fired and raised a bulwark between the fort and the sea, from which they afterwards fired upon a boat coming from Captain Ashley's ship. 11 May 1642.

6. Copy of Captain Anthony Willoughby's letter to the Lords Justices. After thanking them for the timely assistance sent by Captain Ashley, he gives some account of the straits he and his small garrison had passed through, of the great support afforded him by the Earl of Clanrickard, and of his reasons for thinking the submission of the townsmen was not to be trusted; earnestly desires that further assistance may be sent, for certainly nothing will confirm the loyalty of the men of Galway but a good English army. 12 May 1642.

7. Copy of the Earl of Clanrickard's order to Nicholas More Linch, Alderman of Galway, to search for and take possession of all powder in the town. 14 May 1642.

8. Copy of letter from the Earl of Clanrickard and St. Alban's to the Lords [Justices], reporting the surrender of the town of Galway, the state of feeling there, and the names of those who had done loyal service. 18 May 1642.

June 27. Message from the Commons, with resolutions respecting Sir Edward Fitton, &c. C. J., II. 642. In extenso.

June 27. Petition of parishioners of St. Mary Magdalen, Canterbury. Their parson, John Marston, a man of scandalous life, is known to persuade people to have an ill opinion of Parliament, and has caused many persons to forsake the church; pray that he may be removed, and an honest and sufficient man put in his place.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from William Bridge and others at Canterbury to Mr. Thomas Denn, at his chamber in Tanfield Court, in the Inner Temple. Besides all the former malignant practices of John Marston, their parson, he on last Lord's day in the afternoon read to all the congregation in the church His Majesty's answer to the declaration of the Lords and Commons; and when he had finished he said, I know some will question me what authority I had to publish this book, but I shall answer it well enough. Then he said, Here are a roll of books sent down to be read by the constable, which will take five or six hours to read (whereas when read they only took one hour and a half), but those who will not stay to hear them may depart. Whereupon some departed. When he had thus put the people off from hearing the books sent from the Parliament read, he exhorted them to take their Bibles and see if they could find any warrant for taking up arms against the King. P.S.—There are such divisions grown up between us and those that take his part, that we can hardly look one upon another in charity. 28 June 1642.

June 28. Petition of Herbert Finch, common crier and serjeant-at-arms in the city of London. Was committed to the Gatehouse for proclaiming a proclamation concerning the militia. A former petition of petitioner for release was refused because the Lord Mayor, by whose order petitioner published the proclamation, had not been examined. This has now been done, and petitioner expressing sorrow for his offence prays for discharge. L. J., V. 168.

June 28. Petition of James Halsall, servant to Thomas Worseley, clerk of the papers in Wood Street Compter, committed to the Gatehouse for reading the proclamation concerning the militia. Similar to preceding. L. J., V. 168.

June 28. Petition of Edward Watkins and Thomas Aleway, Esqs. Petitioners are searchers of the port of London, with the members and creeks thereto belonging. Gravesend has been a member of the port of London for 300 years. About nine years ago Richard Ward and others procured a subsequent grant of the place at Gravesend, and have ever since molested petitioners by unjust suits and proceedings. Pray that the case may be heard at the bar, or referred to the judges of the King's Bench. L. J., V. 168.

June 28. Copy of a warrant from the King to Captain Phineas Pett, now at Chatham, or to any of the officers of the navy there, informing them that he has appointed Sir John Pennington to be Lord High Admiral of the Fleet in the room of the Earl of Northumberland, and directing them to send the standard and all necessaries for the fleet, as Sir John shall direct. See L. J., V. 179.

June 29. Copy of the King's warrant to Lord Mohun not to depart out of the county of Cornwall, but to keep himself ready to attend His Majesty's command. See L. J., V. 271.

June 30. Petition of John Lake and others. Having suffered imprisonment and extortion at the hands of various persons, petitioners brought actions against them, but these suits were stayed by an order of the House of 17th of March 1640-1 as detrimental to the Prince His Highness. This is not, in fact, the case, and petitioners pray that their suits may be referred to the Prince's attorney, that he may decide the point, that so they may have leave to proceed in law. L. J., V. 168.

June 30. Petition of the mayor and aldermen of the town of Colchester. A petition of Freshfield to the House was dismissed, when it was found that the matters in dispute were being tried in Chancery, and were ready for hearing there, but on the 31st of May last, in consequence of the absence of the Lord Keeper, the whole matter was referred to Mr. Justice Reeve, but as the petitioners were no parties to the suit in Chancery, and could not therefore under the order of reference appear before Mr. Justice Reeve, an order was made by consent that Freshfield should exhibit his bill de novo in Chancery, and make the petitioners parties, that they should at once answer and the cause be forthwith heard before Mr. Justice Reeve, whose decision should be final. Freshfield now refuses to abide by this order, and on the 16th instant presented a petition stating that Mr. Justice Reeve could not proceed, as he had no power to examine witnesses on oath. On this an order was made that the witnesses should be sworn in the House, and Mr. Justice Reeve be certified thereof, but he says that he cannot examine on such an oath except their Lordships be present, in regard all witnesses, as he alleges, were always examined before their Lordships, the judges being present. Pray for further directions, and for a determination of the matter which concerns all the magistrates of the corporation.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order dismissing the cause to Chancery. 30 April 1642.

2. Copy of order referring the cause to Mr. Justice Reeve. 31 May 1642.

3. Copy of order for the witnesses to be sworn in the House. 16 June 1642.

4. Copy of the order by consent.

June 30. Draft order for payment of 5,030*l.* to the garrison at Portsmouth. L. J., V. 169. In extenso.

June 30. Affidavit of John Loftus, that he repaired to the lodgings of Sir Philip Mainwaring, and there learned that Sir Philip had gone out of town the Friday before. See L. J., V. 169.

June 30. Letter from Francis Anderson, sheriff of Newcastle, to Mr. John Rushworth, at his chambers in Lincoln's Inn. The Lords of the Council of Scotland sent nine prisoners to Berwick, with a warrant for their conveyance to London. The Mayor of Berwick sent them to the High Sheriff of Northumberland, and he to the writer, who is forced to keep them to the great charge of the county, for the Sheriff of the bishopric of Durham refuses to receive them. The writer desires that the House of Commons may be informed, and order made for the Sheriff of the bishopric to receive the prisoners.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of letter from the Lords of the Council in Scotland to the Mayor of Berwick, sent with certain Irish prisoners, mentioned in preceding. 14 June 1642.

June 30. Petition of Thomas Batt, Thomas Frere, and William Leeke. One Robert Robins, by leave of the House, arrested William Jackson, who pretended to have a peer's protection, and who owed petitioners 4,000*l.*, whereupon Jackson petitioned the House to be relieved from the debt, but being left to the law petitioners laid process upon him. Jackson is now seeking to be discharged under his protection. Petitioners pray that they may be heard by counsel before his discharge is granted. Noted, Read, nothing done upon it. See L. J., V. 139.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)

[June 30.] Petition of Francis Poulton. George Benyon, lately adjudged to be imprisoned at Colchester (see L. J., V. 168), is a principal witness in the cause between petitioner and Lucy Lady Hastings. Prays that Benyon's examination may be taken before he is sent down to Colchester.

[June.] Draft order of the Commons for Sir Ambrose Browne and others to send up speedily all plate and money gathered in their several divisions. Year uncertain.

[June.] Draft message from the Commons desiring the Lords to expedite the instructions for the committee in Lincolnshire, &c. Year uncertain.

[June.] Two copies of petitions of Levant merchants for remission of customs. Year uncertain.

2. Reasons against bringing soldiers into Newcastle, &c., &c. (Three papers.) L. J., V. 170. In extenso.

July 1. Declaration and resolution of the deputy lieutenants, colonels, captains, and officers, assented unto, and with great cheerfulness approved of by the soldiers of the trained bands within the county of Southampton, at the general musters begun the 21st day of this instant June, being to the number of above 5,000 men, besides a great many volunteers who then offered to serve in person. L. J., V. 172. In extenso.

July 1. Petition of the mayor and others of the town and county of Nottingham, to H. C., praying that measures may be taken for the security of the town and magazine there. L. J., V. 173. In extenso.

July 1. Petition of inhabitants of Watford, in the county of Hertford, to H. C. L. J., V. 173. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Propositions humbly offered by the petitioners. L. J., V. 173. In extenso.

July 1. Draft order upon preceding petition. L. J., V. 174. In extenso.

July 1. Message from the Commons, with an explanation to the propositions for raising of money and plate and horse, and some additions and instructions. L. J., V. 172, 175.

July 1. Draft order calling out the militia of Nottinghamshire. L. J., V. 173. In extenso.

July 1. Three draft orders for the Common Council of London to provide a place for the arms and ammunition brought from Hull. L. J., V. 174. In extenso.

July 1. Three drafts of the ordinance of Parliament conferring the chief command of the fleet upon the Earl of Warwick, the Earl of Northumberland having been discharged by the King from being Lord High Admiral. L. J., V. 174. In extenso.

July 1. Draft order of the Commons for the payment of arrears due to Lieutenant Colonel Thomas Kirke. C. J., II. 647. In extenso.

July 2. Letter from Captain Jo. Burley to the Earl of Warwick. L. J., V. 179. In extenso.

July 3. Letter from Captain Robert Slingsby to the Earl of Warwick. Has been in hopes to receive some propositions whereby he might legally, and without breach of his allegiance, discharge himself of his ship. Has not yet heard that either His Majesty or the Parliament have declared any difference between themselves, and yet their several commands are directly opposite. Calls God to witness that his only desire is to do that which is just towards the King and the law of the land. If his Majesty will be pleased to join with the Parliament in their ordinance no man will obey his Lordship with greater alacrity than the writer, who will be ready to deliver up his ship to whomsoever His Majesty shall appoint. Would be contented, since his commission ceased with the Earl of Northumberland's, to deliver up the ship to the principal officers of the navy, whose commissions are derived from the King and are not disavowed by the Parliament; this may be readily done as Sir Henry Palmer is now here. Beseeches that those who serve in the ship, and whose conscience will not permit them to serve contrary to His Majesty's commands, may be discharged and paid at their departure, according to ancient custom, for the time they have served. Prays pardon for some roughness, which the incivility of those employed by his Lordship compelled the writer to, as he did not think fit to let every man that came on board use his own language. But there is nothing that the writer has received from his Lordship that he has not communicated to his men, particularly the last paper, directing the master and the rest of the men to turn the writer out of his ship. To show what confidence he has in this master, he has employed him to be the bearer of this letter. There is nothing he desires more than to serve his Lordship without breach of his allegiance to the King. At the end of this letter Captain Baldwin Wake adds that he has seen and perused Captain Slingsby's letter, and approves of each proposition in it. See L. J., V. 179, &c.

July 4. Order for the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench to examine Edmund Muschamp, prisoner in the Gatehouse, touching words spoken by him against the Earl of Northumberland. L. J., V. 176.

July 4. Declaration and protestation of divers of the knights, gentry, freeholders, and others of the counties of Lincoln and Lincolnshire, to Francis Lord Willoughby, Lord Lieutenant; in consequence of a malignant party endeavouring to breed jealousies between the King and his people, they are forced to express their desire and resolution to spend their lives and estates in defence of His Majesty's person, the true protestant religion, the peace of the realm, the maintenance of the rights and privileges of Parliament, the laws of the land, and the lawful liberties of the subject according to their late protestation against all those that attempt to separate His Majesty from Parliament, and to alienate his affection from his subjects. This document, which is numerous signed, is described in the Journal as a petition directed to the Lord Willoughby of Parham, and brought in by him from the county of Lincoln, when the thanks of the House were directed to be sent in a letter from the Speaker to the petitioners. L. J., V. 177.

July 4. Draft of various resolutions concerning the Earl of Warwick, &c. L. J., V. 178. In extenso.

July 4. Report of words spoken by Mr. William Elliott against the Parliament. L. J., V. 180. In extenso.

July 4. Report of scandalous words spoken by Mr. Windebank, senior, against Mr. Pym. L. J., V. 181. In extenso.

July 4. Letter from the Earl of Warwick to Mr. Pym, concerning the command of the fleet. L. J., V. 185. In extenso.

July 4. [] at Rotterdam, to Myles Corbett, Esquire. Details the preparations being made in Holland for transporting the Princes Rupert and Maurice, the Lords Danby and Digby, Sir Lewis Dives, and others, together with horses and arms, from Rotterdam to the Northern parts. This is no doubt a similar letter to that referred to the Journals of the House of Commons (see Vol II., 646), as the writer commences by stating that he has sent another letter to the same effect by a different hand. The signature is erased and the writer not named in the Journals, but referred to as July 8. Petition of Sir Thomas Cary, that his suit against the Bishop of Ardagh may be referred to four members of the House. See L. J., V. 195.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Another petition of Sir T. Cary. Was committed by the House of Lords in Ireland for contempt in bringing his suit against the Bishop without leave of that House. Prays for redress. (Undated.)
3. Copy of the order of the House of Lords in Ireland for the sergeant-at-arms to attach Sir T. Cary for his contempt. 28 July 1641.

July 8. Copy of warrant to the Gentleman Usher for the arrest of Thomas Awbrey, Chancellor of St. David's, and others.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Edward Vaughan, clerk; by an order of the 25th of August 1641 the temporalities of Dr. Manwaringe, Bishop of St. David's, were seized into the King's hands. The vicarage of Llangafelach, Glamorganshire, in the donation of the Bishop, having become vacant in November last, petitioner was presented thereunto by the Lord Keeper. Thomas Awbrey, chancellor of the diocese, having sole power of institution, utterly refused to institute petitioner, and by unlawful combination with Walter Thomas and others, admitted Isaac Griffith into the said church. Petitioner prays that he may be instituted to the vicarage, and that the parties complained of may be called upon to answer for their contempt.
2. Statement of petitioner's grievances.
3. Copy of order referred to in petition. 25 August 1641. L. J., IV. 376.
4. Affidavit of Vaughan that on the 21st of January last, he tendered a presentation to the vicarage under the great seal to Awbrey, and that he utterly refused to institute him. 9 May 1642.
5. List of persons to be sent for. 9 July 1642.

July 8. Draft order respecting the payment of the officers sent into Leicestershire. C. J., II. 660. In extenso.

July 9. Petition of Isabella Massey, widow, praying that Alderman Corney and Richard Newdigate may be ordered not to dispose of certain mortgaged lands until petitioner's suit against William Rolfe is decided. L. J., V. 195.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of William Rolfe, a distressed prisoner in the Fleet; praying that Isabella Massey may be ordered to answer his bill in Chancery. (Undated.)

July 9. Petition of Edmond Muschamp. Was committed by the House on Friday last to the Gatehouse upon an information of his having spoken against the Earl of Northumberland. Denies the accusation and prays for his discharge. L. J., V. 195.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the vicar and many inhabitants of St. Leonard's, Shoreditch, that Muschamp is a man of good repute and a constant frequenter of the church.

July 9. Petition of Mary Bagshawe and Margaret Wright. Thomas Bagshawe, petitioners' brother, was, by their Lordships' order of 16th of June 1641, directed to put in such security for the payment of their portions (according to the will of their late father) as Elize Wooderofo should approve; this he refuses to do. Pray that the order may be put in force. L. J., V. 195.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Margaret Wright that her brother Thomas has failed to perform the order. 31 May 1642.
2. Copy of order referred to. 16 June 1641. L. J., IV. 273. In extenso.
3. Certificate of Elize Wooderofo in the matter. (Undated.)
4. Petition of Margaret Wright, on behalf of herself and her sister Mary Bagshawe, to the Viscount Kimbolton, praying his Lordship to be a means that the petition, order, certificate, and affidavit remaining in the custody of Mr. Throckmorton may be read.

July 9. Draft order respecting the payment of the officers sent into Leicestershire, L. J., V. 195. In extenso.

July 9. Petition of Henry Wollaston, keeper of His Majesty's gaol of Newgate. Edward Moore and Richard Mackmiller were by order of the House committed prisoners to Newgate in November last, and discharged in April. On account of their poverty petitioner was obliged to supply them with meat and drink, and they have now left without paying one penny. Prays that the sheriffs of London and Middlesex may be ordered to allow him the costs to which he has been put in the matter. L. J., V. 195.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same, that satisfaction may be assigned to him out of the Exchequer, as formerly hath been done to his predecessors. (Undated.)

July 9. Order upon preceding. L. J., V. 195.

July 9. Petition of Paul Bennett, praying for relief, having been despoiled of all his estate by the rebels in Ireland. L. J., V. 195.

July 13. Draft order for 5,030*l.* to be paid to the garrison of Portsmouth. L. J., V. 210. In extenso.

July 13. Petition of inhabitants of Bridport, to H. C.

The town is now very populous containing 2,000 souls, but has but one parish church and one minister, petitioners pray for an order for settling Mr. Robert Tuchin, a godly and able minister, whom they have procured at their own charge, to be their lecturer. C. J., II. 670.

July 14. Order against the billeting of soldiers upon the inhabitants of Kings Lynn and Great Yarmouth. L. J., V. 210. In extenso.

July 14. Copy of preceding.

July 14. The Lord Mayor's answer to the message of the House of Lords that he should appoint a deputy for the government of the city during his absence. L. J., V. 210.

July 14. Draft order for the court of aldermen of the city of London to choose a locum tenens, the Lord Mayor being restrained of his liberty. L. J., V. 210. In extenso.

July 14. Orders respecting the presentation of the petition of both Houses to the King. L. J., V. 211. In extenso.

July 14. Petition of William Hall, sword-bearer to the Lord Mayor of the city of London. Prays for his discharge, having been committed about 20 days since for publishing the King's proclamation, which he did by command of the Lord Mayor. L. J., V. 211.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same to the like effect. (Undated.)

July 14. Petition of Richard Cholmeley, John Senior, John Farthing, and others. Pray that Sir John Brampton, and the referees to whom the petition of William Tanner was referred by their Lordships, may be ordered to certify whether upon examination it appears to them that Tanner has been wronged or oppressed by petitioners.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of William Tanner the elder; complains of the oppressions he has suffered at the hands of John Farthing and others, respecting a debt, and prays that they may be called upon to answer. 10 Dec. 1640.

2. Another petition of Tanner to the same effect. (Undated.)

3. Copy of order referring the matter to Sir John Brampton and others. 24 Dec. 1640.

4. Petition of Tanner; complains that he was arrested at the suit of John Senior when attending to make good his case before the referees. Prays that Senior and others may be sent for to answer for their contempt.

5. Affidavit of William Tanner the younger touching the arrest of his father. 5 May 1642.

6. Copy of order for the attendance of Senior and others to answer for their contempt in arresting Tanner. 3 June 1642. L. J., V. 101.

7. Further affidavit of William Tanner the younger. 7 June 1642.

July 14. Petition of William Gwatkin, to H. C. Prays that William Hill and others may be sent for to answer for their contempt in seizing his goods under colour of a pretended writ notwithstanding his protection as servant to Mr. Speaker Lenthall. C. J., II. 671.

July 14. Letter from Sir William Widdrington at Newcastle to Serjeant Major [Sibthorp]. Missed Lord Grandison at York, but will write to him to-morrow.

July 15. Petition of Dame Elizabeth Slingsby. Complains that Sir Faithful Fortescue has failed to obey their Lordships' order made in March last, and that he is about to leave for Ireland. Prays that his departure may be restrained until he shall give petitioner assurances to comply with the said order. L. J., V. 212.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Dame Elizabeth Slingsby that Sir Faithful Fortescue declines to obey the order.

July 15. Petition of Nicholas Todd, Richard Giles, and George Hayward. Petitioners were, by virtue of an order of their Lordships of the 18th of June last, attached for contempt, pretended to have been committed by them in entering certain enclosed marsh lands in the county of Norfolk. Pray that they may be released upon bail. L. J., V. 212.

spoiled by the rebels in Ireland of an estate of 500*l.* per annum, barbarously handled, and cast into prison. During his imprisonment in the city of Wexford, he was in company with certain friars, and understanding their damnable plots he upon his enlargement discovered four ships full of provisions passing from Wexford into France for return of ammunition for the rebels, thereby afterwards taken by Captain Beatly; he has also discovered and impeached twelve rebels. Is now friendless and moneyless, and prays for relief. A certificate is added to the petition, signed Theo. [Lord] Docwra and Henry Jones, as to the truth of petitioner's statements, and that he is a fit recipient for the bounty of the House. Endorsed 5*l.*

July 23. Two copies of declaration of the Commons that the city of Bristol is a distinct county of itself, and ought not to have been mentioned in the Act for raising money for the defence of the kingdom, as in the county of Somerset. C. J., II. 688. In extenso.

July 25. Order in the cause between Sir Thomas Cary and the Bishop of Ardagh. L. J., V. 238. In extenso.

July 25. Petition of Sir George Garrett and Sir George Clarke, sheriffs of the city of London. Pray that an order may be made indemnifying them for bringing the King's writs and proclamations to this House, and leaving them there and not proclaiming them. L. J., V. 238.

July 26. Order for the Judge of Assize for the county of Hereford to see who will avow the paper, intituled "A Declaration or Resolution of the county of Hereford." L. J., V. 242. In extenso.

July 26. Order for the preservation of the magazines of the counties by force, if attempted to be taken away. L. J., V. 242. In extenso.

July 26. Copy of the reply of the Lords and Commons to the King's answer to their petition. L. J., V. 242. In extenso.

July 26. Order for 20,000*l.* to be paid to Mr. Loftus for the affairs of Ireland. L. J., V. 243. In extenso.

July 26. Order for the indemnity of the volunteers of King's Lynn. L. J., V. 243. In extenso.

July 26. Order for the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland to grant a commission to the Earl of Thomond, for a troop of horse and a company of foot. L. J., V. 243. In extenso.

July 26. Order for the indemnity of persons serving the Parliament. C. J., II. 693. In extenso.

July 28. Petition of Sir John Conyers, Lieutenant of the Tower. Prays that the Lord Mayor may be ordered to pay petitioner fees for his diet, &c. L. J., V. 244. In extenso.

July 28. Copy of letter from the Lords and Commons to the Lords Justices in Ireland, to send forces for the relief of Lord Esmond, in Duncannon Fort. L. J., V. 245. In extenso.

July 28. Order for the payment of monies due to Sir John Conyers and others. L. J., V. 245. In extenso.

July 28. Order concerning the raising of forces in Suffolk. L. J., V. 245. In extenso.

July 28. Narrative of Randall Laurence, the messenger, sent to attach Sir Lewis Dyves. L. J., V. 246. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of Sir Thomas Alston, High Sheriff of Bedfordshire. In compliance with an order received from the Parliament, has made diligent search in Sir Lewis Dyves' house, and finds neither ammunition, arms, nor great saddles. 30 July 1642.

2. Certificate of Sir Thomas Alston, High Sheriff, and Thomas Rolt, one of the justices of Bedfordshire. On the 27th of July, after Sir Lewis Dyves had ridden away, and the riot was past, fourteen persons were produced, but there was no proof that any of them were actors in the riot, except Edward Stevenson, Thomas Cashe, and John Albonie. These were bound over in good security to appear at the next assizes, because it was thought that Sir Samuel Luke, and his servant Bennett, who were wounded in the riot, were in peril of their lives. 30 July 1642.

3. Information of Thomas Bedells, William Stevens, and others, concerning the riot. Taken before Sir Richard Conquest and William Rolt, Esq., two of the justices of Bedfordshire. 27 July 1642.

July 28. Petition of many of the parishioners of the parish of St. Mary Magdalene, Canterbury. Mr. John Marston, rector of the parish, although he hath been heretofore somewhat scandalous in regard of a suspected crime, for which he was imprisoned by order of the High Commission for the space of a quarter of a year, hath since his release so well demeaned himself, and hath been so diligent and painful in prayers, administering the sacrament, and preaching, that petitioners pray that they may still enjoy the benefit of his constant preaching, notwithstanding a petition recently presented against him by some few of the parish. See L. J., V. 245.

July 28. Affidavit of Robert Dickinson and Edmund Goodwin, of words spoken by Lieutenant Bodley, concerning the safety of London. L. J., V. 249. In extenso.

July 28. List of persons who have visited the Lord Mayor in the Tower since the 20th instant.

July 28. Letter from the Committee for the defence of the kingdom, to the Committee for the Irish adventurers. The distresses of the kingdom are so pressing and the disbursements have been so great that greater sums are now necessary for the defence of the kingdom than the Lords and Commons can for the present raise. The Committee for the defence of the kingdom desires therefore that the Committee for the Irish adventurers will advance one hundred thousand pounds by way of loan, upon the public faith, to be repaid in so short a time that it shall not be diverted from the purpose for which it was intended, or any way frustrate the acts already made on behalf of that adventure. C. J., II. 698.

July 28. Account of Edward Husband for printing done for the House of Commons, and request for early payment. See C. J., II. 698.

July 28. Order concerning the raising of forces in Dorset. C. J., II. 694. In extenso.

July 29. Message from the Commons for a joint committee upon Commissions of Array. C. J., II. 695. In extenso.

July 29. Certificate of Roger Lord Cork. The bearers, Andrew Hayes, clerk, late vicar of Tipperary, and Alexander Young, clerk, late minister of Salloghcutt, in the county of Tipperary, have with their wives and children been robbed and despoiled by the rebels of all they possessed, having with much difficulty escaped with their lives, it is therefore fit that they be permitted to embark from hence and pass into England.

July 30. Draft order for the Earl of Pembroke to be Lieutenant for the counties of Monmouth, Brecon, and Glamorgan. L. J., V. 248.

July 30. Affidavits of Thomas Burgis and James Rowley, of scandalous words spoken by Captain Slingsby and Captain Wake, against the Earl of Warwick. L. J., V. 249. In extenso.

July 30. Application of the French ambassador to the Parliament for leave to transport white wool for the use of the French king. L. J., V. 249.

July 30. Certificate of Sir Michael Eames, that George Payler, paymaster of the garrison of Berwick, hath often procured money on his own credit, whereby he hath given good satisfaction to the soldiers, who were otherwise likely to mutiny; and that he hath frequently, at his own cost, made journeys to London to solicit the Parliament for money to pay the soldiers. See C. J., II. 697.

[July.] Petition of William Poe, a distressed prisoner, in the King's Bench. Prays relief against an unjust sentence in the Star Chamber obtained at the suit of Sir Edward Bullock, who, notwithstanding the abolition of that court, by combination with the warden of the Fleet, prevented petitioner's discharge, and on his procuring a writ of habeas corpus committed him to the Fleet on an action for 200*l.* under the judgment of the Star Chamber. Petitioner has lost all his estate and some of his dearest friends by the rebellion in Ireland, where he has served as a commander, is ready for any further service, and prays for relief and enlargement.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate in support of preceding. 2 May 1642.

[July.] Account of monies paid by Sir David Watkins to the treasurers for his adventure for lands in Ireland.

Aug. 1. Petition of Thomas Jenyns, Esq., that Sir Filibert Vernatti, arrested under a writ ne exeat regno at petitioner's suit, may be ordered to give sufficient security for the demands in question before he obtains his discharge. L. J., V. 250.

Annexed:—

1. Writ ne exeat regno for arrest of Vernatti. 18 June 1642.

2. Copy of an order in the cause. 20 July 1642. L. J., V. 222.

3. Copy of Vernatti's petition praying that he may be discharged upon giving good security. (Undated.)

4. Copy of certificate of Sir William Middleton and others, that they are willing to become sureties for Vernatti. 19 July 1642.

5. Statement by Jenyns of his objections to the proposed sureties.

Aug. 1. Order for the Committee for the Irish adventurers to lend 100,000*l.* to the Committee for the defence of the kingdom. L. J., V. 250.

Aug. 1. Order for the payment of 15,000*l.* to Mr. Loftus for a month's pay for the Scottish army in Ireland. L. J., V. 250.

Aug. 1. Order for the issue of 20,000*l.* proposition money, upon the order from the Committee for the safety of the kingdom. L. J., V. 251.

Aug. 1. Order for William Bartlett and Edward Anthony to receive the money and plate come in upon the propositions within the city of Exeter. L. J., V. 251. In extenso.

Aug. 1. Affidavit of Thomas Symonds of words spoken by Edward Teringham against the Parliament. L. J., V. 251. In extenso.

Aug. 1. Two copies of letter from the Scots Commissioners concerning the treaty. L. J., V. 262. In extenso.

Aug. 1. Letter from William March at Arundel House to the Lord Mowbray and Maltravers. The writer, who appears to have been an agent for the Earl of Arundel, gives a long and detailed account of moneys received and expended by him on behalf of the Earl, who was at that time abroad.

Aug. 2. Draft order appointing the Earl of Peterborough Lord Lieutenant of Northamptonshire. C. J., II. 700. In extenso. On the same paper, Draft order for the Deputy Lieutenants and other officers of the county to act by virtue of their several commissions until the Earl of Peterborough shall have granted his deputations. C. J., II. 701. In extenso.

Aug. 2. Petition of Captain Robert Slingsby and Captain Baldwin Wake. Their Lordships were pleased to order that petitioners should be set at liberty upon bail. They have attended several days with their bail, but by reason of great affairs could not present them to their Lordships. Pray that their bail may be forthwith accepted. L. J., V. 256.

Aug. 3. Draft order for the indemnity of those who assisted in apprehending Sir Lewis Dyves. See L. J., V. 268.

Aug. 3. Agreement entered into by William Hickson, master of the ship "Mary," of Scarborough, to transport ten horses and a calash belonging to Prince Rupert from Rotterdam to some harbour between Harwich and Newcastle.

Aug. 4. Draft order for the indemnity of the Dorsetshire volunteers. L. J., V. 262. In extenso.

Aug. 5. Petition of Richard Brewton. Upon hearing petitioner's cause against Sir John Lenthall, their Lordships ordered the transcript of the record to be returned into the King's Bench, in order that petitioner might take out execution. Sir John Lenthall has since procured himself to be sworn of the Privy Chamber of His Majesty, and made over his estate in trust purposely to defeat petitioner of his remedy in law. Prays that this illegal proceeding and contempt may be taken into their Lordships' serious consideration. L. J., V. 263.

Aug. 5. Petition of the Right Hon. Basil Lord Viscount Fielding and the Lady Elizabeth his wife, the Right Hon. Oliver Earl of Bullingbrook, committee of the Lady Dorothy and Lady Ann Bouchier, daughters and co-heirs of the Right Hon. Edward, late Earl of Bath, deceased, His Majesty's wards. They complain that William Pagett, steward to the late Earl of Bath, refuses to give account of certain great sums of money which were raised as portions for the Earl's daughters. Pray that Pagett may be called upon to answer, petitioners being unable to proceed against him in law, because he stands upon his privilege as servant to Henry now Earl of Bath.

Aug. 5. Draft orders for Sir Ralph Hopton and others to be sent for as delinquents. L. J., V. 264. In extenso.

Aug. 5. Letter from Sir Richard Onslow to Denzill Hollis, Esq., or in his absence to John Hampden, Esq., concerning the arrest of Justice Malett. L. J., V. 264.

Aug. 5. Order for the release of John Gaskoll and others, imprisoned for opposing the Commission of Array in the county of Chester. L. J., V. 267. In extenso.

Aug. 5. Letter from the Earl of Portland to the Lords in the High House of Parliament assembled. Knowing the clearness and uprightness of my own heart, I cannot so far forsake myself as by a voluntary quitting that right and privilege of Parliament which is due to me, make the world believe I am guilty of a crime which can never lawfully be fixed upon me. I do therefore, with all humility, pray and demand that which in right and justice belongs to me, which is my seat and vote in Parliament. From Sir J. Garrett's house, Sheriff. See L. J., V. 262, &c.

Aug. 6. Petition of Sir Faithful Fortescue. Petitioner is, by letters patent under the Great Seal, constable of Knockfergus [Carrickfergus] Castle, in Ireland, during life. Since Parliament has been pleased (for advancing the service of that kingdom) to dispose of the place to the Scots, petitioner prays that an order may be made for payment of what was due to himself and the warders up to the time the castle was rendered to the Scots; he also prays that some compensation may be given to him for the loss of his freehold of the castle, he being now destitute, having lost the whole of his estate by the late rebellion. L. J., V. 268.

Aug. 6. Petition of Scipio Le Squier, servant to His Majesty, Vice-Chamberlain of the receipt of Exchequer. Prays that Matthew Francis and others may be called upon to answer for their illegal proceedings, by which petitioner has been ejected from his house in Long Acre. L. J., V. 268. See also L. J., V. 303, where the case is stated at length.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of petitioner, detailing the circumstances of his ejection. 22 July 1642.

2. Petition of Matthew Francis, praying for a copy of Le Squier's petition, and that a day may be fixed for him to answer the charge.

3. Another petition of Matthew Francis, praying that the business may be heard and determined by their Lordships, or dismissed to be heard at law. 10 Aug. 1642.

Aug. 6. Petition of Sir Filibert Vernatti. Was arrested upon a writ ne exeat regno at the suit of Thomas Jenyns. Prays for his discharge upon reasonable security. L. J., V. 268.

Aug. 6. Articles of the treaty concerning the reducing of the kingdom of Ireland to the obedience of the King's Majesty and Crown of England, agreed upon between the Commissioners for Scotland, authorised by His Majesty, and the Parliament of that kingdom, and the Commissioners for England authorised by His Majesty, and the Parliament of that kingdom at Westminster, the 6th day of August 1642. The Scotch at their own charge to levy and transport 10,000 men into the parts of Ireland lying nearest to Scotland. The English to provide arms for these men. Two English ships to be sent to attend on the Scotch forces in Ireland, and to preserve their communications with Scotland. Ten troops of horse to be sent by the English to serve with the Scotch foot under the Scotch commanders, and 1,200*l.* to be paid by the English for raising one hundred horse in Scotland. The officers of the Scotch army to have the same pay and allowances as the English. Carrickfergus and Coleraine to be placed in the hands of the Scotch till the end of the war, their army to be then disbanded by regiments at a time, and to receive pay till then. The said towns to be stored with provisions and ammunition for the use of the Scotch forces. 2,000*l.* English money per annum to be at the disposal of the general of the army, to be disbursed upon fortifications, intelligences, &c., and 2,500*l.* to be disbursed upon account for providing artillery, horses, &c. The inhabitants of Ulster to obey orders from the Scottish commanders for providing food, forage, &c. The 10,000 Scotch to go as an army into Ulster, with power to their commanders to prosecute the war, as they shall think best for the Crown of England, to make terms with places and persons, provided no terms be made for toleration of popery or concerning the lands of rebels; the Scotch commanders to be answerable for their deportment to His Majesty and Parliament; but if it shall be found advantageous for the Scotch army to join with that of the King's Lieutenant in Ireland, in that case the Scotch commander shall receive instructions only from the King's Lieutenant or his deputy, and himself alone give orders to his own men, the armies to have the right and left hand, van and rear, charge and retreat, successively, without any mixing of the two armies whatever; no Scottish officer to be commanded by one of his own quality; and if the commanders of two troops sent from either army be of the same quality, they shall command the party by turns. The Scotch to be entertained by the English from the 20th of June last for three months. To receive their discharge from the King and Parliament of England upon a month's notice. After expiry of the three months the liability of the English to pay the Scotch troops to cease upon their giving a month's notice to that effect.

These articles were under discussion for many months. A proviso and amendments were agreed to on the 6th August by the Lords, and a conference appears to have been had on the same subject on the 23rd Sept., but there is no mention in the Journals of the formal ratification of these articles. See L. J., VI. 268, 371.

Aug. 6. List of delinquents to be sent for from Shropshire. L. J., V. 269. In extenso.

Aug. 6. Order for 200*l.* to be paid to Lord Loftus, late Lord Chancellor of Ireland, in consideration of the great services he has performed in Ireland, and of the condition he is brought unto now in his great old age by reason of the rebellion. L. J., V. 270. In extenso.

Aug. 6. Petition of John Marston, praying for a mitigation of the severe sentence passed upon him for the words spoken by him against the Parliament. See L. J., V. 244.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the charge against him.

Aug. 8. Affidavit of Edmond Syler and Jonathan Lawe, of words spoken by Stephen Jackson against the Parliament. L. J., V. 271.

Aug. 8. Petition of the Dukes of Vendosme, D'Espèrnon, and Soubize, the Marquis of Vieuville, and the Lord of Valquerville, praying an order from their Lordships for leave to continue their abode in or about the city of London, with the same liberty and safety which they have hitherto peaceably enjoyed; or, if they desire it, to depart out of the kingdom without any other conduct or declaration. L. J., V. 272. In extenso.

Aug. 8. Order in accordance with prayer of preceding petition. L. J., V. 272. In extenso.

Aug. 8. Petition of the captain and other officers of the band of Volunteers of the Hundred of Rochford, Essex, the minister and people of the town of Raleigh, with other well affected persons in the said hundred, to H. C. Complain that the Volunteers of the hundred who have completely armed themselves, and chosen a captain to instruct them in the use of the arms for the defence of the country, have been shamefully abused and assaulted by William Tilford and others. Pray that the offenders, who are common enemies of religion, and who are continually slandering and reviling the Parliament, may be severely punished, to the terror of others. C. J., II. 712.

Aug. 9. Draft order for William Bartlett and Edward Anthony, receivers for the county of Devon, to pay 5,000*l.* to Sir George Chudleigh. L. J., V. 274. In extenso.

Aug. 9. Copy of letter from Sir Edward Nicholas to Sir John Sackville about contributions for the King. L. J., V. 295. In extenso.

Aug. 10. Petition of [Edmund Butler and others] six Irish gentlemen, now miserable prisoners in Newgate, for themselves and their servants; about eight months ago were arrested at Salcombe, Devonshire, on their way from France to Ireland, bereaved of all their goods, and sent prisoners to Newgate, where they have ever since remained in the greatest want, and though an order has been made for their trunks to be restored to them, they have not got them. They have now an opportunity of serving the King of Portugal, and pray for enlargement or competent relief. L. J., V. 280.

Aug. 10. Draft resolutions concerning Sir Richard Gurney, Lord Mayor of London. L. J., V. 280. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Precedents concerning the election of the Lord Mayor of London. (Two papers.)

Aug. 10. Order for Henry Herbert, Esq., a member of the House of Commons, to repair to Monmouth, and publish the declaration concerning the illegality of the Commission of Array. L. J., V. 280. In extenso.

Aug. 10. Affidavit of John Gosse, that the annexed papers remaining with the Clerk of the Parliaments are true copies of the several records concerning Henry Stewart and others, fetched out of Ireland by command of the House. See L. J., IV. 393.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the warrant for bringing Henry Stewart and others to Dublin. 13 Aug. 1639.

2. Copy of the censure given against Stewart and others in the High Court of Castle Chamber, in Ireland. 7 Sept. 1639.

3. Copy of the votes of the Board against Stewart and others, the Lord Deputy being present. 7 Sept. 1639.

4. Copy of the estreats upon the lands of Stewart and others.

Aug. 10. Petition of James Lord Awdeley and Earl of Castlehaven. In July last, by His Majesty's licence, petitioner departed into the kingdom of Ireland to dispose and order his estate there. During the time of this unhappy rebellion he has daily offered his services to the State, as the Earls of Ormond and Roscommon and other Lords of the Privy Council will certify. Divers of his servants have been slain, and the whole of his estate taken from him by the rebels, nevertheless he now stands indicted there of a supposed treason, exhibited by the malice of William Collins and Daniel Ennis, who are themselves indicted as rebels, and who offered to take off the prosecution for so inconsiderable a sum as 3*l.* This petitioner, knowing himself to be innocent of the least thought of treason, with great indignation utterly refused, and immediately repaired to Dublin, and tendered himself to the Lords Justices and Council, who have ever since restrained him of his liberty. Prays that, being a peer of England, he may be ordered to be transmitted to England, to be tried by their Lordships according to law.

Aug. 11. Order for the issue of writs of habeas corpus for the production of John Bastwicke, Robert Ludlow, and Lieutenant Rawlins, confined at York for performing the orders of the two Houses of Parliament. L. J., V. 283. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Susanna Bastwick, wife of John Bastwick, Dr. in Physic. On the 22nd of July last petitioner's husband with two other gentlemen engaged on the service of Parliament were violently arrested whilst riding peaceably on the highway by some of the King's cavaliers, who could show no warrant but their cocked pistols. They were first imprisoned at Leicester, and then carried on three lame jades, their own horses having been taken from them, to York, where they are now in prison, and threatened with indictment. Petitioner prays that measures may be taken to free her husband from imprisonment, that he may be sent up to Parliament, the honour and authority of which is concerned in the matter, with the warrant under which he was arrested. See L. J., V. 283.

Aug. 11. Draft of the judgment pronounced against the Lord Mayor. L. J., V. 284. In extenso.

Aug. 11. Draft order of the Commons for a message to be sent to the Lords to acquaint them with the great store of arms and ammunition at Knolle House. C. J., II. 714.

Aug. 13. Engrossment of "An Act for the better payment of several sums of money therein specified, by and out of the estate of Sir Thomas Dawes, knight, and John Dawes, gentleman, two of the sons of Sir Abraham Dawes, knight, deceased." Brought from H. C. this day. L. J., V. 286. Committed 563, but not read a third time.

Aug. 13. Message from the Commons to impeach the Marquess of Hertford, the Earl of Northampton, and Henry Hastings, Esq. L. J., V. 286.

Aug. 13. Draft order against putting into execution the Commission of Array for Oxfordshire. L. J., V. 287. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from the Warden and Corporation of Henley-on-Thames to Lord Say and Seale, Lord Lieutenant of the County, enclosing copy of circular letter received by them from the Commissioners of Array for Oxfordshire. 12 August 1642. L. J., V. 286. In extenso.

2. Copy of circular letter referred to in preceding. 10th August 1642. L. J., V. 286. In extenso.

Aug. 13. Report of Doctor Aylett and Doctor Heath upon the Gentleman Usher's Bill for extraordinary expenses. L. J., V. 287. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. The Gentleman Usher's account. L. J., V. 287. In extenso.

Aug. 13. Letter from Sir Walter Erle at Dorchester to William Lenthall, Esq., Speaker of the House of Commons. The writer's fears and dangers are much increased since the coming of the Marquess [of Hertford] out of Somersetshire to Sherborne. Their numbers multiply daily and they fortify themselves at Sherborne, victualling the castle, and building huts for the soldiers; their horse are supposed to be betwixt 400 and 500, too great a strength for the writer to encounter. Will do his best to secure Dorchester and Weymouth, being in respect of their magazines of ordnance and powder (most considerable, but the places are not of strength, and he knows not of any help that is near at hand. Unless some course be taken for drawing forces out of other counties the public will receive more prejudice than is yet conceived, and this county will be in a worse condition than any in the kingdom, if the port towns of Weymouth and Poole be seized and fortified, and this and the neighbouring county come to be made a seat of war. Humbly requests that the money, paid in by the inhabitants of Dorchester for the supply of horse and arms, may be re-delivered to them, as the charges they have been put to for providing for the defence of the town, have been greatly increased, and on its safety depends the safety of the whole county. See C. J., II. 720.

Aug. 15. Petition of Henry Cowes and others, servants of Lord Cottington, having the charge of his Lordship's house at Hanworth. Complain that divers persons lately attempted to pull down the pales of Hanworth Park, and came with swords and guns in a riotous manner, and endeavoured to ransack and pillage the house under colour of a pretended power to search for arms, &c., by virtue of a warrant surreptitiously gotten, as petitioner's conceive, as it was directed to none there present. Pray that an order may speedily be given for apprehending the delinquents, and securing his Lordship's house and goods against any further attack. L. J., V. 289.

Annexed:—

1. List of the rioters.

2. Copy of the order for searching for arms. 4 July 1642. C. J., II. 649. In extenso.

Aug. 15. An inventory of the arms in the armoury at Knolle, belonging to the Right Hon. Edward Earl of Dorset. Signed by the Earl. L. J., V. 289.

Aug. 15. Letter from the Earl of Mulgrave to the Earl of Holland. One Copley, an old servant of mine, has, notwithstanding a protection given by myself, been arrested, and is detained contrary to our privilege. I pray your Lordship to move the House that he be set at liberty and freed to follow my occasions. L. J., V. 289.

Aug. 15. Order referring the petition of Richard Harding to Mr. Baron Trevor. L. J., V. 289.

Annexed:—

1. Report of Baron Trevor. There are 15 actions for debt and trespass in the Court of Marshalsea, and six in the King's Bench now pending against Harding.

2. List of the actions.

Aug. 15. Draft warrant to the officers of customs, searchers of ships, and others, to allow Mary Lovett to embark for Flanders with her infant son, her maid-servant, and her goods. See L. J., V. 301.

Aug. 15. Copy of the general instructions to county Committees. C. J., II. 717. In extenso.

Aug. 16. Petition of the county of Devon, from their late general sessions to the King. L. J., V. 295. In extenso.

Aug. 16. Petition of Urbanus Vigors, a minister from Ireland to the Earl of Manchester. Petitioner, by reason of his long attendance and his great losses by the wars in Ireland, is in such sad condition that he is like to starve with his wife and children. Prays his Lordship that a comfortable answer may be returned to the petition presented by him to the House. See L. J., V. 296.

Aug. 16. Order for suppressing the Commissions of Array, and for apprehending the abettors of them. L. J., V. 297. In extenso.

Aug. 16. Copy of preceding.

Aug. 16. Draft of an order for the Lord General to prevent riots among the soldiers. L. J., V. 300. In extenso.

Aug. 16. Draft of an order for the lords lieutenant, deputy lieutenants, and justices of the peace to suppress riots. L. J., V. 300. In extenso.

Aug. 17. Draft order for the same instructions to be sent into Warwickshire that are sent into Somersetshire. L. J., V. 298.

Aug. 18. Petition of Colonel John Butler, praying for his discharge upon his giving security that he will not go into Ireland during the rebellion there. L. J., V. 301.

Aug. 18. Another petition of Colonel Butler praying that William Le Stunt, Esq., and Joseph Brandon, Esq., may be accepted as his sureties, and that their Lordships will allow him some means to bear his charges out of this kingdom, and grant him a free pass for himself and three servants to Dover, and an order for the mayor and magistrates there to assist him with a passage to Flanders or France.

Annexed:—

1. List of his debts. See L. J., V. 306.

Aug. 18. List of the insignia belonging to the City seized by the gentleman usher in the late Lord Mayor's house. L. J., V. 303. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Order for the Commissioners for Irish affairs to meet. L. J., V. 303. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Affidavit of Humanitas Mayo that the Constable of Staines treated their Lordships' warrant for the apprehension of the rioters at Hanworth in a scornful manner, and underhand gave the rioters notice of the warrant, and in consequence none of the delinquents were found. Aug. 19. Remonstrance of the lieutenant, bailiffs, jurats, ministers, and constables assembled in State and Common Council of the Island of Jersey, on behalf of Sir Philip Carteret, Lieutenant Governor and Bailiff of the island. They disavow all the charges made against Sir P. Carteret, which are calumnious, and made by those who, for their own interest, desire to trouble the good and quiet of the State. He has procured the passing of many good laws for the government of the island, administered good justice indifferently, kept the poor from oppression, protected the ministers of God's word, and preserved the merchants in their liberty of trade, not only in His Majesty's dominions but in foreign countries, where his reputation has procured them many favours. His return to the island will be to the exceeding content of all except those who envy him. (French.) L. J., V. 305.

Annexed:—

1. Translation of preceding.

Aug. 19. Order for watches to be kept in Cambridge, Suffolk, and Norfolk. L. J., V. 306. In extenso.

Aug. 19. Copy of the Lord General's protection for Mrs. Nott of Chesewick, against her house being plundered.

Aug. 19. Examination of George Browne and Emery Hughes, concerning the assault committed by Peter Lyon upon Cecil Cave at Greenwich. See L. J., V. 301.

Aug. 19. Small paper endorsed "Mr. Pime's Note." "To send me the proclamation for raising the King's Standard."

Aug. 19. Petition of William Stamp, clerk, Vicar of Stepney, to the Commons. Was committed as a delinquent by order of the House, prays to be discharged upon good bail. C. J., II. 728.

Aug. 19. Notes of various votes of both Houses concerning the Earl of Essex, passed on this and previous days.

Aug. 20. Petition of Richard March, Keeper of His Majesty's stores, to Robert Earl of Essex, praying his Lordship to take into his consideration the annexed petition. L. J., V. 308. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Captain Francis Conningaby, Richard March, and Edward Sherburne, officers of His Majesty's ordnance, to the House of Lords, praying for their discharge, having been committed by their Lordships for refusing to issue some munition in their custody. L. J., V. 308. In extenso.

Aug. 20. Order for transporting 15,000*l.* to Carrickfergus for the use of the Scottish army there. C. J., II. 721. In extenso.

Aug. 20. Amended draft of preceding. L. J., V. 310.

Aug. 20. Petition of Stephen Jackson, praying for his discharge. See L. J., V. 271.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for his committal. 8 August 1642.

Aug. 22. Order for the Committee for Cornwall to use all diligence to apprehend the Earl of Bath and others. L. J., V. 315. In extenso.

Aug. 23. Petition of Sir Thomas Malet, Knight, one of the justices of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench, praying for his enlargement, and if their Lordships be not pleased to grant this, then that his wife may be allowed to remain with him during his imprisonment. See L. J., V. 337.

Aug. 24. Order for securing the town of Great Yarmouth. L. J., V. 319. In extenso.

Aug. 24. Petition of Michell Lesne, Sieur de Rabinet, of the town of Dinan, in France. Petitioners' ship, the "St. Nicholas," James Vallée, master, laden with wheat belonging to Mathurin Guerin, merchant, from St. Malo for Chester, was, in the beginning of July last, taken at sea by Captain Waters, commanding one of His Majesty's ships of war, carried into Plymouth and delivered to the Vice-Admiral. No gunpowder or ammunition was found in her, as was pretended, but petitioner has been unable to obtain leave from the Vice-Admiral either to carry away the ship, or to sell the wheat before it was utterly spoilt. Petitioner being a natural born subject of the King of France, this detention of his ship is a breach of the peace and union between the two Crowns, and he therefore prays that the ship may be forthwith returned, and satisfaction made to him for the damages he has sustained.

Annexed:—

1. Translation of the letters of charter between James Vallée, the master of the ship, and Mathurin Guerin, merchant, with reference to the voyage and cargo of the ship. 9 July 1642.

2. Copy of the application made by James Vallée and Mathurin Guerin to the Vice-Admiral, either to allow them to carry away the ship or to sell the wheat, allowing the money to remain in the hands of some merchants of Plymouth until the matter is settled. 26 July 1642.

3. Translation of the certificate of René Lesquier S' de la Menardays, Lieutenant-General of the Admiralty of France, in the Court of St. Malo, and seneschal of that place, that leave was given for the departure of the ship from St. Malo, after the officer and overseer of the court had visited her, and reported that he found in her no merchandise prohibited by His Majesty's ordinances. 6 August 1642.

4. Translation of depositions taken before the "Notaries note-keepers of the King, established at St. Malo," as to the building, ownership, and cargo of the "St. Nicholas." 9 August 1642.

Aug. 25. Petition of Edward Sanderford. Was committed to the Fleet on Monday on a charge of having been hired to kill the Earl of Essex. Prays for his discharge. L. J., V. 321.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same to the Earl of Essex.

2. Examination of Edward Sanderford, tailor, taken before Lord Chief Justice Brampton. Denies that he was set on by any man to kill the Earl of Essex, or that it was ever in his thought to do so. 27 August 1642. See L. J., V. 334.

Aug. 25. Message from the King at Nottingham to both Houses of Parliament, proposing a treaty for composing differences. (Signed by the King.) L. J., V. 327. In extenso.

Aug. 25. Copy of declaration of the Marquess of Hertford and the other Commissioners for Somerset to the people of the county. You have been summoned to hear such things as the Commissioners think necessary to be publicly known, that you may not be deceived by the malicious suggestions and deceitful pretences of those men who disturb the peace of the kingdom, and endeavour to bring in great changes in the Church and State against the King's consent and just authority. For the better effecting their wicked designs, they have cast all manner of slanders upon those men who they know are ready at all hazards to oppose them in their mutinous and rebellious enterprises. They give out that the Commissioners are papists or popishly affected, whereas it is well known that they have lived and are resolved to die, as their fathers have done in the practice of the Church of England, while these men are known to despise the Common Prayer Book, and to favour Brownists, Anabaptists, and other disturbers of all order and government. They also give out that the Commissioners have power to take what they please of any man's estate, which is as foul an untruth as that of their being papists, since the commission was only to review the arms of the subjects, to see them muster, and to take care that no person of ability should be without arms; this commission they are resolved to put in practice until it be better liked and understood. The quarrel which these men have with the commission is, that they would gladly have found all men unarmed but their own faction, for the more easy effecting of their wicked purposes, which manifest themselves in their levying armies against the King to the terror of all good subjects. The Commissioners therefore pray and require your assistance against such traitorous and rebellious practices. See L. J., V. 332.

[Aug. 25.] Copy of another declaration of the Marquess of Hertford and the other Commissioners for the county of Somerset. Whereas many false and scandalous imputations have been laid upon us for executing His Majesty's just commands, we do hereby declare and protest that we shall never be brought to execute anything that shall tend to the violation of the liberty or property of the subject, or to the hinderance of the true religion established by law, and we defy the authors of all such scandals and imputations, until it appears by any particular, that we have done anything in contradiction of this our solemn protestation. And whereas there have lately been assembled at Shepton Mallet great numbers of armed men, which the authors of these false reports would throw upon us, we think fit to declare the true passages, that all the world may know upon whose charge the whole fault may come. On Saturday evening the Lord Marquis and the rest of the Commissioners were informed that some persons of the best quality were come into Shepton Mallett under colour of eating venison, and that tickets of an unusual style, without any name subscribed upon them, were carried about inviting great numbers both of horse and foot to meet there. Although we were commanded hither for no other purpose than preserving the peace of the county, and it appeared to us that such meeting in arms in a time of peace could be for no good intent, we were so tender of giving any colour of raising forces on our side, that we did not so much as summon the soldiers, contenting ourselves with our own servants, which to most of us were very few, till we could see further what their intentions were. On Sunday afternoon a petition signed by the greatest part of the inhabitants of Shepton Mallett was brought to the Lord Marquess desiring his protection, as they were informed that a great assembly of armed men was appointed there for Monday, which put them in great fright, because they heard that Mr. William Strode and George Malliard had made great and unusual preparation of arms and ammunition in their houses in the town, and divers low persons had given out that such and such houses should be fired, and that the streets should run with blood. His Lordship seeing that it was now a business not to be neglected if he would answer the trust reposed in him by His Majesty, and that his own security as well as that of the petitioners might be concerned, answered that he would take care to provide for their safety, and there being in the county two troops of horse levied by the Earl of Bedford for His Majesty's service, the Lord Marquess held it necessary to make use of them, and thereupon caused them to draw to this town of Wells for the protection of it and the country adjacent, not intending to use them except in defence of himself and the gentlemen assembled there. On Monday morning his Lordship sent Sir Ralph Hopton with some justices of the peace and gentlemen with their attendants only, unarmed, into the town of Shepton Mallett, to see what people were there. Those gentlemen had been there but a short time conferring with the inhabitants and re-examining their petition, when Mr. William Strode came with his company armed with swords and pistols, and forbade the people to obey any such unlawful directions as Sir R. Hopton was giving them, whereas indeed he gave them none at all. After a little while, Sir R. Hopton, well knowing that there are informations against Strode for treasonable words and actions, arrested him on suspicion of high treason, and commanded him to the Constable George Malliard, who suffered him to escape. This done, there entered into the town great numbers of horse and foot who disarmed, as we are informed, all the honest inhabitants. Sir R. Hopton retreated out of the town to avoid any accident that might possibly have gone to blood, but which was prevented by his and his company's good temper. This being the true state of the passages of that day, we are confident no just or understanding person can any way blame what was done by his Lordship or any of us, or excuse this riotous and tumultuous assembly so contrary to law and His Majesty's commands. Endorsed. The declaration set out by the Lord Marquess and other Commissioners at Wells. The paper is undated and much mutilated.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Captain William Legge, prisoner in the Gatehouse; prays to be allowed to have a servant of his own to attend upon him during his confinement and that he may be visited by his friends. (Undated.)

Aug. 29. Petition of Isabella Massey, praying that certain lands may not be disposed of until her suit against William Rolfe is determined by the Lord Keeper. L. J., V. 331.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition to the same effect.

Aug. 29. Petition of Elizabeth, Countess Rivers, Dowager. Complains that she has been despoiled of all her goods to the value of 50,000*l*. Her two houses, the one at St. Osithes, in Essex, the other at Melford, in Suffolk, have been broken into by a rude multitude raised for the most part in or about Colchester, who threatened her life, carted away her goods, digged up her corn, drove away her cattle, and destroyed her gardens, not leaving her so much as a change of apparel. Prays that strict search may be made for the offenders and her goods restored to her, and that she, her servants, and agents (who now go under peril of their lives) may, by their Lordships' protection, repair to her houses to assist in the search and to give information to the justices. L. J., V. 331.

[Aug. 29.] Petition of distressed clergy of Ireland resident in and about the city of London, to the Earl of Holland. Upon a former motion made by his Lordship it was ordered that petitioners should be recommended unto the clergy of London, Westminster, and Southwark for the benefit of the collection at the next fast, but (by what misfortune petitioners know not) the order failed to be entered, so they cannot receive the benefit thereby intended. Pray his Lordship to move the House to give command for entering the order in regard of the now approaching fast-day. See L. J., V. 331.

Aug. 30. Petition of justices of the peace and inhabitants of the town of Bedford. Pray for the removal of Giles Thorne, parson of St. Mary's there, a turbulent and profane person, who used to persecute in the High Commission Court those who desired to abstain from profanations, and now sets up divisions and factions in the town. L. J., V. 332.

Aug. 30. Order committing Gyles Thorne to the Fleet. L. J., V. 332.

Aug. 30. Petition of Owen George, John Betton, and Edward Davies. Dame Margaret Eyton, widow, died at Shrewsbury on the 13th of this instant August, having made her will, which was duly attested, and leaving petitioners executors thereof. Two of petitioners on the day that she died sent up the will to the third to be proved in London. Richard Betton, by fraudulent practices, got the will from the post, and then by force, with Richard Owen and about 100 persons, entered and took possession of deceased's dwelling house, turned her servants out of doors, took away her cattle, and reaped her corn. Richard Betton afterwards came to London, and made oath before Dr. Aylett that deceased died intestate, and that he and Richard Betton, junior, were her nearest of kin, and thereby obtained letters of administration to be granted to them. Pray that the said letters may be revoked, and that Richard Betton and Richard Owen may be sent for to answer for their fraudulent proceedings. L. J., V. 332.

Aug. 30. Draft order for the ordnance and ammunition to be removed from Camber Castle to Rye. L. J., V. 333. In extenso.

Aug. 30. Letter from Dr. Thomas Paske, at Canterbury, to the Earl of Holland. We have found much trouble from the troopers sent among us. Colonel Sandes arriving here with his troops on Friday night, caused a strict watch, and sentinels to be set upon the church and upon our several houses, to the great affrightment of all the inhabitants. This done, Serjeant-Major Cockin came to me, and in the name of the Parliament demanded to see the arms of the church and the store of powder of the county, which I showed him, and he then possessed himself of the keys, and kept them in his own custody. The next morning we were not permitted to enter the church for the performance of divine service, but about eight o'clock Sir Michael Livesey and Captain Player, attended by many soldiers, came to our officers and demanded the keys of the church to be delivered to one of their company. Then they departed, and the soldiers entering the church giant-like began a fight with God himself; overthrew the communion table, tore the velvet cloth from before it, defaced the goodly screen or tabernacle work, violated the monuments of the dead, spoiled the organs, broke down the ancient rails and seats, with the brazen eagle that did support the Bible, forced open the cupboards of the singing men, rent some of their surplices, gowns, and Bibles, and carried away others; mangled all our service books, bestrewing the whole pavement with the leaves. A miserable spectacle to every good eye. But as if this were too little to satisfy the fury of some indiscreet zealots, (for many did abhor what was done already) they further exercised their malice upon the arras hangings in the choir (representing the whole story of our Saviour), and finding a statue of Christ in the frontispiece of the Southgate, they discharged at least forty shots against it, triumphing much when they did hit it in the head or face. Nor had their fury been thus stopped had not the colonel and some others come to the rescue. They then departed for Dover, from whence we expect them this day, and are afraid that upon their return they will plunder our houses, unless steps be taken to prevent the same, as they have already vilified our persons, and offered extreme indignities to one of our brethren. I am confident that the Houses of Parliament being rightly informed herein, will provide against the like abuses and impieties in other places. See L. J., V. 346.

Aug. 30. Petition of Frederick de Bousy and Elisha Robins, citizens and merchants of London. In October last, petitioners shipped several quantities of ribbons and silk hose in a ship belonging to Robert Williams, an Englishman, bound for Rotterdam. The ship was taken on the voyage by a frigate of Ostend, carried into Dunkirk, and the goods condemned as good prize. Pray their Lordships to treat with the Spanish ambassador, or to appoint Sir Balthazar Gerbier to treat with him, for the restitution of petitioners' goods.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Lee and others that the goods were the property of De Bousy and Robins, free-men of the city of London.

Aug. List of officers and soldiers enlisted during the month of August 1642, under the command and in the regiment of the Earl of Stamford.

Aug. Petition of Wm. Turner, clerk and sexton of Brencley, Kent, to H. C.; hearing that a warrant of the House had been issued against him, he immediately gave himself into the custody of the sergeant, prays that he may be made an example of the clemency of the House, not of its justice. See C. J., II. 709.

[Aug.] Petition of Elizabeth Lucas, widow. Complains that a multitude of people came into her house, and carried away her plate, jewels, linen, and other goods. Prays that she and her servants and agents may have power to enter and search the houses of those persons by whom her goods are known or suspected to be detained, and that her case may be specially recommended to Harbottle Grimston, Esq., Recorder of Colchester.

Sept. 1. Draft order for the treasurers for the subscriptions of plate and money, to issue money to the treasurers of the army. L. J., V. 334. In extenso.

Sept. 1. Draft order for Captain Vernon to be Deputy Treasurer at War to Sir Gilbert Gerard. L. J., V. 334. In extenso.

Sept. 1. Letter from Dr. Thomas Paske to Henry Earl of Holland: was bold to tell his Lordship of the outrages committed by some of the troopers in the house of God, and so holds it right to inform his Lordship of an apology since made by Sir Michael Livesey, who, coming with his troopers to the town on Tuesday night, sent for the writer, and in the presence of the mayor and others said that he was commanded by the committee to demand the keys of the church only for the purpose of removing the arms and powder there, and gave direction to the Captain to behave civilly; Sir Michael expressed himself as overwhelmed with sorrow for what had happened, and the writer is inclined to believe him, on account of his courteous usage that night, and care to prevent further mischief, and wishes the others had made the same excuses, but Captain Baynes and some of his company seemed to justify themselves; doubts not Parliament will secure for the future the peaceable enjoyment of the house of God. See L. J., V. 346, &c.

Sept. 1. Petition of Colonel John Butler: by their Lordships' late order, petitioner was banished to foreign parts during the rebellion in Ireland (see L. J., V. 317) where all his property is, prays the House, in consideration of the evidences of loyalty that he has given, to protect his estates in Tipperary.

Sept. 1. Petition of Fenton Parsons; petitioner being retained as counsel for nine of the Privy Councillors of Ireland, defendants in a cause at the suit of Henry Stewart, attended on several occasions for the hearing of the cause before a Committee and particularly on Tuesday last, when Stewart told him that he did not think that the cause would be heard that day, and afterwards tried to get the cause heard without giving petitioner notice; prays that the cause may be heard by counsel at the bar.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Fenton Parsons in support of preceding.

Sept. 2. Information of Robert Bumpus and John Ayerson of scandalous words spoken by Edward Sanderford against the Earl of Essex and others. L. J., V. 334. In extenso.

Sept. 2. Copy of order for James Wheeler and others, to appear and answer for not re-delivering to Mr. Peter Civell the goods they had taken from him. L. J., V. 335.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of Felix Carter, constable of Uxbridge, that he had shown their Lordships' order of the 22nd of August to Thomas Battye and Thomas Pitt, and that they refused to give up the goods of Peter Civell. 25 August 1642.

2. Statement of John Nelham, constable of Ruialip, that James Wheeler refuses to give up Civell's goods. 25 August 1642.

3. Statement of John Jennings, headborough of Pinner, that Charles Shippie and Edward Neeles refuse to give up Civell's goods. 27 August 1642.

Sept. 2. Order for securing the safety of the town of Oxford. L. J., V. 336. In extenso.

Sept. 2. Draft order for the banishment of the Capuchin Friars. C. J., II. 749. In extenso.

[Sept. 2.] Petition of Lewis Phillipps, under-sheriff for the county of Huntingdon, and of Henry Burnby, bailiff of the hundred of Toseland, in the same county; have been prisoners in the Fleet for the last fifteen weeks by their Lordships' order, are heartily sorry to have offended, and pray to be released or bailed. See L. J., V. 155, 335.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of Lewis Phillipps. (Undated.)

2. Petition of Phillips and Burnby to the Earl of Manchester. Pray his Lordship to use his influence for their enlargement. (Undated.)

3. Petition of Henry Burnby. Is not in any way guilty of the crime for which he was committed. Prays to be discharged upon bail. (Undated.)

Sept. 3. Order for the rents of Lord St. John's lands in Essex and Bedfordshire to be reserved in the tenants' hands until the cause between his Lordship and George Benyon be decided. L. J., V. 338. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Motion for preceding order.

Sept. 3. Message from the Commons for the appointment of Sir Gregory Norton and others, as receivers for Midhurst and Chichester. L. J., V. 338. In extenso.

Sept. 3. Order giving leave to Sir Robert Dishington to transport two horses into France. L. J., V. 338.

Sept. 3. Petition of John Cooth, parson, and James Strode, clothier, of Shepton Mallet, to H. C. Having seen an order that they were to be sent for as delinquents, voluntarily submit themselves and pray to be discharged upon bail. C. J., II. 750.

Sept. 3. Petition of Sir John Conyers, Lieutenant of the Tower: Mr. Hume, petitioner's nephew, is captain of a foot company in the service of the United Provinces; prays for leave to raise forty voluntary soldiers to send to his nephew to strengthen his company.

Sept. [5]. A true relation of the several passages acted by Sir John Seaton, Knight, and Edwyn Sandis, Colonels, together with some of the Committee whose names are hereunto subscribed, according to instructions agreed upon by the Committee of the Lords and Commons for the safety of the kingdom to be observed within the county of Kent. On Sunday, Aug. 14, they apprehended Sir John Sackville coming to Sevenoaks church, then went to Knowle House, whence they brought away five load of arms belonging to the Earl of Dorset. On Saturday the 20th they placed a guard on Rochester Bridge, and afterwards took Upnor Castle by surprise whilst the soldiers were at bowls, and placed a guard there; as they were returning they heard that Sergeant-major Douglas had captured Cobham Hall and arms and horses there, whilst Lord Roper had been stopped at Rochester Bridge and sent prisoner to Upnor Castle; on Saturday they were well entertained at Rochester, and the same evening went to Chatham Dock, which was surrendered to them by Captain Pett, when he saw their warrant; on Monday, the 26th August, they went to Gillingham, and put a guard on board the "Sovereign"; on the 27th they went to the house of Sir Peter Ricoth (Rycaut), of Aylesford, a known rendezvous for malignants, took him and sent him to Upnor Castle, and seized arms and plate, some concealed in the roof of the house; the same day they went to Allington Hall, Lady Wootton's, having information of horse and arms there, but found none; and the same evening forced Sir William Butler's house at Teston, after but slight opposition from a few servants who behaved insolently, Sir William not being there, some arms and money were found and seized; that night they were well received at Maidstone; the next day they went to the houses of Sir Edward Deering and Sir Robert Darrell, but did not find Sir Edward as they had expected, and only a small quantity of arms; thence they went to Hatfield to the Earl of Thanet's, where they seized one load of arms, and passed that night at Ashford, where they were joyfully received; the next day they went to Canterbury, where they were received by the mayor and sheriffs with acclamation, they took two loads of arms and six barrels of powder from the dean and prebendaries, and arrested Mr. Browne, a papist, of great estate in Berkshire in an alehouse, and sent him to Dover Castle, and took some plate from another papist, Mr. West; the next day they went to Dover where were many suspected persons, who however made a contribution for the King and Parliament to prove their fidelity, whilst Thomas Bargrave, the Dean's son, and others were arrested; by request of the Lord Admiral they sent to Deal Castle, which surrendered after a short parley; Walmer, Sandown, and Dover Castle, having already surrendered to him; the next day they went to Feversham, and were met with much affection by the mayor and other inhabitants, they searched the houses of Lord Roper and Mr. Pettit, papists, and took a quantity of plate; they were well received at Lydd, and the next day at New Romney and Tenterden; the next day they went to the houses of Sir Robert Philmer (Filmer) and others, but could neither find them nor anything of value: and so after examining the garrison at Rochester they came to Gravesend, and hearing that the Dean of Canterbury with a party had privately passed towards Rochester, they sent after him and brought him back, and sent him and Lord Roper by barge to his Excellency, and on the 3rd of September they marched into London. After the signatures follow some notes of informations against the Dean of Canterbury. See L. J., V. 339.

Sept. 6. Petition of Anne Viscountess Baltinglasse; her husband is so utterly ruined by the rebellion in Ireland, that he has no maintenance left for himself and his family; prays their Lordships to grant her some present support. L. J., V. 341.

Sept. 6. Petition of Symon Middleton, for relief against John Battie for unjust proceedings in the administration of the estate of Robert Gray, deceased. L. J., V. 341.

Sept. 6. Petition of the Earl of Portland: their Lordships have ordered that petitioner's wife and children should remove from the Isle of Wight after two days' warning, but it is impossible that they should be safe anywhere on the mainland, for petitioner's house near Acton has been broken open and robbed, his goods and trunks in London ransacked, his mother in Essex turned out of doors, the bed whereon she lay taken from her, and the poor people threatened who offered to receive her; prays that if his wife must remove out of the castle (Carisbrook) she may remain in the island until she can get a passage to France, and that a pass may be granted to her for herself, some of her children, and fourteen persons besides, with such goods and household stuff as she shall think fit, a small proportion of plate, and 300*l.* in money. L. J., V. 341.

Sept. 6. Order for the trained bands of Cambridge-shire and the Isle of Ely to prevent riots. L. J., V. 341. In extenso.

Sept. 6. Draft answer of both Houses to the King's message delivered on the 5th instant. L. J., V. 342. In extenso.

Sept. 7. Petition of Thomas Fulwar, Dr. of Divinity and Bishop of Ardfer, in Ireland, having been despoiled of his whole estate by the rebellion, prays to be recommended to the Commissioners appointed to distribute the money collected the last day-for the relief of the distressed clergy in Ireland. L. J., V. 342.

Sept. 7. Petition of Bartholomew Mountague: was a servant to King James, and is now a servant to the King and Queen; prays for a pass for himself, his niece, and three servants to France. L. J., V. 343.

Annexed:—

1. Blank pass in accordance with preceding.

Sept. 7. Letter from Sir Nicholas Slanning at Lostwithiel to the House of Lords; has taken notice of their Lordships' order that he should be sent for as a delinquent, but as he is a member of Parliament, and has taken the protestation, he submits that he cannot appear before their Lordships without the leave of the House of Commons. L. J., V. 364. In extenso.

Sept. 7. Commission from the King appointing William Courtenay, sergeant-major of the regiment of foot under the command of Sir John Beaumont, and captain over one company in the regiment.

Sept. 8. Draft order to punish breach of contract in soldiers who receive entertainment to serve the Parliament. L. J., V. 343. In extenso.

Sept. 8. Two drafts of order for the Lord General to restrain and punish disorders amongst the soldiers. L. J., V. 343. In extenso.

Sept. 8. Copy of resolutions respecting the inland post office, that the sequestration of the office to Burlamachi is illegal, and that he give an account of the profits of the office. L. J., V. 343. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Report concerning the office granted 22nd June 1637 to Thomas Witherings, sequestered 29th July 1640, for alleged misdemeanours in opening letters, not giving advices in due time, taking greater rates than usual, transporting prohibited commodities, not suffering the passage boat to be searched, not able to hold correspondence for want of language, breach of correspondence for want of paying foreign posts, none of which were proved; Withering afterwards assigned his interest in the office to the Earl of Warwick.

2. Motion to be made upon preceding.

Sept. 8. Draft order for payment of 3,375*l.* to the receiver general of the county of Gloucester for timber, &c., by him to be paid to the Earl of Salisbury and Mr. Edward Tyringham. L. J., V. 344. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of children and creditors of Mr. Tyringham to Edward Earl of Manchester for reference of their petition to the House of Commons.

Sept. 9. Request of John Yate, that he may have liberty to go abroad for his health, with his wife and son, and some three or four servants. L. J., V. 344.

Sept. 9. Petition of Captain Francis Coningesby, Richard March, and Edward Sherburn, officers of His Majesty's ordnance; petitioners were committed by order of the 17th August, for not issuing, upon a warrant from his Excellency (the Lord General), some part of the ammunition in the Tower of London entrusted to them by His Majesty's warrant; petitioners acted from no ill-feeling towards Parliament, and pray that the conflict of command may be considered, and, now that the store has been disposed of, that they may be set at liberty and pardoned. L. J., V. 345.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 17th August. L. J., V. 299. In extenso.

2-5. Two similar petitions, with two copies of order of 17th August annexed.

Sept. 9. Petition of the parishioners of the parish of All Hallows, Bread Street, in London: the rector, Mr. Lawson, is near his dissolution, and has for some years past been unable to officiate, during which time petitioners have at great charge provided Mr. Seaman to do the duty: they pray that when the place falls vacant, their Lordships would recommend the Archbishop of Canterbury, in whose care petitioners cannot confide, to appoint Mr. Seaman. L. J., V. 345.

Sept. 9. Draft order for finding out and regaining the goods of the Countess of Rivers, taken from her houses in Essex and Suffolk, and for encouraging her tenants to pay their rents. L. J., V. 331, 345.

Annexed:—

1. Printed copy of preceding.

2. Draft of amendments to same.

3. Petition of Elizabeth Countess Rivers, complaining that the preceding order has not been carried out, and that she and her children are consequently in want of subsistence. (Undated.)

Sept. 9. Letter from Peter Egerton, at Shaw, to Alexander Rigby, at his chamber in Gray's Inn: desires him, if possible, to obtain a pass for Robert Arderne, a Cheshire man, to go into France: Lord Strange is very active in the country summoning all before him, and disarming those who come not, trying to induce men to come in by giving out that a Parliament army is coming towards them, which has done great spoil to the King's subjects; should there be occasion to raise men in Cheshire and Lancashire, and the House should make use of him, he doubts not to do them good service.

Sept. 10. Petition of the inhabitants of Leighton, in the county of Bedford: the parsonage of Leighton, worth above 600*l.* per annum, is inappropriate in the hands of the Dean and Canons of Windsor, and by them leased to Sir Thomas Leigh, one of the Commissioners of Array in the county of Warwick; the vicarage, worth about 50*l.* per annum, is in the gift of a prebendary of Lincoln, elected by the impropriators; the late vicar, Christopher Slater, was a promoter of superstitious innovations and of scandalous life, so that petitioners were obliged to maintain a lecturer, Samuel Fisher, for their better instruction in godliness, whom they pray may now be appointed vicar. L. J., V. 345.

Sept. 10. Petition of Arthur Magneiss (or Magenness); petitioner was on his way to Ireland, when he heard of the outbreak of the rebellion there, and consequently returned to West Chester, where, though a loyal subject, he was suspected by the Mayor, and sent up to London, and by their Lordships' order committed to the Tower, where he has lain ten months; he fears that all his fortune, which is in Flanders, will be utterly lost, and prays for enlargement, on the undertaking of the Spanish Ambassador that he shall immediately go to Flanders, and stay there during any rebellion in Ireland. L. J., V. 346.

Sept. 10. Order for the Committee for the defence of the kingdom to issue out monies in the absence of the Lord General. L. J., V. 346.

Sept. 10. Draft of preceding.

Sept. 10. Draft order appointing treasurers and commissaries for Suffolk. L. J., V. 346.

Sept. 10. Draft ordinance for raising 2,000 foot for Ireland. L. J., V. 347. In extenso.

Sept. 10. Copy of a letter from Lord Inchiquin, at Cork, to [the Lords Justices of Ireland]; finding that if some check were not given to the rebels the county of Limerick would become wholly theirs, he determined to attack them, and accordingly having noticed that their forces were besieging the Castle of Liscarroll, he started from Cork, sending word to other forces to join him, and coming upon the rebels by forced marches found them in a very strong position, the Castle of Liscarroll having surrendered the night before; notwithstanding the difficulties of the ground, after some slight firing of artillery the rebels were completely routed, but were so nimble in flight that not above 500 are known to have been killed, but considerable stores of arms, &c., were captured with the Castle, but the writer was unable to advance, for his men were without provisions, and the ruin of himself and his men is only delayed, unless their Lordships can send them a supply of men, money, victual, and munition, for the rebels are only annoyed by their late defeat and will soon rally again, so that without supplies of all kind it will be impossible for the writer to maintain himself through the winter. Marmaduke Shafto has lately come from Lord Dungarvan as commissary over twenty draught horses, the writer requests that a commission may be made out for him, and also that the question of the command in those parts may be settled, for the King's service suffers by a disjointed command; the writer again earnestly entreats that assistance may be sent to him, and in conclusion desires them to let him know how he may advance Richard Gethney, who has overture of a right nobleman's service, and to consider this letter as written to each of them individually.

Sept. 13. Information respecting the residence of one Cheekley, ordered to be sent for as a delinquent. L. J., V. 351.

Sept. 13. Petition of Thomas, Earl of Berkshire, that he may either be heard, or have leave to be at his own house upon bail. L. J., V. 351.

Sept. 13. Petition of the Earl of Carlisle, to be either heard or bailed. L. J., V. 351. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Petition of Bartholmew Home, to be heard or bailed. L. J., V. 352. In extenso.

Sept. 13. A note of the instructions for the Committee to be sent into Ireland. See C. J., II. 764.

Sept. 14. The impeachment of James Lord Strange, son and heir apparent of Wm. Earl of Derby, by the Commons assembled in Parliament, in the name of themselves and all the Commons of England, of high treason. L. J., V. 354. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Deposition of Sir Thomas Stanley, of Bickerstaffe, concerning the proceedings of Lord Strange in executing the Commission of Array in the county of Lancaster. 5 August 1642.

2. Similar deposition of John Holcroft, Esq. 5 August 1642.

3. Deposition of Thomas Birch, Esq., in the same matter. 5 August 1642.

Sept. 14. Certificate of the Mayor of Canterbury, that William Edgforth, who is an inhabitant in the parish of Christ Church, Canterbury, and a man of honest and civil life, and no ways addicted to popery, had his house broken into at an unreasonable hour of the night on the 16th of August last, and his arms as one of the trained bands taken away from him by some of Captain Browne's company.

Sept. 15. Petition of William Le Ceur and others, the creditors of Anthony Hooper, merchant, and of the said Anthony Hooper: pray for an extension of the time limited by the Commission for the examination of witnesses in the cause, and for further powers to enforce their attendance before the referees. L. J., V. 354.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of certificate from the referees, that owing to the intricacy of the accounts and the imprisonment of Hooper, they have been unable to complete the case.

Sept. 15. Draft ordinance for settling Commissioners for the navy. L. J., V. 355. In extenso.

Sept. 15. Draft order for the appointment of Mr. Thomas Smith as secretary of the navy. L. J., V. 357. In extenso.

Sept. 16. Affidavit of Thomas Wright and others, that Captain Davis, a pensioner in the Charter House, tried to interrupt the sergeant who was calling upon the people in Smithfield after beat of drum to serve under the Earl of Essex, and said that it were no matter if all were hanged that would so serve. L. J., V. 357.

Sept. 16. Draft answer of Parliament to the King's last message, for conciliating differences. L. J., V. 358. In extenso.

Sept. 16. Draft order for the apprehension of Lord Strange. L. J., V. 358. In extenso.

Sept. 17. Impeachment of Wm. Lord Marquess of Hertford and others, by the House of Commons, for summoning His Majesty's subjects together at Sherborne, in the county of Dorset, in August last, and inciting them to take up arms; and for publishing a paper containing malicious scandals against Parliament, and actually levying war against the King, Parliament, and kingdom. L. J., V. 360.

Sept. 17. Impeachment of John Weld, Esq., high sheriff of the county of Salop, by the House of Commons, for proclaiming the Commission of Array in the county, for inducing the grand jury in the name of the county to sign a seditious declaration, &c. L. J., V. 360.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of declaration (mentioned in preceding), expressing the loyalty of the subscribers to the King.

2. Copy of resolutions concluded at Much Wenlock, 16 Aug. 1642, by the high sheriff and the rest of the Commissioners of Array, for their mutual protection.

Sept. 17. Petition of Bartholomew Mountague, Frenchman; Mr. Vayse, a haberdasher of small ware, living at Paul's chain, will not deliver up petitioner's goods pursuant to their Lordships' order. L. J., V. 360.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit in support of preceding.

Sept. 17. Certificate, numerously signed, delivered in by Dr. Paske in support of his letter to the Earl of Holland about the riot committed at Canterbury by the soldiers; stating that Colonel Sands came to Canterbury on the evening of the 26th of August, and caused a strict watch to be set upon the church and precincts; and about two o'clock that night Captain Cockyn came to Dr. Paske, and desired to see the arms of the church and store of powder of the county, and took the keys away then, and the arms and powder next morning; that next morning, Saturday, no one was permitted to enter the church for the performance of divine service at six o'clock as usual, but about eight o'clock Sir Michael Livesey and other officers went with many soldiers to the vergers, who gave the keys to Captain Bayns, and when Sir Michael was gone Captain Bayns with his soldiers went into the church, when the following outrages were committed, the communion table was thrown down the steps and turned legs upwards, the velvet cloth was torn, and the gold fringe carried away, the screen much defaced, the monument of Archbishop Chicheley much violated, the keys and bellows of the organ cut and spoiled, the ancient rails and seats, and the brazen eagle supporting the Bible broken in pieces, the cupboards of the choirmen broken open, and their gowns, surplices, and books, some torn and some taken away, the famous arras hangings in the choir (representing the whole story of our Saviour) were stabbed, ript, cut, and slashed in many places, especially where the soldiers observed any figure of Christ, whilst at another ancient statue of Christ in the "frontispiece" of the Southgate, leading to the city, the troopers discharged their muskets, and there was much joy when they hit it either in the head or face; and Captain Bayns upon his return to Canterbury, on the 30th of August, seemed to justify these proceedings. L. J., V. 361.

Sept. 17. Letter from John Prowde, at Shrewsbury, to Humfry Mackworth, Esq., in London: I received your letter by Mr. Walsh, the post came not long after, but the Mayor sent to stop him at the gates and examined the letters in the Town Hall before they were delivered, and I doubt not would have opened any that he thought suspicious: we sent Mr. Walsh to Stafford to enquire after His Majesty, who heard there that the gentry and trained bands attended him at Uttoxeter on Thursday last, he was supposed to be then going to Newcastle, thence, perhaps, to Chester, no doubt he has had many invitations from Sir James Palmer and others in these parts; Sir Henry Jones has promised to bring much aid from Wales, but is not likely to do it; Mr. Barber, Mr. Charlton, and others have drawn towards Bristol, Mr. Charlton is thought to be there, Mr. Barber was detained at Bridgnorth by the Sheriff; Sir James Palmer has taken some lodgings here in case the King should come; part of Lord Falkland's carriage is come with a direction that it should be placed near the King's lodging; Lord Northampton was at Bridgnorth yesterday, and the latest news is that the King is expected to set up his standard here.

[Sept. 19.] Petition of the Earl of Portland: by long restraint in a very close and noisome house, petitioner is brought into a very ill state of health and fortune; prays that he may be restored to so much liberty as may preserve him and his family from ruin. L. J., V. 362.

Sept. 19. Letter from Sir Peter Courtney to Mr. Fish; sends a copy of the King's direction to him to repair to Cornwall, and not to depart thence without leave (dated June 29th, 1642), from which will be seen what danger he would run by disobeying the King's command, but as soon as he has the King's leave he will with all speed appear before the House of Peers, when he doubts not his innocence will prove him a faithful subject. L. J., V. 364. In extenso.

Sept. 19. Two printed copies of the ordinance for the bringing in of plate, money, and horses (L. J., V. 121. In extenso), and of the instructions concerning the same, to be sent to the committees in the several counties. The instructions were ordered by the Commons to be printed this day. C. J., II. 773. In extenso.

Sept. 20. Petition of Dame Mary Carre, wife of Sir Robert Carre; in February last their Lordships ordered that until petitioner's cause could be heard she should be protected from the violence of her husband; who, having formerly conveyed certain property to the Earl of Northumberland and others in trust for petitioner and her children, afterwards forbade the tenants to pay their rents to the trustees, in consequence of which petitioner was obliged to bring an action against one of the tenants in the name of the trustees, and after much delay obtained a verdict, Sir Robert now threatens to bring a writ of error in the case of each several rent in order to delay the matter as far as possible, whilst petitioner is in great distress for want of the money; she prays for a settlement of the matter by their Lordships, as she cannot obtain relief elsewhere in consequence of the absence of the Lord Keeper and obstruction of the Great Seal. L. J., V. 364.

Sept. 20. Petition of William Beale, Edward Martin, and Richard Sterne, Doctors in Divinity and Masters of Colleges in Cambridge; petitioners who were committed to the Tower by their Lordships' order of the 1st of September, are thereby forced to neglect their private affairs and public duties, whilst the fees and charges are greater than their estates can bear; they pray for enlargement upon bond. L. J., V. 364.

Sept. 20. Petition of Owen George, John Betton, and Edward Davies, gent.; Richard Owen and Richard Betton were by order of 30th August last sent for as delinquents, Owen was attached at Shrewsbury by an officer of the House on the 7th instant, but Richard Gibbons, Mayor of Shrewsbury, with others, to the number of about 200 rescued him, and refused to obey their Lordships' order, saying that Owen was a Commissioner of Array, and must attend the Commission the next morning at Bridgnorth; while the officer was informed that Betton the other delinquent was gone to the King at Nottingham; pray that the rescuers may be sent for as delinquents and that Thomas Hunt, captain of the militia in Shrewsbury and his company may assist the officer to attach them. L. J., V. 364.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Richard Cupman, deputy to the Gentleman Usher of the House of Lords, in support of preceding. 14 Sept. 1642.

Sept. 20. Draft instructions for the Committee to be sent into Ireland. L. J., V. 365. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Draft letter from the Speaker of the House of Lords to Secretary Nicholas, directing him to recommend to the King the preceding instructions, and the persons appointed by the Commons to carry them out. L. J., V. 365. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Instructions for Sir Thomas Pelham and others, Committees of both Houses of Parliament, for the raising money, plate, and horse for the defence of the King and kingdom in the county of Sussex. L. J., V. 365. See C. J., II. 773, where the instructions are given in extenso, but without any names.

Sept. 21. Petition of Richard Betton of London, merchant; upon a petition of Owen George, John Betton, and others, alleging a riot against petitioner and others, an order was made for their attachment, but only petitioner has been taken, who is a merchant in London and a factor for others in the country, so that if he be not soon enlarged, not only himself but others are likely to be utterly undone; prays that the charge against him may be referred to the Lord Chief Justice, and meantime that he may be enlarged on bail. L. J., V. 366.

Sept. 21. Order giving power to the committee for taking account of the contributions to send for witnesses, records, &c. L. J., V. 366. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Draft of preceding.

Sept. 21. Draft order for the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs of London to be added to the committee for the militia there in the place of Sir John Gayre and Sir Jacob Garrett. L. J., V. 366. In extenso.

Sept. 21. Copy of declaration of the Commissioners of the National Assembly of the Kirk of Scotland, met at Edinburgh, thanking providence for inclining the English Parliament to accept the motion of the late assembly for unity in religion and uniformity in kirk government, a work of great difficulty, and likely to meet with opposition from the locusts of the bottomless pit and the policy of worldly men, but for the accomplishment of which they trust in God and contribute their prayers and endeavours; from prelacy, a tree God never planted, and the root of numberless evils in the people and ministers, the people of Scotland have mercifully been delivered, but it has taken deeper root in England, and they rejoice to think that it will be cut down, the stump even pulled up, and the ordinance of God planted in its place; episcopacy removed, the work of reformation will go on rapidly, for this end therefore not only the general assembly but the whole kirk and kingdom will unite their prayers. See L. J., V. 411.

Sept. 21. Petition of George Cantrell and Rebecca his wife, relict and executrix of Richard Butler, deceased, in the behalf of the orphans of the said Butler; in 1636 Butler obtained judgment for 200*l.* against Charles Carey, but got no benefit thereby for Carey obtained privilege under the Earl of Dover; petitioners having now taken Carey in execution upon the judgment, he has produced a protection from the Earl of Nottingham, and has obtained an order from their Lordships for his discharge to the ruin of the orphans; pray that the order may be recalled, for Carey is no menial servant to the Earl, while the Lord Mayor presses to have the debt brought into the Chamber of London, and threatens to sue petitioners for the same for the benefit of the orphans.

Sept. 22. Petition of Sir Henry Bruce, praying for a protection for his safety, or a pass to transport himself, wife, children, family, and goods beyond seas. L. J., V. 367.

Sept. 23. Petition of Sir George Clerke, one of the sheriffs of the city of London, desiring to know how he is to dispose, on his going out of office, of Sir Robert Berkeley, now in his custody. L. J., V. 370. In extenso.

Sept. 23. Answer to the petition of Lucy Lady Hastings against Francis Poulton concerning the manor and rectory of Purton [Pirton], Herts, which were sold in 1633 by Sir Archibald Douglas for 1,500*l.* to Francis Poulton for 60 years, if Sir Archibald and his lady should so long live; with 700*l.* of the purchase money Sir Archibald bought himself an annuity of 100*l.* of Sir Humphrey Stiles, 360*l.* was paid to Benyon who held a mortgage of the premises, 200*l.* to Buck a silkman, who had a judgment against Sir Archibald, and the rest went in payment of debts. L. J., V. 370.

HOUSE OF LORDS.
Calendar.
1642.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of James Kenricke in support of preceding.
2. Declaration by Sir Archibald Douglas entirely disavowing the suit set on foot against Poulton by Lucy Lady Hastings on behalf of herself and Lady Eleanor Douglas.
- Sept. 23. Petition of Dame Elizabeth Slingsby, widow: prays that Sir Faithful Fortescue, from whom she can get no answer to a Bill in Chancery respecting the settlement made on the marriage of his son with her daughter, on pretence of his service for the public, may not be allowed to depart until he has made answer, the matters being within his own privity, and not requiring above two or three hours' time. L. J., V. 371.
- Sept. 23. Draft order for soldiers to march to the rendezvous. L. J., V. 371. In extenso.
- Sept. 23. Amendments in the Scots treaty for sending men to Ulster, and agreement respecting the same. L. J., V. 371. In extenso.
- Sept. 23. Petition of Thomas Pitt and others; some soldiers, under command of Colonel Hollis, before the order of restraint, plundered the house of Mr. Civel, a papist, and openly sold the goods in the market, some of which petitioners ignorantly bought, in some cases at Civel's request for fear the soldiers should burn them; Civel afterwards procured an order from their Lordships for petitioners to appear and answer for their conduct, they appeared but could not be heard from press of business, and by Lord Mandeville's wish they departed till further notice, but were again summoned and committed for contempt of the former order; pray for discharge without payment of fees, and that Civel may be ordered on receiving again his goods, to reimburse them what they paid for them. L. J., V. 372.
- Sept. 23. Draft order for the order respecting the Capuchin friars at Denmark House to be sent to Mr. Strickland, and notes of other proceedings. L. J., V. 372.
- Sept. 23. Letter from the Lords Justices of Ireland at Dublin Castle to the Lord Speaker. They enclose a copy of their letter of the 24th of June last concerning the complaint of Henry Stewart and others after which they had hoped for a stay of all proceedings thereon; but they understand that the letter has not been read, while Mr. Stewart earnestly solicits further proceedings, they desire his Lordship to procure that their letter should be read, and that consideration may be had of the position and present circumstances of the accused, who are zealously engaged in the preservation of Ireland and ought not to be recompensed with dishonour.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Sir Wm. Parsons one of the Lords Justices of Ireland, Sir Richard Bolton, Lord Chancellor, Sir Adam Loftus, Vice Treasurer, Sir Gerrard Lowther, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, Sir George Radcliffe, and Sir Robert Meredith, Privy Councillors; petitioners despoiled by the rebellion, which they are daily toiling to suppress, are now threatened by their Lordships with imprisonment unless they pay 1,900*l.* damages to Henry Stewart and James Gray for a supposed crime in which they were most innocent, as they would have proved had their counsel been heard. Pray to be heard in favour of a rehearing of the cause. See L. J., V. 345.
2. Petition of Henry Stuart; is exhausted in estate by his long attendance, and unable to pay his creditors; will do so proportionably out of the first money he shall receive under the ordinance of both Houses; prays for protection for a time. See L. J., V. 345.
- Sept. 24. Petition of Sir George Garrett, one of the sheriffs of the city of London, desiring to know how to dispose, when he goes out of office, of the Earl of Portland, now in his custody. L. J., V. 372. In extenso.
- Sept. 24. Petition of Archibald Armstrong. John Scott, Dean of York, agreed to repay a debt of 200*l.*, and interest to petitioner by half-yearly payments of 50*l.*, to be made by Henry Earl of Danby out of the rectory of Pickering, but when petitioner had only received 50*l.*, Dr. Laud Archbishop of Canterbury, under pretence of relieving the Dean of his creditors, interfered at the Council Board to prevent any further payment; prays that the Earl of Danby may be ordered to make the half-yearly payments until the debt be satisfied. L. J., V. 372.
- [Sept. 26.] Petition of certain distressed ministers lately come from Ireland, deprived of their spiritual and temporal livings by the rebels; pray to be relieved out of the collections made the next fast-day, as they can obtain no relief out of the collection made pursuant to their Lordships' former order. L. J., V. 373.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 30th of August referred to in preceding. L. J., V. 333. In extenso.
- Sept. 26. Two drafts of order for payment of 450*l.* to Captains Church and Beresford. L. J., V. 373. In extenso.
- Sept. 27. Draft order for payment of 100*l.* to Sir Pierce Crosby in regard of his great losses in Ireland and his great deserts. L. J., V. 374. In extenso.
- Sept. 27. Draft instructions for the committees at Lincoln. L. J., V. 374. In extenso.
- Sept. 27. Petition of distressed ministers of Ireland, praying for further relief out of contributions to be made in London, Westminster, Southwark, and the suburbs thereof.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition undated.
- Sept. 27. Affidavit of Thomas Pritty and William Lynch, that Hercules Trew and others killed a doe in the Moat Park, Windsor. See L. J., V. 459.
- Sept. 29. Two drafts of order for raising 1,000 dragoons with some troops of horse to be sent into Lancashire. L. J., V. 376. In extenso.
- Sept. 29. Draft order for payment of 3*l.* per diem to the committees to be sent to Ireland. L. J., V. 377. In extenso.
- Sept. 29. Copy of the declaration of the Secret Council of Scotland to Parliament, congratulating themselves on the prospect of unity in religion and uniformity in church government in the two kingdoms. Read in the House 11 Oct. See L. J., V. 393.
- Sept. 29. Copy of the declaration of the Scotch Commissioners of the peace, to Parliament; are anxious to do all in their power to compose the distractions in England, and for this end have sent some of their number to use their endeavours with His Majesty and the Parliament, and desire a safe conduct for them. Read in H. L. 11 Oct. See L. J., V. 394.
- Sept. 30. Petition of Sir Edmond Reve, one of His Majesty's Justices of the Court of Common Pleas; has been visited with a long and dangerous sickness and prays that his attendance may be dispensed with until his health is better. L. J., V. 377.
- Sept. 30. Petition of Richard Le Grand, a French merchant and protestant. Crispin Desormeaux, a French merchant, has detained from petitioner about 400*l.* and goods to the value of 230*l.*, and has arrested him for a pretended debt of 500*l.*; prays that the whole matter may be referred to the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench to examine and report thereon to the House, that petitioner may have relief. L. J., V. 377.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Sir John Brampton. The whole matter turns on the question whether the debt of 500*l.* alleged by Desormeaux to be due to him from Le Grand be true or not, and it was to save his goods from seizure till this point were decided that Le Grand went to prison 3 Oct 1642. L. J., V. 382. In extenso.
2. Further statement in the cause.
3. Petition of Richard Le Grand. Petitioner has laid in prison for eleven months at the suit of Desormeaux. Prays an order for his discharge upon common bail, and that his goods may be delivered to him.
4. Petition of Crispin Desormeaux. Prays that Le Grand's petition may be rejected as the statements contained in it are utterly false.
5. Petition of Le Grand, to Henry Earl of Holland. Prays that the word discharge may be substituted for the word security in the order made by their Lordships for petitioner's benefit.
- Sept. 30. Names of deer stealers in Somersham Park. L. J., V. 377.
- Sept. 30. Petition of Sir Thomas Dawes. In 1641, the Commons having voted the farmers of the customs delinquents for contracting with His Majesty for the farms before they were granted by bill, some of them offered 192,000*l.* by way of composition, which was accepted, and 31,495*l.* 11*s.* 8*d.* was apportioned upon the estate of Sir Abraham Dawes, petitioner's father, long since deceased, and now a Bill has been sent up from the Commons against the whole estate of petitioner and his father, and the question before their Lordships is, whether children are to be utterly undone for an error of their father not accused in his lifetime; petitioner was besides left engaged for his father's debts to the amount of 60,000*l.*, and has been violently prosecuted by his creditors ever since the proceedings of the House of Commons in the matter, so that he dare not go out of his house for fear of arrest to the great damage of his estate and business. Prays their Lordships to grant him the same protection, whilst the Bill is before the House, that was given by the Commons in an order of the 11th of April last, that he may be able to instruct his counsel. L. J., V. 377.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Commons mentioned in preceding. C. J., II. 521. In extenso.
2. Another petition of Sir Thomas Dawes to the same effect.

Sept. 30. Petition of Sir Thomas Crymes and others, creditors of Sir Thomas Dawes. The Bill for the better payment of Sir Thomas Dawes' debts to His Majesty and others, has been five weeks before their Lordships, but only once read on account of press of business, whilst Sir Thomas is receiving the profits of his lands worth 2,000 per annum. Petitioners pray that the Bill may be read as soon as possible, and that the rents due at Michaelmas may be sequestrated towards satisfaction of the claims upon the estate, and that meantime no extents may issue against Dawes' estate. L. J., V. 377.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Edward Russell, Esquire. Prays that Sir Thomas Dawes' Bill may not be allowed to pass until he has paid or secured to petitioner 1,000*l.*, advanced by him to the late Sir Abraham Dawes.

Sept. 30. Draft order referring the two preceding petitions to the consideration of the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench. L. J., V. 377.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the Lord Chief Justice. The facts of the case are as stated by the petitioners, the extents desired to be stayed by the creditors are extents at the King's suit for the debt due by Sir Thomas Dawes. 4 Oct. 1642.

Sept. 30. Instructions for the Committee to be sent into Worcestershire. L. J., V. 377. In extenso.

Sept. 30. Request of Anne Roberts, wife of one of His Majesty's musicians, for a pass for herself, with her children, servants, and baggage into France, her native country.

[Sept.] Petition of Peter Smart, one of the prebendaries of Durham. Petitioner, during eighteen months that he has prosecuted his suit against Dr. Cosens and others upon the impeachment of the House of Commons, has spent above 1,200*l.*, and has himself become heavily indebted and many of his friends beside, while Dr. Cosens and the others, though under recognizance to appear, have without leave gone down into the country, leaving only a solicitor to follow their business, and are embroiling the kingdom and endeavouring to raise both men and money (as they pretend) for the King, but really that whilst the public troubles increase they may escape their particular deserved punishments; while petitioner is excluded by them from his prebend, and reduced to extreme poverty, and they scoff at justice and rail upon the Parliament. Prays that a speedy day may be appointed for the conclusion of the cause, and that in case Dr. Cosens and the others do not appear he may have the benefit of their recognizances for his support and payment of his debts.

Oct. 1. Petition of William Arundell, Esq. In his former petition, petitioner showed that Lord Baltimore had influenced the late Lord Arundell, petitioner's father, in his last sickness, to charge certain lands and manors in a way he would never have done when in health. It was then directed that the Lord Keeper should proceed in the matter so far as the deeds were concerned, but that the criminal part should be reserved for their Lordships' hearing, but Lord Baltimore is endeavouring to get the manors sold in order to defeat their Lordships' intentions. Petitioner prays that stay may be made in these proceedings. L. J., V. 379.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Copy of order for Lord Baltimore to answer. L. J., V. 379.
3. Petition and answer of Cecil Lord Baltimore. Mr. Arundell's cause has been three times tried in the Court of Chancery, and on each occasion a decree has been pronounced in petitioner's favour. Prays that he may be freed from any further scandal and clamour, and that the execution of the final decree may proceed according to the rules and course of justice.

Oct. 1. Draft order of both houses for the magazine of arms at Droitwich to be kept by the bailiffs and officers of the town. L. J., V. 379. In extenso.

Oct. 1. Draft order respecting the 300*l.* collected for coat and conduct money, in Worcestershire. L. J., V. 379. In extenso.

Oct. 1. Draft order for payment of 2*l.* per diem to Captain William Tucker, assistant to the Committee going to Ireland. L. J., V. 379. In extenso.

Oct. 1. Draft order concerning the winter guard of shipping for England and Ireland, with list of the ships. L. J., V. 379. In extenso. (Two papers.)

Annexed:—

1. List of ships, headed "Guard for Ireland."

Oct. 1. Petition of Frederick Gibb, clerk, minister of Boxstead, in the county of Suffolk. Was sent for as a delinquent, and is now in the custody of the serjeant at arms, for reading the King's proclamation, concerning levies, in Boxstead Church. Prays pardon for his offence, which he committed in ignorance, never having heard of any order of the Parliament against publishing the proclamation. C. J., II. 789.

Oct. 3. Order in the cause between Le Grand and Desormeaux, for the goods of the former to be restored to him. L. J., V. 380. In extenso.

Oct. 3. Names of persons to receive passes to travel. L. J., V. 380. In extenso.

Oct. 3. Petition of Francis Nicholls, of Westminster, poulterer. About twelve months since he took a piece of ground near Farnham, in Surrey, from Captain Coldham, captain of the trained bands there, and spent above 500*l.* in turning it into a warren and stocking it with conies, but now there are a multitude of disorderly people, who have of late destroyed all the deer in the Marquis of Hertford's park, and are destroying the deer in two parks of the Bishop of Winchester, at Farnham, and threaten when they have done there to destroy petitioner's warren, of which he is in hourly fear, and prays their Lordships to make a speedy order to protect him from ruin. L. J., V. 380.

Oct. 3. Petition of John Morris, servant in ordinary to the Prince, His Highness. Complains of arrest in August last, at the suit of Winkfield Molesworth, who said the case was now altered, and that the King's and Prince's servants had not now the same privileges, prays for release. L. J., V. 381. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same, undated.

Oct. 3. Order on preceding petition for discharge of Morris, and for Molesworth and the serjeants to be sent for as delinquents. L. J., V. 381.

Oct. 3. Draft order for issuing ammunition for Ireland. L. J., V. 381. In extenso.

Oct. 3. Draft order for the sheriffs of London and Middlesex to send one company of the trained bands to attend upon Parliament. L. J., V. 381. In extenso.

Oct. 3. Draft order for Captain Thomas Badnege to be a captain under Lord Kerry, in the room of Captain Thomas Watts. L. J., V. 381. In extenso.

Oct. 3. Petition of Adam Viscount Loftus, of Ely, in the kingdom of Ireland, against Sir George Wentworth, for not making repayment to petitioner pursuant to order of their Lordships. L. J., V. 381. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Loftus in support of preceding. 20 Sept. 1642.

Oct. 3. Order providing security for those who should advance horses and arms for the thousand dragoons for Lancashire. L. J., V. 382. In extenso.

Oct. 3. Draft of preceding.

Oct. 4. Examination of William White, of the parish of "St. Pulcher's," London; he wrought as a printer in the house of Gregory Dexter, and lately by his command printed a book called "King James's Judgment of a King and of a Tyrant," but does not know who was the author of the book or how the copies were distributed. Examination of Abigail, wife of Gregory Dexter; after her husband went away the book was printed in her house and by her order; she knows who was the author but refuses to name him. L. J., V. 385.

Oct. 4. Two drafts of the orders appointing Mr. Hotham and the other committees in Yorkshire commissioners for receiving, money, horses, and plate, &c. L. J., V. 386. In extenso.

Oct. 4. Petition of Symon Norton, prisoner in the Fleet, to the Committee for the safety of the kingdom; petitioner, as a sworn servant to His Majesty, was commanded to attend in person at Stoneley [Stoneleigh], in the county of Warwick, and after his departure thence upon his own affairs into Leicestershire, was apprehended and brought up prisoner to the Fleet, where he has remained fourteen weeks: since his departure into Leicestershire, his house near Coventry has been plundered, a barn burnt, timber trees cut down, and a manor house and barns entirely demolished; petitioner who rents much land in that neighbourhood, and employs many poor people, prays that he may be enlarged on bail, as if he should not receive his rents he will be unable to maintain himself and family, or pay his labourers their wages. C. J., II. 792.

Oct. 5. Message from the Commons, with an order for the Earl of Northumberland to be Lord Lieutenant of the county of Surrey, and for James Maine to be a Deputy Lieutenant for the county of Hertford. L. J., V. 386. In extenso.

Oct. 5. Two drafts of the instructions for Lord Wilmoughby of Parham, and the rest of the committees sent into Yorkshire. L. J., V. 387.

Oct. 5. Petition of Archibald Lord Archbishop of Cassell, in the kingdom of Ireland; has lost his worldly estate worth 9,000*l.* sterling, and what is worse, is put from his calling in preaching the Gospel; prays that unless he may have employment in some part of England, a pass may be granted for himself, his wife and family into Holland till peace be established in Ireland. L. J., V. 387.

Oct. 5. Petition of Thomas Hyde, Keeper of the great park at Farnham, in the county of Surrey. Andrew Wisdome and others, to the number of 100, on Sunday the 25th of September last, and on the last fast-day, and since, have riotously killed with dogs and guns, and carried away 200 deer at least out of the great park, and pulled down the pales and killed divers cattle, whilst others have been lost in consequence; they threatened to kill petitioner, who told them it were more fitting they should be at church according to the order of Parliament, saying they cared not what Parliament did or said; petitioner prays that they may be apprehended and brought before the House.

Oct. 5. Affidavit of Thomas Hyde in support of preceding. L. J., V. 387.

Oct. 5. Petition of Robert Earl of Warwick; the letter office of England was created by letters patent in June 1637, and granted to Thomas Witherings for life, whose estate is now vested in petitioner; in July 1640, the office was sequestered by the King's privy seal into the hands of Philip Burlamachi, who was directed by proclamation to execute the office; about the beginning of this Parliament a petition for relief was presented to the House of Commons, who, after hearing both sides, voted that the sequestration was illegal, that Burlamachi should account for the profits since the sequestration, and that the proclamation in pursuance of the sequestration was void, in all which their Lordships concurred; Burlamachi has not obeyed these votes duly served on him, and petitioner prays that he may be restored to possession of the office and Burlamachi punished for his disobedience. L. J., V. 387.

Oct. 5. Draft order for payment to Sir Thomas Barrington of the remainder of the 4,000*l.* appointed to be spent out of the contributions of the county of Essex, on arms, &c. for the county. L. J., V. 387. In extenso.

Oct. 5. Draft order for the Mayor of Colchester, to take charge of the arms and ammunition of the Countess of Rivers, at St. Osith, Essex. L. J., V. 388. In extenso.

Oct. 5. Certificate of the Lord Chief Justice in the case of Richard Betton against Owen George and others, relating to proceedings respecting the will of Dame Margaret Eyton.

Oct. 6. Petition of Scipio Le Squyre, Vice-Chamberlain of the Exchequer; prays to be restored, pursuant to the Lord Chief Justice's report, to a house in Long Acre, from which he was ousted by Sergeant Francis. L. J., V. 388.

Oct. 6. Petition of Sir Alexander Gordon; petitioner having been a servant to His Majesty for many years, and to King James before, was promised by the King a warrant for a certain sum of money for maintenance, but he fell into so severe a sickness from which he is not yet entirely recovered, that he could not get the warrant signed, meantime the rebels have seized all his estate in Ireland, and forced his wife and children to fly for safety to some remote place; prays for a pass to go to the King to get the warrant signed, and then to Ireland to seek his wife and children, and transport them to Scotland or elsewhere. L. J., V. 388.

Oct. 6. Draft declaration directing the Lords Justices of Ireland and others to assist the committee sent thither. L. J., V. 388. In extenso.

Oct. 6. Draft order for the defence of the town of Manchester. L. J., V. 388. In extenso.

Oct. 6. Draft order for 8,980*l.* 5*s.* to be paid to the several persons who have supplied corn, victual, clothing, and other necessities for the services of Ireland. L. J., V. 389. In extenso.

Oct. 6. Affidavit of Richard Le Grand, that John Beverlette refuses to re-deliver to him his goods pursuant to their Lordships' order. See L. J., V. 397, &c.

Oct. 6. Information of Samuel Crossman and others, that William Price, of Bradfield St. Clare, in the county of Suffolk, called the members of both Houses base rascals, &c.

Oct. 7. Petition of Owen George, John Betton, and Edward Davies; that their cause against Richard Betton, senr., and Richard Betton, junr., concerning the administration of Lady Eyton's estate, may not be heard until all the parties and witnesses can appear. L. J., V. 389.

Oct. 7. Draft order for the Earl of Leicester, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, to bring into the House his instructions lately received from the King. L. J., V. 389. In extenso.

Oct. 7. Draft order for payment of money due to Captain Dawson (or Davison) and others. L. J., V. 389. In extenso.

Oct. 7. Draft order for Oliver Pleddall, to have the Lieutenant's place of the troop of horse under Captain St. John, in Ireland. L. J., V. 389. In extenso.

Oct. 7. Petition of Dame Barbara Villiers, stating that for more than 20 years she has enjoyed a house in the Dean's Yard, Westminster, and that long before her time and since there was only a lodge at the gate for a porter for letting people in and out, that under colour of a lodge a great structure has been built with several sheds upon the waste ground and against the wall of her house without her consent, depriving her not only of the air and prospect, but of all privacy in her best rooms; and now higher stories and chimneys are being built, which will be still greater annoyance to her; she is unwilling that her landlord, Mr. Littcott, now employed in the service of Parliament, should suffer in his absence, and prays on his behalf and her own for stay of the buildings and for further consideration of the case. L. J., V. 390.

Oct. 7. Petition of George Wall, clerk, chaplain to the Earl of Essex; the patronage of the church of Newington Butts, Surrey, has for almost 100 years been enjoyed by the Bishops of Worcester by virtue of an exchange with the Crown, but on the church becoming void about eight years ago, the Archbishop of Canterbury collated Thomas Stevens to the church, whereupon a quære impedit was brought against the Archbishop and Stevens by Mr. Bludworth, the grantee of the Bishop of Worcester, and upon a trial at the Common Pleas, a verdict was given in his favour, but Stevens having brought a writ of error merely for delay, Mr. Bludworth overruled by the Archbishop, waived the Bishop's presentation and accepted the living upon the Archbishop's collation; the Bishop of Worcester, not knowing anything of this, granted the next presentation of the living to Nicholas Wall, petitioner's brother, in trust to present petitioner, then domestic chaplain to the Bishop, since which grant, the living having become void, the Archbishop has collated Mr. Meggs, parson of St. Margaret Pattens, London; petitioner's cause was formerly referred by their Lordships to the common law, but having brought a quære impedit, he finds that he cannot make a declaration, and therefore cannot have any remedy in law, in consequence of the said collation of Mr. Bludworth by collusion; prays that a trial may be directed to be had of the Bishop of Worcester's right to present, independently of this collusive collation. L. J., V. 390.

Oct. 7. Instructions for the Earl of Essex to deliver the petition of both Houses to the King with all speed. L. J., V. 390. In extenso.

Oct. 7. Draft order for an allowance to be made to Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Chambers, and Mr. Willis, attending the Commissioners for Ireland. L. J., V. 390. In extenso.

Oct. 11. Petition of Wingfield Molsworth, citizen and grocer of London. Petitioner was committed by their Lordships on the ground that he had arrested John Morris, embroiderer to the Prince, contrary to privilege; petitioner who acted in ignorance, is heartily sorry for his offence, and having withdrawn his action, prays to be released on bail, as he has nothing but his trade to maintain himself, his wife, and children. L. J., V. 394.

Oct. 11. Certificate of Sir Richard Stonnes, sheriff of the county of Huntingdon, and others; having received their Lordships' order for the apprehension of the delinquents (who killed the deer in Somersham Park), they sent to the house at Old Hurst, where the delinquents were supposed to be, but the officers were refused admittance. The offenders are desperate men and cannot be apprehended without raising the power of the county, for which there is no authority under the order of the House, and therefore further directions are desired in the matter. L. J., V. 394.

Oct. 11. Draft order for Captain Tucker to be admitted as assistant to the committee sent to Ireland. L. J., V. 395. In extenso.

Oct. 11. Petition of Daniell Farvack and Isaac Le Gay, of London, merchants; tobacco formerly belonging to Anthony Hooper, but adjudged to petitioners by order of their Lordships, has been seized in Guernsey by John Basley, who, in the absence of petitioners has obtained a sentence there in his favour, from which they have appealed. Pray that the case may be referred to the referees engaged in deciding between Anthony Hooper and his creditors. L. J., V. 395. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of summons made upon the appeal in the Isle of Guernsey. 9 Sept. 1642.

Oct. 11. Order for the Earl of Warwick to repair to Parliament, and for Captain Batten to be Vice-Admiral in his absence. L. J., V. 396. In extenso.

Oct. 11. Draft of preceding.

Oct. 11. Draft order appointing Christopher White, Keeper of the Gatehouse. L. J., V. 396. In extenso.

Oct. 11. Draft order to prevent the conveyance of arms, &c. from Bristol to the Marquess of Hertford, in Wales. L. J., V. 396. In extenso.

Oct. 11. Draft order for Captain Venn to dispose of arms, &c. L. J., V. 396. In extenso.

Oct. 11. Order directing the sheriffs of Yorkshire to assist the Committees in execution of the militia there. L. J., V. 396. In extenso.

Oct. 11. Draft of preceding.

Oct. 11. Informations against Captain Kettleby, captain of one of His Majesty's ships for the defence of the coasts of Ireland, who deserted that service. C. J., II. 803.

i. Copy of the King's warrant to Captain Kettleby, Admiral of the fleet on the Irish coast, to come to Newcastle. 23 June 1642.

ii. Copy of the King's warrant to the captain of any ship to receive the Duke of Richmond and Lennox on board and convey him abroad. 17 Sept. 1642.

iii. Examination of the master and officers of the "Swallow." That the morning after the storm, which happened on Michaelmas day, the captain called them all into the cabin, and tried to persuade them to agree to alter the ship's course and steer for Holland, but they said that they were under promise to repair to the Downs, the boatswain adding that there were fifty men on board who would cut the halliards rather than consent to such a step; upon which the captain turned them out of the cabin as if they had been traitors.

Oct. 12. Application from Mr. George Howard and others for leave to travel. L. J., V. 397.

Oct. 12. Letter from George Darell to his dear tutor, Mr. Acred. Desires his good services with his Lordship (the Earl of Mulgrave) that he would procure his release from prison, for the sergeant when he saw the writer's protection said, that if the debt were but ten groats he would not release him for any lord in England. L. J., V. 397.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from the Earl of Mulgrave to the person that arrested his servant George Darell. Will question him for this affront to the privileges of Parliament, unless upon sight of this letter his servant be released. (Undated.)

Oct. 12. Petition of Giles Thorne, clerk. Petitioner has been seven weeks committed on account of objection taken to some passages in his sermons; the case has been partly heard, and he prays that a speedy day may be appointed for the further hearing, or that he may be bailed. L. J., V. 397.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of Thorne to be bailed. 14 Feb. 1642-3.

Oct. 12. Draft order directing the mayor, &c. of Exeter to fortify and defend the town and castle. L. J., V. 398. In extenso.

Oct. 12. Order for indemnity of the Yarmouth men for seizing a ship from Rotterdam with men and arms for Newcastle. L. J., V. 398. In extenso.

Oct. 12. Draft of preceding.

Oct. 12. Draft order for continuing forces in the county of Dorset. L. J., V. 398. In extenso.

Oct. 12. Draft order for payment of 300*l.* for the fortification of the castle and town of Exeter. L. J., V. 399. In extenso.

Oct. 12. Draft order for payment of 68*l.* 8*s.* to Sergeant Major Warren. L. J., V. 399. In extenso.

Oct. 13. Petition of Crispin Desormeaux, merchant in Paris, in France, by Giles Vanbrugg his procurator. Richard Le Grand, a pretended merchant, but formerly a Jesuit, has presented a false petition to their Lordships, which was referred to the Lord Chief Justice, and certain goods, now in the hands of John Beverlett, were ordered upon reading his report to be delivered up to Le Grand; these goods form part of goods out of which Le Grand has cozened many merchants in Paris, and should go in satisfaction of claims upon him. Petitioner prays to be heard before the goods are surrendered by Beverlett. See L. J., V. 399.

Oct. 13. Petition of Matthew Francis. The 10th instant was appointed for hearing the cause between petitioner and Scipio Le Squire, and whilst attending with their counsel and witnesses they agreed to refer all the matters in dispute to their counsel for decision; but afterwards Squire went back from his agreement. Petitioner prays for an order confirming the agreement.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Francis in support of preceding.

Oct. 14. Petition of Sarah Berry. Petitioner after enduring great brutality from her husband, who attempted her life and then defamed her honour and turned her out of doors, was obliged at length to proceed against him in the Spiritual Court for separation and maintenance; the case depended there for a year but she could not bring her husband to answer, and that court has now no power to compel him. Prays that her case may be referred to a committee of their Lordships. L. J., V. 399.

Oct. 14. Message from the Commons, with a note for the appointment of a select committee to take care of the affairs of Ireland. L. J., V. 400. In extenso.

Oct. 14. Draft order for payment of 100*l.* to Viscountess Baltinglasse. L. J., V. 400. In extenso.

Oct. 14. Draft order for payment of 10,316*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* to the Treasurer at Wars for 6,000 muskets, &c. for the Scottish army in Ireland. L. J., V. 400. In extenso.

Oct. 14. Draft order for courts of guard, and posts, bars, and chains to be set up near Westminster. L. J., V. 400. In extenso.

Oct. 15. Order that the officers of the Court of Wards shall not henceforth pass the annual pensions arising out of that Court to the Duke of Richmond and others. L. J., V. 401. In extenso.

Oct. 15. Draft of preceding.

Oct. 15. Draft order for Giles Greene to be a commissioner for the customs. L. J., V. 401. In extenso.

Oct. 15. Order for erecting courts of guard in the suburbs, &c. L. J., V. 401. In extenso.

Oct. 15. Draft of preceding.

Oct. 15. Message from the Commons, with resolutions for securing those who do not contribute to the charge of the Commonwealth, &c. L. J., V. 402. In extenso.

Oct. 15. Draft declaration for putting the counties near the city of London in a posture of defence. L. J., V. 402. In extenso.

Oct. 15. Certificate of inhabitants of the county of Middlesex to the Lords and Commons, that Leonard Leonards of East Smithfield, is a man of quality and approved trust, and fit to be appointed captain to command and train the inhabitants of St. Katharine's and East Smithfield as a foot company, they humbly desire that their election may be confirmed by Parliament.

Oct. 17. Draft of the answer given by the House of Lords to Alderman Pennington, when presented for their approbation. L. J., V. 404. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Another draft with instructions respecting his taking the usual oaths before the Barons of the Exchequer.

Oct. 17. Draft order for payment of 40,000*l.* to the Scots Commissioners towards the brotherly assistance. L. J., V. 405. In extenso.

Oct. 17. Draft order for disarming Edward Lawrance and others in Dorsetshire. L. J., V. 405. In extenso.

Oct. 17. Draft order for payment of 2,000*l.* to Sir John Bamfield and Mr. Waddon for defence of Devon and Cornwall. L. J., V. 405. In extenso.

Oct. 17. Petition of Thomas Lord Coventry, he submits himself to the House, and is sorry to have offended in replying to their Lordships' summons, but he had also received His Majesty's summons to attend him at York. L. J., V. 405. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Petition of John Escott; petitioner has undergone part of their Lordships' sentence, having stood in the pillory in Cheapside and at Westminster; he has lain in Newgate, where the sickness has been very hot for more than nine months, by which his health is impaired, and his estate consumed by excessive fees. Prays to have liberty on bail in London and within six miles round. L. J., V. 406.

Oct. 19. Petition of Thomas Graves and William Shawe, in behalf of themselves and others, tenants of Sir Robert Carre, of lands, settled for the payment of 400*l.* per annum for his children's use; by order of their Lordships of the 20th September, made upon a complaint of Lady Carre, petitioners were directed to pay their rents into the hands of the Earl of Northumberland and others, feoffees in trust for the use of the children; Sir Robert affirms that the 400*l.* has always been duly paid for the use of the children, and directs the tenants to pay the rents to him; they fearing to incur the penalties contained in their leases, pray to be discharged from obedience to their Lordships' order. L. J., V. 406.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Richard King, Esq. As a neighbour of Sir Robert Carre and his lady upon some differences between them, he allowed his name amongst others to be used as lessee for years to the Earl of Northumberland and others under a rent of 600*l.* per annum for the lady's use, but never occupied a foot of the lands or received a penny of the rents, but has permitted them to be disposed of as before by Sir Robert Carre's direction. Petitioner is involved in a suit at law about them, and prays to be discharged from obedience to their Lordships' order of the 20th of September.

2. Copy of order mentioned in preceding. L. J., V. 364.

[Oct. 19.] Petition of Richard Le Grand. Petitioner has been eleven months in prison at the suit of one Desormeaux and his goods attached; and by order of the 3rd of October it was ordered that the goods should be delivered up as having been unjustly attached (L. J., V. 382); and by an order of the 13th of October that John Beverlett should be attached for not delivering up the said goods (L. J., V. 399), and that petitioner should accept a declaration from Desormeaux before his discharge, but no declaration has been put in. Petitioner prays that he may be enlarged on bail and have his goods restored. See L. J., V. 406, &c.

Annexed:—

1. Complaint of (Richard Le Grand).

2. Copy of further order in confirmation of former orders. L. J., V. 406.

Oct. 19. Petition of the parishioners of Ryers [Ryars], in the county of Kent. Petitioners have for more than a year past been without any resident minister, though Mr. Wm. Walton, the undoubted patron, has presented Mr. Sybbalds, Bachelor of Divinity, of Aberdeen, of whom they approve, but he is kept away in consequence of Mr. Trott, vicar of Starefield, having raised a pretended claim to the living. Petitioners pray that Mr. Sybbalds' presentation may be confirmed. L. J., V. 406.

Oct. 19. Draft order for Mr. Trott to answer.

Oct. 19. Draft of the propositions for the raising of some of the trained bands of the several counties for the defence of London. L. J., V. 407. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Draft order appointing the Earl of Northumberland and others, Commissioners of the Navy. L. J., V. 407. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Petition of Sir Edward Henden, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, for leave of absence on account of his health. L. J., V. 408. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Draft propositions for raising money, &c., in Devonshire. L. J., V. 408. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Draft ordinance for the sending out ships with letters of marque for relief of Ireland. L. J., V. 409. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Draft order in confirmation of the order of 31st May last, excusing the two ministers of the Island of Guernsey, nominated by Act of Parliament, from attendance at the assembly of Divines. See L. J., V. 94.

Oct. 19. Letter from the Lords Justices of Ireland to the Speaker of the House of Lords, recapitulating the arguments contained in their former letters for the dismissal of the complaint of Henry Stewart and John Gray against Sir John Parsons and other members of the Irish Council Board, especially as Stewart and Gray never paid the fine complained of, or any fees whilst in prison. L. J., V. 488. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. A brief of the manner of the proceedings in Stewart's business against the Privy Council of Ireland in the Lords House of Parliament.

2. Petition of Sir Robert Meredyth. Was commanded by order from their Lordships to appear on the 1st July 1642 to answer the complaint of Henry Stewart and others, but as so few of the Council were at that time resident, he could not obtain leave to attend, and besides had been robbed of all his horses and goods by the rebels. Prays that the former directions in the cause may be suspended until he has been heard in his defence. (Undated.)

Oct. 20. Draft ordinance for making Philip Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery chief commander in the West. This ordinance was sent up from the Commons this day, and the Lords added the names of certain counties, and then referred the ordinance or commission to the Committee for the safety of the kingdom, after which it appears to have been dropped. It is noted "Not passed." L. J., V. 410.

Annexed:—

1. Names of counties added by the Lords.

Oct. 20. Draft answers of the Lords and Commons. L. J., V. 410, 411. In extenso.

- Oct. 25. Draft order for an allowance to be made for support of the King's younger children. L. J., V. 423. In extenso.
- Oct. 25. Copy of the declaration of both Houses in answer to His Majesty's declaration, intituled "His Majesty's declaration to all his loving subjects after his late victory against the rebels on Sunday, Oct. 23, 1642." Rushworth, II., iii. 41. In extenso. See L. J., V. 423, where it is said that "a large declaration, 'being an answer to a former declaration of the King, 'which lays a scandal upon the Parliament,' was read and approved and ordered to be printed and published. The last sheet of this copy is wanting."
- Oct. 26. Copy of the King's proclamation, offering pardon to those who would submit to him, except those whom he has proclaimed traitors. This proclamation was to have been sent by herald to the Earl of Essex, and to have been dispersed in his army, but was forgotten in the hurry preceding the battle of Edgehill, which took place on the 23rd. The proclamation is entered in extenso. L. J., V. 423.
- Oct. [27]. Petition of William Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. Upon sight of their Lordships' order of the 24th instant (for restraining the prisoners in the Tower), he dismissed all his servants save two. Prays that beside his two servants, "who are to make his bed, and do other things necessary for his age, going on with threescore and ten years of a weary life, their Lordships would favourably allow him a butler and a cook, without which he knows not how to live, 'being not placed in any house in the Tower, but in a 'solitary room, destitute of all company and other 'help."
- Oct. 28. List of Committee for receiving the despatches from the Committees in the several counties, with their instructions. C. J., II. 825. In extenso.
- Oct. 28. Letter from the Lords Justices of Ireland at Dublin Castle to Mr. Speaker. Since their letter of the 12th instant, they have been earnestly solicited to send supplies of all kinds to Connaught, most of the men sent thither having died of mere want, whilst the rest are ready to disband, and the writers can do nothing without supplies from England. They have similar requests from the garrisons in Leinster, especially for powder, of which their own store is very short, and they therefore must repeat their former requests for speedy supply. The regiments under Lord Conway, Sir William Stewart, and others, are all in great distress, and the writers unable to help them. The rebels have lately published a proclamation, of which a copy is enclosed (wanting); they also enclose a copy of an Act of Council for celebrating the 23rd of Oct. by a public thanksgiving; they are in great want of mills, as they have all been destroyed, either by the rebels or their own soldiers, and request that a hundred steel mills may be sent them, and further that the drugs for which they sent by their agents may be hastened over, and those persons punished who supplied bad drugs on a former occasion. By their letters of the 7th of June they requested that if they were not to have the command of the Scotch forces in Ulster, those forces might be moved from Carrickfergus to Londonderry and other places more convenient for the defence of the province; this they again earnestly repeat, fearing that if it be not done the rebels will fall upon and reduce Londonderry. In derogation of the Royal authority the rebels have established courts of judicature, elected knights of the shires, and assembled in a pretended Parliament at Kilkenny. In conclusion, the writers repeat their earnest request for supplies of men, money, arms, powder, match, and other provisions mentioned in their former despatches. See C. J., II. 832.

Enclosing—

Three printed copies of an Act of Council of the Lords Justices of Ireland, enjoining that the 23rd of October should henceforth be observed in all churches throughout Ireland, in thankful remembrance of the discovery of the plot for the seizure of the castle and town of Dublin and massacre of all the British and Protestants there, discovered only a few hours before its intended execution.

Oct. 29. Letter from the gentlemen of the county of Devon at Exeter to the Committee for the safety of the kingdom: have come from Plymouth to confer with the Deputy Lieutenants of Devon about the raising of men and money to oppose the malignants in the writers' own county, who grow stronger and stronger every day. The gentlemen of Devon are willing, but want money and arms; they have written to the gentlemen of Somerset, Wilts, &c., for assistance. If the Earl of Pembroke were to come, there would be a cheerful access to him; meantime they desire that Colonel Bampfild, with his regiment, may be sent to Exeter. See L. J., V. 425.

[Oct.] Petition of Captain Robert Slingsbie and Captain Baldwin Wake: have already been seven weeks in prison, and have had no benefit of the order made on their former petition that they should be bailed. Pray for enlargement on bail or otherwise. See L. J., V. 385.

Pray that 100*l.*, by way of impress, may be delivered into the hands of the officers of His Majesty's works, with directions for them to pay the same to petitioners proportionably as they shall think fit, and petitioners will then expect no more money, nor trouble their Lordships again till the work is finished. See L. J., V. 424.

Nov. 2. Warrant of the Commons committing William Dancke to Newgate. C. J., II. 831.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of William Dancke, of Dartford, to H. C. Has been committed to the noisome gaol of Newgate, but for what cause he is altogether ignorant. Prays for his discharge.

2. Certificate of inhabitants of Dartford, that Dancke has for divers years been one of the sheriffs' bailiffs there, and that during that time he has been of good behaviour, and has carried himself, both in the execution of his office and otherwise, honestly, civilly, and free from scandal, and in a better manner than men in that profession have usually done. 3 Dec. 1642.

Nov. 23. Letter from the Justices of Kent at Maidstone to the Speaker of the House of Commons; on the 11th instant Sir Vivian Mullinex, one Brewer, and others, having been apprehended, the oath of allegiance was tendered to them as papists, and on their refusing to take it they were committed to gaol. Sir Vivian has been released by order of the House of Lords, influenced, as is stated in a packet lately discovered, by the active spirit of the Lady of Banbury; whilst the writers were at Maidstone an order came from the House of Lords to take away Brewer. The trained bands were much troubled that papists should find so much favour, and though the writers will not complain of the discouragement to themselves, yet they think it right to acquaint the House of Commons with these passages, which are likely to breed a general discontent. See L. J., V. 456.

Nov. 24. Petition of both Houses to the King that he would return to them with his Royal not his martial attendance. L. J., V. 457. In extenso.

Nov. 26. Draft ordinance to compel the inhabitants of London, &c., who have not already done so, to contribute for the support of the army. L. J., V. 462. In extenso.

Nov. 26. Letter from Sir Edward Hungerford and others, at Bath, to Mr. Speaker Lenthall; they hear that it is the intention of the Western Cavaliers to march upon Bristol, and the well affected of the city have solicited as-istance, which the writers are ready to send, but the mayor and aldermen make a scruple of entertaining the county forces without some order from Parliament; the majority of the aldermen are suspected of being malignant, but of the commons of the city there are three good to one ill affected member, the writers therefore desire that an order from Parliament, authorising the Mayor and aldermen of Bristol to take a thousand soldiers from the counties of Somerset and Gloucester to preserve the city from the plundering Cavaliers, may be sent back by their messenger with all speed. The danger they fear is near, for some of the Cavaliers have lately showed themselves at Marlborough, and they wish that the Earl of Essex would put a stop to the roving and straggling of these plundering Cavaliers, for it would very much comfort and satisfy the affrighted countrymen. See L. J., V. 469.

Nov. 28. Copy of the King's answer to the last petition from both Houses. L. J., V. 463. In extenso.

Nov. 28. Affidavit of John Saunders, Deputy-Keeper under Sir Arthur Manwaringe, that Hercules Trew killed a stag in Old Windsor Wood. See L. J., V. 459.

Dec. 14. An ordinance made by the Lords and Commons in Parliament assembled, for the better and more speedy execution of the late ordinance of the 29th of November (for compelling those to contribute who have not already so done). L. J., V. 491. In extenso.

Dec. 14. Draft of preceding.

Dec. 15. Affidavit of John Pope, of Maidstone; that on Friday the 30th of September last he rode to the farm of Bewell, a tenant of the Earl of Salisbury, to see about repairs there, and the next day, Sir Wm. Brook, when out hawking came to Bewell's house, and finding him and his dame out and only two maids in the house, sent one of them to see for her mistress, and the other with a message to some passers by, to tell Bewell he wanted to speak to him. Sir William having thus got the maids out went into the house and locked the doors, and would not let Bewell in until he attorned tenant to him, upon which Sir Wm. gave him his bond that he would save him harmless. Upon the same paper is a direction that the Earl of Salisbury should have possession of the lands in question between him and Sir Wm. Brook until the matter should be determined at common law. L. J., V. 492.

Dec. 15. Petition of William Beale, Edward Martin, and Richard Sterne, Doctors in Divinity and Masters of Colleges, in Cambridge. Pray for release upon bond, as they have been fifteen weeks prisoners in the Tower at excessive charges, and to the neglect of their private affairs and public duties. L. J., V. 492.

Dec. 15. Draft order for the exemption of the members and assistants of both Houses from the assessment. L. J., V. 492. In extenso.

Dec. 15. Draft ordinance for the association of the counties of Leicester, Derby, &c., for their mutual protection. L. J., V. 493. In extenso.

Dec. 15. Affidavit of Richard Poole, that he served John Caston, postmaster in Barbican, and Job Alibond, with the order of the 2nd instant (for the postmasters to deliver the mails to the Earl of Warwick), but that no letters have been delivered. See L. J., V. 490, &c.

Dec. 15. Petition of Sir Edmond Wright, alderman of the city of London. Petitioner's house is too small to lodge the Earl of Portland, with the servants that daily attend on him, as well as petitioner's own family. Prays that the Earl may be removed to some more healthful and convenient place. Noted, with a certificate from the treasurers of money and plate, that Alderman Wright has brought in 500*l.* upon the propositions, and 100*l.* towards the loan of 30,000*l.*

Dec. 16. Resolutions of the Commons that the forces raised against the Parliament are for the rooting out of the protestant religion, &c. C. J., II. 891.

Dec. 16. Copy of letter from Colonel Nathaniel Fiennes and Colonel Arthur Goodwin to the Lord General. On Tuesday morning we marched towards Winchester, making the more haste as the enemy that morning cut off a company of dragoons and took their colours, we galloped after them and overtook some of them before they got into Winchester, others came out of the town to help them, but we beat them back, and surrounded the place with horse and dragoons, and forced an entrance into the town, but evening coming on were unable to take the castle, where the sheriff had summoned all the soldiers and many gentlemen to meet to assess the county for maintenance of the King's army. The next morning Lord Grandison came out and surrendered the castle upon certain conditions (which are enclosed), but we were unable to enforce the observance of the condition for the protection of the commanders and gentlemen from violence and pillaging, for the soldiers were in such a state of mutiny, that the officers and gentlemen were not only some of them stripped and pillaged, but put in fear of their lives, whilst some of the soldiers actually shot at their own officers who tried to prevent this violence, by which, and by the plundering and outrages committed in and about the town, the glory of the action was much eclipsed, while if the arms and horses taken had been more equally distributed, the advantage to the State would have been greater. We enclose a list of the officers and gentlemen taken. We recovered our colours, but the enemy burnt their own during a desperate resolution to make a sally in the night. We march this day [Dec. 14] for Portsmouth, where we shall wait for orders, money, and reinforcements. Our loss is only one captain of dragoons and four or five men, and two or three hurt. Lord Grandison has behaved very fairly and hopes for better terms than those granted to men taken in the field, because in order to prevent more bloodshed he delivered up a place which had still some strength left. He and those taken with him hope that if not allowed to return to the King, they may have the same terms that were granted to those at Portsmouth, but we only promised to represent this to your Excellency. Noted, These are true copies. (Signed) Essex. See L. J., V. 494.

Dec. 17. Draft declaration of Parliament, that if any violence is offered to Catesby, Lilborne, and others, prisoners at Oxford, reprisals will be made by Parliament upon the prisoners in their hands. L. J., V. 497. In extenso.

Dec. 24. Petition of the Earl of Carlisle, to be restored to his seat in the House. L. J., V. 514. In extenso.

Dec. 24. Petition of Philip Burlamachi. Was apprehended by their Lordships' order for not bringing in the books of account concerning the Inland Letter Office. Prays for discharge. L. J., V. 514.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same: the cause about the Inland Letter Office, in which Lord Stanhope, the postmaster, and the Earl of Warwick as assignee of Mr. Withering are concerned, is still depending in the House of Commons, and petitioner, by their Lordships' order of the 6th of October last, was ordered to show cause why the sequestration should not be discharged and to account for the profits; but the hearing was prevented by weightier matters. Prays that he may be heard before any order is made.

2. Petition of John Castlon and Edward Hutchins, two of the postmasters for London, in behalf of themselves and all their fellows, the postmasters of England: petitioners during the late occurrences between England and Scotland received not only packets but post warrants from both Houses to supply gentlemen travelling on their business with horses, which they have always tried to execute, though the adjacent towns have been unwilling to supply horses at the rate of hire which petitioners themselves received, and hackney men, who keep horses, refuse in the same way; petitioners pray that an order may be made that all persons shall supply horses to them for the the service of Parliament on notice given, or that they may have the establishment of 4,000l. formerly paid for doing His Majesty's service.

3. Petition of same, that no order may be issued restraining them from receiving, carrying, and delivering all such letters as His Majesty's subjects shall freely bring unto them, by which labours they maintain themselves and discharge the King and State of 4,000l. a year, which sum was formerly allowed for that service. (Undated.)

4. Printed copy of the humble remonstrance of the grievances of all his Majesty's posts of England, together with carriers, waggoners, and others, miserably sustained by the unlawful projects of Thomas Witherings, sometime mercer of London.

Dec. 24. Affidavit of Thomas Barlow that he served two orders upon Roger Haughton, postmaster of Waltham, requiring him to deliver the possession of the Inland Letter Office to the Earl Warwick.

Dec. 24. Petition of Robert Aldus to H. C.; bought 400 quarters of barley in Suffolk, and laded a great part at Woodbridge in three small vessels, intending to transport the same to Holland and Flanders, but by order of the House the barley has been stayed and seized, prays for leave to transport the barley as proposed, or else to bring it to London for sale. C. J., II. 901.

Dec. 24. Petition of the mayor, aldermen, and commons of the city of London to the Lords and Commons. Pray that all good and fit means may be pursued for obtaining such a peace as may consist with the security of religion, the honour and safety of His Majesty, the perfecting the work of reformation both in Church and State, and the vindication of the power and privileges of Parliament.

Dec. 26. Petition of William, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. Prays their Lordships' approbation of the appointment of Mr. William Blackston, to the vicarage of Horsham. L. J., V. 515.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate, numerous signed, that William Blackston, clerk, is of sober carriage, and sufficiently learned and conformable to the doctrine of the Church of England. 21 Dec. 1642.

The ship "St. George," of London, laden with Spanish wools from Bilboa for Amsterdam, was by tempestuous weather driven into Falmouth, where she is detained under pretence of His Majesty's commands. Petitioners being agents for those to whom the goods were consigned, pray that a pass may be granted to them to go to the King in order to obtain a free passage for the ship to her directed port. L. J., V. 519.

Dec. 31. Draft of the order for the association of the counties of Warwick and Stafford, and parts adjacent; instructions for the Lords Lieutenant, Committees of Parliament, and other officers and commanders in the counties of Warwick and Stafford, and cities and counties of Coventry and Lichfield, and the form of association of the said counties. L. J., V. 520. In extenso.

Dec. 31. Copy of preceding.

Dec. 31. List of commitments by the Houses of Parliament to the New prison. See L. J., V. 511.

Dec. 31. List of commitments by the Houses of Parliament to New Bridewell. See L. J., V. 511.

Dec. 31. Letter from the deputy lieutenants of Middlesex to Sir John Conyers, lieutenant of the Tower. Are commanded by the Earl of Holland, lord lieutenant of the county, to publish an order of the House of Lords of the 23rd of December, against the firing of muskets in the streets. Sir John is therefore required to charge the inferior officers of his company to take especial care for the due observance of the order. On the same paper is a copy of the order referred to. L. J., V. 512.

Dec. 31. Letter from the Earl of Stamford, at Bristol, to the Speaker of the House of Lords. Thinks it would be very convenient for the better securing of the place; that two good ships should be sent into the Channel. Is confident he shall make good use of them. Is now a naked man, having left all his own people behind him. Prays some relief by the aid of his fellow peers. What he wants in ability he will repair by his diligence. Prays their Lordships not to believe any reports they hear until advertised by himself or his officers, as he finds the Jesuits prattle much in these parts. Intends to be at Exeter on Sunday next.

Dec. Petition of James Philipps, Edward Hall, and John Arnold, three of His Majesty's footmen in ordinary, to the Committee for the safety of the kingdom. Petitioners who came to town upon their own particular business, have been absent from His Majesty about three weeks. Pray for a pass to return, as their time of waiting is drawing nigh.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petitioners' protection, as servants of His Majesty.

[Dec.] Propositions for the association of the counties of Suffolk, Norfolk, Cambridge, Hertford, Middlesex, Kent, and Essex, and for the raising of dragoons for the preservation of the peace of the kingdom.

[Dec.] Book of Custom Causes for Rye, from Michaelmas till Christmas 1642.

[Dec.] Petition of Symon Curnock, of Chancery Lane. Edward Dewell died in Virginia in 1636, leaving petitioner executor of his will. Humfrey Dewell, brother of the deceased, although he had a copy of the will, took out letters of administration. Petitioner has, after five years' suit, obtained two sentences in the Prerogative and Delegates Courts confirming the will, and now the only means left to him to get his rights is to sue his adversary upon a bond entered into in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury. Petitioner has therefore petitioned the Archbishop to assign the bond over to him, but his Grace answered that he was interdicted by the High Court of Parliament, and could not do so. Prays that leave may be given to his Grace to assign the bond to petitioner.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of Curnock's petition to the Archbishop of Canterbury.
2. Copy of the sentence of the Prerogative Court. 27 Jan. 1640-1.
3. Copy of the sentence in the Court of Delegates. 2 Dec. 1642.
4. Copy of bond entered into by Humfrey Dewell in the Prerogative Court. 24 June 1637.

[Dec.] Petition of Thomas Eyres and William Rawbone, keepers of the new prison and house of correction, in the county of Middlesex. About a month since 46 persons were apprehended at or near Brockley, in the county of Northampton, sent to London as delinquents, and appointed to several prisons, and on Friday, the 16th of Sept. last, four of them were sent to the New prison, and six to the House of correction; but when brought in their poverty was such that they had no money to buy food even, and petitioners, to keep them from famishing, have been obliged ever since to relieve them at their own charge, which they cannot continue, as they receive no allowance from the county for prisoners, and therefore pray that some allowance may be made to them.

Account of customs on the cargoes of two ships leaving Cardiff and the members thereof, from Michaelmas to Christmas 1642.

Petition of Captain Dick and Thomas Cunningham, to the Commons, that a goodly ship of 500 tons and 30 pieces of ordnance and a frigate of 14 pieces, tendered by them for the service of the State, may be employed against the rebels, and that some members of the House may be appointed to treat with petitioners on the subject. See C. J., II. 943.

Petition of Henry Slingsby. In 1641 petitioner went into France, leaving all his deeds and documents under lock and key in his mother's house. She in his absence broke open his cabinets, and possessed herself of his deeds, &c., which he would not have complained of out of regard for her, but that he is likely to lose a suit in Chancery for want of them. Prays that she may be called upon to deliver up the deeds, or show cause for keeping them.

Petition of John Puntæus. By grant from His Majesty before the late troubles in England petitioner practised as a physician in Scotland, having his wife and children all the while in England. Prays for liberty to follow his profession anywhere in England.

List of Peers absent at a call of the House.

Request from Richard Sherburne, of Stoniers, in the county of Lancaster, that he may have leave to go to the waters of Bourbon with his wife, daughter, and servants.

Petition of several poor workmen and labourers in His Majesty's works at Whitehall and elsewhere. Great sums of money are due to petitioners for wages, the greater part whereof hath been owing 24 months and upwards. Pray that some speedy course may be taken for their relief, otherwise they are likely to beg, starve, and perish.

Petition of the eight rulers of the watermen. Complain of the unruly conduct of certain of the watermen upon the river Thames, and pray that a warrant may be issued to petitioners for the apprehension and punishment of the offenders.

Petition of Abraham Pont, gent., to H. C. Petitioner, by a former petition, complained of the oppressions done to him and his family by the Bishop of Raphoe. Prays that a day may be appointed for hearing his complaint, and that the bishop may be called upon to answer.

Petition of Dame Anne Herris, widow, for leave to proceed at law against John Earl of Bridgewater for recovery of a debt, notwithstanding the Earl's privilege.

Petition of divers distressed copyholders of the manor of the augmentation of Kenilworth, in the county of Warwick. Petitioners, ever since the dissolution of the Abbey of Kenilworth, have continued copyholders for lives in the manor for moderate fines, the nearest of kin having always been the next takers upon the decease of the longest liver. The manor was granted, 21st James I., to Robert Lord Carye, Baron of Lepington [created Earl of Monmouth in 1626], and regranted by the now Queen Henrietta Maria and others entrusted for her revenue unto Henry Earl of Monmouth, who has altered and subverted the customs, and outed many of the ancient tenants, and granted the copyholds to his own servants and to such strangers as will give most for them. Petitioners pray that an ordinance may pass for re-establishing the ancient customs and moderating the fines to a certain rate, and that such of the tenants as have been outed by the said Earl may be restored.

Petition of Edward Johnson, of the Inner Temple, Esquire. Prays that no order may be made upon the Earl of Leicester's petition touching certain lands called Astell Grove, parcel of the manor and castle of Kenilworth, until petitioner has been heard by his counsel.

Petition of Francis Lord Willoughby of Parham. Petitioner in due course of law sued forth a writ for the extending of certain lands of the manor of Skettingthorpe, in the county of Lincoln, acknowledged to him by one Stone, since deceased, for a debt of 500*l*. Sir Edward Herne, the High Sheriff of Lincolnshire, being now in actual war against the Parliament, petitioner cannot procure the extent to be executed, and therefore prays that the tenants of the lands may be ordered to pay him the rents thereof, until his just debt is fully satisfied.

Petition of parishioners of St. Andrew, Holborn, that Mr. Vere Harcourt, brother of the late Sir Symon Harcourt, may be appointed their lecturer, in the room of Dr. Gauden, about to be removed.

Petition of Anne Grenewell, widow. Petitioner's late husband, William Grenewell, bought a 24th part of the French Wine Farm, which had been taken of His late Majesty King James. Prays that Sir Nicholas Salter, the surviving patentee, and Sir Henry Garway and others, executors of the late Sir William Garway, the other patentee, may be ordered to pay her certain monies due to her late husband out of the profits of the said patent. The matter has been in litigation in the Courts of Chancery and Exchequer for more than 20 years.

Petition of John Scoble and Mary Scoble, widow, complaining of great oppression at the hands of John Fortescue, of East Allington, in the county of Devon, the lord of the manor there, and praying for relief.

Petition of the executor and creditors of the late Samuel Smalley, for relief against Viscount Beaumont and Sir John Monson touching certain lands conveyed to the late Samuel Smalley by Thomas, late Viscount Beaumont.

Petition of Thomas Skelton, servant to Thomas Lord Wentworth, arrested at Yarmouth at the suit of Thomas Spooner and others, contrary to privilege. Prays for discharge.

Petition of Edmond Savile. Has been imprisoned for eighteen months in the Fleet for not paying an annuity of 10*l*. per annum to William Meering, in compliance with an order of the Court of Requests. Prays for relief.

Petition of John Stone and others, inhabitants of Northmore (North Moor), Oxon, complaining of the oppressions and abuses of Gowyn Champneys, one of the Chancery clerks, and praying for inquiry. Petitioners refer to "articles annexed" for details of their grievances, but the articles are wanting.

Petition of John Stephens and others, parishioners of Bisly, Gloucestershire, that Mr. Britton may have liberty to officiate in the church there, and that some part of the profits of the vicarage may be sequestered for his payment, the present vicar, Daniel Leyford, having led a scandalous life, and being now in the King's Bench Prison for debt.

Another similar petition.

Petition of Edward Trussell, mercer, Thomas Tutt, mercer, Edward Griffith, and William Scarborowe. Petitioners supplied Lewis Boyle, Viscount Killamakun (Kinalmeaky), with silks and wares for his marriage, he promising to pay ready money for the same. He now refuses to pay, and as petitioners can have no relief in the ordinary course of law, the Viscount being servant extraordinary to His Majesty, they pray their Lordships to direct him to give them timely satisfaction.

Petition of same, with others, that the Earl of Cork or his son, Viscount Kinalmeaky, may be directed speedily to pay to petitioners the sum due to them. The Earl promised, that if petitioners would not press for payment until after the Earl of Strafford's trial, he would then give them satisfaction, and that in the meantime his son should not leave England. The Earl now denies this promise, and the Viscount is gone to Ireland. [Lewis Viscount Boyle, of Kinalmeaky, was slain at the battle of Liscarroll in this year.]

Petition of Thomas Gould, that their Lordships will hear his cause against Richard Prigg, clerk, touching the conveyance of certain lands at Ilchester and Northover by petitioner to Parson Prigg, as security for a loan.

Petition of Benjamin Hare, senior, that Sir Charles Herbert, Knight, His Majesty's Surveyor-General, may be ordered to pay certain moneys due to him for surveying and subdividing divers grounds in the great level of the Fens undertaken by the late Earl of Bedford.

Petition of Sir Edward Sydenham. By an order of the 7th March 1641-2 (L. J., IV. 629) he was allowed the benefit of the general order of the 13th July 1641 (L. J., IV. 312), for securing all persons in the quiet enjoyment of their possessions. Prays that the affidavits of his witnesses may be admitted in evidence, or further time allowed him to produce them.

Petition of Gamaliel Carr and Edmond Brewer, clerks. Daniel Strutt and Richard Browne, his uncle, of Castle Hedingham, being at strife, it was referred by certain of His Majesty's justices to petitioners (two neighbour ministers) to settle peace between them. Strutt has since brought many vexatious suits at law against petitioners, who pray to be relieved from further trouble in the matter.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Sir Thomas Honeywood and James Heron, Esq., to whom the matter was referred by the Lords Committee upon a former petition of Strutt.

Petition of Henry Starkey, Esq., complaining of certain proceedings in the Court of Wards and Exchequer touching the manors of Oulton and Low, in the county of Chester.

Petition of John Long, gent., prisoner in the King's Bench, to the Committee assembled for defence of the kingdom. Petitioner having come out of Wiltshire to serve the State, enlisted and received pay, but was carried away prisoner to the King's Bench, from whence he had absented himself for three-quarters of a year, not by breach of prison, but by Habeas Corpus. Complains of the cruelty of Sir John Lenthall, marshal of the prison, and prays for discharge.

Petition of Sir Michael Wharton to H. C., prays that Sir John Mounson's patent for the "meliorating and bettering of surrounded grounds" may be examined, and parties restored to their former possessions, until Sir John Mounson evict them by legal proceedings in some Court of Record, he having brought in much ground, which never was surrounded, without the owners' consent.

Petition of Richard Watts, gent., prisoner in the Fleet, for relief against John Rye, scrivener, of London, touching a mortgage of petitioner's estate at Culworth, in the county of Northampton.

Petition of Giles Wright, son and heir and administrator of William Wright, deceased, complaining of the unfair dealings of Sir Henry Spiller touching the purchase of the manor of Kingsey, in the county of Buckingham, and praying for inquiry.

Petition of Samuel Graunt. Purchased the tithes of Thorpe Mandeville, in the county of Northampton, but has since been compelled to relinquish his title to them by an order of the Council Table, obtained against him by Mr. Bridges, the vicar. Prays for redress.

Petition of Robert Lane, Esq., to Edward Earl of Manchester, praying relief from his noble and kind kinsman, as he is in very great distress.

Petition of Bridget Vaughan, wife of James Vaughan, gent., commander of the Lord Cromwell's troop in the North of Ireland, to the Lords and Commons Commissioners of the Irish business. Prays for relief, the rebels in Ireland having burned, destroyed, or taken away all her husband's estate, and he having received no pay for a long time.

Petition of Digory Baker and Elizabeth his wife to H. C. complaining of an unjust verdict at the common law, obtained against them by Richard Smith by bribery and other unlawful means. Noted, Let him name the party who was bribed, and produce his proofs thereof.

Petition of William Downe to the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery. Having served for twenty-one years in the Low Countries, returned to England and was appointed lieutenant of a company of foot. Was ordered into Devonshire, but falling very sick obtained leave to stay in London, where he has been five months under the surgeon's hands. Is in great distress, and prays his Lordship's assistance in obtaining his arrears of pay, and fresh employment in the service.

Petition of Thomas Coode, "your Lordships' Servant," to Henry Earl of Holland, &c. Lieutenant Williams coming into the yard of Mrs. Bigg in St. Giles' by virtue of a commission directed to Captain Roger, violently took away a black nag which Mrs. Bigg had bought of petitioner for 4*l.*, which was to have been deducted from a debt owing to her. Petitioner has always paid all duties laid on him by Parliament, and therefore prays his Lordship to give order for the nag to be restored.

Petition of Roger Bragg, gent., to the Earl of Essex; petitioner's son, being an apprentice, has without the consent of master or parents listed himself under the command of Captain Owen, and now lies embarked in a ship at Tilbury Hope, waiting the pleasure of Parliament. Prays that he may be discharged, being a very sickly boy, and inconsiderable every way for any service.

Petition of Elizabeth Leigh, late of Porter Downe [Portadown], in the county of Armagh, widow. At the death of her late husband she was possessed of a good estate in her own right, of all which she was utterly deprived by the cruel and merciless rebels. She and her fatherless children have neither house nor clothes to cover them, and are like to perish through want, unless some speedy relief be afforded. Prays license to make collections for her relief in such parishes in and about London and Westminster, as to their Lordships shall seem meet.

Petition of Nicholas Arnold, to the Commons. A verdict in law has lately been given against him: is desirous of lodging a writ of error, but the great seal is so far distant, that he cannot obtain it in time; prays that writs of error, being lawfully issued out by the cursitors, and fees duly paid, may be allowed, and writs of superseas thereupon.

Two drafts of order for Dugard Clarke, to be instituted to the rectory of Bradford alias Bereford.

Petition of the poor inhabitants of the city of Westminster, to the Earl of Pembroke, Lord Chamberlain to His Majesty, and to the two Houses of Parliament: pray that Mr. Robert White, who has been subcurate of the parish of St. Margaret, Westminster, and has been very careful in visiting and relieving the poor, may not be displaced from his cure for the private ends of a few.

Petition of Lieutenant Colonel Audley Mervyn to the Lords and other Commissioners for Irish affairs: in Nov. 1641 Sir Ralph Gore was commissioned by the King to raise a regiment of 500 men to oppose the rebels in Ireland, in which petitioner served as lieutenant colonel; prays that now Sir Ralph Gore is dead, he may be appointed colonel, and commissioned to enlarge the regiment to 1,000 foot and 100 horse.

Petition of Dame Margery Young, wife to Sir Peter Young: King James granted her a pension of 200*l.* per annum, which King Charles confirmed, in consideration of the services of Sir Peter, who was tutor to King James, and seven times ambassador for the making up of the match between His late Majesty and Queen Ann; of this pension the arrears now amount to 850*l.*, and 3,000*l.* besides are due from His Majesty to petitioner's two daughters, she has in consequence become so indebted that she is in fear of arrest; prays their Lordships to give order for the payment of the money due to her, or of some part of it, for relief of her distress.

Petition of John Sherman to the committee for the safety of the kingdom: petitioner has served under the States of Holland, and the King of Portugal for six years past, and gained much experience in martial discipline; hearing of the unhappy differences now in his native country, and desiring to spend his dearest blood for the defence and welfare of the King, Parliament, and kingdom, he is newly come over to present his services to the committee, and prays, in regard of his readiness and known abilities, and the charge he has been at in coming over, that some place of command may be conferred upon him.

Petition of John Miller, His Majesty's servant in ordinary as tailor to the Duke of Gloucester His Highness; has been arrested by Edward Trussell of London, mercer, contrary to privilege; prays for speedy enlargement.

Petition of Thomas Edwards, sealer, at the Great Seal of England; has for twenty-four years carefully performed the painful and laborious duties of his place, having only 4*d.* per diem for his certain fee, and 20*s.* per annum for livery, while the casual fees anciently be longing to his place are for the most part kept from him, "particularly the great seal when it is repudiated, appears by ancient records in the Tower, to belong to the "spigurnell, or sealer, as his fee;" but petitioner could never enjoy this nor many other privileges; prays for an examination of his place, and that he may have such fees and privileges as shall be found due to him, and meet to maintain him and three or four servants, and particularly that he may enjoy the old Great Seal, if it appears to be his due.

Annexed:—

1. Extract from the records in the Tower respecting the Great Seal.

Petition of William Crowe, gentleman, on the behalf of his brother Sir Sackville Crowe, His Majesty's Ambassador resident with the grand Seigneur at Constantinople; Sir Sackville obtained by letters patent under the great seal a grant in reversion, expectant on a term of years, lately expired, of the manor of Langherne, in the county of Carmarthen; about seven years since, upon his marriage with the Earl of Rutland's sister, he settled the manor upon her and their issue, and about three years since left the country on His Majesty's service, having assigned the premises for payment of his debts, &c., but Wm. Smalesman, being in possession of the property under the term for years, assigned the residue of the term to Thomas Perrott, who, by connivance with Smalesman and Henry Vaughan, has got possession of the property, and claims it under a pretended entail from the late Sir John Perrott, while Vaughan, a powerful man in those parts, has been purposely made steward of the manor, and holds courts, and threatens to ruin the tenants if they would not attorn to Perrott, and has no fear of the law. Prays that the confederates may be called to answer before their Lordships, and Sir Sackville Crowe's agents be put in possession of the property.

Petition of Sarah the wife of Peter Treble of Wapping, mariner: petitioner's husband, now at sea, obtained a judgment for twenty and odd pounds against one William Penington in an action for assault; Penington, hoping to force petitioner to compromise, brought a writ of error in the King's Bench, this too was defeated, but now he is trying to make out that he is protected by the Earl of Cleveland, when he is only a starchmaker, and follows his trade in Stepney; petitioner prays that Penington may not be released until he has satisfied her claim.

Petition of Elizabeth, Katherine, and Mary Troughton: their father and grandfather conveyed lands at Hanslope, Bucks, worth about 300*l.* per annum, to Robert Wickens, and others, upon trust for petitioners; their father died about fifteen years ago, having made Richard Lane his executor; Lane and Wickens working upon the necessity of petitioner's mother, and her second husband, induced her to pass the lands in question to Lane for a very small sum, and procured the confirmation of the decree in Chancery in the minority of petitioners, and to their utter ruin; pray that Lane and Wickens may be summoned to appear and to produce the deed of trust and a copy of the decree in Chancery, and that Lane may be ordered to accept the money he paid for the land, with interest, and to account for the mesne profits.

Petition of Edward Ewell; from affection to Parliament he not only lent money, but brought his plate worth 30*l.* to the Guildhall; has for three years and upwards held the office of clerk and registrar in the Castle of Dover, but though he is ready to expose his life and estate in the service of Parliament, he hears that an endeavour is being made by some to oust him from his office; prays to be heard before the place is given to any one else.

Petition of Mrs. Margaret Moore and her children; petitioner lived in good condition in Ireland until the late rebellion, by which she was altogether despoiled of her livelihood; two of her nephews were slain in the service of Parliament, and she has now a son in the service in Ireland; she has received no relief since she came to England; prays for consideration of her case.

Petition of creditors of John Cremer of Snettisham, in the county of Norfolk, to H. C., against Robert Styleman, one of the feoffees in trust of Cremer's estate, who has provided for his own interest to the neglect of the other creditors; pray for a hearing of the case before their Lordships.

Petition of William Street, one of His Majesty's littermen, and a prisoner in Newgate; was on Saturday last arrested in Westminster Hall contrary to privilege, at the suit of Peter Williams, a brewer, for a pretended debt for drink due from petitioner's wife before her marriage; prays for release as one of His Majesty's servants.

Similar petition of same.

Petition of Sir Selwin Parker, Knight, and Elizabeth Parker, an infant of the age of six years, for relief against certain proceedings in the Court of Chancery and Court of Requests, arising out of the settlement made on the marriage of Robert Bowers with Elizabeth Parker, Sir Selwin's sister, both now deceased.

Petition of parishioners of Sundridge, in the county of Kent; encouraged by their Lordships' pious intentions to settle able and faithful preachers in all parts of the kingdom, they pray that if Dr. Hall, now rector, should cease to be their minister, their Lordships would move the Archbishop of Canterbury to appoint Tobias Blossie.

Petition of the inhabitants of the parish of Sudbury St. Gregory, and of the chapel of Sudbury St. Peter's thereto annexed, in the county of Suffolk; thereanciently belonged, and were paid to the church and chapel, great and small portions of tithes and oblations, to the value of 80*l.* per annum at the least, from the impropriate rectory, though the owner was a papist, and though one minister officiated both cures, but of late two ministers, Mr. Smith and Mr. Harrison, have officiated; in 1634 Oliver Andrew, and John his brother deceased, both protestants, became owners of the impropriation, and have ever since withheld great part of the ministers' stipends, besides torturing Mr. Smith in the High Commission Court; they have also enhanced the great and small tithes, troubled the inhabitants in several courts, have taken church dues, and injured the free school and hospital for lazars, and all this has gone on for near nine years; pray their Lordships to assign a new day for hearing the cause and to give compensation to the oppressed.

Petition of Elizabeth Moore, widow, to Edward Earl of Manchester; seven years ago petitioner in the name of Patrick Winch exhibited a Bill in Chancery against one Carpenter for relief from an extent upon a house in Fleet Street; after four several hearings, Carpenter was ordered to deliver up the statute to be cancelled and to pay 25*l.* costs, but his Lordship and Mr. Speaker have ordered that Carpenter should be discharged on paying 20 nobles; prays that the 25*l.* costs may stand.

Petition of Thomas Sumner; has been prisoner in the King's Bench for 18 months, and on account of his inability to discharge the marshal's dues was turned over to the common gaol, where he has undergone much misery for want of necessities; yet by the means of Thomas Winch he is assessed at 20*l.*, and as this is threatened to be distrained from his tenants, they refuse to pay their rents; prays for mitigation of the sum levied upon him.

Petition of Nicholas Wylliot, a Frenchman, to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker to the House of Peers. Petitioner being a stranger, took entertainment at the beginning of this war with the King's army, and being commanded with others to perform the duty of fetching of prisoners, and resistance being made, there happened to be a man slain by one of the party. For which action petitioner has been laid up in Newgate, and is informed that he is to be removed suddenly for trial in the country, where the act was pretended to be done. Prays that he may be tried in the usual way by a jury of his own countrymen.

Petition of Hugh Roosse, late His Majesty's servant at Dunkirk, in Flanders; petitioner was for many years employed by His Majesty and the State for the release of English subjects, prisoners in Flanders, and in this service spent large sums of his own money, besides becoming indebted to others, by whom he is now threatened with arrest. Prays for protection until his business now depending before Parliament is settled.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of similar petition of same to the King. Noted with a reference to the House of Lords, dated 19 March 1640-1.

Petition of Brian Smith, coachman. Petitioner has for the last quarter of a year attended with his coach and horses upon Thomas Viscount Wentworth, and there is now due to him upwards of 34*l.* Lord Wentworth has secretly conveyed away his trunk and other goods and absented himself, and his horses having been stayed by their Lordships' order, petitioner has no means of recovering his debt. Petitioner prays that his debt may be satisfied before the horses are discharged.

Petition of divers of the inhabitants of Pinner, in the county of Middlesex. The curate of Pinner, which is a chapel of ease to the mother church of Harrow, only receives 10*l.* a year from the vicar for his maintenance, and seldom preaches or procures any other to perform that duty for him. Petitioners pray that they may have liberty to make choice of a lecturer, whom they will maintain at their own charge. See C. J., II. 723.

Petition of John Gerrard, late postmaster at Brickhill, in the county of Bucks; petitioner and his ancestors have enjoyed the place of postmaster for nearly fifty years, and there is now owing unto him for wages 374*l.* Notwithstanding this about three years since, Mr. Thomas Witherings sold the place to another, not in any way to advance His Majesty's service, but in order that he might himself reap the profit in selling the place. Prays that he may be restored to his place, or that Witherings may be ordered to give him recompense for the loss of it.

Petition of inhabitants of Cransley, in the county of Northampton. The lords of the manor of Cransley hold the parsonage, vicarage tithes, and vicarage house, under a pretended composition to pay the vicar a yearly stipend of 8*l.* About four years since the late Sir Henry Robinson left a legacy for the repair of the vicarage house, which is now in ruins, but the executors have neglected to repair it. The manor of Cransley is held in five parts, and certain of the holders refuse to contribute their shares for the competent allowance of the vicarage. Petitioners being destitute of a minister, were constrained to hire one at their own charge, until Mr. Goodman, hoping for competent allowance, was inducted, but he not prevailing has removed himself, leaving the inhabitants without cure ever since. Pray that a certain competent allowance may be settled for ever out of the vicarage and parsonage.

Jan. 4. Certificate of the justices, in the case of Le Grand and Desormeaux. Dated 1 Nov. 1642. Read and entered this day. L. J., V. 528. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of John Beaverley, committed for obeying their Lordships' order in the cause between Le Grand and Desormeaux, by which he was directed to deliver to Le Grand certain pieces of cloth left in his hands in trust; petitioner was quite ready to give up the cloth on having security from Le Grand that he would bear him harmless; prays that the certificate of the judges in the cause may be read, and that he may be discharged from imprisonment. See L. J., V. 526.

2. Affidavit in support of preceding. 15 Nov. 1642. Jan. 4. Petition of inhabitants of Essex, in favour of peace. L. J., V. 529. In extenso.

Jan. 4. Declaration of the Commissioners of the General Assembly of the Kirk of Scotland from their meeting at Edinburgh to the Hon. Houses of the Parliament of England. Inform the Parliament that they have sent a petition to the King by Mr. Alexander Henderson, praying his Majesty to disband all papists out of his army, to call an Assembly of Divines for settling an unity of religion and church government in both kingdoms, and to use all good means for the conversion of the Queen's Majesty to the true reformed religion. Entreat the Parliament on their part, to disband all papists, if any there be in their army, as is alleged in divers declarations, to constantly prosecute their desire for unity in religion and kirk government, to deal with His Majesty for calling an Assembly of Divines, and to give their serious thoughts and endeavours to the Queen's conversion.

Jan. 5. Affidavits of Dame Elizabeth Gurney and others, that Mr. Bard and Mr. Browne have refused to return Lady Gurney's horses in compliance with the order of the 15th of Nov. 1642. L. J., V. 530.

Jan. 5. Order for using Lambeth House as a prison. L. J., V. 530. In extenso.

Jan. 5. Order for the payment of 900*l*. to Mr. Loftus, for the freight of provisions, and clothing to Ireland. L. J., V. 531. In extenso.

Jan. 5. Draft of preceding.

Jan. 5. Two draft orders for Lord Petre's house in Aldersgate, and the Bishop of London's house near St. Paul's, to be used as prisons. L. J., V. 531. In extenso.

Jan. 5. Draft order for Lord Fairfax to continue the same way of payment to his army as he hath done hitherto. L. J., V. 531. In extenso.

Jan. 5. Petition of Francis Sadler and of Tempest Miller, and others, creditors of the said Francis Sadler. Pray that Toby Rose and certain other creditors, may be sent for to answer for their illegal proceedings in surreptitiously taking out a commission of bankruptcy against Sadler, in order to wrest his estate from him at an undervalue, and defraud the other creditors of their just debts.

Jan. 6. Petition of divers citizens and inhabitants of the city of London. Pray that the consideration of their former petition, referred by their Lordships to a committee, may be speedily proceeded with, and that it may also be referred to the committee to consider of the outrageous violence and injuries offered to petitioners in the preparation and prosecution of their said former petition. L. J., V. 531.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of former petition referred to in preceding. 19 Dec. 1642. L. J., V. 501.

2. List of committee to whom the petition was referred. 19 Dec. 1642. L. J., V. 499.

Jan. 6. Petition of Sir John Conyers, Lieutenant of the Tower, concerning a house built by William Felgate, near the Tower. L. J., V. 532. In extenso.

Jan. 7. Declaration of both Houses touching the illegality of Commissions of Array. L. J., V. 533.

Jan. 7. Draft declaration of the Lords and Commons against the agreement for the neutrality of Cheshire. L. J., V. 535. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the "Agreement made the three and twentieth day of December, at Bunbury, in the county of Chester, for a pacification and settling the peace of the said county, by us whose names are subscribed, authorized thereunto by the Lords and gentlemen nominated Commissioners of Array and deputy lieutenants in the said county."

Jan. 7. Petition of Robert Harrington, Robert Goodwyn, and George Thimilby, agents for the distressed city of Londonderry, to H. C. By an order of the 12th of December last, all the money collected on the then three next fast-days was to be disposed of for the relief of the inhabitants of Londonderry, but by a subsequent order the money collected on the first of the fast-days was disposed of for the relief of the plundered ministers, whereby petitioners' intention of sending victuals in a ship called the "Prosperous," bound for Londonderry, is defeated. Pray that the order of the 12th of December may be confirmed, and that the collections made on the next fast-day after the two limited by the order, may be added to the other money, and that all ministers may be commanded to publish the order, and the churchwardens to pay over the collections to petitioners. C. J., II. 918.

Jan. 7. List of the prisoners in Lambeth House.

[Jan. 7.] Petition of Bernard Alsopp, printer, prisoner in the Fleet. Prays for his discharge, having been committed for printing scandalous pamphlets, which were received and done by his servants during his absence in the country. See L. J., V. 533.

Jan. 9. Petition of Francis Richards, of Presteyne [Presteign], in the county of Radnor. On the 27th of October last, the captain of a troop of horse under the command of the Earl of Stamford, seized Captain Charles Price, knight for the county. Petitioner went in a neighbourly way to visit Price, and was then, without any cause, taken by the captain of the troop, and afterwards with Captain Price conveyed to Coventry, where he hath remained ever since in durance. Prays for his discharge. L. J., V. 536.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of the committee at Coventry to whom preceding petition was referred. Richards was committed under a warrant of Colonel Essex. This is all the information the committee can obtain, as his commitment was from Gloucester, and his habitation is Presteign, sixty miles off. 17 Jan. 1642-3.

Jan. 9. Draft order for the removal of the prisoners from Lincoln Castle. L. J., V. 536. In extenso.

Jan. 9. Instructions for Francis Lord Willoughby, Lord Lieutenant of the county of Lincoln, and the committees of Parliament for the subscriptions of money, plate, and horse for that county, and other officers and commanders in the said county of Lincoln and parts adjacent. L. J., V. 536. In extenso.

Jan. 9. Draft of the declaration and ordinance of Lords and Commons for the defence of the county of Lincoln. L. J., V. 538. In extenso.

Jan. 9. Draft order for the discharge of all the present collectors of customs. C. J., II. 919. In extenso.

Jan. 9. Petition of Sir Francis Dowse, Knight, now prisoner at Portsmouth, to H. C. Was required by the Sheriff of Hampshire, in his Majesty's name, to appear at Winchester concerning the raising of some contributions for the payment of Lord Grandison's horse, whilst they were in that county. He appeared there accordingly, and his coach, and four horses were taken from him, and he himself was carried away prisoner to Portsmouth. Prays for his discharge, as he has always submitted cheerfully to all payments, and obeyed all the orders of Parliament. C. J., II. 919.

Jan. 10. Order for Ely House to be used as a prison. L. J., V. 542. In extenso.

Jan. 17. Letter from Colonel Bulstrode and Thomas Tyrrell at Aylesbury to the Earl of Essex. The writers being sorry to see their countrymen, who were well affected, daily plundered by the Cavaliers, though they wanted strength to undertake the chief harbour of them, yet resolved on Sunday last to attack them upon one of their quarters. Thought to have found a troop at Lurgishall about a mile and a half from Brill, but they had gone the afternoon before. Heard that at Piddington a mile further on there was another troop, so marched on and took the whole, men, horses, and colours, within sight of Brill without loss or hurt to any of the writers' troop. Some, who were afterwards taken in the town, will not acknowledge themselves to be of that company, but they are as bad as the worst, especially one Chadwell, who had a commission about him for captain of a company of dragoons, and Nicholson who is known to have been in actual service. Have sent all the prisoners, in number forty-nine, with the colours, whose motto is supreme and remarkable. Pray to be excused for so often soliciting more strength, but the enemy grows upon them, and the neighbouring county of Northampton. The writers' troop will not be recruited by the horses taken, as they are for the most unserviceable and poor, and as for arms they had very few. Have here in custody a man of this county, who posted up in the market towns the proclamation wherein Colonel Hampden and Colonel Goodwin were excepted from pardon, will keep him until they know his Excellency's commands. To this letter Colonel Goodwin adds, "I beseech your Excellency to consider of Lieutenant Greene as one of the chief plunderers of the house of your humble servant." This is no doubt one of the letters read in the House on the 21st January. See HOUSE OF LORDS. Calendar. 1642-3. L. J., V. 566.

Annexed:—

1. Statement in the same handwriting as preceding; Skipwith had a commission for a troop of horse which he threw away; he was to be assisted with the troop we took at Piddington, and by Chadwell to raise his troop by taking horses where he could find them. The little gentleman with the silver lace and buttons on his coat was to have been cornet to Skipwith. Zouch, servant to Mr. Gardiner, went in their company only to plunder. Chadwell took five horses the day before from an honest gentleman of Moreton, and plundered a good minister's house at Water Stratford the same Sabbath day and took away from the minister's wife 18*l.* or 20*l.* The same company drove away eight or ten oxen of Sir Richard Ingoldsby's the day before.

Jan. 17. Application from Lady Spencer for a pass to go to Oxford. See L. J., V. 557.

Jan. 17. Order for stopping all carriages, waggons, and other conveyances going to or from Oxford without leave of Parliament or of the Earl of Essex. C. J., II. 931. In extenso.

Jan. 20. Petition of John Hawkins, prisoner in the Fleet; was committed for refusing to obey the order of the Parliament forbidding shooting; prays for his discharge. L. J., V. 562.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of Hawkins. On the 20th of January petitioner was ordered by their Lordships to be discharged, but he is still detained because he is unable to pay certain fees required by Mr. Browne and the rest of the clerks. (Undated.)

Jan. 20. Petition of Walter Lord Bishop of Winchester. Complains of the destruction of wood in Waltham Chase, parcel of the Bishop's manor of Waltham, by certain of the inhabitants contrary to an order of the House of the 3rd December 1641. Prays that the offenders may be sent for to answer. L. J., V. 563.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Alexander Bowsher, that the order of the 3rd of December was duly published in the market place and church at Waltham, and that the persons named in the petition continue to cut and carry away the underwood and timber.

2. Order for the attachment of William Woodman, and the other persons mentioned in the petition.

Jan. 26. Order for payment of 400*l.* to Maurice Thompson and William Pennoyer, for providing a ship to carry some troops of horse and some clothes into Ireland. L. J., V. 573. In extenso.

Jan. 26. Order for assessing the county of Lancaster for the relief of Manchester, &c. L. J., V. 573. In extenso.

Jan. 26. Copy of preceding.

Jan. 26. Order for a constant watch or guard to be kept in the city of Norwich. L. J., V. 574. In extenso.

Jan. 26. Petition of Henry Mugeridge and others, footmen to His Majesty in ordinary, John Herring, footman to the Prince His Highness, Patrick Jerrell, footman to the Duke of York, and James Monteth, yeoman usher of the guard to the Prince His Highness. Pray that passes may be granted to them to go to Oxford to attend their places.

Jan. 26. Petition of Dame Katharine Bromley, late wife of Sir Thomas Bromley, of Holte Castle, in the county of Worcester. Prays that Henry Bromley, son and heir of the late Sir Thomas, may be ordered to give up to petitioner the possession of the manor of Wick, intended to be settled upon her as a jointure by her late husband, who died without signing the settlement.

Jan. 27. Order for the Earl of Holland to appoint captains to the companies of the trained bands belonging to the Tower. L. J., V. 574. In extenso.

Jan. 27. List of the Committee of the House of Commons appointed to go with the Lords to the King with the propositions. L. J., V. 575. In extenso.

Jan. 27. Order that the money raised in Somersetshire upon the propositions shall be used for the maintenance of the forces raised in that county. L. J., V. 575. In extenso.

Jan. 27. Order for assessing malignants in the county of Somerset. L. J., V. 576. In extenso.

Jan. 27. Letter from Sir Rowland St. John, Sir Richard Samwell, Sir Gilbert Pickeringe, John Crewe, and Edward Harby, Esq., at Northampton, to the Committee for the defence of the kingdom, concerning the assessment of certain lords who have declared against the Parliament. See L. J., V. 583.

Jan. 28. Petition of Sir Charles Berkeley. Prays that on account of his impaired health he may be removed from the Tower to Mr. George Kirke's house, upon giving sufficient security, and under such restrictions as their Lordships think fit. L. J., V. 576.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

Jan. 30. Petition of Henry Arney. Was on Saturday last arrested by Robert Mayne and Henry Browne at the suit of Thomas Hutchinson, notwithstanding they knew he was servant to the Earl of Portland. Prays for his discharge. L. J., V. 578.

Jan. 30. Petition of Sir Basill Brooke, and Sir John Wintour. Pray their Lordships to resume the hearing of their cause against George Mynn, and that in the meantime all proceedings in the Court of King's Bench may be stayed. L. J., V. 578.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Order of the Committee for petitions with reference to the hearing of the cause. 19 July, 1641.

3. Copy of preceding.

4. Petition of Sir John Wintour, that their Lordships would look into the whole cause from the beginning, which relates to a lease of His Majesty's ironworks, and a certain quantity of cordwood in the Forest of Dean, and that time may be given for the examination of witnesses. (Undated.)

Jan. 30. Message from the Commons for an order for public thanks to be given for the success of the Parliament forces in the North. L. J., V. 578. In extenso.

Jan. 30. Draft of the declaration concerning Lord Fairfax's success in the North. L. J., V. 579. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Lord Fairfax's letter from Selby giving an account of his proceedings in the North. 26 Jan. 1642-3. L. J., V. 759. In extenso.

2. Letter from the Earl of Newcastle, at Pomfret, to Colonel Gifford Slingsby. Returns him thanks for the services he has done, and would be glad to give him all the assistance he desires in prosecuting the present levies, but cannot furnish him with any more men at present, for the following reasons, the forces of the bishopric were levied upon condition to remain in the county, and they are appointed to guard the ammunition through the county, and if need be further, which the Earl hopes they will obey. Hears that neither Colonel Huddleston nor Colonel Clavering can march for that convoy, as was intended, and has therefore appointed Sir Robert Strickland and desires Slingsby to do so too, as the Earl hears there is a design to surprise and secure it. As regards the lady, Slingsby is to use his own discretion, as the Earl has not been used to take ladies' prisoners. Desires Slingsby to keep any goods or arms taken from disaffected persons, the goods upon account for paying the soldiers, and the arms for arming the men, and though they be part of the arms of the trained bands, yet being taken as a prize they shall be accounted so. As regards the fortifying the castle, the Earl does not understand of what consequence it can be except as a place of residence for Slingsby whilst he is raising his regiment. 8 Jan. 1642-3. This letter is noted as follows:—"Slingsby, to whom this letter is directed, is since taken prisoner by Sir Hugh Cholmley, and is that Slingsby mentioned in my Lord Fairfax's letter, and with whom this letter and the instructions and Sir John Henderson's letter was found."

3. Instructions taken with Colonel Slingsby. The county (York) to be universally disarmed of all private arms, both of horse and foot, and those not borne in service to be brought into a magazine at York. The trained bands that rose with Hotham to be compelled to rise again, and serve in their persons, or every man to send an able-bodied man to serve for him. Considering Her Majesty intends to commit her person into the protection of this county, a magazine is to be made at York to enable an army to subsist, there in case of extremity or necessary retreat. All the gentry of Yorkshire to be unanimously moved to resort thither with their families and moveables, as the contrary faction do daily to Hull, by which means the persons and estates of such as are not well affected will be secured, as such as refuse or decline it shall discover themselves, and every man's fortune and family being there engaged they will more actually move with a joint concurrence for the preservation of the place, which must be the retreat for the safety of the Queen's person, no other place being defensible and considerable to balance Hull. Those that decline this proposition are to understand that they must at their own peril undergo the plunder of the soldiers, if any fall out. The garrison in York shall be daily employed in making regular works upon the avenue and outworks, and encroachments upon the hills and other places commanding the town. No markets or fairs to be held in any place in the county except York. Some of the iron ordnance, sent over by the Queen, to be sent for at the charge of the county to place upon the avenues and fortifications.

This and the Earl of Newcastle's letter are no doubt two out of the three papers referred to in the postscript to Lord Fairfax's letter. See L. J., V. 580.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of part of preceding, with Commons' amendments. See L. J., V. 561, &c.
2. Another draft.
3. Fair copy of part of preceding.
4. Another draft with amendments.

Jan. 30. Petition of Henry Cowes and William Goddard, servants to the Right Hon. the Lord Cottington. On Friday last one Austin, a corporal to Captain Harvey, of Cheapside, came with divers armed soldiers to the Lord Cottington's house, at Hanworth, and without any warrant from the Parliament, as far as petitioners know, forcibly entered the house and took away all the arms and weapons they found in it. Pray that the arms may be restored, or that petitioners may have license to furnish themselves and their fellow servants with others, to defend themselves against vagabonds, thieves, and robbers, as the house stands remote from any neighbour, and destitute of assistance from others in times of danger.

Jan. 31. Order for seizing the arms of all papists in Norwich. L. J., V. 583. In extenso.

Jan. 31. Letter from the Rev. Richard Culmer, at Canterbury, to the Earl of Warwick. The benefice of Chart-ham near Canterbury is now void, and is in the gift of the Archbishop of Canterbury, who intends, the writer understands, to bestow it upon one of the tribe of Lameth. If malignants are permitted to advance their own party, and thereby their own cause, they will do great hurt, especially where malignant priests are so numerous. If the prelate's tyrannous patronage can be stopped, the writer prays that he may be taken into consideration, as he has a good testimonial for his life and doctrine, and has been deprived of his living for not reading the book for Sabbath sports. Is now so much engaged in advancing the association that he cannot wait upon his Lordship. See L. J., V. 588.

Jan. 31. List of servants of the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery who attended him to Oxford.

Jan. 31. Letter from Captain Anthony Willoughby, at His Majesty's fort, near Galway, to the Lords in Parliament. Beseeches their Lordships to take his letters expressing the wants and dangers of the garrison into their serious consideration, and with all possible speed to hasten some relief both of men and provisions, otherwise their condition is likely to be very desperate. If not timely supplied the place may soon be endangered. Lord Clanricard is utterly unable, though most willing in any way, to relieve them, and the strength and success of the enemy increase daily in these parts. A small vessel to ride constantly in the harbour would much advance the welfare of the place by fetching such commodities as might be got in the adjacent islands and creeks. See L. J., V. 426, 720.

Jan. Instructions given by the commissioners appointed by the King's Majesty and Parliament of this kingdom (Scotland), for conserving the articles of the treaty, to John Earl of London, Lord High Chancellor of Scotland, &c. You shall with all earnestness intreat His Majesty and Parliament that episcopacy may be totally removed, and that there may be unity of religion and uniformity of kirk government in all His Majesty's dominions: to this effect you shall solicit His Majesty and the Parliament for a meeting of sound divines of both kingdoms, who may prepare matters for the consideration of His Majesty, and the Parliament. You shall entreat and earnestly labour that His Majesty and the Parliament may in the depth of their wisdom take such fair and compendious ways as may remove the causes of these troubles without the effusion of more blood, and that there may be a more peaceable and amicable decision than by the sword. You shall shew that it is earnestly desired, that the Houses of Parliament would resolve upon the fittest ways of removing all prejudices and mistakes, and leave no fair means untried which may induce His Majesty to return to His Parliament, and you shall show His Majesty that it is our humble desire that he will hearken to the invitation, that by a happy conjunction with them we great public affairs may be settled. You shall earnestly beg that all papists now in arms in England shall be speedily disarmed and disbanded, and especially those in the Earl of Newcastle's army, because the most part thereof have been levied and have their residence near our borders, which may do us greater prejudice than the garrisons at Berwick and Carlisle, which were expressly contrary to the last treaty. You shall show to His Majesty that although we are bound by our commissions, when any difference arises to the disturbance of the common peace, to labour, to remove, and compose it, the present distractions are a work beyond our power and greater than can be remedied by us, and may come to that height before the next triennial Parliament, that any remedy that can come thereby will prove too late, and you shall therefore beseech His Majesty to indict a new Parliament to as short a day as his subjects may be legally warned thereto. Concerning the time of moving this demand, if you find the offer of our services acceptable, and that the King and his Parliament are like to agree, you may forbear proposing it, but if not, you shall instantly desire that a Parliament be indicted. You shall be careful that the whole articles of the former treaty be observed. You shall adhere closely and positively to our desires for the removal of episcopacy and the unity of kirk government, but in regard to differences in matters civil you shall desire that the Parliament give all satisfaction to His Majesty, so far as may stand with their liberties and religion, and that His Majesty may give contentment to his Parliament in all things that may stand with his honour and just authority. You shall show our earnest desire for the Queen's speedy return to England. You shall represent to His Majesty, that the commissioners have taken special notice of the excepting of Sir Archibald Johnston, of Warriston, out of the safe conduct, and desire His Majesty to take into his royal consideration what prejudice it may produce in the opinion of his good subjects, if any who are trusted in the public affairs of this kingdom, authorized thereto by His Majesty and the Parliament, shall upon any private information be rendered incapable of that trust, and you shall humbly beseech His Majesty to remove this stop, since we have made choice of him, as one who hath given sufficient proof of his fidelity, and hath never to our knowledge done anything to the prejudice of His Majesty's royal person, honour, and authority. See Clarendon, Vol. III., 498. Rushworth, Vol. II., Part III., 398.

Jan. List of prisoners in the Gatehouse, committed by the Lords in Parliament, and by the committee for the safety of the kingdom.

Feb. 1. Petition of Thomas Jenyns, Esq. The auditing of the accounts between petitioner and Sir Philip Vernatti was referred by their Lordships to Sir Charles Harbourn, Auditor Phillips, Auditor Povey, and Auditor Gwynn. Sir Charles Harbourn having gone beyond the seas, and his return being very uncertain, petitioner prays that the other auditors may certify in his absence. L. J., V. 584.

Feb. 1. Petition of Samuel Peck, scrivener, Francis Coles, and Francis Leach, of London, stationers. Were committed by their Lordships for printing and publishing a book, intituled "A continuation of passages for the last week." Are heartily sorry for their offence and pray for their discharge. See L. J., VI. 16.

Feb. 6. Petition of the governor, assistants, and fellowship of merchant adventurers of England, to H. C. Pray that they may have one general and final order, by which they may, without interruption, receive such moneys as come in upon the Act for 400,000*l.*, until the principal and interest of the 70,000*l.*, furnished by them for the use of the Parliament is cleared off, as petitioners' creditors of whom they took up the money are daily pressing them for repayment. See C. J., II. 956.

Feb. 7. Copy of letter from the Parliament to the Lord Willoughby of Parham, Lord Lieutenant of Lincolnshire, desiring him to suppress the riots in Sutton Marsh. L. J., V. 592. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of an application for an order for suppressing the riot.
2. Affidavit of John Reade, concerning a riot in Sutton Marsh. 1 Feb. 1642-3.

Feb. 7. Letter from the Earl of Stamford, at Plymouth, to the Speaker of the House of Lords. Has by former despatches informed their Lordships of the condition of these parts. Is now besieged very close; the enemy are so cunning that they invite men, women, and children to come out of Cornwall into Devon to carry away the plunder of this town, for they are impudent enough to report that they have taken some of the fets and works. When by these delusions they have brought the ablest men into Devon, they, having guarded all the passes, keep them on this side and force them to serve. All here are resolved, they (the Earl's party) have able and good officers, hearty and stout soldiers. The mayor of the town is as brave a man as ever breathed, and they want nothing that his purse, credit, or power can help them to. The assistants, the members of the House of Commons, the deputy lieutenants, and the rest of the Council of War, sleep not in security, but are assistants day and night to perform the parts of gallant and brave men, so the writer doubts not to defend the place against the malice of the enemy, who do nothing but plunder this poor country most barbarously. Expects supplies of men out of the north, and east of Devon, for although they have store of horse and men in this place, yet the country about is so naturally fortified with hedges and breastworks, and so full of lanes and straight ways, that if they send out any parties they give them over, for until more force come up behind them it is useless making sallies or sorties. Is confident their Lordships will not impute the late misfortunes to any default of the writer. Shall refer himself to those noble gentlemen who can best report his actions. L. J., V. 603.

Feb. 8. Petition of Captain Thomas Nettervill, prisoner in Wood Street Compter, London. By an order of their Lordships, he was allowed 2*s.* a day for his maintenance, which for a long time was duly paid to him by Mr. Willis, clerk of the Crown. For the last three months petitioner has received nothing, and Mr. Willis says that all the money delivered to him for the purpose is expended. Prays that either his liberty may be granted to him, or the allowance continued. L. J., V. 503.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same. Petitioner has not yet received any benefit from their Lordships' order, and has in his extreme necessity been compelled to borrow his bread of his fellow prisoners. Prays that some other way may be appointed for his relief. (Undated.)

Feb. 8. Ordinance for the Earl of Warwick to command the fleet. L. J., V. 593. In extenso.

Feb. 8. Order for the treasurers to give acquittances to persons advancing money in London. L. J. V., 593. In extenso.

Feb. 8. Order for assessing persons in London, according to the ordinance of the 29th of November. L. J., V. 594. In extenso.

Feb. 8. Order for sequestering the living of Bushey, Herts. L. J., V. 594.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.
2. Petition of George Seaton, Doctor of Divinity. Complains that the order for sequestering the living of Bushey was obtained by misinformation. Prays that he and his accusers may be brought face to face, and that then whosoever is found to have misinformed the House may receive exemplary punishment.
3. Petition of Philip Edline, Bachelor in Divinity. Prays that the order sequestering the living of Bushey may be discharged, as petitioner was duly instituted to the living upon the resignation of Dr. Seaton.

Feb. 8. Draft of the General Confession of National Sin, to be used at the fast. L. J., V. 595. In extenso.

Feb. 9. Petition of William Blake. Prays that the examination of the petition of Anne Blake, his wife, may be referred to some of the judges. L. J., V. 596.

Feb. 9. Petition of John Pulford, His Majesty's servant. Was arrested by John Hodges contrary to privilege. Prays for his discharge. L. J., V. 596. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Pulford concerning his arrest.
2. Petition of John Hodges. Is committed to the custody of the gentleman usher upon the unjust complaint of John Pulford, who pretends himself to be one of the King's servants extraordinary. Prays to be discharged upon bail, as he is employed in several services for the Parliament. (Undated.)

- Feb. 13. Copy of preceding.
- Feb. 14. Petition of Lucy Mitchell and others, whose husbands are captives in Algiers. Petitioners have waited for two years in expectation of an order for their relief, and have spent all the small means they had, and pawned the very clothes off their backs; so unless their Lordships' compassion is extended towards them, they are like to perish. There was money allowed for the redemption of all captives upon the book of rates which lies dead in the Custom House. Pray that a set proportion may be allowed amongst petitioners for their husbands' redemption. L. J., V. 605.
- Feb. 14. Application for a protection for Francois de Lizzola, resident for His Imperial Majesty. L. J., V. 605.

Feb. 14. Petition of Francis Wortley, Esq., one of the gentlemen of His Majesty's Privy Chamber. Was arrested at the suit of Richard Thorneton, contrary to privilege, detained one day, and afterwards compelled to put in bail before he obtained his liberty. Prays that his bail may be discharged, and that he may receive some recompense for the affront offered to him. L. J., V. 605.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Richard Thorneton, one of the soldiers of the trained bands for the county of Middlesex, parcel of the militia settled by ordinance of Parliament. Complains of the indignities to which he has been subjected by Mr. Wortley, and prays that all proceedings against him may be stayed, until their Lordships have heard and examined the truth on all sides.

Feb. 14. Petition of Anne Blake, wife of William Blake. Prays their Lordships to suspend the order of the 9th of February till after the hearing of the cause. L. J., V. 605.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to. L. J., V. 596.

Feb. 14. Petition of Henry Hughes, physician in ordinary to the Prince Elector's Highness. Prays for a pass from London to the Cinque Ports, and from thence into Holland. L. J., V. 605.

Feb. 14. Petition of inhabitants of the parish of St. Cuthbert's, Bedford. Mr. Thorne, parson of St. Mary's, Bedford, some years since engrossed into his hands the rectory of St. Cuthbert over the head of the incumbent, who was then living, since which time he has taken the profits of both the benefices, but wilfully neglects the cure of petitioners' souls, having only kept one drunken curate to officiate in both churches. Pray that Mr. Thorne may be compelled to afford a sufficient maintenance out of the profits of the rectory to Mr. Houlden, a godly and painful minister. L. J., V. 605.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate signed by the churchwardens and other inhabitants of the parish, as to the truth of the allegations contained in preceding petition.

Feb. 14. Petition of William James [Jhannes] that his suit against Daniel Faïrefax may be referred to the Delegates. L. J., V. 605.

Annexed:—

1. Order referring the cause to the ordinary proceedings of the Delegates. 15 Feb. 1642-3.

Feb. 14. Draft ordinance for raising 500 dragoons in the county of Surrey. C. J., II. 964. The House of Lords ordered this ordinance to be respited for a time, and the county to be heard upon it, and no further proceedings appear to have been taken. Noted, Not passed. See L. J., V. 606.

Feb. 14. Petition of Richard Heron, printer. Was committed to the Fleet for printing something which has given offence to their Lordships. Prays for his discharge, as it is his first offence. See L. J., V. 596.

Feb. 15. Pass for a child of Sir Charles Berkley to be conveyed in a horse litter from Bruton, in the county of Somerset, to Oxford, to be touched for the King's evil. L. J., V. 606.

Feb. 15. Order for the repayment of 4,000*l.* to Sir William Waller and others, advanced by them for furnishing the forces in the county of Gloucester. L. J., V. 606. In extenso.

Feb. 15. Petition of John Bradley touching the administration of the estate of the late John Farrington. L. J., V. 607. In extenso.

Feb. 16. Ordinance for raising forces and money in the county of Chester. L. J., V. 608.

Feb. 17. Petition of Ashton Nuttall, Esquire. Prays that the writ of error brought into the House by Gisborough and others may be dismissed. L. J., V. 608.

Feb. 17. Petition of Wilks Fitchett and William Shallaker. Upon a former petition their Lordships gave order to Sir Robert Pye to pay petitioners 817*l.* for provisions for the service of the House. Sir Robert Pye certified that he could not pay the same, because the commission from His Majesty to the Lords for his treasury was vacated and others chosen. Their Lordships then ordered Sir Robert Pye to draw up an order to send to the other commissioners, which was done, and petitioner has attended Lord Newburgh with it, but he answered that the commissioners cannot sign the order because the Parliament have made stay of His Majesty's revenues. Pray that some order may be made by which they may receive the money. L. J., V. 608.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petition referred to in preceding.

Feb. 17. Letter from the Mayor and others of Kingston-upon-Hull to the Lords and Commons. Sir John Hotham has intimated that unless Parliament will furnish him with a speedy supply for the payment of his soldiers he will desist any further engagement, and immediately impose the charge upon the poor inhabitants of the town, alleging that the soldiers must not starve, and that therefore the inhabitants must provide for them. The writers have by the command of the Parliament entertained a garrison of soldiers amongst them, not only for the safety of the town and country adjacent, but as they conceive for the safety of the whole kingdom, and as the benefit may redound to the whole nation, so the charge, if it be imposed upon a poor corporation, may seem insupportable. They therefore pray that Parliament may resolve upon some way to secure them from the heavy burden likely to be cast upon them, for it is not the custom of the Governor to be dilatory in such resolutions. See L. J., V. 612.

Feb. 18. Copy of letter from the Speaker of the House of Lords to Lord Campden, desiring him to contribute towards the charges of the Parliament forces, as others of his rank have already done. L. J., V. 609. In extenso.

Feb. 18. Draft resolutions concerning the disbanding of the armies, &c. L. J., V. 610.

Feb. 18. Alterations proposed by the House of Lords in the ordinance for weekly assessments. L. J., V. 610.

Feb. 18. Order for the repayment to Mr. Stephens and Mr. Hodges, members of the House of Commons, of 720*l.* advanced by them for furnishing arms for the forces in the county of Gloucester. L. J., V. 611. In extenso.

Feb. 18. Order for seizing the estates of malignants in the county of Lincoln. L. J., V. 611. In extenso.

Feb. 18. Letter from the committee for Northamptonshire to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Lords, concerning the taking of Lord Vaux's timber from Harrowden. L. J., V. 617. In extenso.

Feb. 18. Petition of William Arundell, Esq. Prays that an early day may be appointed for hearing his cause against Lord Baltimore. See L. J., V. 379, &c.

Feb. 18. Petition of Robert Shering. Prays that Richard Tito may be ordered forthwith to bring up his writ of error out of the King's Bench. See L. J., V. 612.

Feb. 18. Pass for Mrs. Elizabeth Walter to travel to Barnsley, Gloucestershire, about her own private occasions.

Feb. 20. Petition of Dame Dorothy Leventhorpe, late wife of Sir Thomas Leventhorpe, Bart., and now wife of Thomas Holford, Esquire. Prays that Thomas Holford may be ordered to carry out the provisions of a post-nuptial agreement, entered into between him and the petitioner, touching an estate left to her by her late husband. L. J., V. 611.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding, and upon the same paper copy of the agreement referred to. 5 March 1641-2.

Feb. 20. Petition of Margery Page, widow, late wife of William Page, one of the Barons of the Exchequer. Petitioner's husband died three months since, and about a week afterwards her coach horses were taken from her by colour of an order of Parliament, and about twenty men and horses, employed in the Parliament service, were billeted at her house at Harrow on the Hill. Petitioner inhabiting in London during this winter was assessed at 100*l.* for the 20th part of her estate, and although it was well known that she had not received one penny of her jointure since the death of her husband, yet on the 13th of this month divers unknown persons of mean condition, to the number of about thirty, armed with charged muskets and other weapons, upon pretence of levying the said 100*l.* upon petitioner's estate, in a most barbarous manner broke into her house, and carried thence the beds whereon she lay, hangings, brass, pewter, and other goods, even all that she had, besides the deeds and evidences of her estate. Prays relief in her great extremity, and that her deeds, goods, and chattels, may be restored to her. L. J., V. 611.

Feb. 20. Petition of Anne Pratt, wife of Francis Pratt, haberdasher. Petitioner's husband, who has been assessed for the 20th part of his estate, is in the country, and will not return for a fortnight. Prays that in the meantime his goods, which have been seized, may not be taken away. L. J., V. 612.

Feb. 20. Draft order appointing a Committee of Lords to meet the Committee of the Commons to consider of the way of proceeding in the treaty, &c. L. J., V. 612.

Feb. 20. Petition of the inhabitants of Lambeth. On Sunday last some soldiers belonging to Captain Andrewes' company came into the church during prayers with their hats on, and taking tobacco, and derided the service; when they were reproached for it they brandished their swords, and after they were driven out of the church, they slew one of the parishioners, and sorely wounded another. Pray that steps may be taken for repressing and punishing such disorder. L. J., V. 612.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Edward Harper and others concerning the riot.

2. Certificate of the parishioners of Lambeth that it was Hugh Cocks, one of Captain Andrewes' soldiers, that killed Thomas Coe, one of the parishioners, in the churchyard. See L. J., V. 614.

3. Certificate of Richard Kellett, of the parish of St. Margaret's, Westminster, chirurgeon, that Edward Jones, of Lambeth, waterman, is so dangerously wounded with a shot through his thigh that he is not likely to live till tomorrow night. 21 Feb. L. J., V. 615. In extenso.

Feb. 20. Petition of Thomas Shering. Prays that the writ of error in the cause between him and Richard Tito may be brought in, and that Tito may be ordered to assign errors. L. J., V. 612.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of Shering, praying that Tito may be ordered speedily to assign errors. (Undated.)

Feb. 20. Draft of the requests of the Lord Mayor, aldermen, and common council of the City of London about the raising of 60,000*l.* L. J., V. 612. In extenso.

Feb. 20. Application for a pass for a waggon containing goods belonging to the Countess of Carnarvon to go from London to Oxford. See L. J., V. 613.

Feb. 20. Petition of John Earl of Rutland. Prays that an order may be issued restraining certain miners from working in the manors of Haddon and Harthill, until a cause now pending between them and petitioner in the court of the Duchy of Lancaster has been heard and determined. See L. J., V. 624.

Feb. 21. Pass for Robert Makyn, yeoman of His Majesty's chandry, to carry wax lights and torches to Oxford for His Majesty's service. L. J., V. 613.

Feb. 21. Draft order in the cause, Hooper v. Jhannes. L. J., V. 613.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Anthony Hooper, praying that the preceding order may be revoked. (Undated.)

Feb. 21. Pass for a servant of the Marchioness of Hertford to go to Oxford with household stuff and other necessities for her Ladyship's use. L. J., V. 613.

Annexed:—

1. A note of what is wanting in my Lady's chamber.

Feb. 23. Order for Sir William Waller to execute martial law in his army. L. J., V. 617. In extenso.

Feb. 23. Copy of the King's answer concerning the putting off the general assizes and gaol delivery throughout the Kingdom. L. J., V. 618. In extenso.

Feb. 23. Order for the removal of Lord Macquire and other prisoners from the Tower to Ludgate. L. J., V. 618. In extenso.

Feb. 23. Ordinance for sequestering the profits of the living of St. Nicholas Olave, Bread Street. L. J., V. 618. In extenso.

Feb. 23. Ordinance for Nathaniel Fiennes, Esq., to raise a regiment of horse in the counties of Gloucester, Worcester, and Oxon, and to seize horses and arms belonging to delinquents. L. J., V. 618. In extenso.

Feb. 23. Petition to the Commons of Dr. Eohlyn, physician in ordinary to the Queen's Majesty, and by command of both the King and Queen's Majesty appointed to attend their royal children at St. James'; petitioner is in great want, because a pension of 100*l.* granted him by the King has not been paid for a year and a half on account of the distracted state of the King's revenue; prays the House to order the payment of his arrears, and of his pension in future, in consideration of his attendance on the royal children. C. J., II. 975.

Feb. 23. Petition of Daniel Featley, D.D., rector of Lambeth. Prays that John Goad and others may be called upon to answer for the false and scandalous articles exhibited by them against petitioner to the Committee in the Exchequer Chamber for plundered ministers. Goad and the others, who are obstinate separatists, took part with the soldiers against the parishioners in the late riots in Lambeth church.

Feb. 28. Petition of the governor, assistants, and fellowship of Eastland merchants. Pray that a pass may be granted to two of their company, with their secretary and a servant, to go to the King, as they have speedy occasion to address themselves to His Majesty with a petition for His Royal Letter to the King of Denmark for the restitution of a ship lately seized in the Sound, upon pretence of short entries made by the master. L. J., V. 626.

Feb. 28. Reasons why the ordinance now remaining unpassed in the Lords' House, for the raising of some moneys by some Staffordshire and Warwickshire gentlemen for the defence of the counties of Stafford and Warwick, and the counties of the cities of Coventry and Lichfield, should be presently passed. 1. The papists and ill-affected there are in actual rebellion. 2. The officers are now in town and cannot get to their charge without money. 3. The cessation of arms is to begin on Saturday, and unless the ordinance is at once passed, will begin before the officers can get to their charge and so the counties will be lost. 4. The ordinance is only in pursuance of the ordinance of association of the said counties. 5. The like reasons for the counties of Salop and other counties. See L. J., V. 627.

Feb. 28. Draft ordinance for raising money in the counties of Warwick and Stafford. L. J., V. 627. In extenso.

March 11. Petition of Thomas Moyser, Esq. Prays for further time to assign errors in the writ of error depending between him and Ashton Nuttall and others. L. J., V. 645.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for petitioner to assign errors. 17 Feb. 1642-3.

2. Affidavit of Thomas Moyser that the county of York, where petitioner's house is, is now in such great trouble that he is unable to go or send thither for his writings, without great and manifest danger. He has already had a foot post stripped stark naked, who was going to York with a letter. 7 March 1642-3.

3. Another petition of Moyser to Edward Earl of Manchester; prays his Lordship to procure him further time to assign errors, as he has had his house plundered, and his books and writings taken away, his children, but young, driven he knows not whither, and the little estate he hath is wholly in the enemy's hands.

March 13. Petition of Thomas Coningsbie, Esq., High Sheriff of the county of Hertford. Petitioner's wife and children coming to town on Friday last, in their coach, to see him, one Gregson took away two of his horses by power of some warrant, but contrary to the ordinance of the 23rd of January last. Prays that the horses may be released. L. J., V. 646.

Details at great length the circumstances of the attack upon his house at Luffenham, in the county of Rutland, by the forces under Lord Grey. Petitioner estimates his losses at 3,000*l*. and prays their Lordships to be a means to the House of Commons, by whom he has been committed, for his discharge or that he may be released upon bail. L. J., V. 641.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from William Atton, at Brooke, (Viscount Campden's house) to Thomas Noel, Esq. There are forces at Wickham which have seized upon all my Lord's and Mr. Henry Noel's stock there, and have entered their houses and grounds, and discharged the tenants from their rents, and are now selling all the wood upon the ground, but by what law the writer cannot imagine. Desires to know (by his Lady's command) whether any warrant has been given herein by the Houses of Parliament. Believes it is Mr. Norwood who has procured some others like himself to do my Lord, and Mr. Noel this great injury. 8 March 1642-3. See L. J., V. 650.

2. Petition of Henry Skipwith, Esq.; petitioner coming as a friend and near kinsman to visit Mr. Henry Noel in the county of Rutland, was there taken with Mr. Noel by Lord Grey and sent prisoner to London; petitioner was not serving there or elsewhere against Parliament, yet had his horses and clothes taken from him. Prays for examination of the case and that he may be set at liberty upon bail. (Undated.)

March 20. Order for the Committee at Oxford to inform His Majesty of the robbery of certain waggons belonging to the counties of Somerset, Wilts, Devon, and Gloucester, by parties of His Majesty's army issuing out of Reading, notwithstanding His Majesty's late proclamation. L. J., V. 656. In extenso.

March 20. Information of Robert Bookham and others of blasphemous words spoken by Martha Drewitt.

March 21. Petition of Thomas Squire and James Noel. Petitioners arrested John Baynes for a debt due to them, but Baynes, pretending himself a servant of the Lord Morley, obtained an order for his discharge. Pray that the order may be interdicted as Baynes is a papist convict upon record, and no servant to Lord Morley, and is very able to pay petitioners' debt. L. J., V. 657.

March 21. Draft of the instructions for Edmond Prideaux and Anthony Nicol, Esqs., members of the House of Commons employed in the county of Devon. L. J., V. 657. In extenso.

March 21. Draft order for adding certain persons to the Committees for the several counties for a weekly assessment. L. J., V. 658. In extenso.

March 21. Letter from the Committee at Oxford to the Speaker of the House of Commons giving an account of the presentation of the articles for the cessation of arms to the King. C. J., III. 14. This is a duplicate of the letter from the Earl of Northumberland to the Speaker of the House of Lords. L. J., V. 659. In extenso.

March 21. Petition of divers poor prisoners in the Bridewell, in Oxford, who were taken at Marlborough, to H. C. Petitioners were made prisoners whilst endeavouring to defend the town of Marlborough, and were dragged in the most inhuman manner to the Castle at Oxford, where they have endured hard imprisonment for the space of ten weeks, having been kept without food, sometimes for three days together, and now only allowed bread and water. All which cruelty has been exercised upon them to compel them to take an oath whereby they must swear that the Earl of Essex and all his adherents are traitors, and the war now raised for the destruction of them and the Parliament most just and necessary. Two and thirty of the petitioners have now been thrust into a moist, nasty, and stinking dungeon, and all persons are forbidden on pain of death to come to them, or relieve them with food or linen, by means of which inhuman cruelties many of them have fallen desperately sick and all the rest are like to do so, as they have been threatened by Captain William Smith, Provost Marshal General of His Majesty's army, to be secretly stifled, poisoned, and affamished to death. Pray that some course may be taken whereby their lives may be preserved. See C. J., III. 11.

Annexed:—

1. Several articles of the cruel and unjust dealings and proceedings of Captain William Smith, Provost Marshal General of His Majesty's army, against many poor prisoners in Oxford Castle, and now in Bridewell.

2. Draft of the order of the Commons that the preceding petition and articles be printed and published, and that an express be sent to the Lord General to desire His Majesty that a speedy course may be taken for their relief. C. J., III. 11. In extenso.

March 21. Petition of divers of the inhabitants of Radwinter in the county of Essex, to Sir Thomas Barrington and Sir Harbottle Grimston, Knights for the county. Complain of the conduct of their minister, Mr. Drake, who refuses to administer the sacrament to them unless they come to the rail in the chancel. He has also walled up the chancel door and set two images upon the screen, and wears crosses and letters upon his surplice when he preaches. See C. J., III. 11.

March 22. Order for the prevention of disorders in the town of Lynn. L. J., V. 659. In extenso.

March 22. Letter from the Committee at Oxford to the Speaker of the House of Commons, giving a further account of the presentation of the articles for the cessation of arms to the King. This is a duplicate of the letter from the Earl of Northumberland to the Speaker of the House of Lords. L. J., V. 661. In extenso.

- March 31. Letter from the Committee at Oxford to the Speaker of the House of Commons. His Majesty, with his Council, has sat constantly forenoon and afternoon about the cessation of arms. At present he has not come to a full resolution, as many difficulties arose upon the third article about the removal of quarters, which the writers did not conceive themselves enabled to resolve. Hope the business will speedily come to a conclusion, and that the House will receive it on Monday. See C. J., III. 26.
- March 31. Letter from the Earl of Northumberland to the Earl of Manchester. Duplicate of preceding letter from the Committee at Oxford. See L. J., V. 685.
- [1643, March.] Letter from Isaac Pennington, Lord Mayor, to the Speaker of the House of Commons. One Cheshire, a seditious preacher, was apprehended last night; there will be charge enough against him if the Committee think fit to commit him; the writer also apprehended Griffith, rector of St. Mary, Magdalen, near Old Fish Street, London, and Tuke, vicar of St. Olave's, Old Jewry, very desperate fellows, and committed them to Newgate, and sent their accusations to the House, but they are bailed out, and are more insolent than ever: knows not what may happen if an example be not made of some of them.

2. Letter from Za. Dale to Mr. Henry Noel. Received the Lords' order on Sunday night last, and went the next morning to Wickham, but Captain Harrington was gone with his forces to Lincoln, and had taken with him all the steers (18), and had killed six sheep and felled some young ashes for firing; he also left orders that no goods should be taken out of the grounds, and had put 12 horses where the beasts were, and had discharged the tenants from paying any more rent, giving one a special charge to look to the horses, and took away the bailiff prisoner to Lincoln. The writer next day went to Spalding, and showed the order to Captain Harrington's father, who said his son had not done anything but what he had an order for from the Committee at Lincoln. Went thence to Lincoln where he was guarded with muskets and pikes to the Committee, and presented the order, which Lord Willoughby and the rest of the Committee slighted very much. Sir Edward Hartop and Captain Wayte are in Rockingham Castle, and it is reported that Lord Grey will live in Mr. Noel's house, and Captain Wayte in Lord Campden's.

April 1. Two printed copies of the declaration and ordinance of the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament, for the seizing and sequestering of the estates, both real and personal, of certain kinds of notorious delinquents, to the use and for the maintaining of the army raised by the Parliament, and such other uses as shall be directed by both Houses of Parliament for the benefit of the Commonwealth. The declaration is given in Rushworth (Vol. III., Part II., p. 309), with the exception of the names of the sequestrators, which are given in extenso in the Parliamentary Register, Vol. XII., 227.

April 1. List of persons accountable for monies received for the war in defence of the kingdom of Ireland against the rebels.

April 1. Draft of letter from [] calling a meeting at Leatherhead of the Commissioners for the county of Surrey, concerning the levying of the contribution money.

April 2. Petition of Charles Masselle, a poor distressed Frenchman, administrator of Daniel Hugo. Petitioner having obtained a decree against Thomas Gleane in the Court of Requests, Gleane subsequently obtained a prohibition in the Court of Common Pleas, whereby petitioner is prevented from proceeding further with his decree. Prays that Gleane may be ordered to pay the amount awarded by the decree with costs and damages, as petitioner is unable to be relieved by law, most of his witnesses being since dead, and the remainder living at Sedan in France.

Annexed:—

1. A similar petition of same. (Undated.)

April 3. Draft resolutions concerning the treaty with the King. L. J., V. 687. In extenso.

April 3. Report from the Committee upon the Riot at Lambeth. C. J., III. 27.

April 4. Order for the payment of 400*l.* to Sir John Clotworthy for his service in Ireland. L. J., V. 691. In extenso.

April 4. Order for the payment of 138*l.* to Sir Robert King for cows, wheat, and beer barley for Ireland. L. J., V. 691. In extenso.

April 4. Petition of Thomas Holford, Esq. Petitioner has only recently heard of the order obtained by his wife Dorothy (late wife of Sir Thomas Leventhorpe), whereby he is restrained from taking any benefit of his wife's estate, until he can procure some further order from their Lordships. It has been impossible for him to attend to make good his case, as he has been for a long time sick of a fever, and in great danger of death. He therefore prays that he may be restored to the benefit of his freeholds, and that a day may be appointed for the further hearing of the matter, his own estate in the counties of Chester, Salop, and Flint, being under the sword of the array men, his subsistence for the present depends merely upon that which has been taken from him by their Lordships' order. See L. J., V. 611.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order appointing a meeting of the committee, to whom Lady Leventhorpe's petition was referred. 25 Feb. 1842-3.

2. Copy of the report of the committee. 1 March 1642-3. L. J., V. 629.

3. Certificate of Theodore Deodate, Doctor of Physic, that Thomas Holford has been sick of a fever since the 16th of Feb., and that he is unable to give his personal attendance without danger of his life. On the same paper is an affidavit of Holford that Dr. Deodate's certificate is true. 4 April 1643.

April 5. Petition of William Latham, woollen draper in ordinary to His Majesty. Was arrested on the 27th of March last, when providing cloth to send away for His Majesty's last Maunday, at the suit of Simon Perrott. Prays that Perrott and others may be sent for to answer. L. J., V. 692.

April 5. Petition of Benjamin Spencer, minister of St. Thomas' parish in Southwark. Was committed to the Fleet for contempt of their Lordships' order. Prays for his discharge, and that some maintenance may be allowed to him until he take some lawful course, either in the ministry or otherwise, whereby he may get bread for himself and family. L. J., V. 692.

April 5. Petition of Sir Thomas Cary, that his cause against the Bishop of Ardagh may be referred to one or two of the judges. L. J., V. 692.

April 11. Ordinance for securing the money raised in Dorsetshire. L. J., V. 710. In extenso.

April 11. Ordinance for adding committees to the sequestrators for the county of Devon. L. J., V. 711. In extenso.

April 10. Copy of the King's message in answer to the request of the committees about disbanding the army. L. J., V. 711. In extenso.

April 11. Petition of Edward Hudson, clerk. By their Lordship's order of the 23rd of October 1641, the Archbishop of Canterbury was directed not to bestow any of the ecclesiastical benefices, which are in his disposing, until the names of the persons nominated by him were approved by the House. The Archbishop very much defraudeth this order by allowing his benefices when they fall void to lapse into the King's gift, and then uses means for his Majesty to present the same man as the Archbishop intended for it. Prays that an order may be made for the Archbishop to institute petitioner to the rectory of Chartham, Kent. L. J., V. 712.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 23rd October 1641 referred to in preceding. L. J., IV. 402. In extenso.

2. Copy of order recommending Hudson to the Archbishop for the rectory of Chartham. 28 March 1643. L. J., V. 675.

3. Another petition of Hudson praying their Lordships to grant a further order to the Archbishop to collate petitioner to the rectory of Chartham. (Undated.)

April 11. Message from the Commons concerning the Earl of Kinnoul, the Duke D'Espernon, &c. L. J., V. 712.

April 11. Order for sequestering the living of Cottingham, in the county of York. L. J., V. 714. In extenso.

April 11. Petition of John Harrison. Petitioner and his father having been despoiled of all their estate in the province of Connaught by the rebels were forced to fly with their families to the castle of Boyle, where they remained fifteen months, and were driven with the last convoy for Connaught to come to Dublin. Petitioner has since come to England to endeavour to obtain the payment of monies owing to him by Sir George Radcliffe and Sir Robert King, but they answer that they have no money whereby to give him satisfaction. Petitioner prays that they may be called upon to satisfy his April 13. Petition of William Lord Archbishop of Canterbury. Denies the statements contained in the petition of Edward Hudson with reference to the living of Chartham, Kent. Petitioner received a letter from his Majesty requiring him to give the benefice to another man, or else lapse it to His Majesty in order that he might bestow it. Prays their Lordships to remember the long restraint and affliction of their poor petitioner, and not press him more about this benefice, considering he hath already given answer to His Majesty according to his duty, that he will obey His Majesty's gracious letters. Holograph. See L. J., V. 717.

13. Desire of the Committee for a further answer concerning the Cinque Ports, &c.

14. Paper delivered to the King upon the instructions concerning the disbanding.

The whole of these papers are printed in extenso. L. J., VI. 5-7.

April 17. Application for a pass for Edward Phillips to go to Spa with his family and servants. L. J., VI. 7.

April 17. Statement as to the income of the minister of Saint Thomas's parish in Southwark. L. J., VI. 7.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of inhabitants of the parish of St. Thomas in Southwark that the whole of the profits of the living, which only amount to 50*l.* per annum, may be paid to their present minister Mr. Bisco, and a contribution be made in the parish for Mr. Spencer lately sequestered by order of Parliament.

April 17. Petition of Edward Corbett, Fellow of Merton College, Oxford, praying to be confirmed in the rectory of Chartham, Kent. L. J., VI. 8. In extenso.

April 17. Petition of the Lady Honora, Baroness of Kerry. Prays for an allowance for herself and family. L. J., VI. 8. In extenso.

April 17. Petition of His Majesty's tapestry workmen at Mortlake, in the county of Surrey. Pray leave to transport some of their manufactures to Holland free of duty. L. J., VI. 8. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same. Pray that some means may be taken whereby they may receive payment of $,937*l.* due to them by His Majesty, as they are in great distress, many of them being ready to starve for hunger. (Undated.)

April 17. Report from the committee of examinations upon the seizing of Mr. Carye's horses by Captain Player. C. J., III. 48. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Commons made upon preceding report. C. J., III. 48. In extenso.
2. Order of the committee of examinations that the horses taken from Mr. Carye shall continue in Captain Player's custody, as Mr. Carye is suspected to come from Oxford, and doth usually pass byeways to avoid the courts of guards and watches. 14 April 1643.
3. Affidavit of John Cooke that he served the order of the House of Lords upon Captain Player. 17 April 1643.

April 20. Petition of David Mathew, agent for Sir Arthur Hopton, His Majesty's Ambassador now resident in Spain. Prays that a pass may be granted to him to go into Warwickshire, Norfolk, and Suffolk, with his wife and one servant, to collect some rents due to Sir Arthur Hopton, and to labour to make some provision for his own subsistence. L. J., VI. 12.

April 20. Order for the payment of 42*l.* 15*s.* to Captain Richard Dowse, arrears due to him for his personal entertainment in the late Northern Expedition. L. J., VI. 13. In extenso.

April 20. Order for the payment of 41*l.* 5*s.* to Captain Edmond Hippisley, arrears due to him for his personal entertainment in the late Northern Expedition. L. J., VI. 13. In extenso.

April 20. Order for raising a regiment of volunteers in the county of Hertford. L. J., VI. 13. In extenso.

April 20. Letter from Sir William Parsons, Sir Richard Bolton, Sir Adam Loftus, Sir Gerrard Lowther, and Sir Robert Meredith, certain of the Judges and Council in Ireland to [the Speaker of the House of Lords]. Complain of the injustice of the judgment passed against them by the Lords in Parliament, whereby they are condemned as criminal persons to pay damages to Henry Stewart and James Gray. Have nothing left but their bodies to satisfy this condemnation; they are truly confident of their own innocence, and that if their Lordships were only rightly and fully informed, the writers would be able to give them most ample satisfaction. Seventeen of the Lords and Privy Council were present in the Castle Chamber, when the sentence was pronounced against Stewart and Gray, yet the damages are adjudged to be paid only by eight. Stewart and Gray have not been damnedified, for His Majesty has been graciously pleased to remit their fines, which the writers conceive he would not have done, if he had thought that his Counsellors and Judges would have been further troubled. The writers delivered their judgment according to their knowledge and consciences, and upon the merits of the cause, as they understood it, and upon the public hearing thereof in open Court, in the presence of the defendants who have never alleged any bribery, partiality, or corruption against them, without due proof whereof, decrees of Judges were in all times, and still are, reversed without punishment or penalty to the judges. They, therefore, humbly entreat that their petition may be read and their counsel heard. See L. J., V. 345, &c.

April 21. Writ of error, &c., in the cause Shering v. Tyto. L. J., VI. 13. (Parchment collection.)

April 22. Petition of Thomas Jenyns, Esq., concerning his cause against Sir Filibert Vernatti. L. J., VI. 14. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order in the cause referred to in preceding. 7 April 1643. L. J., V. 697.
2. Affidavit of John Carter and James Parsons, in the cause. 18 April 1643.

April 24. Petition of William Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, prisoner in the Tower. Was in good hope that his last answer touching the rectory of Chartham would have given satisfaction to their Lordships. His answer must still be the same, that he is engaged both in duty and promise to His Majesty. Prays that this may be an acceptable answer to their Lordships, and that he may not be further pressed in the matter. (Holograph.) L. J., VI. 15.

April 24. Petition of Samuel Peck, scrivener, Francis Coles, and Francis Leach, of London, stationers. Were committed by their Lordships on the 7th of January last for printing and publishing a pamphlet intituled "The continuation of the News." Pray for their discharge upon bail. L. J., VI. 16.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

April 24. Certificate of Baron Trevor and Justices Reeve and Bacon concerning John Baynes, servant to Lord Morley. L. J., VI. 16. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. List of matters for which Baynes is in the custody of the sheriffs of London.
2. Copy of indictment against Baynes for recusancy in not coming to church.
3. Copy of the outlawry of Baynes upon preceding indictment.
4. Affidavit of Ambrose Hopton that Baynes is a servant of Lord Morley. 17 April 1643.

5. Petition of John Baynes, praying for his discharge, having been arrested contrary to privilege.

6. Petition of Thomas Spaldinge and others, creditors of John Baynes, a goldsmith, now a prisoner in the compter. Pray that Baynes may not be discharged until he shall have paid petitioners' just debts, as unless he do so they will be unable to continue their weekly payments. Baynes, who is a desperate and dangerous fellow, hath lately been at Oxford with the cavaliers and reports that he will beat up a drum for the King, and deeply swears that he will himself kill forty Roundheads, and that for twenty shillings, he will procure my Lord Morley's protection for any man.

April 25. Copy of preceding.

April 25. List of Committee of the Commons appointed to consider how the King's revenue may be received and improved to the advantage of the kingdom. C. J., III. 59. In extenso.

April 27. Petition of Elizabeth Countess Rivers. Petitioner having been barbarously assaulted and despoiled of her goods, their Lordships made an order for her protection (L. J., V. 331), and to encourage her tenants to pay their rents; this they still refuse to do, whereby petitioner's debts remain unpaid and her children are deprived of all maintenance. Prays for a further order to enforce the payment of her rents. L. J., VI. 19.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

April 27. Order of the Commons for a pass to be granted to the messenger to the cursitors of the Chancery to carry some writs to Oxford, &c. C. J., III. 61. In extenso.

April 28. Judgment against Mr. Ingoldsby, sequestering his living of Walton, in the county of Hertford, and committing him to the Fleet for publishing a book full of malignant expressions and imputations upon the proceedings of Parliament, and for preaching "That those that have taken the protestation and do fight against the King were foresworn." L. J., VI. 20.

April 28. Draft of preceding.

April 28. Affidavit of Thomas Shemons, keeper of one of the walks in the Great Park at Windsor, that John Moore and others coursed the deer in the Park with greyhounds. L. J., VI. 21. In extenso.

April 28. Draft order for quieting the Earl of Suffolk's possessions at Newport in the county of Essex. L. J., VI. 21. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavits of John Parish and John Flaske that they heard John Webbe and others say that they would turn their cattle into Lord Suffolk's mead called Newport-pond, and not permit his Lordship to enjoy the same, and that they would take advantage of these times lest they have not the like again. 25 April 1643.

April 29. Order for sequestering the living of Shenfield in the county of Essex. L. J., VI. 21.

April 29. Petition of John Childersley, Doctor in Divinity. Cheerfully submits to the order for sequestering his living of Shenfield, Essex, but prays that the arrears of rents, and tithes to Lady-day last may be paid to him, that he may have leave to sell his hay, wood, and other goods without interruption, and that April 29. Judgment against Henry Downhall sequestering his living of St. Ives, in the county of Huntingdon. L. J., VI. 22.

April 29. Judgment against John Reynolds, sequestering his living of Houghton-cum-Witton, in the county of Huntingdon, because there is proof that he is with the King's army. L. J., VI. 22.

April 29. Affidavit of Christopher Trench and others concerning the arrest of John Wyeman, servant to the Earl of Holland. L. J., VI. 22. In extenso.

April 29. Petition of Sir Thomas Malet, Knight, one of the Justices of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench. Prays for further liberty. L. J., VI. 23. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same. Is very sorry to have offended their Lordships, and humbly prays that he may be discharged from further imprisonment. (Undated.)

April 29. Petition of Edmond Cheeseman. Was lately committed to Newgate by order of Parliament for pretended words of blasphemy. Prays that he may be speedily tried or enlarged upon bail. L. J., VI. 23.

April 29. Petition of Lyming Dickenson, Esq., concerning his cause against Thomas Gratwicke. L. J., VI. 23. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order in the cause. 5 July 1641.
2. Affidavit of Lyming Dickenson that he served the preceding order upon Thomas Alse and John Palmer, and that they treated it with contempt. 28 April 1643.

April 29. Certificate of Doctor Zouche concerning the goods of Sir Peter Ricault. L. J., VI. 23. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the paper presented by the Resident of Portugal, and copies of various letters on the subject of Sir Peter Ricault's goods, submitted to Dr. Zouche.

April 29. Order for sequestering the estates of delinquents in the county of Devon. L. J., VI. 23. In extenso.

[1643, April 29.] Draft ordinance for raising money in the associated counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, &c., for payment of the forces under Lord Grey of Warke. See C. J., III. 65.

April. Petition of Barnard Alsopp and Thomas Fawcett, distressed prisoners in the Fleet. Were committed about fourteen weeks since (7 Jan. 1642-3) for printing a scandalous book, intituled "His Majesty's Propositions to Sir John Hotham and the Inhabitants of Hull, &c." Pray that they may be discharged, as their offence was committed not wilfully but ignorantly, or that they may be allowed their liberty upon reasonable bail. See L. J., V. 214, &c.

April. Petition of James East and John Freeman. There is at present great need of money for the service of the State, towards which petitioners conceive that 200l. or 300l. a week may be raised by making farthings, which may be brought into the Treasury at Guildhall, and thence issued out to captains and officers, who are willing to accept thereof, for their own and their soldiers' pay. Petitioners who have by the authority of Parliament seized the houses, instruments, and tools now used in the farthing office, and are willing to undertake the business in such way as Parliament shall direct, pray that they may receive order for the further process thereof. See C. J., III. 48.

May 1. Application for a pass for the Earl of San-court (a French lord), and his eight servants to go beyond the seas. L. J., VI. 24.

May 1. List of witnesses produced to prove that Francis Wright, parson of Witham, is a drunkard, &c. L. J., VI. 24.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Commons, sequestering the profits of the living of Witham, and appointing Edmund Brewer as preacher there. 6 April 1643. C. J., III. 32.

May 1. Copy of ordinance instituting the governors of the forces in Londonderry. C. J., III. 65.

May 2. Draft ordinance sequestering the living of St. Thomas the Apostle, in London from Wm. Cooper, and appointing James Moore in his place. L. J., VI. 25.

May 2. List of witnesses to show that Cooper is ill affected to Parliament. L. J., VI. 25.

May 2. Petition of Thomas Some, Dr. in Divinity, and Vicar of Staines, praying that Matthew Hales may be assigned him for counsel. L. J., VI. 25.

Annexed:—

1. Order for the hearing of the case. 28 April, 1643.

2. Petition of parishioners of Staines; Dr. Some has been vicar for twenty-six years, a man of unblameable life, opposed to popery and popish innovations, living peaceably with his neighbours, and endeavouring to keep them in love and unity amongst themselves; petitioners understand that he is now questioned before their Lordships for bowing to the altar and preaching against Parliament, both which they are ready to testify on oath that he has never done, and they therefore pray that he may continue their minister, and that he may be set at liberty so that they may enjoy the comfort of his preaching and godly and religious conversation. (Undated.)

May 2. Draft ordinance for Colonel Cromwell to seize the corn, cattle, &c., of delinquents in Cambridge-shire. L. J., VI. 26. In extenso.

May 2. Draft order for Sir Walter Earle to have command in Dorsetshire for the ordering of the military affairs there. L. J., VI. 26. In extenso.

May 2. Draft order for the execution of martial discipline in the trained bands. L. J., VI. 26. In extenso.

May 2. Draft order for the indemnity of the Barnstable men for fortifying their town. L. J., VI. 27. In extenso.

May 3. Petition of David Durie, David Mather, Scotchmen, Edward Basing, and Thomas Ruther, Englishmen, in the behalf of themselves and divers other Englishmen, masters of several ships now lying at Dunkirk; petitioners bought ships at Dunkirk which had been adjudged lawful prizes, but they are kept in there by the Dutch fleet; they complained to the Earl of Warwick who said he could do nothing without an order from the House; petitioners then went with Captain Barker, commander of one of the ships belonging to the English fleet on board the ship of Sir Martin Van Trompe, Admiral of the Dutch fleet to speak to him, who told them that if the English Parliament ordered the ships to be brought away, and the order were sent to him by the Earl of Warwick, he would let them pass with the least convoy. Petitioners pray for a speedy order for their relief. See L. J., VI. 29.

May 3. Draft order for the appointment of two persons in each county for the speedy gathering of the weekly assessments. L. J., VI. 29. In extenso.

May 3. Draft of instructions for the persons so appointed. L. J., VI. 29. In extenso.

May 3. Draft order for the removal of Lord Macquire, Hugh MacMahowne, and Colonel Read from the Tower to Newgate. L. J., VI. 29. In extenso.

May 3. Draft order for the suppression of riots in Dorset and Somerset. L. J., VI. 30. In extenso.

May 4. Petition of the petty canons and clerks of His Majesty's chapel within the Castle of Windsor; petitioners for declining to bear arms, as many of them were ministers, and others unfit for that service, were turned out of their habitations by Colonel Venn, with their wives and children, and forbidden to take their household goods. Pray that they may be restored to their houses and former maintenance. L. J., VI. 30.

May 5. Petition of Jane Wemes, wife of Doctor Wemes; her husband was so affronted in his ministerial office, disturbed in his pulpit, and prosecuted with such malice, that he was obliged to leave his habitation. Petitioner prays for further time to find him out, that he may answer before their Lordships in person, and for protection for herself and her children. L. J., VI. 32.

May 4. Draft order for payment of 1,366l. 13s. 4d. to Captain Bartlett and the ship's company of the "Confidence." L. J., VI. 31. In extenso.

May 4. Draft order for the garrisons of Portsmouth, Hurst Castle, &c., to be paid out of the King's revenue. L. J., VI. 31. In extenso.

May 6. Petition of Thomas Some, Doctor in Divinity, and Vicar of Staines; has been ordered to bring in a true valuation of the vicarage; hears that most of the sheep in his parish are now destroyed and the hedges and fences of most of his glebe land pulled up; desires that he may have further time to send in his estimate. 1. Certificate of Sir Theodore De Mayerne that Lady Maynard is in need of change of air.

May 6. Draft order concerning assessments. L. J., VI. 34. In extenso.

May 6. Draft order concerning monies to be advanced by the city of London, and for securing the repayment thereof. L. J., VI. 34. In extenso.

May 6. Draft order for Sir Robert Harley to be mint master. L. J., VI. 35. In extenso.

May 6. Draft order for the searchers of Gravesend to restore 120*l.* to Captain Robert Moore. L. J., VI. 35.

May 6. Petition of Wm. Barker, of London, merchant, to H. C.; petitioner is heavily engaged for his brother, now a prisoner in Windsor Castle, who is therefore unable to take any steps to raise money. Petitioner prays that his brother may be removed in custody from Windsor to London. C. J., III. 72.

May 8. Petition of John Squier, Vicar of Shore-ditch; has been turned out of his vicarage and put to very heavy expense since the order of April last sequestering his living; but has not yet been heard on account of the weighty affairs before Parliament; prays for a hearing. L. J., VI. 35.

May 8. Pass for Mrs. Jermin from Oxford to London and thence into Suffolk. L. J., VI. 36.

May 8. Copy of the King's message about the Bill for reducing the Irish rebels. L. J., VI. 36. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Draft answer of Parliament to preceding; they consider it unfit to enter into any discussion as to the merits of the Bill, but in answer to the charges against Parliament they send an account of the money raised for the service of Ireland, and of the manner in which it has been employed, which shows that the expenditure largely exceeds the receipts, so that if money intended for Ireland has been appropriated to other purposes it has been more than repaid. This answer was settled in the Commons on the 25th of May after a debate and division and was sent up to the Lords the same day, and was by them referred to a Committee on the 5th of June, but does not appear to have been further proceeded with. C. J., III. 102, 103. In extenso. L. J., VI. 81.

2. The true state of the account of all monies borrowed and received by virtue of any Acts or ordinances of this Parliament for the relief and defence of the kingdom of Ireland until the 11th of May 1643, according to the particulars of the said account certified by the treasurer at wars, the treasurers of monies due upon subscriptions of adventurers, and for voluntary contributions, and the Chamberlain of London, examined with the vouchers, and remaining with the auditor. 25 May 1643.

3. Copy of preceding.

May 8. Copy of letter from Sergeant-major Rosse at York, to Sir Hugh Chomeley, Governor of Scarborough. Lord Aboyne was going from York before my coming thence. I pray you to take as much care of his Lordship's ammunition as of Lord Antrim's. I write this as I am to start for Scotland. See L. J., VI. 47.

May 9. Application for a pass for Lady Debora Gerbier, with her sons and daughters and servants, to go into France. L. J., VI. 37.

May 9. Order for sequestering the living of Loose, Kent. L. J., VI. 37.

May 9. Order for sequestering the living of Pedmarshe [Pebmarsh], in the county of Essex. L. J., VI. 37.

May 9. Petition of Adam de Cardoneel, a French merchant residing in London; a ship belonging to his brother, who lives in Normandy, has been seized between Bristol and the Downs by some who pretend authority from the King of England; prays for a pass to His Majesty to solicit the release of the ship. L. J., VI. 38.

May 9. Petition of Joseph de Silva; has been engaged in a suit in the Court of Admiralty for nearly two years, and last April went with a pass to Oxford to defend his cause, but for want of some acts of court and other writings was obliged to return to London; prays for another pass to Oxford. L. J., VI. 38.

May 9. The names of those trespassers who have been lately taken coursing and killing His Majesty's deer in Farming Woods in the forest of Rockingham, in the county of Northampton.

May 10. Application from the Committee for Lincolnshire that Sir Jervais Scroope, sequestrator with Sir John Jacob of the lands in Sutton Marsh, now the subject of litigation between Lord Philip Herbert and others and the Duke of Richmond, may be put out of the sequestration, as the Committee utterly dislike that Sir Jervais should have anything to do with the receipt of the rents. L. J., VI. 38.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of letter from the Speakers of both Houses to Lord Willoughby of Parham, Lord Lieutenant of Lincolnshire, to suppress all riots upon Sutton Marsh. 7 Feb. 1642-3. L. J., V. 592. In extenso.

2. Affidavit of John Wrenham that he served the order of the 10th of May for the sequestration of the rents of Sutton Marsh, by Sir John Jacob, upon Thomas Welby; and that he afterwards attended the Committee for the county of Lincoln, and acquainted Lord Willoughby of Parham and others of the Committee with the said order. 15 July 1643.

3. Affidavit of J. Peeters, farmer of part of Sutton Marsh; was arrested by Mr. Welby for refusing to pay him his rent (notwithstanding the order of the 10th of May last), and detained until he entered into a bond for 600*l.*, which he was compelled to do, under threat of having his stock sold before his face. The crops of corn now growing upon the marsh land are worth 5,000*l.*, and are daily threatened to be destroyed by sundry ill-affected persons thereabouts. 19 July 1643.

4. Application on behalf of Lord Philip Herbert and Lord Dacre and their ladies. That the sequestration granted by the Committee of Lincoln upon the rents of Sutton Marsh may be discharged; that the money levied by those sequestrators may be repaid to Sir John Jacob; that the bonds which the tenants have been constrained to enter into may be given up; that the Lords will join with the Commons in an order for petitioner's relief; and that the lands may be protected from rapine and destruction. (Undated.)

May 10. Petition of Samuel Vandamm, of London, dyer; claims part of 400*l.* settled by Zacharie Ruytinge on his marriage with Katherine Mochart, and prays that the case, which has been long in suit, may be referred to two judges for decision. L. J., VI. 38.

May 10. Petition of Richard Kinge; petitioner was named lessee of certain lands belonging to Sir Robert Carre, with his consent, by the trustees for the use of Lady Carre, and the rent of 600*l.* was always paid by Sir Robert, but now Sir Robert will not so pay the rent, and petitioner has by various orders of the House become charged therewith; petitioner prays that the tenants may be ordered to make payment to him that he may be able to satisfy the trustees. L. J., VI. 39.

Annexed:—

1. Order respecting the payment of the rents. 20 Sep. 1642.

2. Another order. 19 Oct. 1642.

May 10. Petition of Benjamin Spencer, clerk, late minister of St. Thomas parish in Southwark, sequestered, now prisoner in the Fleet; has been allowed 30*l.* out of his late living for his maintenance, but the charge of his imprisonment will eat out all that allowance; prays for enlargement that he may the better provide for the subsistence of himself, his wife, and seven children. L. J., VI. 39.

May 10. Petition of William Simpson, sergeant, prisoner in the Fleet; petitioner acknowledges the justness of his sentence, though he never used the words (against the Earl of Holland) imputed to him; prays for enlargement and for abatement of fees on account of his poverty. L. J., VI. 39.

May 10. Memorial respecting the apprehension of Trew, Wilson, and other incorrigible deer-stealers. L. J., VI. 39.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Thomas Shemons, keeper of one of the walks of the Great Park of Windsor, that he and his man took Richard Wilson in the act of shooting a deer there, and that Wilson and Hercules Trew were in the park on May-day with dogs in pursuit of deer. 4 May 1643.

May 10. Petition of William Wombwell and Roger Melley (doorkeepers); have constantly waited upon their Lordships, and discharged their duties with care, yet Wombwell is assessed weekly at 10s., Melley at 4s. 6d., from which assessment they pray to be exempted. L. J., VI. 39.

May 10. Draft order to redress the abuses in taking horses for supply of the army. L. J., VI. 39. In extenso.

May 10. Draft order for seizing the effects of Francis Mosley and Nicholas Mosley, his son, for opposing the Parliament. L. J., VI. 40. In extenso.

May 10. Draft order for Colonel Mauleverer to raise a troop of horse in the North. L. J., VI. 40. In extenso.

May 10. Draft order for the Commissioners named in the Bill of 400,000l. for Suffolk to be the Committee for raising money in that county. L. J., VI. 41. In extenso.

May 10. Draft order for the assessment of the Clink, the Bankside, and St. Mary Magdalen's, Bermondsey, as part of the borough of Southwark. L. J., VI. 41. In extenso.

May 10. Draft order for Arthur Squibb, the younger, to be clerk of the Pells in the absence of Sir Edward and Mr. Edward Wardour. L. J., VI. 41. In extenso.

May 10. Draft order for payment of 1,000l., with interest, to Samuel Gardiner, Mayor of Evesham, for monies lent and expended by him. L. J., VI. 41. In extenso.

May 10. Draft order for Sir Wm. Springate, and others to be added to the Committee for seizing and sequestering the estates of papists and delinquents in Kent. L. J., VI. 41. In extenso.

May 11. Petition of Anne Bickley, daughter of Humphrey Bell, of London, silkman, and wife of John Bickley, of the same city, draper; her husband was a man of fair estate and good trade when she married him, and had with her about 1,200l. portion, and further induced her father and friends to become surety for him; he afterwards became idle in his business, and began to consume his estate in vain courses, leaving petitioner and her children in great want; and now in order to avoid providing for them he gives out that he is heavily indebted, and has procured a commission of bankruptcy to be taken out against him; petitioner who can get no relief by suit without great expense of time and money, prays that some able merchants may be authorised to examine her husband's estate, and to make provision thereout for herself and her children. L. J., VI. 42.

Annexed:—

1. Names of those to whom petitioner implores her case may be referred.

May 11. Copy of order for the persons apprehended for committing riot, and cutting down woods about Mere, Shaftesbury, and Frome-Selwood, Dorsetshire, to be brought up by the gentleman usher or his deputy. L. J., VI. 42.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for protection of the lands of Lord Bruce parcel of Gillingham forest, Dorsetshire, now disafforested. 24 April 1643. L. J., VI. 15.

May 11. Petition of Dr. Some; he cannot make any true valuation of the vicarage of Staines on account of the destruction lately caused to flocks, hedges, &c. by the two armies, and the fear the inhabitants have of their return, but prays that indifferent persons may be appointed collectors of the tithes, &c. for the ensuing year with directions to pay two-thirds thereof to petitioner, and one third to the officiating curate. L. J., VI. 42.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for sequestration of the living of Staines. 11 April 1643. C. J., III. 40.

May 11. Draft order for sequestering the living of Fyfield, Essex, from Dr. Alexander Read, for publishing the Book of Sports, bowing to the Communion Table, &c. L. J., VI. 42.

Annexed:—

1. Names of sequestrators proposed by Dr. Read.

May 12. Petition of Joseph Hunscoth; Wm. Ashton, by trade a draper, having erected a printing press in the parish of St. Giles in the Fields, an obscure place, an order was made by the House on the 21st of Oct. 1641 for its suppression; and Michael Baker, one of the gentleman usher's deputies, taking with him petitioner, Nicholas Bourne, and other stationers, in pursuance of the order, carried away the press and materials and deposited them in Stationers' Hall; for this petitioner and the other stationers have been molested by Bourne in the King's Bench, and have notice of trial for Saturday next; petitioner prays for an order for preventing the trial and for bringing the case before the House. L. J., VI. 42.

May 12. Petition of William Jhauns, merchant, that his cause against Anthony Hooper may proceed in the Delegates Court, or otherwise be heard before their Lordships upon the proofs taken in the Admiralty Court. L. J., VI. 42.

May 12. Petition of Edward Corbett, Fellow of Merton College, in Oxford; upon the recommendation of the Earl of Essex the House required the Archbishop of Canterbury to institute petitioner to the rectory of Chartham, Kent, but the Archbishop refuses to obey this order, desiring not to be troubled any more in that business; petitioner prays that Sir Nathaniel Brent, vicar general, may be required to institute him, as has been lately done in the case of Mr. Nalton of St. Leonard's, Foster Lane. L. J., VI. 42.

May 12. Copy of the King's proclamation convening the estates of Scotland to meet on the 22d of June.

May 13. Petition of Ezekiel Johnson, clerk; petitioner was by order of their Lordships put into possession of the living of Paulerspury, and by another order the Archbishop of Canterbury was not to collate any person to any benefice without the approval of the House, in contempt of which order he collated Mr. Ingram to Paulerspury; Ingram was ordered to appear before the House, but instead repaired to Oxford in Feb. last and having obtained a writ under the Great Seal, de vi laicâ amovendâ, has by colour thereof turned petitioner out of his living, sold his corn, &c., and forbidden the parishioners to pay tithes to him; petitioner prays for protection and redress. L. J., VI. 44.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Charles Seller and John Stockle of service of their Lordships' order of the 1st July 1642, on Peter Ingram. 7 July 1642.

2. Affidavit of John Stockle of service of the same order on Sir Nathaniel Brent, and Sackville Wade. 8 July 1642.

May 13. Resolutions of the Commons concerning the army; reported from a conference this day. L. J., VI. 44. In extenso.

May 13. Draft answer of Parliament to the papers of the Scottish Commissioners touching the payment of their army in Ireland. L. J., VI. 45. In extenso.

May 13. Draft order for bringing masts from Kinsale to England. L. J., VI. 46. In extenso.

May 13. Petition of Sir Thomas Cary; prays for an order to prevent any further delay in the cause now in Chancery in Ireland between petitioner and the Bishop of Ardagh, and also for license to go into Ireland, and on the way to go to Oxford to solicit from his Majesty a grant of the office lately fallen vacant by the death of the Lord Viscount Ely.

Annexed:—

1. Report of the judges in the case. 3 May 1643. See L. J., V. 692.

May 13. Petition of John Bishop of Ardagh; has been long vexed by complaints and suits both before the House and in Chancery in Ireland, at the instance of Sir Thomas Cary, about certain lands and tithes now in the hands of the rebels, and those of near kin to Lady Cary, who is a papist and whose brother Captain Foxe is a chief commander among the rebels; petitioner who refers to the report of the referees to show the injustice of Sir Thomas's claim, prays that the case may be dismissed with costs until the courts and course of justice are open in Ireland, and he able to procure the necessary writings and witnesses.

May 15. Portion of the draft of the declaration of the Lords and Commons concerning the negotiations for a treaty carried on at Oxford in the months of March and April of this year. This declaration was agreed to by the Lords this day and ordered to be published. L. J., VI. 46. It is given in extenso in Husband's Collection, page 91. The first fourteen pages of the draft are wanting.

May 15. Draft ordinance for raising money in the county of Devon; by ordinance of 17 Jan. 1642-3 certain persons were empowered to assess those who had not contributed at all, or not according to their ability to the support of the army, but many ill-affected persons so assessed have conveyed away their goods or remain in prison to avoid payment, therefore the ordinance gives power to the assessors to let the lands, &c. of any such person for any term till the assessment and all expenses be raised, and protects tenants paying their rents to the assessors from their landlords. This ordinance was sent up from the Commons on the 18th, and referred by the Lords to a Committee, but nothing further appears to have been done. L. J., VI. 51.

May 16. Draft order for the protection of James, Earl of Carlisle against riotous persons, who have destroyed certain ancient locks, mills, &c. on the River Lea, in the parishes of Waltham-Holy-Cross, Essex, and Cheshunt, Herts. L. J., VI. 47.

May 16. Petition of Thomas Killebrew; was committed by the Earl of Essex to the King's Bench on the 30th of Sept. last, on suspicion of raising arms against the Parliament, since which time Robert Punter and Michael Anderson have brought actions against him, one for 100*l.*, the other for 30*l.*, and are now ready to charge him in execution; petitioner prays that they may be ordered to stay their prosecutions, as he is committed by order of the Lord General. L. J., VI. 47.

May 16. Draft order sequestering the living of Southweald, Essex, from Dr. Samuel Baker, a double beneficed man, who does not believe the Pope to be Antichrist, licenses popish books in favour of auricular confession, bows before the Communion table, &c. L. J., VI. 47.

May 16. Draft order for sequestering the living of St. Mary, Bermondsey, from Dr. Paske, who has two benefices with cure, besides the mastership of Clare Hall, the Archdeaconry of London, a prebend at York, and a prebend at Canterbury, altogether not resident at St. Mary's, Bermondsey, and a teacher of heretical doctrines, and who has thereby forced the parishioners to maintain a minister at their own charge. L. J., VI. 47.

Annexed:—

1. Informations against Dr. Paske with his answers thereto.

May 16. Petition of Thomas Alse and John Palmer; petitioners are poor husbandmen, who have been five times fetched up from their farms in Sussex by the malicious prosecution of Lyming Dickenson, and then dismissed without any charge being brought against them; they pray that Dickenson may be ordered to pay their charges, and be further punished for his malignant opposition to the successes of Parliament. L. J., VI. 48.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Palmer of Beddingham, Sussex; that Lyming Dickenson, clerk of His Majesty's stables, assisted the Commissioners of Array in the county, jeered deponent for lending 5*l.* for the service of Parliament, and caused him to be higher rated to the parish in consequence, and always repined at any success of Parliament. 14 May.

2. Affidavit of Thomas Gratwick of Lewes, that Dickenson acted as an intelligencer between Mr. Ford, the pretended high sheriff of the county, and the malignants at Chichester and Oxford. 15 May.

May 16. Order for hearing the matter of the sequestration of the living of Stisted, Essex. L. J., VI. 48.

May 16. Draft order for protection of Dr. Cheshire during his removal from the living of Heston, Middlesex, to that of Dauntsey, Wilts. L. J., VI. 48.

May 16. Motion for protection of certain lands of the Earl of Suffolk at Haddenham in the Isle of Ely. L. J., VI. 48.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of a previous motion in the same matter. 10 March 1641–2. L. J., IV. 640.

May 16. Petition of Alexander Read, parson of Fyfield, Essex; Robert Ashwell and others, farmers, of his tithes, have for nearly two years past detained the tithes from him, and having been made assessors for Parliament have assessed him for the tithes which they withheld, and have thereby reduced him to the greatest poverty; prays for payment of his tithes and redress in other things. L. J., VI. 48.

May 16. Letter from the Committee at Aylesbury to Colonel Hampden, or in his absence to Colonel Goodwin or Bulstrode Whitlock, about the ravages committed by the King's forces. L. J., VI. 52. In extenso.

May 17. Petition of Alexander Read, parson of Fyfield, Essex; if now turned out of his house, his wife and children must lie in the streets, as no other house can be hired at this time of year in Fyfield; prays that those who are so desirous for a new minister may find him a furnished chamber for which he is ready to pay, and that indifferent persons may be appointed to apportion the profits of the living, which all come in in this half year, between petitioner and the minister who is to succeed him. L. J., VI. 49.

May 17. The Committee's report of His Majesty's answer to both their papers delivered unto him at Oxford, concerning the Commissioners for conservation of peace sent from Scotland. L. J., VI. 49. In extenso.

May 17. Instructions for Mr. Michael Welden, sent from both Houses of Parliament to the Lords of the Secret Council, and the Commissioners for peace in Scotland. L. J., VI. 49. In extenso.

May 17. Draft of the order authorizing Mr. Michael Welden to go to Scotland, and of the order for sending to the Secret Council a copy of the letter from divers Scotch Earls intercepted by Lord Fairfax. L. J., VI. 49. In extenso.

May 17. Certificate of Sir Nathaniel Brent in the case between Ezekiel Johnson and Peter Ingram concerning the living of Paulerspury, that Ingram's collation was unduly obtained. L. J., VI. 49. In extenso.

May 17. Petition of Thomas Talcott; praying for a hearing of the case between him, Giles Johnson, Marshal, and others. L. J., VI. 50.

May 17. Petition of John Doughty, defendant in a writ of error brought by Thomas Overman and John Hardwicke, soap-patentees; that the plaintiffs may have no benefit of certain records which have been improperly certified. L. J., VI. 50.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order in the cause. 8 March 1642–3. L. J., V. 642. In extenso.

May 17. Ordinance for sequestering the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Canterbury. L. J., VI. 50. In extenso.

May 17. Copy of preceding.

May 17. Petition of Henry and Micah French; John French late minister of Stradishwell [Stradishall], and uncle of petitioners, often promised to leave his estate to them, but at his death his widow, now wife of Richard Sadler published a will giving the whole estate to herself and her kindred, this will petitioners suppose to be forged; pray that she may be ordered to produce it before their Lordships as proceedings in courts of justice are so sore closed by the distractions of these times, that petitioners cannot bring their cause to trial in the ordinary courts. Noted, Read, nothing concluded.

May 18. Copy of a declaration made at Oxford, May 8, by Dr. Merrick, judge of the Prerogative Court, cancelling all acts done after the 10th instant by any man, who was before that his substitute. L. J., VI. 52. In extenso.

May 18. Petition of Ashton Nuttall, defendant in a writ of error at the suit of Gisbrough and others; prays that Gisbrough may be non-suited for not assigning errors within the time appointed by order of the House. See L. J., VI. 51.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for assignment of errors. 11 March 1642–3. L. J., V. 645.

2. Another petition of Nuttall to the same effect. (Undated.)

3. Affidavit of Wm. Livesey. 1 Aug. 1642.

May 18. Petition of Cornelius Lord Maguire, Colonel Read, and Hugh Macmahowne. About eleven months since they were brought over as prisoners from Dublin and committed to the Tower, where they were kept close prisoners, but provided with all things necessary by their Lordships' order, they have now been removed to the noisome prison of Newgate, and there kept close prisoners, where they are without maintenance, and without a penny to buy themselves food; pray for an allowance fit for their qualities and for permission for a servant to attend them. L. J., VI. 51.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Hugh Mac Mahowne, close prisoner in the Tower. Prays that he may be brought to a speedy trial. (Undated.)

2. Copy of order for the removal of Lord Maguire and the other petitioners from the Tower to Newgate. 3 May 1643. L. J., VI. 29.

May 18. Draft of letter of credence for Mr. Michael Welden, messenger from Parliament to the Council of Scotland. L. J., VI. 52. In extenso.

May 18. Draft order for the protection of the estate of the Earl of St. Alban's and Clanricard, a papist, from sequestration. L. J., VI. 53. In extenso.

May 19. Application for a pass for William Adams to go to the Spa with his wife and children. L. J., VI. 54.

May 19. Affidavit of Thomas Holden, clerk, and others, that Oliver Moakes had scoffed at an order of their Lordships directing that Mr. Holden should receive 20*l*. from the parson of St. Cuthbert's, Bedford, for officiating there, and that Mr. Thorne the parson had refused to pay the same. L. J., VI. 54.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of the parish of St. Cuthbert's, that the churchwardens may from time to time take up so much of the tithes as will satisfy the 20*l*. to Mr. Holden.

May 20. Petition of Richard Baker, collier; has for many years supplied the House with charcoal, and consequently obtained on the 6th instant an order for the protection of his carts and team of horses, but in contempt of this, on Thursday last, when petitioner was bringing coals from Chislehurst, two of his best horses were seized by Colonel Malleveret and Henry Garry; prays that the horses may be restored to him, and that those who have disobeyed their Lordships' order may be called upon to answer for their contempt. L. J., VI. 54.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the 6th instant referred to in preceding. L. J., VI. 34.

May 20. Petition of Robert Barrell, curate and stipendiary of the Church of Maidstone, in Kent; prays that Mr. Byerley, of Gray's Inn, and Mr. Glover, of Lincoln's Inn, may be assigned him as counsel for his defence against the charges brought against him by the House of Commons. L. J., VI. 54.

May 20. Paper from the Scots respecting the extremities of their army in Ireland, desiring that provision may be made by Parliament for their subsistence, or that if no longer required due notice for their recall may be given. L. J., VI. 59. In extenso.

May 22. Copy of the King's message desiring an answer to his last message concerning an accommodation of differences. L. J., VI. 57. In extenso.

May 22. Letter from the Earl of Essex, at Reading, to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Peers, pro tempore; encloses a copy of the desire of the Committee for the associated counties of Essex, Hertford, &c., that provision may be made for the payment of the forces sent from those counties, which he desires may receive a speedy despatch. This desire had been anticipated by the order of the 18th instant. Vide supra.

[May 22.] Petition of William Catherins, clerk to Edward Pitt, Esq., one of the tellers of His Majesty's receipt of Exchequer, to H. C.; several parcels of plate were committed to petitioner's custody by Mr. Pitt and others, but by an order of the House this plate (being in one trunk, two hampers, and a little red leather box), has been carried to Guildhall, and kept there; petitioner prays that the plate may be re-delivered to him, that he may be able to discharge the trust of an honest man. See C. J., III. 96.

May 23. Warrant for committing to the Fleet Ludovic Weames, Dr. in Divinity, Rector of Lambourne, Essex. L. J., VI. 58.

Annexed:—

1. Draft order of the Commons for sequestration of the living of Lambourne. 22 April 1643. C. J., III. 56.

2. Petition of Jane Wemys, wife of Dr. Wemys; prays that she may not be thrust out of doors, but may have the benefit of the parsonage house and two small closes till Michaelmas next. (Undated.)

May 23. Note that the Earl of Mulgrave moves for the living of Cranborne [Cranbrook], Kent, on behalf of his chaplain, Robert Cassinhurst. L. J., VI. 59.

May 23. Petition of Christopher Newsted, B.D.; petitioner, in recompense for long service abroad with Sir Thomas Rowe, was presented by His Majesty to the living of Stisted, Essex, but the parishioners threaten him with personal violence if he should attempt to come into the church or officiate there; they have detained all his meaps from him, and by misinformation have obtained an order from the Commons for the sequestration of the living; prays that he may not be put out of his living without a hearing. L. J., VI. 59.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for sequestration of the living of Stisted, Essex, and appointment of Edward Sparrowhawk thereto. 18 April 1643. C. J., III. 49.

May 23. Draft order for sequestration of the living of St. Botolph's without Bishopsgate. L. J., VI. 59.

May 23. Petition of the dean, prebendaries, petty canons, and clerks, and other the members and ministers of His Majesty's free chapel within the Castle of Windsor; as it has not seemed fit to Parliament that petitioners should remain in their present dwelling-houses within the castle, they pray that they may have an order for the removal and protection of their goods, utensils, and household stuff. L. J., VI. 59.

May 23. Petition of Mary Underwood, widow; prays for redress against Robert, the son, Wm. Underwood, the nephew, and Toby Maydwell, the son-in-law of her late husband, who have interfered with her in the administration of his estate, and thereby not only deprived her of the portion to which she was entitled, but exhausted all her means in legal proceedings. L. J., VI. 59.

May 23. Letter from Lord Fairfax at Leeds to Wm. Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons, about the taking of Wakefield. L. J., VI. 66. In extenso.

Enclosing:—

1. Letter from Lord Goring to his son, with directions as to the prosecution of the war. 17 May 1643. L. J., VI. 67. In extenso.

May 24. Information of John Minsterley and others, that Henry Toomes, speaking of the Lords of Parliament, called them roundheaded rogues and traitors. L. J., VI. 60.

March 24. Petition of Thomas Moyser and others. On the 11th of March last, it was ordered that all proceedings on the writ of error between petitioners and Ashton Nuttall should cease until the first day of Easter term following. Since then petitioner Moyser has done all he could to obtain his evidences, but now hears that his houses, goods, and writings have been burnt; petitioners pray that all proceedings upon the writ of error may be stayed until the times are quiet. L. J., VI. 60.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Thomas Moyser; has endeavoured in vain to send to Yorkshire to get his writings, but is now informed that two of his mansion-houses are plundered, his rents seized on or stopped, nine tenements, together with stables and barns, burnt down, and two libraries, with all his books and writings, taken away. 23 May.

2. Order of 11 March, 1642-3, mentioned in petition. L. J., V. 645.

May 24. Affidavit of Richard Axtell and another, that Joseph Soane, late vicar of Aldendam, Herts, had interrupted Mr. Gilpin, appointed preacher there by Parliament, in the performance of his duties, and raised a disturbance in the churchyard. L. J., VI. 60. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Further information on the same subject.

May 24. Draft order for Colonel Walter Long to receive the sums unpaid under the ordinance for raising money in Essex, Hertford, and Bedford. L. J., VI. 61. In extenso.

May 25. Petition of Edward Hudson, clerk; their Lordships made several orders for the Archbishop of Canterbury to collate petitioner to the rectory of Chartham, Kent, in compensation for losses sustained at the hands of the Archbishop, on account of petitioner's affection towards the Parliament, but afterwards their Lordships being desirous of bestowing the said living on Mr. Corbett, petitioner freely submitted thereto, whereby his wrongs remain unredressed; the Archdeacon of Canterbury, the first author of petitioner's oppressions, in not inducting him to the rectory of Eythorn, Kent, is still alive, and well able to make satisfaction to petitioner, who prays that the archdeacon and his inferior officers may be called upon to answer, and that petitioner may receive satisfaction. The first part of this petition, relating to Mr. Corbett, is omitted in the Journal, the rest is given in extenso. L. J., VI. 62.

Annexed:—

1. Articles against Dr. Kingsley, Archdeacon of Canterbury, which petitioner desires may be added to his petition. As parson of Ickham he preached the poisonous doctrine. 1. That the laity ought not to search the scriptures. 2. That it was a question whether the Church of England was a true church. 3. That the Parliament sit for nothing but to undo the kingdom.

May 25. Draft order that the Earl of Chesterfield, now a prisoner, shall not be released or exchanged till he make satisfaction to Edward Johnson for goods of his taken from Hughes, a carrier. L. J., VI. 63. In extenso.

May 25. Draft answer to the paper from the Scots concerning the maintenance of their army in Ireland. L. J., VI. 63. In extenso.

May 25. Another draft.

May 26. Draft order for raising money for the army of Sir William Waller. C. J., III. 103. In extenso.

May 26. Draft order for the association of the county of Huntingdon with the counties of Cambridge, Hertford, &c., instead of with Leicester, &c. L. J., VI. 63. In extenso.

May 26. Draft order of the Commons for disposing of Mr. May's money. C. J., III. 58. In extenso. Endorsed, Not agreed to. L. J., VI. 64.

May 26. Notes respecting a conference about the restraining of prisoners on parole, the examination of Lord Wilmot, &c. L. J., VI. 64.

Annexed:—

1. Another paper of notes of proceedings on various days.

May 26. Draft ordinance for 10,000*l.* yearly to be paid to the Lord General, the Earl of Essex, out of the estates of delinquents. L. J., VI. 64. In extenso.

May 26. Draft order of the Commons for the imprisonment and examination of Lord Wilmot. C. J., III. 104. In extenso.

May 27. Petition of Captain John Hardwick and Thomas Overman; pray that some further time may be appointed for arguing the writ of error between them and John Doughty. See L. J., VI. 66.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Thomas Overman and other soap-makers of London; petitioners, who had been brought up in the trade of soap-making, were in 1633 prosecuted in Star Chamber by certain knights and gentlemen, then lately incorporated as the Soapers of Westminster, severely fined, and sentenced never to use their trade any more, a prohibition extended to their journeymen and apprentices; petitioners endured twenty months' imprisonment, and were for five years kept out of their trade; upon review of these things the Commons passed the annexed votes upon the subject, but in consequence of the importance of other affairs nothing further has been done; petitioners confess that, in consequence of their sufferings, when they saw that the Soapers of Westminster made no white soap, they accepted a patent for making it, and undertook to pay 8*l.* per ton to the King, which came to almost a penny a pound, and to support this payment petitioners were obliged to take steps to prevent any from practising the trade who had not served to it, this they have since learnt to have been unjustifiable, and humbly desire that their offence therein may be remitted; under colour of this many persons, who never served to the trade, but were chandlers, barbers, coopers, and the like, have brought actions against petitioners for interrupting them therein, and many of them have obtained verdicts for amounts which petitioners cannot satisfy; they pray that as they cannot yet obtain any compensation from the gentlemen soapers, and are willing to satisfy all just claims as far as they can, the matter may be taken into the consideration of the House, as no other court of equity is now open, and that proceedings at law may be stayed.

2. Copy of resolutions of the Commons upon the soap business. 17 Aug. 1641. C. J., II. 260. In extenso.

May 29. Application of the creditors of Sir Thos. Dawes for attendance of Sir Paul Pinder and others at the hearing of their case.

May 30. Petition of John Brisco and others, inhabitants of Aldenham, Herts; petitioners have been attached by order of the House, and remain in custody, to their great cost and prejudice, and cannot learn the charge against them, nor, on account of the great affairs of the kingdom, obtain a hearing or discharge; pray for a present hearing, or that they may be discharged upon bail. L. J., VI. 70.

May 30. Draft declaration of the Lords and Commons against the adjournment of the term to Oxford. L. J., VI. 70. In extenso.

May 30. Draft ordinance for the assessment of all such persons as have not contributed proportionably according to the ordinance of the 20th part, within the city of London and twenty miles compass. L. J., VI. 71. In extenso.

May 30. Printed copy of preceding.

May 30. Draft order for Sir Gilbert Gerrard, treasurer at wars, to repay to the Commissioners of Customs, all moneys advanced by them to Sir John Hotham and others, upon bills of exchange. L. J., VI. 71. In extenso.

May 30. Draft order for appointment of Commissioners to search for goods and merchandize prohibited by law. L. J., VI. 71. In extenso.

May 30. Draft declaration and ordinance for the better securing and settling of the peace of the county of Kent. L. J., VI. 72. In extenso.

[May.] Application by the Countess of Dorset for a pass for Mr. Belsam, Robert Bickerton, and Richard Fulger, to go to Oxford with a coach and four horses, they being willing to be searched before they go.

June 1. Petition of Dorothea Brograve, widow; complains that administration of the estate of her late brother, Thomas Leventhorpe, has been granted to persons only distantly of kin to him, by Dr. Merrick, Judge of the Prerogative Court, to the injury of petitioner, who cannot on account of the distractions of the times prosecute an appeal with effect, and therefore prays for redress from the House. L. J., VI. 75.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Edward Leventhorpe that the case may be left to the law. (Undated.)

June 1. Draft ordinance appointing additional committees for raising money for the maintenance of the army. L. J., VI. 76. In extenso.

June 2. Draft order for sequestration of the living of Maidstone, Kent, from Robert Barrell, curate and stipendiary, to Thomas Smyth. L. J., VI. 77.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Jane Ellis, widow, that Mr. Robert Barrell said he wished that God would put it into the heart of the King to set the City of London on fire, and burn up the Puritans; and affidavit of Winifred Aymes, widow, repeats Ellis' statement, and says that Barrell said Parliament sat for their own ends, and that she has seen him drunk.

June 2. Message from the Commons with an ordinance revoking the ordinance authorising Colonel Long to raise money in Essex, and also for appointment of additional sequestrators in the county. L. J., VI. 77, 78.

June 2. Information against Sir Arthur Jenney and others for arresting Captain Martin contrary to privilege. L. J., VI. 78.

June 2. Information against Mrs. Wibrow, that she refuses to give up the possession of the parsonage house of Pedmarsh [Pebmarsh], Essex, pursuant to the order of sequestration. L. J., VI. 78.

June 2. Petition of the inhabitants of the city of Coventry and county of Warwick, to the Lords and Commons, praying for the appointment of some man of honour and moderation to command them, who are now dismayed by the sad and dangerous condition of the country, and are like sheep without a shepherd. L. J., VI. 78.

June 2. Petition of John Grimston, Richard Staynes, and Thomas Graves, poor distressed prisoners in Newgate; petitioners were committed to Newgate in Feb. last for the fact expressed in the annexed mittimus, they are truly penitent, and so miserable is their condition that they cannot long continue in life unless the enlargement for which they pray be granted. L. J., VI. 78.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of mittimus from Sir Henry Wollaston, Keeper of Newgate, that the prisoners were committed by order of the House for killing the King's deer in Waltham forest. 28 Feb. 1642-3.

June 3. Statement of the case of Johnson and others, plaintiffs in a cause against Robert Talcott. See L. J., VI. 79.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the case on behalf of Talcott.

2. Petition of Giles Johnson, Thomas Marshall, and others; the question in dispute between petitioners and Robert Talcott relates to the title to a house, &c., at Colchester, worth 2,000*l.*, which Talcott got from those who had no right in it for 235*l.*; the cause has been thirty times appointed for hearing, when petitioners have attended with counsel, but Talcott has, unknown to them, obtained an order for them to show cause why the case should not be dismissed to the common law or equity; petitioners can make no title at law, but conceive they can in equity, but complain of an order in Chancery, which that court will not redress, so that the petitioners can have no relief but from the House, from an injustice which has continued forty years; they pray that a speedy day may be appointed for hearing the cause. 24 Dec. 1642.

June 3. Affidavit of Elizabeth Parker, wife of Henry Parker, of Limehouse, chandler, that Edmund Beastone said that if he had 500*l.* worth of plate he would not carry in one penny worth for the Parliament's use, for they know that for what they have done they shall lose their heads. L. J., VI. 80.

June 3. Draft order for repayment of 5,000*l.* to Sir Thomas Middleton, advanced by him for raising forces in Wales. L. J., VI. 80. In extenso.

June 3. Petition of John Feriby, clerk; petitioner was indicted at the Oxford Assizes last summer, and bound to appear to answer the indictment at Oxford, but not daring so to do on account of the forces lying there and the threatening speeches against him, he sued out two writs of certiorari to remove the indictment to the King's Bench, but Mr. Justice Heath refused to allow the certiorari, and sent forth a special writ to attach petitioner, and hath privately sent for a procedendo in the cause; prays for an order to prohibit these proceedings. See L. J., VI. 70.

June 3. Notes of proceedings this day.

June 5. Notes respecting the amendments made by the Lords in the order concerning gunpowder, to which the Commons disagree. L. J., VI. 81.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments and proviso.

June 5. Draft ordinance for raising 100*l.* weekly for maintenance of the guards at Southwark. L. J., VI. 81. In extenso.

June 5. Petition of Giles Johnson and others; their cause after a partial hearing on Saturday last was dismissed; they pray that a further and fuller hearing may be granted before any final order be entered against them. Noted, Read, debated, and rejected. L. J., VI. 82.

June 5. Propositions to adventurers for the reduction of Newcastle, that London may be supplied with coals from thence. L. J., VI. 82. In extenso.

June 6. Amendments to the ordinance for calling an assembly of divines. L. J., VI. 84. In extenso.

June 6. Petition of Anthony Weldon; has long attended in hope of employment, but seeing that there is no want of officers, he prays for a pass to go beyond seas to seek his fortune there. L. J., VI. 84.

June 6. Petition of Thomas Fayrre, Arthur Turner, and Richard Clarke, for themselves and others, woodmongers and carmen of London; upon a former petition their Lordships referred their complaints, by an order dated 16 June 1641, to Mr. Alderman Garraway and Sir Thomas Gardiner, then recorder, both since deceased, and others; nothing, however, has been done, and petitioners pray that the matter may be referred to Mr. Serjeant Pessant, now recorder, Sir John Geere, and others. L. J., VI. 84.

Annexed:—

1. Order of 16 June 1641.

June 7. Petition of Blanche Lady Arundell, widow; about five weeks since Sir Edward Hungerford besieged petitioner and her family in Wardour Castle and burnt down all the outhouses, and though she yielded the castle, presuming that she and her children would be provided for according to their quality, yet all the household goods and stuff were carried away and her husband's estate held by Sir Edward Hungerford, so that she was left without a bed to lie on, and without means to buy herself a house or furniture; she was carried by Sir Edward to Hatch and then to Shaftesbury, where she was kept till Prince Maurice and the Marquess of Hertford came to Salisbury, whither she went in hope of finding her husband, but only to hear of his death, she is still there in her distress in a lodging provided for her through the charity of Lord Hertford, while every man is afraid to provide her with necessaries or to let her a house; she prays that she may be free to get herself a house and furniture in the city or close of Salisbury, and that herself and her goods may be protected from violence. L. J., VI. 85.

June 7. Letter from T. N., at Dublin, to Robert Reynolds and Robert Goodwin, or either of them; recent occurrences reported are these; the Earl of Antrim coming from England to County Down, was by a stratagem induced by the Scotch forces to land, and was by them made prisoner and taken to Carrickfergus Castle, while his man, a papist, who helped his master's escape when he was prisoner before, was tried by court-martial and hanged; what the Earl's errand was the Scotch best know, who obtained a full confession from his man; it is declared also in a letter from Montrose to Colonel Crawford, and if Montrose's account be true it is one of the worst plots yet discovered, but the publishing of this letter by some man, has given great offence to the Council, and therefore the writer forbears to say more about it. Lord Taff's business is kept very quiet, but is supposed to be about a cessation, but nothing is likely to be agreed upon unless the rebels contribute in good measure to the maintenance of the army, if so, to die without a cessation, will be as good as living on their findings; the reason is that the army cannot subsist without help from England; Sir Michael Ernley is still abroad with his party, but can only get flesh, and has to be supplied with bread from Dublin; Brent, the lawyer, is going to England, but fears the ships lying here will trouble him, though he holds a pass from His Majesty, so why should he fear; if only the army could keep the field this summer and carry off or burn the crops, as was done partially last summer, the rebels must starve next winter; the writer fears that he must formerly have given some men a wrong character, but the reason is the change in men, which is common in England and Ireland; the letter-bark was chased at sea last week by a Parliament ship, and not knowing what she was the packets were thrown into the sea, so that no certain news has been received from England since the 2nd of May; an active, wise, and religious deputy is much wanted in Ireland; it is said that there is great want amongst those about Kilkenny, and division too, and that they will put Preston from his place of general, and, if so, that he and his countrymen will offer their services to the State here, this is hardly credible, but "we are wonderfully charitable, and ready to believe what we desire to have, till the rest of our throats that remain yet alive be cut;" friends in Dublin long to hear whether their letters have been received.

June 8. Notes of proceedings on this and subsequent days.

June 9. Draft order for sequestration of the living of Stanford-Rivers from Dr. John Meredith, who has two livings, has not taken the protestation nor contributed to the support of the army. L. J., VI. 86.

June 9. Petition of Justinian Povey, one of the auditors of His Majesty's Court of Exchequer; he and his clerk have attended in London for half a year to take the accounts of the great subsidy, at a charge to himself of 200*l.*, the Act of Parliament forbidding him to take any fee or reward, and has besides paid all contributions laid upon him; having a house at Hounslow he would gladly be there this long vacation in peace and quietness, and therefore prays for an order to secure him in going and coming, and to license him, being aged, to keep a couple of horses for himself and his man, and a horse to send for provision for his family. L. J., VI. 86.

June 9. Draft of the Covenant taken by the Lords this day. L. J., VI. 86. In extenso.

June 9. Amended draft of the Covenant to be taken by the whole kingdom. L. J., VI. 87. In extenso.

June 10. Petition of Ralph Macro and Anne Franckton. Pray that the 30*l.* deposited by petitioner, Macro, with the warden of the Fleet, in compliance with their Lordships' order made upon petition of Anne Franckton, may be delivered to them, they having agreed between themselves concerning the disposal of it. L. J., VI. 88.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 5 Feb. 1640-1.
2. Request of Ann Franckton to Mr. Throckmorton to deliver the order to Macro to receive the money from the warden of the Fleet.

June 10. Notes of proceedings in the case between the Earls of Bedford and Portland, and the inhabitants of Whittlesey, &c. L. J., VI. 88.

June 10. Draft ordinance reciting that a number of armed men calling themselves the King's forces, under the command of the Earls of Cleveland and Carnarvon, invaded the county of Bucks and robbed and pillaged there, and in particular burnt the village of Swanbourne, and murdered a poor woman there, and seeming to take delight in the desolation they caused, set guards to prevent anyone from attempting to quench the flames; in consideration of which the ordinance requires the Committees of Parliament in Northamptonshire and Buckinghamshire, to permit the persons, whose houses have been burnt, to cut and carry away timber from the forest of Whittlewood, from Lord Carnarvon's woods, and from those of any delinquents in the county of Buckingham for the purpose of rebuilding their homes. This ordinance was sent up by the Commons to the Lords, and by them read and respited. L. J., VI. 88.

June 10. Letter from the Lords Justices of Ireland, at Dublin Castle, to the Speaker of the House of Commons; having tried all means for providing subsistence for the army have been forced to try another way, as will be seen by the enclosed Act of Council, but they have only Dublin to work upon, and deprecate the idea that it will remove the necessity of sending supplies from England, of which they are in extreme need; one thing they cannot omit, namely, that the Protestant party has in these straits been forward to contribute towards the preservation of the kingdom, while all the opposition is from the Popish party. Postscript.—None of the ships intended to guard the Irish coasts attend to the harbour here, and the passage between this and England, but ships are daily chased by pirates, even at the mouth of the harbour, while the ships intended to guard the coast so interfere with those that would bring provisions, that all men are discouraged from adventuring, and the army is ready to starve. Under this is a note, but crossed out, "They do not observe how the ships in the King's service take away the victual sent by [Parl.]" Endorsed, "Letter from y^e Lo; Justices of y^e 10th of June, but not a word of Mountrose letter." L. J., VI. 119.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of an Act of the Council of Ireland: after reciting the extreme necessities to which the army is reduced, occasioned by the failure of the Houses of Parliament, who undertook the charge of the war, the ruin already caused by the heavy burdens incurred, and the justification of extraordinary measures in such cases, they proceed to impose a rate upon such commodities as they shall appoint, to be paid to the treasurer at wars for relief and maintenance of the army for the six months next ensuing, unless it be otherwise supplied in the meantime. 6 June 1643.

June 12. Draft ordinance for the association of Denbigh, Montgomery, and other counties in Wales, and for appointment of Sir Thomas Middleton as serjeant-major-general of all the forces to be raised in those counties. L. J., VI. 90. In extenso.

June 12. Draft ordinance for the appointment of Basil Earl of Denbigh, commander-in-chief in the associated counties of Warwick, Worcester, &c. and Lord Lieutenant of the county of Warwick, in the room of Robert, late Lord Brooke. L. J., VI. 92. In extenso.

June 12. Ordinance for the calling of an assembly of learned and godly divines, and others, to be consulted with by the Parliament for the settling of the government and liturgy of the Church of England, and for vindicating and clearing of the doctrine of the said church from false aspersions and interpretations. L. J., VI. 92. In extenso, with the exception of the proviso at the end giving to substitutes appointed to supply the places of members who should happen to die the same powers as those members, and also strictly limiting the assembly to the exercise of the powers, &c. contained in the ordinance. (Parchment collection.)

Annexed:—

1. Printed copy of preceding.
2. Draft summons for persons nominated to attend the assembly. L. J., VI. 90.

June 13. Petition of the merchant strangers of the Entercourse; that they may be freed from the tax of the 20th part, and from the weekly assessments. L. J., VI. 94. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Commons for the exemption of the merchants of the Entercourse. 5 April 1642. C. J., II. 512.
2. Copy of an order continuing preceding. 5 Jan. 1642-3. C. J., II. 915.

June 13. Petition of the Earl of Bridgwater; complains that soldiers under Captain Washington and others entered his park and house at Ashridge on Saturday last, beat down the ceilings, hewed down doors, though open to them, searched his evidence rooms and studies, took away plate, arms, and household stuff, killed not only male deers, but does ready to fawn, and fawns that could hardly stand, and turned the game as much as possible over the country; he forbears to mention losses formerly sustained by the taking away of forty-four valuable horses, but prays for reparation for these and protection from future losses. L. J., VI. 94.

June 13. Petition of Joseph Sone, clerk, prisoner in the Fleet; is heartily sorry for having contemned the ordinance for sequestration of his living; he prays for release and for permission to live in his vicarage where he has many things that cannot be removed without great loss, and crops growing which cannot be sold until they are housed, while his wife, child, and aged mother are dependent upon him. L. J., VI. 94.

Annexed:—

1. Similar petition of same. (Undated.)
2. Another petition. (Undated.)

June 13. Petition of William Jhanns, merchant; in compliance with the prayer of a former petition their Lordships began the hearing of the cause between petitioner and Anthony Hooper and others, but were interrupted by greater affairs; prays for a further hearing, or that the case may be left to the Delegates to decide. L. J., VI. 95.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of petition mentioned in preceding.

June 14. Judgment in the cause between Latch and Vernatti. L. J., VI. 95.

Annexed:—

1. Duplicate of preceding.
2. Certificate of the auditors.
3. Submission of Sir Thomas Dawes to the judgment.
4. Notes of the judgment.

June 14. Two printed copies of the ordinance for the regulating of printing, and for suppressing the great late abuses and frequent disorders in printing many false, scandalous, seditious, libellous, and unlicensed pamphlets, to the great defamation of religion and government, also authorising the masters and wardens of the Company of Stationers to make diligent search, seize, and carry away all such books as they shall find printed or reprinted by any man having no lawful interest in them, being entered into the Hall book to any other man as his proper copies. L. J., VI. 96. In extenso.

June 14. Draft of preceding.

Annexed:—

1. Explanation of same; that acts done in pursuance thereof by one of the persons authorised to carry it into effect shall be as good and effectual as if all the persons so authorized had joined together.

virtue of an agreement made between the late Earl, her husband, and Thomas Maidwell, clerk, and others, inhabitants and commoners of Easton, Northamptonshire, the late Earl for a year and upwards before his death enclosed and held in severally all the woods called Easton woods, with the exception of 130 acres called Bulgate Sale, Bark Sale, and part of Rogue Sale, which were to be kept in common for the use of the commoners; but of late, since the Earl's decease, divers of the commoners have broken open the inclosures in a violent manner, with threats to those that would oppose them, giving out that there is no law; petitioner prays for an order to secure her in peaceable possession, till the title to the premises can be determined at common law. L. J., VI. 97.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Thomas Tampon in support of preceding.

June 16. Information that certain disorderly persons have broken into the park, chase, and woods belonging to James Earl of Suffolk, in the manor and soke of Somersham, have broken his fences and killed his deer, and that therefore an order is desired to the committees in Cambridge and Huntingdon to enquire into and repress these insolences. L. J., VI. 97.

June 16. Petition of Christopher Newsted, clerk; being rector of Stisted, Essex, and being interrupted in his possession by the inhabitants, the House, on his complaints made the annexed order for his protection, but he cannot get it executed, and therefore prays for further relief. L. J., VI. 97.

Annexed:—

1. Order referred to in preceding. 23 May 1643. L. J., VI. 59.

2. Affidavit of Christopher Newsted, that having obtained their Lordships' order he repaired to Stisted and demanded possession of the parsonage house from Thomas French, one of the churchwardens then in possession, who said he would not give it up before Michaelmas; the next day, being Sunday, he called upon the constable to help him, who refused; deponent with two friends then went to the churchyard and demanded the keys of the church from the sexton, who refused to give them up or open the door; deponent and his friends then sat down in the porch, but some women came and stoned his friends out of the porch and out of the village, and afterwards came back with others, and reviled deponent and tore his coat off his back, and drove him away, the constable actually helping them.

3. Petition of Thomas French and Robert Wood, of Stisted, Essex, now in the messenger's hands by order of the House; petitioners formerly exhibited articles against Mr. Newsted for malignancy and superstition, and he, out of mere malice, untruly accused them of disobeying an order of the House, but has not appeared to make good his charges; pray to be discharged from further attendance and for reparation. (Undated.)

June 16. Petition of William Flower, citizen and grocer of London; for having in his possession one book entitled "News from Ipswich," petitioner was detained nine months in prison by a warrant of the High Commission Court under the hands of Sir John Lamb and Doctor Basil Wood; upon complaint to the House of Commons, the Committee for courts of justice voted the warrant illegal, and the House confirmed the decision, but afterwards, being unable to proceed further in the matter on account of the great affairs of State, petitioner obtained leave to proceed at common law for redress, he now prays that he may not be hindered by any order of their Lordships. L. J., VI. 97.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Commons confirming the decision of the Committee for courts of justice, &c. C. J., II. 158.
2. Order for Flower to proceed at common law. C. J., III. 94.
3. Undated petition of same recapitulating preceding petition and orders, and stating that he is stopped from proceeding at law by order of the House made upon a petition of Sir Nathaniel Brent (member of the late High Commission Court), for stay of petitioner's action. See L. J., V. 447.

June 16. Draft declaration of loyalty to the King. Reported in the House of Lords, and ordered to be communicated to the Commons, by whom no notice appears to have been taken of it. L. J., VI. 97. In extenso.

June 16. Petition of Henry Burnaby, bailiff of the hundred of Toseland, to Edward Earl of Manchester; for publishing one of the King's proclamations, which he did as the sheriff's officer, and for unseemly speeches against Sir Samuel Luke, petitioner was by their Lordships committed to the Fleet on the 20th of August last, he has obtained Sir Samuel Luke's pardon, and prays the Earl to commiserate his distressed estate and move the House for his enlargement. L. J., VI. 98.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same to Sir Samuel Luke, member of the House of Commons; in proclaiming the King's proclamation he acted at the instance of Lewis Phelps, under sheriff, and on his bended knees he craves Sir Samuel Luke's pardon for his unseemly words, and prays him, out of compassion for his long imprisonment, and the deplorable condition of his wife and children, who, in these miserable days, have scarcely bread to eat, to take some measure for his enlargement. Noted, "I do freely remit any offence whatsoever committed against myself, and shall freely forgive him, being very sorry he should suffer so long, if the honorable assembly had nothing else against him, but the particular injury to me. Your Honors, in all humility, Sam Luke."

June 16. Draft declaration of the Lords and Commons assembled in Parliament concerning the present lamentable and miserable condition of Ireland. L. J., VI. 98. In extenso.

June 16. Printed copy of preceding.

June 17. Message from the Commons with an alteration in the ordinance for an assembly of divines, about sending Commissioners to Scotland, &c. L. J., VI. 99.

June 17. Petition of Thomas Smith, James Pickering, and others, owners, and William Rand, master of the ship "Unitie," of London. Above four years since the ship was taken by the Duke de Espernon, the petitioners lately arrested him and accepted bail, but hearing that those who had become surety for him were intending to leave the country they obtained a ne exeat regno against them, now they hear that a messenger has been sent to Oxford to procure a supersedeas; petitioners pray that John Vincent and James Pickering, with two servants, may have a pass to Oxford, or where the court shall be, that they may be enabled to prevent the malice of their adversaries. L. J., VI. 100.

June 17. Petition of the inhabitants of Boughton-Malherbe, in the county of Kent; their parson Robert Barrell, a man of considerable estate, has not resided amongst them for twenty years, putting curates upon them unapt to teach and of corrupt doctrine; he has been very remiss in preaching at his own church of Maidstone; has declared that the King's commands, even if illegal, ought to be obeyed; has abused those who seek for a reformation; has bowed to the Communion table and refused to read the declarations of Parliament; his drunkenness and wicked wish, that the King would burn London and the Puritans, have already been proved; petitioners pray that they may be eased from the heavy burden that Mr. Barrell is upon them, and that the profits of the living may be sequestered and paid over to John Osbourne, an orthodox and painful minister. L. J., VI. 100.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Samuel Skelton in support of preceding. 19 May 1643.
2. Affidavit of John Zachary, minister of God's words at Itchingham [Itchingfield], Sussex. 19 May 1643.
3. Certificate of John Sedley and others. 1 June 1643.

June 17. Petition of Sir Arthur Jenney, in the county of Suffolk; in order to pay the sums levied by Parliament petitioner tried to recover debts due to himself and caused Mr. George Martin to be arrested for refusing to pay, upon this Martin produced an old commission for his protection from Lord Warwick, and obtained an order from the House for the arrest of petitioner and two bailiffs on the score of privilege; prays for release, and for liberty to recover the debts due to him. L. J., VI. 100.

June 17. Draft petition to the King for an accommodation proposed by the Lords to the House of Commons. L. J., VI. 100. In extenso.

June 17. Petition of all the chief inhabitants of Barnes, in the county of Surrey; John Cutts, parson, has been long absent, and is with the King at Oxford, and the living sequestered, and upon a petition to the committee for sequestrations Mr. Robert Dingley was approved as their minister, they pray for his appointment. L. J., VI. 101.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same to the Committee for sequestrations mentioned in preceding.
2. Petition of inhabitants of Barnes; on the sequestration of the living the House was wrongly informed that the inhabitants were destitute of a preacher, though Mr. Thomas Rutton had supplied the place of Cutts, and on this misinformation another was appointed; pray the House to concur with the Commons in appointing Mr. Rutton. (Undated.)

June 19. A list of gentlemen appointed to take care of the houses and persons infected with the sickness at Lambeth, where there are about ten houses infected, and no care yet taken to keep the houses closed, or to convey the sick to the pesthouses. L. J., VI. 101.

June 19. Petition of Thomas Some, D.D., vicar of Staines, in the county of Middlesex. On the 11th of May last an order was made by the House for the sequestration of the profits of the living, of which one-third was to be paid to Mr. Burgess, for serving the cure and the rest to petitioner, the opponents of petitioner to have time to except to the names of the sequestrators proposed by him, no exception has been taken, but some of the tithes have already been lost by the delay; prays that three or four of the sequestrators may be authorised to receive and distribute the profits of the living, and that his children may live in the vicarage, as Mr. Burgess has provided himself with a house near the church. L. J., VI. 101.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same; the sequestrators are interrupted in their proceedings by Mr. Burgess; petitioner prays for enforcement of their Lordships' previous order. (Undated.)
2. Affidavit of Thomas Allen that Burgess was served with the order. 8 July 1643.
3. Certificate of the sequestrators that they have been interrupted in the collection of the profits of the living by Burgess. (Undated.)
4. Copy of order of 11 May 1643. L. J., VI. 42.

June 19. Petition of Nicholas Street; as patron of the church of Leckhampstead, Bucks, petitioner presented George Holmes thereunto, a man well affected to Parliament, and for about twenty years schoolmaster at Guildford, Surrey, who was instituted by the Bishop, and is now in possession; but one Thomas Langton has since tried to obtain a superintendence from the Bishop upon a presentation from Sir Edmund Pie; Sir Edmund and Langton are both at Oxford, and petitioner, fearing some powerful means from thence to induce the Bishop to superintendence Langton, prays for an order to stop any such proceeding. Noted, Read. Nothing done.

June 19. Certificate that Mr. William Barton, late vicar of Mayfield, a man of godly life and able and orthodox in his ministry, has been forced to desert his flock and family by the plundering Cavaliers in Staffordshire.

June 20. Petition of Henry Earl of Bath; has for three-quarters of a year been prisoner, and during that time continued in one lodging, but has been much disquieted by one White, who has produced an order from the Commons to put him in possession of the lodgings, and to dispossess petitioner. Prays for answer to his former petition for leave to go to the Spa, or at least that he may remain in his present lodgings. L. J., VI. 102.

June 20. Draft order for repayment of 6,000*l.* advanced by the Earl of Denbigh, for raising forces in Warwick, &c. L. J., VI. 102. In extenso.

June 21. Heads of what was thought fit to be offered by the Lords at the conference with the Commons at the communicating to them the petition for peace to be presented to the King. L. J., VI. 103. In extenso.

June 21. Draft order for payment of 100*l.* for the use of Sir William Waller out of the money raised for the aqueduct. L. J., VI. 103. In extenso.

June 21. Draft ordinance that an acquittance, under the hands of any three of the committee for Shropshire, shall be sufficient authority for repayment to the persons who advance money there for the service of Parliament. L. J., VI. 103. In extenso.

June 21. Petition of Dr. William Kingsley, Archdeacon of Canterbury, James Lambe, and Henry Jenkin; petitioners have been charged by Edward Hudson with injustice in not giving him induction to the rectory of Eythorn, Kent, the truth being that Hudson produced an instrument purporting to be a mandate from the Archbishop of Canterbury for his induction, against which Dr. Bargrave, incumbent of Eythorn for nearly twenty-seven years, lodged a caveat, and the case was in due course heard before Sir Nathaniel Brent, and no further application was made by Hudson to petitioners, who pray to be discharged from further attendance in the matter.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of Hudson's petition. Vide supra 25 May 1643. L. J., VI. 62.

June 21. Copy of an Act of the Commissioners of Scotland for conserving the articles of the treaty, for the apprehension of the Earls of Morton, Roxborough, Annandale, Kinnoul, Lanerick, and Carnwath, under the terms of the Act of Pacification of 1641, as incendiaries between the two kingdoms, pursuant to information brought by Mr. Welden from both Houses of Parliament. See L. J., VI. 137.

June 22. Petition of Charles Best. An order was made by their Lordships to prevent carts passing through the Old Palace, Westminster, where there was no ancient way, to the disturbance of the House. A chain and posts were set up, and petitioner appointed by the gentleman usher to keep the key, in which duty petitioner and his wife have been much molested by Robert Hopkins and others. Pray that these offenders may be called upon to answer for their contempt. L. J., VI. 104.

June 22. Petition of the Lord Mayor, aldermen, and common council of the city of London, to the Lords and Commons, praying that the ordinance for listing and fitting for service all horses within and about the city and twelve miles round may be speedily passed. C. J., III. 140.

[June 22.] Wincott v. [Kester and Chapman]. Statement of Wincott. See L. J., VI. 104.

June 23. Draft declaration and ordinance for stopping all intercourse of intelligence between the city of London and Oxford. This intercourse, contrary to the custom of war, has been the means of setting on foot the late plot, and of providing monies for the continuance of the war; no person under pain of sequestration shall in future be allowed to pass without the consent of both Houses of Parliament or of the Lord General. Noted, This ordinance being read and the Lords asked their opinions they generally dissented unto it. L. J., VI. 104.

June 23. Message from the Commons with propositions for a subscription by adventurers for the relief of Ireland, and resolutions thereon. L. J., VI. 105. In extenso.

June 24. Draft order for prayer to be made by all ministers in their churches on behalf of the assembly of divines. L. J., VI. 106. In extenso.

June 24. Petition of His Majesty's poor knights of Windsor. Henry VIII. gave by will to the church of Windsor, lands of good value to pay the poor knights 12*d.* a day, and James I., considering the smallness of this allowance, gave them an additional 12*d.* a day, to be paid out of the Exchequer. Their allowance from the Exchequer has now been unpaid for two years and three quarters, and the church lands being sequestered, their church allowance has been unpaid for two months. Pray that an order may be made for payment of their arrears and for continuance of their church allowance, and that they may quietly enjoy their poor dwellings and goods which are now used at the pleasure and to the profit of others. L. J., VI. 106.

June 24. Draft ordinance for raising forces for the defence of the Isle of Wight. L. J., VI. 106. In extenso.

June 24. Letter from Lord Forbes, at Westminster, to the Earl of Manchester. A cousin of mine is prisoner in Flanders, and the Spanish Ambassador has promised that if I can obtain the release of petitioner [Ultas] under promise to leave the country and never to return without license either to Britain or Ireland, he will obtain that of my cousin, I should thus release a friend and be rid of a foe. Endorsed, Christopher Ultas.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Christopher Ultas, an Irishman, close prisoner in the Fleet. Was taken in August last in the north of Ireland by Lord Forbes' fleet, shipped to England, brought before their Lordships, and committed to prison, where he is likely to perish. Prays that he may be discharged, and have leave to quit the kingdom.

permitted by order of Parliament to keep four coach horses, but lately some soldiers, who said they were under the command of Sir Arthur Haselrigg, came at midnight and tried to break into her house and take her horses away, though she herself showed the orders for their protection, and the same men came again, and when asked for their warrant showed their pistols and broke open her stable and took her four horses; two of which have been taken for the service of Parliament, but two have been seen at work in hackney coaches; prays that she may at least have these two last restored and protected for the future. L. J., VI. 107.

June 26. Draft order and judgment in the case between the Earls of Bedford and Portland and the inhabitants of Whittlesey, to secure the Earls and their tenants in present possession of certain fen lands at Whittlesey, with liberty to the defendants to try their title at law. L. J., VI. 107.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of William Earl of Bedford, Jerome Earl of Portland, lords of the manors of Whittlesey, in the Isle of Ely and county of Cambridge, and of divers the landowners and tenants within the said town; petitioners have for divers years past been in possession of certain proportions of marsh grounds by virtue of an agreement with the tenants, confirmed by consent in the Exchequer Chamber, since which time most of the tenants have sold their proportions to petitioners, who have laid out large sums of money upon the improvement of the lands so bought, which were before waste and valueless; but many of the persons who sold their proportions have, with their servants, molested petitioners in their possession, attempting to destroy the fences and enclosures; in consequence five several orders have been at different times made by the House for securing petitioners in peaceable possession, by which means the riots have been in some degree prevented for a time, and petitioners have continued their improvements, and sown their lands with cole, rape, flax, barley, oats, and other grain; but on the 15th of May Jeffery Boyce and others, of Whittlesey, and the adjoining villages, to the number of above 100, proceeded, in defiance of an appeal from one of the justices, to throw down the division dikes, demolish the houses, and cut and destroy the crops on petitioners' lands, and endeavoured to destroy the general banks and sluices by which the whole country is secured; this they continued, their numbers constantly increasing, until the 17th, when the Parliament troops under Sir John Palgrave, lying at Wisbech, were forced to march towards them, upon which they dispersed, but, as divers of them have given out, with the intention of returning as soon as the troops should be withdrawn; petitioners pray that Jeffery Boyce and others, the chief ringleaders, in these riots, may be called upon to answer for their conduct, and that petitioners may be further secured in their possessions until their Lordships or some other court of justice shall determine the contrary. 29 May 1643.

2. Petition of some of the poor inhabitants of the town of Whittlesey, in the Isle of Ely, in the name of themselves and many others; on the 22nd April 1641 an order was made on behalf of the Earls of Bedford and Portland, lords of the manors of Whittlesey, that they and all claiming under them should quietly hold possession of the manors and divisions of tenants until good cause shown to the contrary; to this order petitioners humbly submitted; but since this order Mr. George Glapthorne, and others, have already enclosed above a thousand acres of ground, which formerly lay open, and which petitioners have time out of mind enjoyed as common, and are proceeding to enclose more, to the great impoverishing of petitioners and others, who obtain their chief livelihood from these commons; petitioners pray that further enclosure may be prevented until the question of right has been heard and determined. 31 July 1641. 10. Affidavit of John Newton, of Wittlesey, that the rioters destroyed the fences, houses, and crops on the lands of the Earls of Bedford and Portland, and threatened George Glapthorne, Esq., a justice of the peace, with a pitchfork, when he called upon them to obey the laws of the realm, saying that he was no justice, for he was against the King and all for the Parliament. 29 May 1643.

11. Interrogatories administered to witnesses and their depositions taken on behalf of the Earls of Bedford and Portland. 17 June 1643. (64 pp.)

June 26. Draft order for securing Thomas May in execution of the will, and in disposing of the estate of Elizabeth late Viscountess Campden. L. J., VI. 108. In extenso.

June 27. Petition of Ralph Martin to Henry Earl of Holland; petitioner having taken a shop in the Strand, became indebted 21*l.* to one Webb, for which he has paid 20*s.* a quarter interest; prays the Earl to commiserate him under this extortion, and that as he is his Lordship's servant he may have the benefit of privilege. L. J., VI. 111.

June 27. Information of John Morgan, that on Saturday, the 17th, Captain Washington and Captain Burre came with troopers to Ashridge, and demanded the keys of the granary from Thomas Williams, the steward, and took away eight horses, and sent for horses and carts to carry away the grain. L. J., VI. 111.

Annexed:—

1. Information of [Thomas Williams], that when Captain Washington came to Ashridge informant showed him the orders of the House, and that on reading them Captain Washington was very angry, saying that he was accused of plundering and stealing.

2. Information of same that Nathaniel Hole, quartermaster to Major Fountain, came with twenty soldiers, and cried pish at their Lordships' order, and offered to lay wagers that it was gained for 5*l.* of John Brown, and took away what little was left of the oats and peas in the granary, and two horses not fit for any service.

3. Further information of same.

June 27. Petition of John Doughty, defendant in a cause in which Thomas Overman and John Hardwick are plaintiffs, that the question of law (whether the plaintiffs ought to have diminution) may be referred to the judges, and that upon their certificate a short day may be appointed for deciding the cause. L. J., VI. 111.

June 28. Draft resolution of the Commons nominating Mr. Dury one of the assembly of divines in the place of Dr. Downing, deceased. C. J., III. 148. In extenso.

June 28. Order of the Convention of Estates of Scotland, that a copy of the examination of the Earl of Antrim, and of Nane Dick, and James Stewart, his servants, and of the letter written by the Earl of Nithsdale and Viscount Aboyne to the Earl of Antrim, should be delivered to Mr. Welden, that he may acquaint Parliament therewith.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the examinations of Nane Dick, the Earl of Antrim, and Master Stewart, taken before a council of war, held at Carrickfergus on the 24th of May, and the 12th of June 1643 under the presidency of General Major Munro. Nane Dick was examined as an accessory to the escape of his master, the Earl of Antrim, from Carrickfergus, in which he confessed his share, he was then desired to unburden his conscience before death of anything he knew of the plot of the Earl of Antrim and others against the kingdom of Scotland or the Scotch army in Ireland; he confessed that several letters concerning these matters passed betwixt the Earl of Antrim, the Earl of Nithsdale, Montrose, Aboyne, and others, and that a bark with ammunition and furniture of war was to be sent to Lord Aboyne and his friends in the highlands and Isles of Scotland, and another bark similarly laden to be sent to Carlisle to the Earl of Nithsdale and his confederates; that the Earl of Antrim told deponent that the intention was to do all the mischief they could by arms to Scotland, to overthrow the Scottish army in Ireland, and to bring all the forces they could out of Ireland to assist the King and the Catholic army in England against the Parliament. After this confession Dick was judged worthy of death, and to be hanged "exemplarie" to others in satisfaction to justice. The Earl of Antrim being examined, said that his intention had been to levy forces for His Majesty's service in England, in conjunction with the Earls of Montrose, Airlie, Nithsdale, Lord Aboyne, and others; the ammunition, &c. to be sent to Lord Aboyne was to be employed in raising a regiment for the Earl of Antrim, while Aboyne was to make his way through Scotland to join the Newcastle army, the ammunition was stopped at York, and it was only on the Earl's earnest request to Her Majesty that it was allowed to proceed. Montrose was only to join them in a legal way, and would not join in raising the regiments. The Earl of Antrim declares the statement of Nane Dick (who was hanged) to be false; being asked if he had any warrant to Owen Machart and Sir Philonie (Phelim) at Charlemont, or they had any warrant for joining with him, he denied that he knew of any, but said that it was by his warrant that his brother was sent to them; the Earl declares that he came into Ireland with the Earl of Newcastle's pass and private instructions for making peace, with a promise that if he could draw them to easy conditions the Earl of Newcastle would obtain for him the King's warrant for proceeding therein; being asked why he offered 5,000*l.* to the general major, he said it was only on condition that the general major would suffer him to return to England; the Earl declares that he knew nothing either of Sergeant-Major Ross or Colonel Blair; Captain James Wallace and Major John Monro being sent to question the Earl, heard him say that he had warrant to levy forces in any part of the King's dominions for the King's service, and that some of the English regiments were expected to join the Earl of Newcastle, namely, the English about Dublin and those in Ulster.

Master Stewart, servitor to the Earl of Antrim, examined on oath under pain of torturing, stated that he only knew that the Earl of Antrim had a pass from the Earls of Newcastle and Derby; he further confirms the Earl of Antrim's statements, and lastly, being threatened with the torture and death, except he should declare and free his conscience in the truth by whose warrant and direction the Earl of Antrim and others did undertake the employment, he declared that as the ammunition and arms were furnished by the Queen's Majesty's order and command, so he doubted not but the Earl of Antrim's employment, and that of others, was directed by Her Majesty, and others, as was generally thought by all and by him.

June 28. Copy of ordinance of the Commissioners of Scotland for conserving the articles of the treaty; have received through Mr. Welden, a desire from Parliament to be informed what interrupted the proceedings of the Commissioners sent by them to the King at Oxford, and what propositions they had to offer for the peace of both kingdoms, they therefore ordain that copies of the instructions given to their Commissioners of the propositions presented by them to His Majesty, and of His Majesty's answers thereto should be communicated to Parliament. On the same paper is a copy of Mr. Welden's address to the Commissioners.

June 29. Petition of the Clotworthies of the kindred of Robert Gray, Esq., who is deceased without wife or issue; the cause between petitioners and John Battie and Richard Hunt, concerning the administration of the estate of Robert Gray, valued at 49,000*l.*, has been in part heard, but owing to other great affairs has not been decided, while Battie and others are taking advantage of the distractions of the times to defeat petitioners of their rights; they pray that the case may be referred to some persons to mediate therein, if they can, or to certify the state of the case after hearing the parties for the decision of the House. L. J., VI. 114.

June 29. Petition of parishioners of Halstead, Kent, that Mr. John Cottingham, their present curate, may with the consent of Mr. Thomas Whitfield, their parson, who is also Vicar of Farningham, and willing to resign Halstead, be nominated rector thereof. L. J., VI. 114.

June 29. Petition of inhabitants of Cranbrook, Kent, thank the House for having, by order of 13th March last, appointed John Williamson to preach and officiate as vicar there, and pray that he may be appointed as their constant and settled minister.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 13 March 1642-3. L. J., V. 646.

July 1. Examination of the Earl of Portland before a Committee of the Lords concerning Waller's plot. On the 21st of June was removed to Alderman Atkins' house, where he was visited by Mr. Waller, who said that he was sorry he had brought him into this condition. That it was a good while before he had done it, but at last he had considered how to save himself, and wished the Earl to do so too, as his guilt had not been great, and that he (Waller) had been rather passive than active in the business, and therefore desired the Earl to acknowledge it. The Earl answered that he knew nothing of the business, and therefore could acknowledge nothing. Waller then asked if he did not know that Lord Conway had agreed to be general, and Sir Hugh Pollard lieutenant-general, and said that Lord Conway had told him, that the Earl of Northumberland liked the business. The Earl informed him he knew nothing of it. Waller answered it was proved, and that the Earl would suffer much by it if he would not confess it. The Earl answered that if it were proved it would be unjustly and by false witnesses, and if he lost his life by it, he should do it very innocently, and therefore contentedly. Waller answered it would not reach his life, but he would suffer much misery and long imprisonment, to which the Earl replied that he must submit to it. Waller said the Earl might save his own, and his (Waller's) life by laying it upon Lord Conway and the Earl of Northumberland. This he said with water standing in his eyes, but the Earl answered that he would never save himself by telling a lie. Waller then said that Lord Conway and the Earl of Northumberland were strangers, while he (Waller) was his kinman and entreated him for God's sake to save him. This was the substance of what passed, Waller's whole discourse tending to persuade the Earl to save himself, and Waller by laying the blame upon the Lord Conway and the Earl of Northumberland. L. J., VI. 116.

July 1. Draft order for the sale of Sir Peter Richaut's adventure with the East India Company, and for the payment of the money so raised to Sir William Waller for maintenance of his soldiers. C. J., III. 151.

July 3. Draft order for apprehending rioters in Dorsetshire. L. J., VI. 118. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Matthew Davis, a justice of the peace for the county of Dorset to the House of Lords, enclosing depositions of witnesses concerning the riots in the Forest of Gillingham, near Shaftesbury. 10 June 1643.

2. Examinations of John Godwin, Richard Bidgley, John Belman, the younger, Nicholas Bowne, and Morgan Horder, referred to in preceding. 10 June 1643.

July 3. Notes of proceedings this day. L. J., VI. 117.

July 3. Draft order for alderman William Billars to be added to the Committee for the county of Leicester.

July 4. Draft orders respecting the government of the town of Hull. L. J., VI. 119. In extenso.

July 4. Petition of Sir George Garrett, alderman of the city of London. Petitioner heretofore, by foreign attachment according to the custom of London, attached in the hands of Oliver Scandrett the sum of 485*l.*, being the money of Walter Mountague, who was indebted to petitioner in a greater sum. Scandrett removed the matter by certiorari into Chancery, and obtained an injunction although the question is properly triable by law, and is no matter of equity. Petitioner cannot by reason of the ordinances of Parliament proceed at Oxford, either to procure bail or to dissolve the injunction, and therefore prays that the money may be deposited with the Earl of Manchester until such time as he is able to proceed in Chancery in the matter. See L. J., VI. 119.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Order of the Committee for obstructions in courts of justice for Sir George Garrett to appear and answer the complaint of Oliver Scandrett. 12 June 1643.

July 4. Draft letter from the House of Lords, to the Lords Justices and Council of Ireland, respecting their treaty with the rebels. L. J., VI. 119. In extenso.

July 4. Draft letter from both Houses, to the Marquess of Ormond and Lord Lisle, concerning the behaviour of their officers and soldiers. L. J., VI. 120. In extenso.

July 5. Application for a pass for Lord Lumley to go to Spa for the benefit his health. L. J., VI. 121.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of John Fryer, Doctor of Physic, as to Lord Lumley's state of health, and that he is likely to receive benefit from drinking the Spa waters. On the same paper is a similar certificate signed Robert Arke, Med. Professor.

July 5. Petition of Levinus Hopper, of London; John Bickley, having a suit before their Lordships against Anne Bickley his wife, and being desirous to prevent petitioner appearing as a witness for her, repaired to petitioner's house in Great St. Bartholomew's within the liberty of the Earl of Holland, accompanied by four soldiers, who affirmed themselves to be of Colonel Mainwaring's regiment, and pretending they had a warrant of their Lordships to arrest petitioner as a malignant, broke open his door and carried him forcibly forth into the liberty of the city where they delivered him to two officers of Wood Street Compter, who arrested him upon an action of 6,000*l.* at Bickley's suit entered in the Sheriff's Court of London, whereas in truth petitioner never was indebted to him one penny. Prays that some speedy course may be taken for his enlargement, and for the exemplary punishment of Bickley, Thomas Mills, attorney, the officers who arrested petitioner, and the four soldiers who presumed to countenance their wicked proceedings. L. J., VI. 121.

July 5. Petition of Christopher Roper, serjeant-major in the regiment of the Earl of Kildare in Ireland. Petitioner became bound for a debt of his brother, the Lord Viscount Baltinglass, to Nicholas Abdy for payment on a day now past. Petitioner, who has served as an officer in Ireland against the rebels since the breaking out of the rebellion, having lately come over by licence from the lieutenant-general, has been arrested by Abdy. Neither petitioner nor his brother are able to discharge the debt for want of the pay and entertainment due to them, amounting to 2,800*l.* Is desirous to return to his charge in Ireland, as he understands that a speedy march is designed against the rebels, and therefore prays for his enlargement, or that Abdy may be satisfied out of the arrears due to petitioner and his brother. L. J., VI. 121.

July 5. Draft order for the assembly of divines to take the ten first articles of the Church of England into their consideration, to vindicate them from all false doctrine and heresy. L. J., VI. 121. In extenso.

July 5. Another draft.

July 5. Message from the Commons concerning Mr. Stockdale's letter touching the ill successes of Lord Fairfax's forces, &c. C. J., III. 155. In extenso.

July 5. Proclamation by the Earl of Newcastle, at Bradford, to the Governor and Commander-in-Chief at Manchester, and to the rest of the soldiers and inhabitants of that town. Presumes they are ignorant of the great success of His Majesty's army under the Earl's command, and the great desire to avoid the effusion of Christian blood, which moves him, before he proceeds further, to offer His Majesty's grace and mercy to those who will lay down their arms, so unjustly taken up, and immediately return to their due allegiance. Is authorised to receive them into His Majesty's grace and favour, and is as willing to do so, as to reduce them to obedience if they shall refuse. Wonders, whilst they fight against the King and his authority, they should so boldly profess themselves for King and Parliament, and scandalise those with the title of Papists, who venture their lives for the defence of the true Protestant religion. Has no other object than to let them see their errors, for his condition is such that he has no need to court them. If his (the Earl's) nature is forced they may expect such favour only as is due to so high contemners of His Majesty's grace and favour, now offered.

July 6. Protestation to be taken by every member at his first entrance into the assembly of divines. L. J., VI. 124. In extenso.

July 6. Petition of Edward Hudson, clerk. Prays that his cause against the Archdeacon of Canterbury, James Lambe, his surrogate, and Henry Jenkins, his registrar, may be referred to certain lords for hearing, the multiplicity of affairs of State preventing petitioner's cause being heard by the House.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of William Kingsley, Archdeacon of Canterbury, James Lambe, and Henry Jenkin. Pray that a certain day may be appointed for hearing Hudson's cause, and that in the meantime they may have leave to return home to discharge their cures.

July 6. Petition of Christopher Newstead. According to their Lordships' order of the 23rd of May last, petitioner repaired to Stisted in Essex, and demanded of Thomas French, the churchwarden, and Robert Wood, the constable, the possession of the church. French and Wood refused to assist petitioner, but allowed him to be beaten and his coat torn off his back. For this contempt they are now in the custody of the messenger, where petitioner prays they may remain until some day is appointed to hear petitioner and his witnesses. See L. J., VI. 97.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Bental that Mr. Newstead is very sick in consequence of the ill-usage he received at Stisted, and is unable to travel without danger of further impairing his health.

July 6. Warrant from the Committee at Haberdashers' Hall for Mr. James Maxwell, gentleman usher, to pay 1,000*l.* according to the ordinance for assessing the twentieth part. See L. J., VI. 124.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Thomas Robson and Henry Chapman, that their cause against Wincott and Beale may be referred to certain referees.

July 10. Message from the Commons respecting the examination of the Earl of Portland, &c. L. J., VI. 125. In extenso.

July 10. Draft order for adjourning the assizes. L. J., VI. 126. In extenso.

July 10. Order for the indemnity of the mayor of Hull and others for seizing the town of Hull, and the persons of Sir John Hotham, Sir Edward Rodes, and Captain Hotham. L. J., VI. 126. In extenso.

July 10. Order for securing the town of King's Lynn, &c. L. J., VI. 126. In extenso.

July 10. Petition of the master, wardens, and assistants of the Company of Brewers of the city of London. The House of Commons in the rate of excise, now on foot for the maintenance and payment of the army under the Earl of Essex, have assessed two shillings upon every barrel of strong beer, and twelve pence upon every barrel of smaller beer, a rate which will undo all those that use the trade of brewing, and all those who depend upon their employment. Pray that a Committee may be appointed to receive such reasons as petitioners can give concerning the rate. Noted, Not heard.

July 11. Draft order for the payment of 600*l.* to Mr. William Rosse. L. J., VI. 127. In extenso.

July 14. Petition of Thomas Taylor. Prays that a pass may be granted to him to go by ship to Hull and thence to York, Hilton, &c. to secure certain debts due to him. L. J., VI. 132.

July 14. Affidavit of John Bets, under-keeper of Lamborne Walk, in the Forest of Waltham, concerning the cutting down of a wood in the forest by Clarke, Charles, and others. See L. J., VI. 132.

July 15. List of persons to be added to the committee for the county of Sussex. L. J., VI. 132. In extenso.

July 15. Petition of Beatrice Nott and Benjamin Harrison, merchant; complain that Molins, Fuller, and Punter, pretending they were commanders for the Parliament, on the 22d of June violently entered the house of the petitioner Harrison, and took away the goods of Mr. Nott, husband of Beatrice Nott, although he is not as yet voted a delinquent, and there is no just cause why he should be so reputed, he not being with the King, and never having contributed towards the maintenance of the King's army, and having gone to Oxford upon no other occasion than to secure his debts there from some persons of quality. Pray that Molins, Fuller, and Punter may be sent for to answer. L. J., VI. 132.

July 15. Affidavit of John Barton that he served their Lordships' order of the 4th of July upon Oliver Scandrett. L. J., VI. 133.

Annexed:—

July 24. Letter from Colonel Richard Browne, at Tunbridge, to the Earl of Manchester, Speaker of the House of Lords, or William Lenthall, Esquire, Speaker of the House of Commons. It pleased God by the abundance of rain that fell (almost two days without intermission) to hinder us above a day's march. Having stayed all Saturday at Bromley, we marched on Sunday to the rebels' quarters at Sevenoaks, which they quitted to our hand. Whither being come after a long and untoward march we were fairly promised some assistance from the country, for which we waited until 10 o'clock on Monday, but none came. We then advanced towards Tunbridge, where we were certainly informed considerable forces of the enemy were quartered. We received by the way letters which the enemy forced Sir Thomas Walsingham to write for them pretending a desire to yield upon such conditions as were propounded. We returned answer that if they would submit to the orders of Parliament, which had been already proclaimed to them, every man should receive pardon. But coming after a tedious march, and indeed before we knew whereabouts we were, the enemy instead of treating as they proposed fired upon our van. We then drew our men into battalia, resolving to fight it out without hearkening to their conditions, when, after a most gallant charge by such gentlemen as voluntarily came to accompany us, we gained the broken bridge on this side the town, making it passable by long planks laid over it. We then drew our men into several divisions towards the town and charged them again. The Green Regiment of Auxiliaries, together with the red coats, behaved very resolutely and like men, whereby after three hours and a half very hot fight, with the loss of five or six men, none whereof were considerable, except one Proudlove, Ensign to Lieutenant-Colonel Rowe, a very gallant man, and thirty or forty wounded, which much grieved me for want of chirurgeons, there being but one with us, we entered the town by force. We found about twelve of their men dead in the town and believe there are many more in hop gardens and hedges as yet undiscovered, besides many wounded. We have taken almost two hundred prisoners, and released that noble gentleman Sir Thomas Walsingham, and divers others of our friends, and for the present utterly routed the rebels. Our two troops of horse pursued the chase upwards of six miles and did good execution. We have resolved to give solemn thanks to God tomorrow, being Tuesday, for this our victory against so great odds. It is the opinion of the deputy lieutenants that it is necessary to leave garrisons in this town and in Sevenoaks and divers other places, which being done we shall have nobody to march withal. I desire the House will speedily raise another regiment for this service, and I request the recommendation of the officers whom I will choose out of those gentleman who have voluntarily done so gallant service. This letter was read in the House of Commons 25 July 1643. C. J., III. 181.

July 25. Petition of Fabian Phillips. Prays that his cause against Forrett touching the office of Philazer of London, Middlesex, Cambridge, and Huntingdon, may be referred to the Lord Chief Justice and the rest of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas. L. J., VI. 147.

Aug. 4. Petition of Edward Leventhorp. On the 1st of June last, an order was made in his cause against Brograve, which order still remains in the clerk's hands; prays that the order may be issued forth, and petitioner discharged from further attendance. See L. J., VI. 75.

Aug. 5. Propositions for peace agreed to by the Lords and submitted to the Commons this day. L. J., VI. 171. The question of agreeing to these propositions was debated for three days in the Commons, and on the 7th of August a division was taken upon the question whether to take these propositions into more particular consideration, when the numbers were, Yeas, 81; Noes, 79. The division being so near, and the House not being satisfied with the report of the tellers, again divided, when the numbers were, Yeas, 81; Noes, 88. The House then resolved not to concur with the Lords in the propositions. C. J., III. 197. This paper and the Commons' reasons for their non-concurrence are here printed in extenso, as they do not appear in the Journals, and extracts only are given in Clarendon, Vol. IV. 183, and Parliamentary Register, Vol. XII. 362.

Most gracious Sou'aigne,

Wee yo^r Loyall Subjects the Lords and Comons in Parliament doe, wth bleeding hearts, behould the miserable desolac^ons of this distracted Kingdome, and the inevitable approaching Ruyn of it, by the Calamities of this intestine Warr, occasioned by the great misunderstanding betweene yo^r Ma^{ty} and yo^r faithfull People, whose only desire the preservac^on of their just Rights and Liberties, And of that w^{ch} is farr more deere vnto them, their Religion: And therefore we haue wth much Joy and Comfort seene a Protestac^on said to be by yo^r Ma^{ty} made before yo^r receiving of the blessed Sacrament. By w^{ch} yo^r Ma^{ty} professes that you intend the Establishment of the true Reformed Protestant Religion, wthout any Connivance of Popery, And likewise a declarac^on of yo^r Ma^{ty} lately Published shewing great desires to a Composure of theise vnhappy differences w^{ch} doth vnspeakeably revine the hearts of yo^r Peoples and makes them with a more tender Sence reflect vpon the present distemp^s, and the fearfull expectac^on of certaine distruc^on, besides the irreco^uable Losse of the Kingdome of Ireland by their longer Contynuan^{ce}, likely to make this Land like that, a Feild of blood, and worse, the Seat of Warre, for all Neighbouring Nations and the very Marke, and Prize of all the turbulent Spiritte of Christendom, if not prevented by the speedy interposic^on of the wisdom and Piety of yo^r Ma^{ty} and yo^r two Houses of Parliament. These miserable distempers and distrac^ons haue bin the principall occasions of our not retorning all this while an Answer to yo^r Ma^{ty} Message of the 12th of Aprill requiring the Restitut^on of your Revennew, Magazines, Shippes, and Forts. And that the Memb^rs of both Houses voted out for adhering vnto yo^r Ma^{ty} in theise destrac^ons, may be restored to the same Capacity of Sitting, and Voting in Parliam^{ts} as they had in January 1641. And that yo^r Ma^{ty} and both Houses might be secured from Tumultuous Assemblies by adiourning the Parliament to some other Place: To this wee giue yo^r our humble Answer.

1. That wee are ready to giue yo^r Ma^y a iust Accompt of somuch of yo^r Revennew as hath come to our hands, a good part whereof hath bin employed in the maintenance of your Ma^y Children, according to the allowance established by yo^r self: And will giue satisfacc'on for such other sumes as haue bin Employed by vs; And leaue it all to yo^r Ma^y for the time to come; That wee are likewise ready to deliue' vnto yo^r the Navy, Forts, & Magazeenes, in a Trust and Confidence that they shalbe disposed and Jmployed for the Defence & Security of your Royall Person, and of yo^r People, according to our humble desier expressed in our third Proposic'on following.

2. For the readmittance of our Members such as haue bin put out meerly for Adhering vnto yo^r Ma^y in these distracc'ons, wee shall endeavour to giue yo^r Ma^y all due satisfacc'on, hauing regard vnto the P'uiledges of Parleam't, w^{ch} wee are bound by our duty in general, and p'ticularly by our Protestac'on of the fourth of May 1641 to maintaine and preserve.

3. For securing yo^r Ma^y from all Tumultuous Assemblies w^{ch} is conceived can only be by adiourning the Parliament to some other Place. Wee beseech you beleene that the Saftie of your Royall Person is vnto Vs a precious and most desired thing. That wheresoeuer yo^r Parliament is, the Assurance of yo^r Saftie is there evidently in the highest degree of Strength and Perfecc'on. Nor can yo^r Ma^y and yo^r two Houses of Parliament be in any Place of yo^r whole Kingdome more Secure from feare, then in the Place where it now Sitts, yo^r Citties of London and Westm' hauing bin faithfull to yo^r Royall Predecessors whoe haue sate before you on the Royall Throane, and are still ready to express Fidelity and Affecc'on vnto yo^r Ma^y, in all yo^r occasions: Of which they Them-selues haue giuen yo^r Ma^y p'ticular Assurance by their Petic'on presented vnto you. And wee are most ready to confirme in yo^r Ma^y this beleife of them, by any engagem't, in any way your Ma^y will please to propose vnto vs, agreeable to our Duty and Allegiance. And wee doe now most humbly address our selues vnto yo^r Ma^y, beseeching you graciously to accept what wee haue heere Rep'tented, and to add yo^r endeav'o^r for the ending of this destructive Warre, and raise vnto vs a ground of confidence, by taking away the causes of our distrasts, and graunting vnto vs theise our humble desires, w^{ch} only can au't the evil that hangs ou' our heads, and produce that blessed Peace wherein yo^r Ma^y & yo^r Kingdome may be made most happy.

1. That all Armes and Forces lately raised w^{thin} this Kingdom may be forthwith Disbanded & y^t in order to such a disbanding a present Cessation of Armes may be agreed vpon.

2. That Religion and Church Gou'nment (the foundac'on of all Temporall Blessings) may be settled in such a way as your Parliament shall desire, by the Advise and Councell of an Assembly of graue & Learned Diuines, to be approued of by your Ma^y.

3. That the Nauy, Forts, & Magazeenes, may be intrusted in such hands as will be faithfull both to your Ma^y and the Parliament: And the Militia settled by Bill, for the Defence, & Satisfaction both of your Ma^y, and the Kingdome.

4. That according to yo^r Ma^y gracious promise in yo^r Message of the 12th of Aprill, the Lawes may be put in Execution against Papists, And such other means vsed for suppressing of Popery in this Kingdome as shall by both Houses offered vnto your Ma^y for that purpose.

5. That such Delinquents as were Questioned & proceeded against in Parliament vpon Complaynt in the House of Comons before the first of January 1641 may be left to a Legall Tryall and Judgment of the Parliament.

6. That yo^r Ma^y will graunt yo^r free genn'all Pardon for the Releife & Comfort of your good Subiects, And that there may be an Act of Abolition for the burying of all that hath hapned in this vnnaturall Warr, in a perpetuall Obluion.

If in theise humble desires of ours, any thing shall appeare dubious, or obscure, or that yo^r Ma^y shall not remaine vnsatisfied in any of theise per-ticulers, Wee humbly pray that your Ma^y would be pleased to appoint some Persons authorised from you, to meete wth a Committee of Lords and Comons to Treat of theise matters w^{ch} may put a present stopp to all further effusion of the crying blood of your Loyall sub^t Reestablish mutuall Confidence, betweene your Ma^y and them; And (through the blessing of God), lay a happy foundac'on of Honour, Greatness, and Contentment to yo^r Ma^y and of Peace and Prosp'ity to this and yo^r other Kingdomes.

[Endorsed] The Proposicons,
5th August 1643.

Reasons why the house of Comons cannott concurre wth the Lords in the matter of y^e Report concerning the Proposicons.

The Comons haueing taken them into their serious consideracon though they fully concurre wth their Lo^{ps} in their desires of a safe & hono^{ble} peace yett they cannott concurre wth them in these Proposicons for y^e reasons ensueing.

The first Reason. They conceyve such concurrence wth the Lords would bee a violacon of the publike fayth of the kingdome which both houses haue engaged for repayment of all sumes of money to such as haue lent or contributed any money, plate, horses or Armes to the Parliament for their iust defence in respect that no provision is made for the same by those Proposicons.

The seconde Reason. Whereas wee have sent Comittees by authority of both houses vnto o^r Brethren of Scotland for their assistance with instruccions likewise agreed vpon by both houses for that purpose, Our Concurrence with the Lords in these Proposicons would alter those Instruccions & make them voyd in the most materiall parts of them. And soe debarre vs of their assistance.

For first whereas wee have assured them that no pacificacon or agreement for peace shalbee concluded by the houses of Parliament wthout sufficient caucion & provision for the security peace & safety of that Kingdome, the Indempnitie of all Persons & estates concerning the assistance w^{ch} shall bee given to this Parliam't & Kingdome, the 'suppression of the Popish and ill-affected p^{ty} amongst them, There is no provision att all in these Proposicons for the Indempnitie of Scotland, nor any thing at all in them concerning that Kingdome.

2. Secondly whereas by the Instruccions they are promised that sufficient Lands of Papists, Prelates and other malignants who haue adhered vnto them shall by direcon of both houses bee sett forth out of w^{ch} recompence shalbee made to them for their forbearance And in part of their satisfacc'on for the Arreares of the brotherly assistance, By these Proposicons all Papists and Prelates & their Adherents are pardoned as well as any his Ma^y good Subiects.

3. Thirdly whereas wee have promised them a Guard of ships dureing their contynuanee here All the ships are by these Proposicons to bee putt into the Kings owne hands.

4. Whereas for the reformacon of all-erro^r & abuses in the publike wor^{sh} of Allmighty God & Church discipline & Gou'nment in such manner as shalbee most agreeable to the word of God & most effectfull for procuring'a neerer vnion wth other reformed Churches they have called an Assembly of learned & godly Divines & haue invited the Church of Scotland to send some from themselves vnto this Assembly who haue accordingly nominated and appoynted some for that purpose, By these Proposicons the present Assembly is to bee dissolved vnless his M^{ty} Consent bee had thereto, And another to bee appoynted of such Persons whome his Ma^y shall approve of, w^{ch} in likelihood will never give their advise for settling such reformacon in the Church as is desyred.

The third Reason. Their third reason is because the Forts, ships & Magazins are wholly to bee resigned into his Ma^y hands wthout any assurance or satisfacc'on to the houses concerning the Persons who are to comand them. Which as it will amount to an acknowledgement that the two houses had no iust cause given them for seizing vpon them at the first, soe will it hazard the exposing them & the well affected Protestants throughout the whole Kingdome to the malice of Papists, Delinquents, and of those ill Councillors who haue brought the Kingdome into these distraccions.

HOUSE OF LORDS.
Calendar.
1643.

For though by their first Propositions to his Ma^y, the Armys on both sides are to bee disbanded yet considering that the Militia of the Kingdome is not settled, that the Papists in Ireland are in Armes, have publicly declared themselves agaynst the two houses of Parliament & their intencions of coming into the Kingdome, That the designe of the Papists and popeish p^r here is the same with theirs, By putting the Forts, Ports, & Navy wholly into the King's hands to bee disposed of without consent in Parliam^t, They may bee placed in their hands who have bin the Contrivers of these troubles, And see the Sea and Ports opened to Irish Papists & Rebels, & shutt up against our freinds.

For which reasons they cannot concurre wth their Lor^{ds}. And are discouraged to send any Propositions at this tyme in regard y^e his Ma^y by his Proclamacon dated the 20th of June last att Oxford hath declared that the Acts of the Persons now remayning in both houses are no longer to bee looked vpon as Votes of the two houses of Parliament.*

For which reasons as wee could not concur with their lps in the propositions as they were framed, so wee could not in this time of iminent & pressing danger divert our thoughts or o^r time from those necessary provisions as are to be made for the safety of the Kingdome to the framing new propositions we having so lately p^rsented propositions to his M^y & by his answer receyv'd no satisfaction that we can not, at least with any hope, p^rsent others at this time, when wee have cause to doubt his late success will make his royall assent more difficult; but such is o^r love & desyer of peace, & of freeing this kingdom from these miseries vnder w^{ch} it groanes, that wee shall with much earnestnes embrace all opportunities of offering such propositions to his Ma^y as may secure through God's blessing our Religion & liberty, as likewise his royall souvereinty & Honor in such manner as may produce a lasting condition of happyness & safety to himself and all his people.

Aug. 5. Petition of Thomas Holden, clerk. Complains that the churchwardens of St. Cuthbert's, Bedford, refuse to obey their Lordships' order to pay him 20l. a year out of the tithes of the parish. Pray that they may be called upon to answer. L. J., VI. 171.

Aug. 5. Petition of Giles Thorne; prays that the trust of the souls of the parishioners of St. Cuthbert's, Bedford, may be committed to a more skilful and better qualified pastor than Thomas Holden, whom he charges with being a drunkard, ridiculously ignorant, a very stranger to good learning, and in no way able to distinguish truth from error. L. J., VI. 171.

Aug. 5. Petition of Thomas Jenyns. Prays that Sir Thomas Dawes may be ordered to produce certain deeds. L. J., VI. 172.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of John Shelley of the service of the order for the production of the deeds upon Mr. Wilson, solicitor to Sir Thomas Dawes. 5 Aug. 1643.

Aug. 7. Petition of Thomas Jenyns; prays to be dismissed from further attendance in the matter of Sir John Seaton's petition.

Aug. 8. Draft order in the suit between Catherine Pettus and the widow of Thomas Bancroft. L. J., VI. 173. In extenso.

1643. Aug. 8. } Book of orders made by the House to } of Lords.
22 Feb. 1643-4. }

Aug. 9. Petition of Mary Gray, Symon Middleton, and Katherine his wife. The cause between petitioners and the Clotworthies with reference to the estate of the late Robert Gray was referred, by an order of their Lordships, to certain referees. By a mistake in the drawing of the order, petitioners, though parties, are enjoined to be examined as witnesses against themselves, which is contrary to the intent of the order. Pray to be relieved from being examined, that the reference may be enlarged, and additional referees appointed, as those already named, by reason of other business, do not attend. L. J., VI. 173.

Aug. 9. Petition of John Viscount Purbecke concerning a rentcharge due to him from Sir Edward Cooke. L. J., VI. 173. In extenso.

* The words printed in italics are struck out in the original, and the subsequent paragraph is on a separate paper, and in a different hand.

Aug. 9. Petition of Edmund Nicholson; complains of a riot committed upon his lands in Gedney Marsh, and prays that the deputy lieutenants and the other officers of the Parliament may, in the absence of the sheriff and justices of the county, execute the order of the 13th of July 1641, for quieting possessions in Sutton Marsh. L. J., VI. 174.

1. Copy of warrant of Sir John Brooke and Edward Heron, Esq., justices of the peace for Lincolnshire, for the apprehension of Erasmus Parkin and others for a riot at Gedney Marsh. 21 Sept. 1642.

2. Affidavit of William Browne of Sutton, that the rioters burnt down three houses and a barn belonging to Edmund Nicholson upon Gedney Marsh, and dangerously wounded Nicholson. 22 Oct. 1642.

3. Affidavit of Edward Townley concerning the riot. 3 Aug. 1643.

Aug. 10. Draft order for the Earl of Manchester to be Serjeant-major General of the forces of the six associated counties, &c. L. J., VI. 174. In extenso.

Aug. 10. Petition of Richard Wynde, William Carew, and William Taylor, inhabitants of St. Ives; petitioners, who stand committed for disobeying the ordinance for sequestering the tithes of the parish of St. Ives, pray for their discharge in regard that some of them are employed for the public service. L. J., VI. 174.

Aug. 10. Order for Stephen Estwicke, Francis Pecke, and Captain Player, senior, to provide clothes, &c., for the Earl of Essex's army. L. J., VI. 175. In extenso.

Aug. 10. Order for the payment of 10,000l. to Stephen Estwicke for clothes, &c., for the army in Ireland. L. J., VI. 175. In extenso.

Aug. 10. Order for the payment of 10,000l. to Sir William Waller. L. J., VI. 175. In extenso.

Aug. 10. Printed copy of an ordinance concerning the names of the Committee for the associated counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Cambridge, Hertford, and Huntingdon, together with the instructions for the said Committee. And three special orders. 1. For the divines of the assembly to go into their several counties to stir up the people to rise for their defence. 2. For the Earl of Manchester to be Serjeant-major-General of all forces of the associated counties. 3. For the associated counties to raise a body of 10,000 foot and dragoons. L. J., VI. 174-176. In extenso.

Aug. 11. Petition of Michael Oldisworth, William Wise, and Robert Girlinges. By an order of the 13th of June 1641, the sheriffs and justices of all counties were to settle the possession of all men as they were the first day of this Parliament. John Trafford, by misinformation that he was in possession of certain lands at Tydd St. Mary on the first day of the Parliament, and that he was dispossessed thereof, obtained their Lordships' order to put the said order of the 13th of July in execution by power of the militia, thereby to continue him in possession. Petitioners pray that they may have the benefit of the general order and that Trafford's order, so unduly obtained, may be discharged. L. J., VI. 177.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of William Wise in support of petition. 29 July 1643.

Aug. 11. Petition of John Trafford. Complains that William Wise made a forcible entry upon petitioners marsh land at Tydd St. Mary notwithstanding their Lordships' order. Prays that some course may be taken with Wise for his contempt. L. J., VI. 177.

Aug. 11. Order referring the two preceding petitions to Justices Reeve and Bacon. L. J., VI. 177.

Annexed:—

1. Report of Justice Trevor thereon.

2. Affidavit of William Pierson in the matter.

3. Affidavit of Thomas Hatton.

4. Affidavit of Simon Wood.

5. Affidavit of William Wise.

Aug. 11. Order for Sir John Conyers to deliver the custody of the Tower into the hands of Sir Robert Harley until Sir John Conyers leaves the kingdom, when it is to be handed over to the Lord Mayor and sheriffs, according to a former ordinance. L. J., VI. 178. In extenso.

Aug. 11. Petition of John Doughtie, defendant, in a writ of error, wherein Thomas Overman and John Hardwicke are plaintiffs. Prays that without further delay he may have the benefit of the judgment awarded to him by their Lordships on the 5th instant. See L. J., VI. 171.

3. Copy of petition of Isabella Smith. See 27 July 1643.
4. List of bonds entered into by Raleigh Sanderson.
5. Order of committee for examinations, for search to be made in the house of Mr. Streete for arms and ammunition belonging to Mr. Sanders[on], who is suspected to employ the same against the Parliament. 4 April 1643.
6. Another order of the committee, that the pair of pistols and cases seized at Mr. Streete's house, and belonging to Raleigh Sanderson, who is at Oxford and suspected to be in actual war against the Parliament, shall be continued in Mr. Wright's custody. 10 April 1643.
7. Another order of the committee for the committee for Surrey and Middlesex to seize the wharf of Raleigh Sanderson and Francis Hanford, near St. Saviour's Mill, in the county of Surrey, and Shadwell wharf, in the county of Middlesex, with the boats, lighters, engines, and other things belonging to the ballast business. 1 May 1643.
8. Receipt signed Charles Gheste for two rapiers, a dagger, and a case of pistols, received of Thomas Wright. 15 May 1643.
9. Affidavit of Arthur Collins that he knew nothing of the proceedings upon the sequestration of the estate of Raleigh Sanderson when he arrested him. 1 August 1643.
10. Affidavit of Robert Preston that he was told by Sergeant Wilde and some others of the grand committee that he might safely cause Sanderson to be arrested, there being no order made for his appearance. 1 August 1643.
11. Affidavit of Thomas Smith that he knew nothing of the sequestration of Sanderson's estate, but being informed that he was in town gave order for his arrest upon a bond of 6,000*l.*, as he hoped he might lawfully do. 1 August 1643.
12. Affidavit of George Plukenett. Hearing that Sanderson was arrested he gave notice and paid the fees to the Sheriff of Middlesex to charge him with action of 100*l.* upon a bond, but deponent knew nothing of the sequestration of Sanderson's estate. 2 August 1643.
13. Affidavit of William Sanderson and Richard Streete, detailing the proceedings before the committee upon the sequestration of the estate of Raleigh Sanderson, and his subsequent arrest.
14. Certificate of the sequestrators for the county of Surrey, that they, being dissatisfied with the proofs brought by Preston against Raleigh Sanderson appointed William Sanderson to send for his brother, the said Raleigh Sanderson, to come to London.
15. Affidavit of William Massey, one of the bailiffs of the county of Middlesex, that on the 12th of June he arrested Raleigh Sanderson, in Westminster Hall upon a writ quo minus taken out by Robert Preston, and that Sanderson informed the sheriff that he was ordered to appear that day before the committee for sequestrations. 2 August 1643.
16. Affidavit of John Calcott, under sheriff of Middlesex, that Arthur Collins insisted upon charging Sanderson, after his arrest, with a Bill of Middlesex at the suit of Daniel Giles, notwithstanding deponent informed Collins that Sanderson was sent for to attend the committee for sequestrations. 2 August 1643.
17. Affidavit of Edward Webb, servant to Raleigh Sanderson, that Robert Preston showed deponent a warrant signed by two of the collectors for the sequestrations in the hundred of Ossulston, and by virtue of that warrant received certain monies of the benefit and the profits of the wharf and ballasting business of Raleigh Sanderson. 2 August 1643.
18. Affidavit of Raleigh Sanderson that he is not and has never been in any service or employment in His Majesty's army, nor received any pay or promise of pay for any such service, and that he has never lent money to His Majesty or assisted any of His Majesty's forces with horse, arms, or ammunition. 2 August 1643.

19. Order signed by Robert Preston for an account to be made of what ballast hath been delivered at the wharf at Shadwell between the 2nd and 9th of May. On the same paper affidavit of Edward Webb that the preceding order is in the handwriting of Preston, and copy of order of the collectors for the hundred of Ossulston, appointing Preston to manage Shadwell wharf until the committee for sequestrations do further order.

Aug. 12. Application of Mr. Sergeant Whitfield to be exempted from paying the weekly assessment, in consideration of his having had four horses taken from him for the service of the Parliament. L. J., VI. 178.

Aug. 12. Ordinance for raising dragoons in the county of Essex. L. J., VI. 178. In extenso.

Aug. 14. Draft order respecting leave of absence to Mr. Ashe to go with the Earl of Manchester into the associated counties. L. J., VI. 179. In extenso.

Aug. 14. Draft order for the protection of Mr. Justice Reeve's house, in Chancery Lane, and his chambers in Sergeant's Inn. L. J., VI. 179.

Aug. 14. Similar order for the protection of his houses at Norwich and Wacton, in the county of Norfolk. L. J., VI. 179.

Aug. 15. Petition of Mildmay, Earl of Westmoreland. Has now been in confinement for 10 months, to the danger of his health for want of fresh country air which custom hath naturalized to him. Would not have troubled their Lordships amongst their most weighty affairs, were not the consequence of more concernment than his own life, but having a wife and a house full of small children his fears for them increase daily as the church bells tell him the sickness increases near his house. Whilst, what through taxation, sequestrations, and often plunderings he hath not wherewithal to procure them bread here, where without money 'tis not to be had. Prays the House so far to compassionate his distressed condition as to give leave that he may with his family retire to one of his houses in the country, where his honor shall be as dear to him as it hath hitherto been. Aug. 17. Petition of Cornelius Burges, vicar of Watford; 36*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.* is due to him for tithes from the Lord Capel's sequestered estate in the parish of Watford. Prays that the persons employed in sequestering the estate may be ordered to pay petitioner the sum due to him, as he has no means to recover the same in a legal course. L. J., VI. 183.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the sums due to Dr. Burges from Lord Capel. 12 August 1643.

Aug. 17. Petition of Francis Newton, Thomas Mayo, and James Waddesworth, messengers. Their Lordships on the 15th of November 1641 ordered that any man who should discover any popish priests or Jesuits, and procure them to be apprehended, should be rewarded by the Parliament. Petitioners have brought many dangerous popish priests and Jesuits to their trial, conviction, and condemnation during the present Parliament, but have at present received no benefit from their labours, although they have in the prosecutions expended large sums of money. Pray that some recompense may be made to them for their past labours, and some annual allowance for the future to encourage their diligence. L. J., VI. 183.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referred to in preceding. 15 November 1641.

2. The names of the priests indicted and attainted at the Sessions House in the Old Bailey since the 22nd of July 1640, prosecuted and proved by Francis Newton, James Waddesworth, and Thomas Mayo, messengers to the Honourable Houses of Parliament, at their proper costs and charges.

Aug. 17. Draft ordinance for the committee of the militia for the city of London to administer an oath or vow to all those appointed to bear arms under them. L. J., VI. 184. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Petition of Peter Chamberlen, one of His Majesty's physicians: became bound for payment of 107*l.* in trust for Sir Wm. Middleton, and tendered the money to the day, deducting 50*l.* due to petitioner for diet and lodging afforded to Sir Wm. and his family, whilst he let part of his house (of the rent of 60*l.*) to the Lords Commissioners of Scotland for 420*l.* per annum, but Sir Wm., incensed by petitioner's former endeavour to restrain his unnatural and cruel conduct towards his mother, Lady Eliz. Middleton, since deceased, caused petitioner to be arrested in Fleet Street, and carried him in view of the trained bands and multitudes of people first to the St. John's Head in Ludgate, and then to the Rose in the Poultry, contrary to privilege, though the sergeants were told that petitioner was the King's servant; desires the consideration of the House. L. J., VI. 186.

Aug. 18. Petition of William Wombwell. Prays that 50*l.* due to him from Arthur Fry may be paid to him out of Fry's goods before they are otherwise disposed of, his estate having been sequestered, being one of the plotters in the late horrid conspiracy against the city. L. J., VI. 186.

Aug. 18. Draft order for all soldiers of the Lord General's Army to repair to their colours, &c. L. J., VI. 186. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Copies of some of the papers exhibited by Sir William Boswell, the King's resident at the Hague, to the Estates General of the United Provinces. L. J., VI. 187. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Draft order for pressing 2,000 men to recruit the army of the Lord General. L. J., VI. 190. In extenso.

Aug. 18. Printed copy of a letter from Mr. Marshal and Mr. Nye, appointed assistants to the Commissioners of Scotland, to their brethren in England concerning the success of their affairs. See C. J., III. 220.

Aug. 19. Petition of Arthur Samwell, Henry Kearsley, and other creditors of Sir Thomas Dawes. Sir Thomas Dawes having failed to bring in certain evidences in compliance with their Lordships' orders, petitioners pray that an order may be granted for searching his houses, chambers, studies, and other places for the said deeds, and also for the apprehension of the said Sir Thomas. L. J., VI. 191.

Aug. 19. Petition of John Gibbon. Is a prisoner in the Fleet in execution at the suit of Michael Fawkes, who is now with the King's army. Has petitioned their Lordships for a hearing, but cannot now expect to obtain it on account of their other great occasions. Prays that a writ of habeas corpus may be granted to him to go abroad from time to time until his cause can be heard. L. J., VI. 192.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same praying that his cause may be referred to some four of their Lordships.

2. Another petition that order may be given to Mr. Baron Trevor to grant him a writ of habeas corpus.

Aug. 19. Petition of John Perkins; Sir Alexander Hope and John Langston, two of His Majesty's servants, have long been indebted to petitioner to the amount of 40*l.*, and petitioner has obtained leave from the Lord Chamberlain to proceed against them at law notwithstanding their privilege. Langston being a servant in the Tower of London, petitioner would not presume to take course against him without their Lordships' approbation, and therefore prays that the leave already granted by the Lord Chamberlain may be confirmed by the House. L. J., VI. 192.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of same, to the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, Lord Chamberlain. Prays leave to proceed against Hope and Langston. Noted by the Earl, Hope and Langston to shew cause why the request should not be granted. 27 November 1640.

2. Petition of same, to same. Has shewn his Lordship's order to Hope and Langston, but cannot get any satisfaction. Noted by the Earl, Petitioner to take the benefit of the law if Hope and Langston do not give him satisfaction before the end of the present session of Parliament. 20 December 1640.

3. Petition of same, to the Earl of Essex, Lord Chamberlain. Prays leave to proceed forthwith against Hope and Langston who, instead of paying him his just debt, utter much evil language against him. Noted by the Earl, Hope and Langston to shew cause why the request of petitioner should not be granted. 25 January 1641-2.

4. Petition of same, to same. Has shown his Lordship's order to Hope and Langston, who can show no good cause why his former petition should not be granted. Noted by the Earl, Petitioner may proceed against them in the ordinary course of law if they do not give him satisfaction within one month. 17 March 1641-2.

5. Petition and answer of John Langston, gent., porter to the Tower of London. Became bound for Sir Alexander Hope, His Majesty's carver, to John Perkins, but is unable at present to discharge the debt. Has offered to assign his wages, but this Perkins refuses. Three years' wages of 40*l.* per annum are due to him from His Majesty, and the King's army being now in the counties of Worcester and Northumberland, where petitioner has property, he cannot get any rents. Prays that until times are better Perkins may not have leave to arrest or implead him. 28 August 1643.

Aug. 19. Order of the Committee for the safety of the kingdom for the apprehension of all persons killing the King's deer and cutting down timber in Hyde Park. Signed by the members of the Committee.

Aug. 19. Warrant to the keeper of Ely House to take into safe custody Dr. Beale and others.

Aug. 21. Complaint of the Lord Morley that the rents of his manors of Hornsey, Tatham, &c., in the county of Lancaster, to the value of 1,200*l.* per annum, which is all that, for the present, he has to live upon, have been detained from him for the last 10 months, having been sequestered or otherwise seized upon by the Parliament forces. L. J., VI. 193.

Aug. 21. Petition of Katharine Pettus. Prays that she may be restored to the quiet possession of her manor of Santon, in the county of Norfolk, in compliance with their Lordships' order of the 7th instant. L. J., VI. 193.

Annexed:—

1. Certificate of Richard Carter and William Smith, two of the Commissioners appointed for sequestering the estate of the late Thomas Bancroft, that they have on behalf of Katherine Pettus demanded the possession of the manor of Santon from John Bancroft and others, who have forcibly withheld the same and utterly refuse to deliver it up. 12 August 1643.

HOUSE OF LORDS.
Calendar.
1643.

Aug. 21. Petition of Anne Bickley. Prays that an order may be made on her behalf in accordance with the certificate of Sir John Nulls and Mr. Baron Leeke, to whom her former petition was referred. L. J., VI. 193.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of her former petition. See 11 May 1643.
2. Copy of order referring her petition to Sir John Nulls and others. 11 May 1643. L. J., VI. 42.
3. Certificate of Sir John Nulls and Mr. Baron Leeke. 10 August 1643.

Aug. 21. Letter from Stephen Spratt, to the Lord Howard of Escrick. Accuses his Lordship of having pawned his honour in saying that the trunks and goods lately taken from the lady of Banbury belonged to his Lordship. If the House of Commons will let the writer have a fair trial he will make it appear to the contrary upon oath by divers witnesses both men and women. For writing this letter, Spratt was sent for as a delinquent and committed to Newgate. L. J., VI. 193.

Aug. 21. Application for a pass for William Hawkins to go to Iver, in the county of Bucks. L. J., VI. 193.

Aug. 22. Order for the assembly of divines to consider of the doctrine of certain of the thirty-nine articles. L. J., VI. 194. In extenso.

Aug. 23. Petition of the sequestrators of the living of Aldenham, Herts. Complain that Joseph Soane, the late vicar, refuses to give up possession of the vicarage house and glebe lands. Pray for a further order in the matter. On the same paper, affidavit of Richard Axtely that the sequestrators have often demanded possession, but that Dr. Soane refuses them. L. J., VI. 194.

Aug. 23. Information respecting the searching of Lord Hunsdon's house at Hunsdon for arms, &c. L. J., VI. 194.

Aug. 23. Depositions of witnesses in the cause between Sir Walter Devereux et al. and Sir William Withypool. L. J., VI. 194.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order referring the cause to Sir Edward Leech and Dr. Aylett. 18 August 1643. L. J., VI. 186.
2. List of witnesses. 19 August 1643. L. J., VI. 192.

Aug. 24. Application for a pass for the Portuguese Ambassador, his interpreter, and attendants. L. J., VI. 194.

Aug. 24. Petition of Rose Fuller, a very poor widow, on behalf of herself and her poor child. Petitioner's late husband, Robert Fuller, was employed as a chirurgeon by the East India Company and died about four years since, having made his will, leaving petitioner sole executrix. Prays that the Company may be ordered to pay her 18l. the residue of the sum due from them to her late husband. L. J., VI. 194.

Annexed:—

1. Statement of the sums already received by petitioner from the Company.
2. Copy of order for the East India Company to answer. L. J., VI. 195.

Aug. 24. Ordinance for the repayment of 50,000l. advanced by the city of London, for the payment of the army raised by the Parliament. L. J., VI. 195. In extenso.

Aug. 24. Ordinance for raising a body of horse for the preservation, peace, and safety of the kingdom. L. J., VI. 195. In extenso.

Aug. 24. Ordinance for fortifying Lovingland [Lovingland], Suffolk, and East and West Flegg, Norfolk, for the security of Great Yarmouth. L. J., VI. 196. In extenso.

Aug. 24. Order for the payment of 100l. to Sir James Barry in consideration of the losses he has sustained. L. J., VI. 196. In extenso.

Aug. 24. Copy of preceding.

Aug. 24. Schedule of money and plate subscribed by some of the inhabitants of the county of Warwick for the service of the King and Parliament, and brought into the Castle of Warwick. L. J., VI. 196. In extenso.

Aug. 25. Draft letter from the Speaker of the House of Lords, to the Earl of Lincoln and the Lords Bruce, Dacre, and North, calling upon them forthwith to give their attendance on the House. L. J., VI. 198.

Aug. 25. Petition of Francis Lord Willoughby of Parham. John late Earl of Peterborough, who was indebted to petitioner in the sum of 300l., died intestate, and the Countess Dowager refuses to take out letters of administration, although she acknowledges petitioner's debt and desires he should be satisfied. Petitioner is unable to take out letters of administration, because the seal of the Prerogative office is at Oxford, and petitioner is at Lincoln in the service of the Parliament. Henry Compton and others are endeavouring to possess themselves of the estate of the late Earl, whereby petitioner is likely to lose his debt. Prays that an order may be made for seizing and disposing of so much of the late Earl's personal estate as may satisfy petitioner's just debt with damages for his forbearance. L. J., VI. 198.

Aug. 26. Petition of Daniel Breton. Petitioner took a house of the Countess of Manchester called the Three Kings, in Fleet Street, with a "bowling bare" thereto belonging, part whereof is claimed by Sir Robert Rich who refused to sell it to petitioner, but has since sold it to Paul Williams, a broker, who intends to erect a new edifice upon it contrary to law and greatly to petitioner's prejudice. Prays for relief. L. J., VI. 198.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Daniel Breton. That he served their Lordships' order upon Paul Williams, who in contempt thereof continues to dig up his bowling green and has commenced the foundations of his new building. 1 September 1643. L. J., VI. 201.
2. Another affidavit of Breton; Paul Williams having absented himself, his wife has encouraged the workmen to go on building upon the "bowling bare" in deponent's possession in spite of their Lordships' orders. 4 September 1643.
3. Another affidavit of Breton, similar to preceding. 15 September 1643.

Aug. 26. Ordinance for disposing of the houses of those who have gone away and who have not paid the weekly assessment. L. J., VI. 198. In extenso.

Aug. 26. Petition of the merchant strangers and others concerned in the importation of plate and bullion into this kingdom. Pray leave to import plate and bullion without molestation. L. J., VI. 199. In extenso.

Aug. 26. Order upon preceding petition. L. J., VI. 199. In extenso.

Aug. 26. Order conferring upon Dominique Petit, Peter Delicques, and Claudius Fancault the sole right for seven years of using an engine invented by them, for drawing up out of the seas and rivers all or part of ships, their lading, and cannons which are overwhelmed therein. L. J., VI. 199. In extenso.

Aug. 29. Certificate of Sir John Franklin and Sir John Hippisley, that George Longe of St. James', Clerkenwell, who was formerly returned as a defaulter, hath since sent in an able and sufficient horse with all things necessary for the same. L. J., VI. 201.

Aug. 31. Petition of Sir William Withypoll. During petitioner's absence beyond the seas Leicester Devereux, who married petitioner's sole daughter and heiress, without any colour of title forcibly entered his house at Ipswich, and possessed himself of goods to the value of 3,000l., and all the writings and evidences concerning petitioner's manors and lands of inheritance. Leicester Devereux has now, with his father Sir Walter, petitioned their Lordships for settlement of a pretended marriage agreement, whereby he hopes to obtain a title to the said lands, taking advantage against petitioner by occasion of the loss of his writings. Prays that Sir Walter and Leicester Devereux may be forced forthwith to make restitution, and that petitioner may be protected from such unnatural and unjust violence. L. J., VI. 201.

Aug. 29. Paper endorsed My Lord's [Denbigh] letter from Wellingborough to the committee at Coventry. I desire you to meet me this day with all the horse and dragoons you can spare at Hill Morton, 10 or 12 miles on this side of Coventry, in respect I have desired the Northampton forces to convoy me until I meet you.

Annexed:—

1. Letter from Sir Edward Littleton, to the Earl of Denbigh; is glad to hear of his safe arrival at Coventry, but the ways are so obstructed that the writer only travels to Stafford, hoping to settle peace there, but expects little without his Lordship's assistance; has gained the ill-will of many by leaning to the honest part, and desires the Earl to send a few lines to the House lest he should be prejudiced by false accusations, and also to obtain leave for him to stay in the parts where he now is, from whence he expects to be able to send useful information. (Undated.)

Aug. 30. Letter from Sir Richard Samwell, John Crewe, and Edward Harby, at Northampton, to the Earl of Denbigh. We hope your Lordship received our answer wherein we offered to attend you if you had pleased to command us. The Lord General sent a letter this day for your forces to meet him to-morrow at Bicester, with a postscript that if the foot could not come timely, then the horse only to go. We have acquainted Major Fraser, who will march with the horse accordingly, but the journey is too long for the foot. At the desire of your secretary we have despatched to the committee for safety the letters you sent from Wellingborough to us and to the committee at Coventry. We will be careful of the carriages left in our custody.

Aug. Petition of the merchant strangers of the Inter-course. Pray that a proviso may be inserted in the ordinance of excise to free them from all payments expressed and mentioned in the said ordinance, it having been declared by several orders of both Houses that they are exempt from all public subsidies, taxes, excises, and loans, as the society of English merchant adventurers is beyond the sea.

Annexed:—

1. Copies of various orders referred to in preceding.
2. Copy of certificate of the Fellowship of the Merchants Adventurers that the twenty-three persons named are the merchants of the Inter-course, and are all subjects of the seventeen provinces of the Netherlands, or of countries under the obedience of the King of Spain or the States General of the United Provinces. 29 August 1643.

Aug. The remonstrance and petition of the Lord of Kerry. Details at great length the circumstances under which he raised and transported a regiment for the defence of Ireland against the rebels, and the great hardship he and the regiment have suffered for want of their pay, and prays that the 1,000*l.* in money and 5,000*l.* victuals ordered to be sent for the relief of Munster, now nineteen months ago, together with the arrears of pay, and clothes and arms for his regiment, may be speedily sent, and if this cannot suddenly be effected, he prays that himself, his wife, and seven children may be taken into charitable consideration, that having lost all for their religion they may not be exposed to the extremity of beggary, and that the case of his officers who have all this time depended upon petitioner's purse, who is now no longer able to give them or himself relief, may be taken into consideration.

Sept. 2. Petition of the adventurers for lands in Ireland; against the rumoured cessation with the rebels. L. J., VI. 202. In extenso.

Sept. 2. Application from the resident of the King of Portugal for a pass for fourteen Portuguese men and women to Lisbon.

Sept. 4. Draft ordinance for making Lord Inchiquin, captain general of all the forces in Munster. L. J., VI. 203.

Sept. 4. Message from the Commons, with resolutions, making alterations in the committees of several counties. L. J., VI. 203. In extenso.

Sept. 4. Another draft of one of preceding resolutions relating to Cambridge.

Sept. 4. Copy of information against Steven Spratt, for saying that the Lords could not arrest any common subject without leave of the Commons, &c. L. J., VI. 203. In extenso.

Sept. 4. Draft order for the appointment of additional sequestrators for Nottinghamshire, &c. L. J., VI. 204. In extenso.

Sept. 5. Petition of Katherine Pettus, widow: Jeremy Aylett and others are now in custody for having taken violent possession of the manor of Santon in Suffolk and Norfolk, which had been sequestrated until a legacy, for many years owing to petitioner out of the estate of Thomas Bancroft, should be paid; petitioner prays that Aylett and his accomplices may not be discharged until she has been heard in favour of her claim to possession of the manor, and for payment of her costs. L. J., VI. 204.

Sept. 5. Petition of John Bickley, prisoner in the Fleet; petitioner who was arrested in his own house merely at the instigation of his wife Anne, prays for time to show cause why his estate should not be sequestrated. L. J., VI. 204.

Annexed:—

1. Draft order on a petition of Anne Bickley. 11 May 1643. L. J., VI. 42.

Sept. 5. Draft order for payment of 5,000*l.* for supply of arms for the forces under the Earl of Manchester. L. J., VI. 204. In extenso.

Sept. 5. Copy of order of the Commons for protection of Mr. Steward from arrest. C. J., III. 228. In extenso.

Sept. 6. Affidavit of Richard Poole, that Fulke Hughes, a servant to the Earl of Warwick, has been arrested contrary to privilege by Duell, a sergeant of the Poultry Compter, by the procurement of one Howett. L. J., VI. 207.

Sept. 6. Petition of Tho. Howett, citizen and wine cooper of London: arrested Fulke Hughes for a debt of 85*l.* 10*s.* which had been owing for ten months, and that after a chargeable suit; but since his imprisonment Hughes has unduly procured a protection from the Earl of Warwick; prays for a warrant to secure Hughes until he make satisfaction. L. J., VI. 207.

Sept. 6. Draft ordinance for a weekly assessment from the associated counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, &c. for support of the forces raised in those counties. L. J., VI. 207. In extenso.

Sept. 6. Draft ordinance for Sir William Waller to take some of the trained bands and horse in London for the defence of the city of London and counties adjacent, for the assistance of the lord general, and for the preservation and recovery of the western parts. L. J., VI. 207. In extenso.

Sept. 6. Draft ordinance for Colonel Owen Rowe to contract with gunmakers and others for a supply of arms, &c. to the value of 5,000*l.* L. J., VI. 207. In extenso.

Sept. 6. Draft ordinance for levying arrears of rates, &c. in Suffolk. L. J., VI. 207. In extenso.

Sept. 6. Petition of Jeremy Aylett for himself and four of his tenants. Petitioner is a Commissioner appointed by Parliament for raising men, money, and horse in Essex, he and his tenants are now in prison for contempt of an order of their Lordships, which they never saw till after their arrest, and which was unduly obtained by Mrs. Pettus by combination with one Carter and Smith, a bailiff, by colour of a sequestration obtained in Chancery against the lands of Thomas Bancroft, deceased.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Aylett in support of preceding.

Sept. 6. Letter from (Colonels) H. Mackworth and Tho. Mytton to Basil Earl of Denbigh. Express the loss they feel in his absence, and their sense of his zeal for the public service; wiping off this stain will only make his honor shine the brighter; they pray that his spirit which would not have been overcome in the field may not yield to subtle and clandestine practices, but that he will prosecute his course of devotion to his oppressed country.

Sept. 7. Draft ordinance for appointment of an auditor and treasurer of the monies raised in Lancashire and Cheshire. L. J., VI. 208. In extenso.

Sept. 7. Draft order of the Commons for discharge of Mr. Jeremy Aylett and his tenants. C. J., III. 231.

Sept. 7. Letter from [] from his quarters at Cleeve to his brother: I know not what may be reported in London but the truth of our proceedings is as follows:—last week the Lord General met four or five regiments at Bayard's Green in Oxfordshire with about 7,000 foot and 4,000 horse, also Colonel Mainwaring with his city regiment of red coats, and a Kentish regiment consisting of eight colours, so that in all we were about sixteen or eighteen thousand men, and ever since we have marched together, which has caused us to endure hard quarters and want of victual, a barn and fresh straw we account a princely lodging, but the Lord be thanked we are all well and lusty; last Sunday night we quartered at a little village called Addlestrop in Gloucestershire, and on Monday morning Prince Robert (Rupert) came to Stow-on-the-Wold and faced us on a hill over which we were to march; our regiment that day led the van, the poor townsmen fell to their prayers, but we with joyful hearts went out to meet the enemy, who supposing the city regiments only to be there began to compass us round, for the lord general with his army was about a mile behind, we set ourselves in battalion pretty close to them, and our officers with great valour rode up and fired in their faces and so bravely retreated again; as soon as the general came in sight he fired some drakes at them, which so amazed the rogues that they began to retreat, and the general's horse and his own regiment of foot charged them, and fired four roaring pieces at them, upon which they rode away as if the Devil were in them and we followed: what execution was done we know not, but hope well; all the trophies of our victory were a cavalier's finger, which lay on the ground where they first faced us, and some prisoners; the next day we were appointed to quarter at Prestbury where the cavaliers lay within six or seven miles of Gloucester; as soon as we appeared in sight of the town they drew out into a corn-field, and our forlorn hope descended upon them, and the lord general let fly four pieces of ordnance at them, which made their guilty hearts quake and the earth tremble, they rode away again as fast as their horses would carry them, but we stayed some time by the way and sold their welsh hobbies for 10s. a piece, and that night they raised the siege of Gloucester and burnt their cabins, which at first sight we thought had been some town, and whither they are now gone the Devil knows, for I think God hath nothing to do with them; we are now wheeling about as we think toward Worcester, we care not much whither, if God be for us who can be against us.

Sept. 8. Notes respecting Mr. Justice Berkeley's trial concerning ship money. See L. J., VI. 209.

Sept. 8. Printed copy of an ordinance to prevent the coming over of the Irish rebels, together with three special orders, all of which are given in extenso in the Journals. L. J., VI. 210, &c.

Sept. 9. List of persons to be added to the committee for Bucks for the weekly assessment. L. J., VI. 211. In extenso.

[Sept. 9.] Petition of the officers of Sir William Waller's brigade, to H. C.; have served long under Sir William Waller, but received little, to the exhausting of their own and draining of their friends' means; are unwilling to desist from serving, yet unable to subsist in the service; almost disenabled in a just way to prosecute their just cause, and by necessity oppressing the countries where they quarter, are forced to violate those privileges which they fight to maintain; they appeal to Sir William Waller to attest their fidelity, and pray that some part of their arrears may be paid and the residue secured to them. See C. J., III. 236.

Sept. 10. Copy of a letter from the Earl of Essex, Lord General, at Tewksbury, to the Speaker of H. C., with news of the raising of the siege of Gloucester. L. J., VI. 218. In extenso.

Sept. 11. Petition of John Kayes, minister of the gospel; prays that Sir Nathaniel Brent, the Archbishop of Canterbury refusing, may be ordered to institute him to the rectory of Sundridge, Kent, upon the resignation of Dr. Hall. L. J., VI. 212. In extenso.

Sept. 11. Copy of letter from Colonel Edward Massey at Gloucester, to the Speaker of the House of Commons; by the mercy of providence, the care of Parliament, and the speedy march of the general, the enemy have risen from before the town; he resumes his old suit that they may be sufficiently strengthened to resist future attacks, and endure the winter service, and that arrears of pay may be satisfied, further desires reinforcements of horse and foot sufficient to enable them to beat the enemy from their quarters about the town, for if not, now that Bristol is in the enemy's hand, unless Gloucester and the country about be kept in subjection with a strong hand, he sees not how to secure them to Parliament; without a supply of ammunition, pistols, and carbines he cannot undertake to make the place good any further, though there is no man more willing and ready to spend his life in the service of Parliament than himself; he trusts to the Speaker's goodness to signify these desires and procure a speedy answer. See L. J., VI. 218. where mention is made of this letter.

Sept. 12. Judgment of the House upon Sir Robert Berkeley, one of the justices of the Court of King's Bench, for his opinion in the case of ship money, with an account of the proceedings of the House on delivery of the judgment by Lord Grey of Warke, Speaker, pro tempore. L. J., VI. 214.

Annexed:—

1. Articles of impeachment of Sir Robert Berkeley, Knight, one of the justices of the Court of King's Bench, by the Commons in this present Parliament assembled in their own name, and in the name of all the Commons of England in maintenance of their accusation, whereby he standeth charged with high treason, and other great misdemeanours. Berkeley was impeached by message from the Commons on the 12 of Feb. 1640-1 (L. J., IV. 161), but judgment in his case was not delivered till this day. L. J., VI. 214. The articles are given in extenso in Rushworth I., iii. 318. (Parch-ment collection.)

Sept. 12. Notes of proceedings this day.

Sept. 13. Affidavit of Richard Axtell, that Joseph Soame (Sone), vicar of Aldenham, Herts, will not deliver up possession of the vicarage house and glebe lands to John Gilpin, pursuant to their Lordships' orders, though duly served therewith. L. J., VI. 215.

Sept. 13. Petition of John Perkins; had leave from the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery (late Lord Chamberlain) and afterwards from the Earl of Essex, Lord Chamberlain, to arrest Sir Alexander Hope, His Majesty's carver, and John Langston, porter of the Tower of London, for a debt of 40l. long due: prays for leave to proceed at law against Langston. L. J., VI. 215.

Sept. 13. Order upon proceeding, that if Langston cannot show cause to the contrary by Monday week next, Perkins may take his course at law.

Annexed:—

1. Affidavit of Godfrey Austinson that when Sir Alexander Hope and Langston executed a bond for the money due to Perkins, Langston said he must be the paymaster, for he owed Sir Alexander much more than the 40l.

2. Affidavit of Robert Burrows that the Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery gave Perkins a reference against Langston.

Sept. 13. Draft order for repayment of money advanced by the inhabitants of Ipswich, &c. for the use of the navy. L. J., VI. 215. In extenso.

Sept. 13. Draft order for payment of 600l. weekly out of the weekly assessment of Bucks, Herts, and Beds for maintenance of the garrison of Aylesbury. L. J., VI. 216. In extenso.

Sept. 14. Petition of John Trafford. Mr. Wm. Wise has caused petitioner to attend the House several days, expecting him to present a petition about land in St. Mary Tydd Marsh, in Lincolnshire, now in possession of petitioner; but Wise, seeing that petitioner was ready to answer, has done nothing in the matter. Prays that Wise may have no advantage against him without giving due notice. L. J., VI. 216. In extenso.

Sept. 14. Draft order of the Commons, nominating additional Committees for the county of Cambridge and Isle of Ely. C. J., III. 240. In extenso.

Sept. 14. Rough draft of order of the Commons, touching security to be given to those who advance money for the use of Sir William Waller. C. J., III. 240. In extenso.

Sept. 15. Message from the Commons, with an order for Mr. John Maynard to be a member of the assembly of divines. L. J., VI. 216.

Sept. 15. Draft order for securing the apprentices of Thames watermen enlisted to serve under Sir William Waller from the consequences of breaking their engagements with their masters. L. J., VI. 217. In extenso.

Sept. 15. Draft resolutions of the Commons for rewarding Colonel Massey for his services, &c. C. J., III. 241. In extenso.

Sept. 16. Order for Lord Maitland and others to be admitted to the assembly of divines. L. J., VI. 218. In extenso.

Sept. 20. Printed copy of an ordinance, wherein the county of Lincoln is added in the association of the six counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Cambridge, Hertford, and Huntingdon, for the mutual defence each of other against the popish army in the North, under the command of the Marquess of Newcastle; also giving power to the Earl of Manchester to nominate governors over the parts of Holland and Marchland; and if any person harbour a soldier that is impressed to serve under him, he shall be fined; if he refuse to pay his fine, his goods shall be sequestered, and he imprisoned till the fine be satisfied. With the names of the committees appointed for the collection of money to pay the forces raised for the preservation of those seven counties. L. J., VI. 224. In extenso.

Sept. 20. Draft of preceding, omitting the proviso at the end respecting the harbouring of pressed men.

Sept. 20. Resolutions of the Commons, upon report from the Committee appointed to consider of the papers, propositions, and results sent from the Commissioners of both Houses now in Scotland touching the business of putting in a garrison of Scots into Berwick, the payment of the arrears to the Scots army in Ireland, and the aid desired of the Scots by both Houses, and their condescending unto it, and the manner of it, and the propositions of the Scots thereupon, and the state and result upon the whole matter. C. J., III. 248. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of preceding.

2. Copy of "the result concerning Berwick." Seeing the importance of providing for the security of Berwick, according to the terms of the treaty and covenant between the two kingdoms, the Commissioners of the Parliament of England and the Committee of the convention of estates of Scotland offer the following propositions on the subject, viz.:—1. A Scottish garrison shall be placed in the town, consisting of 600 foot and 120 horse, the chief officers to be approved by the two Houses of the English Parliament, or their Commissioners, this garrison to be part, and paid as part, of the Scottish army, which the Scots have agreed to bring into England; but as it is intended that that army should not fall short of the stipulated number, exclusive of this garrison, the cost of which will be 1,500*l.* monthly, it is left to the English Parliament to consider whether it would not be just for them to make up the monthly allowance to 31,000*l.* instead of 30,000*l.* 2. That Scotland shall guarantee that when the peace of the two kingdoms has been settled, their garrison shall be withdrawn and the works dismantled, and that whilst the garrison is there the liberties and estates of the inhabitants shall be respected; provided that if the English Parliament shall not approve of these articles, that they shall withdraw their garrison now there, otherwise it will be understood by the kingdom of Scotland as a breach of the large treaty between the two kingdoms. 5 Sept. 1643.

3. Another copy.

4. Reasons and grounds why a garrison of the Scottish nation upon this occasion should be settled in Berwick. If the assistance to be given by the Scots is to be effectual, they must have the town as a magazine for victuals and ammunition. It is the only safe passage for the army, and must always be open to them. An English garrison there would be of no use except as a help or hindrance to the assistance sent from Scotland. If Scotland were to assist England in any auxiliary way, they could not make terms unless some towns of garrison were granted them; much more reason is there for them to desire Berwick, when they are content to go on in such a joint and brotherly way with their brethren of England for their assistance. As the garrison at Berwick is only useful to the Scots in relation to their assistance to England, so when peace shall be restored all things shall be put into their former condition. 5 Sept. 1643.

5. The answers of the Committees of both kingdoms of England and Scotland unto the queries sent them from the mayor and corporation of Berwick by two of their own number, Mr. Clarke and Mr. Pratt, upon occasion of the said towns declaring for the King and Parliament of England at the desire of the English Commissioners:—1. What they do is done by authority of the two Houses of the Parliament of England; 2, and with the consent of Scotland. 3. Though the mayor and corporation of Berwick have bound themselves to stand for the King and Parliament upon their own defence, they may safely admit the Scots under the authority of the two kingdoms, without prejudice to the articles of pacification. 4. The number of men for securing the town is now under consideration. 5. They are to be maintained out of the public purse. 6. When peace is restored, the fortifications are to be destroyed, and everything put in its former condition; and during the occupation the rights and liberties of the inhabitants and the politic government of the town are to be respected. 7. No private person is to be questioned for the bygone. Two other things were propounded by word of mouth:—1. That the mayor might keep the keys of the town, and give the word till the garrison was fully settled, but it was thought necessary that Henry Darley should keep the keys during this time, allowing the mayor the use of them from time to time. 2. Provision has been made to secure the town from assessments. 5 Sept. 1643.

Sept. 21. Draft ordinance for the due and orderly receiving and collecting of the King's, Queen's, and Prince's revenue, and the arrearages thereof to the use of the Parliament. L. J., VI. 227. In extenso.

Sept. 23. Draft ordinance "to supply the poor and "all other degrees and sorts of people with wood, paying for the same, as by this ordinance is appointed."

Whereas there is great scarcity of fuel in and about London, in consequence of the town of Newcastle being now in the hands of the papal and malignant forces, which is likely to produce great misery amongst the poorer people during the winter; and whereas the common sort of people, urged by necessity, have destroyed and are destroying great store of timber trees, which, if not timely prevented, may prove of dangerous consequence; it is ordained—1. That the circuit for cutting fellable wood and underwood shall be within sixty miles of London, and that the Committee of Lords and Commons shall appoint officers for the purpose. 2. That these officers shall have power to enter and cut wood upon the lands of any archbishop, bishop, deans, and chapters, in their "politic" capacity, or of any papists or other delinquents, or in any of the Royal parks or chases; that the poorer sort of every parish shall be served first, and afterwards the other degrees and ranks of people; that the wood brought to London shall be distributed in every parish by the churchwardens or such other persons as the Committee shall nominate, and at such easy rates as the Committee shall appoint: provided that this ordinance is not intended to give power of entry upon any of the lands above mentioned, if any private person, not being a papist or delinquent, has a real interest therein, nor upon any woods belonging to the site of any mansion house, nor upon gardens, orchards, or walks. 3. That none except persons duly nominated shall cut wood under pain of fine and corporal punishment. 4. That the officers shall have power to compel persons to convey the wood in carts or lighters upon reasonable hire for use in London. 5. That out of the sale of the timber the officers shall be repaid for fences put up and for their own trouble. 6. That none shall engross the wood so cut. 7. That the cutting shall continue till Parliament recall their order. 8. That in case of resistance to the officers the justices and deputy lieutenants shall assist them with any forces at their command. 9. That the officers shall be protected for their conduct, provided that due care be taken that no woods are cut without lawful authority.

This ordinance was sent up from the Commons this day, read by the Lords, and referred to a Committee (L. J., VI. 230); was reported on the 28th with amendments, read and agreed to, and returned to the Commons (233); whence it was sent back with further amendments on the 2nd Oct., which were agreed to, and the ordinance ordered to be printed (241).

Sept. 23. Letter from the Earl of Manchester, at Lynn, to the Lords in Parliament. Has formerly given an account to the Committee for the safety of the kingdom, how the town of Lynn was rendered into his hands, and also sent a copy of the articles of surrender. Since Tuesday last when he came to the town, he has received a letter from Colonel Cromwell, whom he had sent into Lincolnshire, to say that Sir Thomas Fairfax was landed in that county, between Grimsby and Barton, and that the enemies forces were interposed between his and those of Sir Thomas Fairfax, upon which the Earl sent him all the horse and foot he could spare, having regard to the security of his own neighbourhood, and also a bark with provisions to Sir Thomas Fairfax. He will press the deputy lieutenants to send in their proportions of horse and foot, and then he hopes to be able to move to the assistance of other counties. Before his coming some of the well-affected in the town were imprisoned by the mayor and their goods seized; he is very anxious to relieve these men, who are of great honesty and integrity, but desires the directions of Parliament, which he will always be ready to carry out. The articles upon which Lynn was surrendered are given in Rushworth, III. ii., 283. See C. J., III. 247.

Sept. 25. Papers relating to the covenant, inserted in the Calendar on this day, because it was the day on which the covenant was taken by both Houses of Parliament:

1. The Covenant as originally sent up from Scotland; some slight alterations introducing mention of Ireland were made by the Commons, and the fifth article relating to the maintenance of the late treaty was omitted, otherwise this draft agrees with the Covenant given in extenso, L. J., V. 219.
2. Copy of preceding with order of the Commons of 26 Aug. 1643, referring it to the consideration of the assembly of divines. C. J., III. 220.
3. Copy of the report of the assembly of divines to the House of Commons upon preceding. C. J., III. 223. In extenso.
4. Copy of the amendments made by the Commons. See C. J., III. 224, 229, 230.
5. Copy of a declaration of the House of Commons to their brethren of Scotland, concerning the fifth article of the Covenant. The Commons are most desirous to unite the two nations more closely, and think the taking of the Covenant most conducive to this end, but they have suspended their votes upon the fifth article (relating to the maintenance of the articles of the late treaty) thinking that many people would be less ready to take the Covenant, because there are many thousands who either know not the articles or know them only in part, and besides the public faith of each kingdom is engaged for the performance of the matter of that article, which is not the case with regard to the other articles of the Covenant. See C. J., III. 231.
6. Copy of commission from the general assembly of the Kirk of Scotland, empowering Commissioners to treat with the assembly of divines in England, or any Commissioners appointed by Parliament concerning uniformity in church government, and to deliver a declaration to the Parliament of England, a letter to the assembly of divines, the answer of the assembly to His Majesty's letter, and also the answer of the assembly to the letter sent from some well-affected brethren of the ministry in England. 19 Aug. 1643. L. J., VI. 211. In extenso.

7. Answer of the general assembly of the church of Scotland to the declaration of both Houses; express their satisfaction at the progress of church reformation in England, their desire for a closer union between the two kingdoms, for which end they have sent Commissioners to treat with the assembly of divines, and have agreed on a covenant to be taken by the well-affected of both kingdoms. 19 Aug. 1643. L. J., VI. 212. In extenso.

8. Copy of answer of the general assembly of the Church of Scotland to the letter of the assembly of divines. Their letter was received with mixed joy and sorrow, joy at the work of reformation, sorrow for their sad condition, remembering the former assistance given by their brethren of England, they desire to assist them now, and to promote a closer union between the two nations.

9. Copy of answer of the national assembly of the Church of Scotland to the King's most Excellent Majesty. The remembrance of the duty they owe to His Majesty for his royal favour towards their kirk and government can never by any length of time be deleted out of their minds, whilst the sense of their obligations to him are increased by their religious feelings, they have therefore in their proceedings, in answer to the propositions made to them by the Commissioners of the Parliament of His Majesty's kingdom of England, and some divines assisting them, fixed their thoughts on His Majesty's honour and happiness, with no less intention than if His Majesty had been himself present among them, and in like manner have sent some ministers and others to the assembly of divines now in England, as next to the honour of God and the good of religion, may most serve for His Majesty's preservation and the peace of the kingdoms, on which subject the Commissioners of the last assembly have already fully expressed themselves to His Majesty. They pray His Majesty to judge them by the nature and necessity of their vocation, and the word of God, and not by the reports of ungodly men; and that His Majesty's heart may be inclined to the counsellors of truth and peace, that an end may be put to the present unnatural war. 2 Aug. 1643.

10. Copy of answer of the general assembly of the Church of Scotland, to some well-affected brethren in England; expressing their sorrow for their troubles, but reminding them, that they are only suffering like the saints of old, they must expect no mercy from papists and prelatists, but must quit themselves like men and seek deliverance in the work of the Lord.

Sept. 25. Copy of a letter from Sir Henry Anderson, at Oxford, to Mr. Speaker. Has heard of the hard, if not unjust, proceedings of the House towards him for nothing but for his peaceable intentions for which he has suffered from both sides. The King's party being in power where his estate lay, seized and committed him prisoner to York Castle for fourteen weeks, during which time his goods were taken away and nothing left for the support of his wife and children, and when released by Captain Hotham's means he was not suffered to return to his wife or home, but sent a contrary way; after which he came to the Parliament and with difficulty procured means for his wife to join her daughter Hotham at Hull, where some persons by authority of Parliament broke into her chamber and took away all the means left her, upon which, as a member of the Commons, he moved the House that his goods might be restored, which was granted, but this order has since been revoked, to his great surprise, by men who pretend either law or honesty. In coming to Oxford his intentions were to procure the liberty of a son who has been twenty-three or twenty-four weeks prisoner for his service to Parliament, who did not seem likely to relieve him, also to get a pardon for some near friends; he had no other intentions unless anything tending to the peace of the kingdom might fall in his way. Since he parted with the Speaker he has been fourteen days a prisoner at Wallingford; has not seen the King, but has been examined, and no fault imputed to him but the taking of the covenant; has been stayed at Oxford longer than he expected, but will promote nothing except what will tend to an end of the present calamities, which might be much better concluded by an agreement than by war. Prays the Speaker to move the House to restore his money and goods forthwith, otherwise he will be obliged to move the King to let him have satisfaction out of the estates of those who have unjustly taken his property, which he doubts not would be granted even out of the estate of Mr. Speaker himself; but there are Sir Matthew Bointon, Sir Wm. Allinson, and others, of the Hull Committee, who have estates near, which no ordinance of Parliament could save; he thought right that the House should be informed of this that they might give him a remedy which otherwise he must seek in a higher, yet an honest way. See C. J., III. 219.

Sept. 25. Copy of a letter from Sir Henry Anderson to Mr. Hollis. The King's long stay at Gloucester, and the bloody issue to both sides, have frustrated the writer's poor intentions for peace. The sight of so many brought to Oxford, some dead, some wounded, since the battle, would make any true English heart bleed. Entreats Mr. Hollis to use his endeavours for peace, the time being not unsuitable, for which end he sends some propositions of his own, which he desires Mr. Hollis to consider and to return an answer by the bearer, who is sent specially with a letter to Mr. Speaker, desiring the restoration of the writer's goods taken at Hull; he thinks the King would agree to the conditions sent. Every man is desirous of peace, but yet with several ends, and themselves to be the agents, he is desirous that Mr. Hollis should have a share in the thanks and honour of so good a work, in which he would do well to consult with Sir John Holland, Mr. Selden, Mr. Maynard, or others. He believes there will be another means used to acquaint Sir Philip Stapleton, who is well thought of at Oxford, nor is there any ill impression against Hollis. Sir Henry desires him not delay in the work to which the King is well inclined, so his honour be respected. See infra. 30 Nov. 1643.

C.: petitioners complain of various orders under which 30,000*l.* has been taken from the ship, while it is expected that more money will be taken and the ship sold; petitioners are willing to pay 20,000*l.* over and above the 30,000*l.*, if they may continue to enjoy the privileges of merchants, subjects of the King of Spain, without disturbance upon any national quarrel. C. J., III. 274.

Oct. 12. Letter from Francis Lord Dacre, at Hurstmonceux, to Lord Grey of Warke, Speaker of the House of Lords, pro tempore; was advised last Thursday to retire into the country, because the woman where he lodged was sick of a violent fever, judged to be pestilential, and therefore hopes to be excused for his sudden departure; has received the order of the House to attend on Sunday morning (to take the covenant), but prays leave to be absent till that day sennight, on account of the ways, the weather, and his own infirmity, and then if he may do it without danger of bringing infection, will not fail to attend their Lordships. See L. J., VI. 255.

Oct. 12. The Earl of Elgin [Lord Bruce], at Knowlton, to Lord Grey of Warke, Speaker of the House of Peers, pro tempore; is desirous to obey their Lordships' commands, but is in physic, and therefore fears he cannot come by Sunday, but will come next week unless their Lordships will dispense with his attendance for the present. See L. J., VI. 255.

Oct. 16. Draft letter informing Peers of the day fixed for the taking of the covenant, with list of Peers absent at the taking of the same, and notes of proceedings on other days. See L. J., VI. 255, &c.

Oct. 16. Message from the Commons, with an order for adding Thomas Sanders to the committee for the county of Derby. L. J., VI. 256. In extenso.

Oct. 16. Message from the Commons with an order for Mr. Daniel Cawdrey, to be a member of the assembly of divines in the place of Dr. Harris. L. J., VI. 257. In extenso.

Oct. 16. Draft order for the committee of Lords and Commons to enforce the payment of arrears of money assessed for the great affairs of the kingdom, by distress and imprisonment. L. J., VI. 257. In extenso.

Oct. 16. Draft ordinance for the repayment of all such sums of money as are or shall be lent by any person or persons for the speedy bringing of our brethren of Scotland into this realm for our assistance in this present war. L. J., VI. 257. In extenso.

Oct. 16. Petition of Edward Lord Howard, praying to have the wardship of his brother-in-law, Lord Boteler, an idiot. L. J., VI. 259. In extenso.

Oct. 17. Message from the Commons, with an order for appointment of a committee to advise with the Lord General for the speedy advancing of the armies. L. J., VI. 260. In extenso.

Oct. 17. Petition of the Mayor and commonalty and citizens of the city of London, governors of Christ's Hospital, and Anne Hawes, widow; upon a former petition against Nicholas Hawes, an order was made that he should sue out his livery; this he has now done, and petitioners therefore pray that their former petition may be dismissed the House, that so they may be at liberty to proceed at law for their further relief. L. J., VI. 260. In extenso.

Oct. 17. Draft orders of the Commons for invalidating the Great Seal of England, and all acts done by and under it, since it was taken away from the Parliament. C. J., III. 278.

Oct. 18. Draft order that 1,500*l.* belonging to the governors of Sutton Hospital, now lying idle in an iron chest in the custody of John Clarke, and a further sum of 500*l.* in his hands also belonging to the hospital, should be employed for the service of the Commonwealth in the maintenance of the garrison of Gloucester, to be repaid upon the public faith of the kingdom. Noted, Committed and considered of, but nothing done there n. L. J., VI. 261. On the 30th the committee reported that there were not enough governors of the hospital in town to consent to the taking of the 2,000*l.*, and that the Hospital was in arrears and would be dissolved if the money were taken, upon which the matter was dropped. L. J., VI. 283.

Oct. 18. Petition of divers officers and soldiers of several regiments under the command of the Right Hon. Henry Earl of Stamford, General of the western forces; petitioners have faithfully served Parliament for fourteen months, and have for the last five months been on hard service in the city of Exeter, and have received no pay for that time, notwithstanding the promises of the deputy lieutenants of the town and county; they have endured a siege of four months, and when the city was rendered, refused the offers of the enemy who promised them payment of all their arrears and great preferment if they would take service with them: petitioners could not even obtain a loan from the citizens of Exeter to bring them up to London, and might have begged or starved by the way if it had not been for the assistance of the Earl of Stamford; pray for payment of their arrears to encourage them in their resolutions of sacrificing their dearest blood for their country. L. J., VI. 262.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Lieutenant Colonel Freeman and others: petitioners after receiving many wounds were taken prisoners at the defeat at Stratton, where they lost money, horses, and apparel, and though very weak, were compelled to march on foot to Truro, and were there long kept close prisoners in a lamentable condition, till at last some by escape and some by exchange got to Barnstaple, where they did good service, until they were obliged to depart on the treacherous surrender of the town by the inhabitants; they have served for six months without receiving any pay, are now extremely in want, and pray for speedy payment of their arrears.

2. Certificate from officers employed in the West of England, that when the unfortunate city of Exeter was besieged, the mayor and deputy lieutenants promised them and their soldiers payment of the arrears due to them, and upon some hot assaults of the enemy, a gratuity of 100*l.* per regiment, but that they were obliged to leave the town without receiving one penny.

Oct. 18. Draft order for the trained bands of Middlesex, &c., to march where the Lord General shall direct. L. J., VI. 262. In extenso.

Oct. 17. Baron Trevor's answer to the impeachment of the Commons concerning ship money. L. J., VI. 262. In extenso.

Oct. 18. Petition of Sir Thomas Trevor, one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer, acknowledging his error of judgment in the case of ship money, and submitting himself to the favourable consideration of the House. L. J., VI. 262. In extenso.

Oct. 18. Copy of preceding.

Oct. 18. Petition of John Clayton, recorder of the borough of Leeds, to H. C.; petitioner having represented to the committee for sequestrations that through his services and those of his son, a captain under Lord Fairfax, he had lost all his estate in Yorkshire, and been imprisoned sixteen weeks in Pomfret Castle, and that he could discover a rent of 120*l.* near London, not yet sequestered, belonging to a Yorkshire gentleman in arms with the Earl of Newcastle, desired that half the rent should be given to the State, half to himself; this has been agreed to by the committee after deducting 20*l.* for public charges, and petitioner prays the House to confirm their recommendation. C. J., III. 279.

Oct. 19. Printed book containing a copy of a declaration of the Lords Justices in Ireland of the 19th of Sept. 1643, ratifying and publishing the articles for a cessation with the Irish, also a copy of the articles, and of an instrument touching the manner of payment of 30,800*l.* agreed to be paid to the King by the Irish Roman Catholics. The declaration and articles are given in extenso in Rushworth, III. ii. 548. This "printed book" was delivered to the Lords at a conference on the 18th, and reported to the House this day. L. J., VI. 263.

Oct. 19. Draft order appointing a committee to join with a committee of the Commons to consider the preceding declaration and articles. L. J., VI. 263. In extenso.

Oct. 19. Demand of the Commons for judgment against Baron Trevor. L. J., VI. 264. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Articles of the House of Commons, in the name of themselves and of all the Commons of England, against Sir Thomas Trevor, Knight, one of the Barons of His Majesty's Court of Exchequer, impeaching him for his judgment given in the case of ship money. Trevor was impeached by message from the Commons on the 22nd of Dec. 1640 (L. J., IV. 114), but judgment was not delivered till this day. L. J., VI. 263. The articles are given in extenso in Rushworth. I. iii. 339.

Oct. 19. Petition of inhabitants of the town of Harwich, to the Commons; have lately received Thomas Wood as lecturer and preacher of their town, who informed the House that he was an orthodox divine; yet he inveighs against the Church of England, refuses to bury, baptise, or marry, except after a fashion of his own; has never administered the sacrament, saying that the congregation ought not to receive it together, has confessed himself a separatist; he was never brought up in schools of learning, but was a mere mechanic; he rails against the magistrates of the town, and makes controversies between neighbours; he promised to go away altogether and never did so, and calls two Anabaptist preachers, a tailor and a sailor, children of God. C. J., III. 281.

Oct. 20. Petition of Sir Thomas Trevor, Knight, one of the Barons of His Majesty's Court of Exchequer; praying to be released from imprisonment. L. J., VI. 265. In extenso.

Oct. 20. Doughty v. Overman and Hardwick. Writ of error, &c. L. J., VI. 265. (Parchment collection.)

Oct. 20. Draft order appointing a Committee to join with the Committee of the assembly to meet and treat with the divines of Scotland, concerning a form of church government, &c. L. J., VI. 265. In extenso.

Oct. 20. Copy of preceding.

Oct. 20. Draft order for adding Lincolnshire to the ordinance for raising of the twentieth part. L. J., VI. 265. In extenso.

Oct. 20. Petition of Clement Walker, one of the deputy lieutenants and committees for the county of Somerset; petitioner has been summoned by the Lord General to attend a council of war, to justify what he has published in print about the surrender of Bristol by Colonel Nathaniel Fiennes, but being a prisoner in the Tower by their Lordships' order, he is unable to prosecute the matter; prays that on giving security to render himself again, he may have liberty for the present to prepare for the council of war, and till it is over, to lie in his own house near Westminster Hall, for the better seeking of witnesses and despatching of business (the days now growing short), and he desires this the more as he has lost all his estate in the Parliament service, and finds going with a keeper very obchargeable. L. J., VI. 265.

Oct. 21. Petition of Arthur Needham; prays that after the goods in the Black Lodgings, in the Inner Temple, formerly the Lord Keeper Littleton's, intrusted to petitioner by Sergeant Littleton, have been inventoried, they may be left in petitioner's custody. L. J., VI. 265. In extenso.

Oct. 21. Draft order appointing Richard Shute to the Cocket Office in the place of Sir John Wolstenholme. L. J., VI. 266. In extenso.

Oct. 21. Draft order for payment of 50*l.* to Captain Skrimpsire. L. J., VI. 266. In extenso.

Oct. 21. Petition of parishioners of St. Alphage, Cripplegate; the presentation to their parsonage, now void by the death of Mr. Sedgwick, belongs to the Bishop of London, who has promised not to present any one without the approbation of Parliament, and the good liking of petitioners; they pray that the choice may be left to them, and that they may have till the end of the quarter to exercise it, and that meantime the profits of the living may be paid to Mrs. Sedgwick, who is left a widow with five children, petitioners engaging that the place shall be properly filled mean time.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Nehemiah Dodd, minister of God's word in the parish of St. Margaret's, Westminster; on the recommendation of the Speaker of the House of Commons and others, the Bishop of London conferred the parsonage of St. Alphage, Cripplegate, upon petitioner, who went to the parish with letters of recommendation, wishing to make address to the parishioners for their approbation, but not finding them at home, left his letter with Mrs. Lee, wife of one of them; the parishioners have returned no answer, but are petitioners to the House, that they may have the quarter in which to make a free election; prays the House to consider of what consequence this would be to the patron, and to give him leave to proceed legally upon the former recommendation. (Undated.)
2. Letter from Denzil Hollis and others at the Commons House to [the parishioners of St. Alphage, Cripplegate], recommending Nehemiah Dodd for acceptance as their minister. 20 Oct. 1643.

Oct. 23. Further articles of impeachment by the Commons assembled in Parliament against William Laud, Archbishop of Canterbury, of high treason, and divers high crimes and misdemeanors. L. J., VI. 267. In extenso.

Oct. 23. Draft ordinance for the more speedy raising of the monies formerly imposed, and yet unpaid within the city of London and liberties thereof. L. J., VI. 269. In extenso.

Oct. 23. Draft ordinance for the further enlargement of a former ordinance made for the speedy raising of monies, and furnishing one or more magazine or magazines of arms and ammunition, and other necessary charges for and concerning the raising of horse and other military forces within the hamlets of the Tower, the city of Westminster, the borough of Southwark, and other parts of the counties of Middlesex and Surrey, within the forts and lines of communication and parishes adjacent, mentioned in the weekly bill of mortality. L. J., VI. 271. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Amendments to preceding. 7 Oct. 1643. See L. J., VI. 245.

HOUSE OF LORDS.
Calendar
1643.

Oct. 24. Petition of six poor almsmen of Eastham, in the county of Essex, founded by Giles Breame, Esq. In 1640 petitioners' cause was by their Lordships' order referred to Lord Chief Justice Brampton, who made his report thereon; the petition and report still remain in this Hon. House, but can receive no determination, their Lordships having ordered that they will hear no private business. Petitioners pray their Lordships either to give a final hearing to their grievances, or refer the matter to the committee of obstructions. This petition is written on the fly-leaf of a small pamphlet entitled, A Breviate or true relation of the unchristian like dealing of Sir Giles Allington, the Lady Kempe, the Lord Keeper Coventry, Mr. Coniers, of Waltham Stow, in the county of Essex, Councillor at Law, and Mr. Draper, son to the Lady Kempe, in keeping the poor almsmen of Eastham from their right. L. J., VI. 271.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding petition and pamphlet.
2. Petition of the almsmen presented 22 Jan. 1640-1.
3. Printed copy of preceding, with statement of their case.
4. Copy of report of Lord Chief Justice Brampton. 2 August 1641. L. J., VI. 335. In extenso.
5. Printed copy of preceding.
6. Another copy.
7. Petition of the almsmen, praying that their cause may be heard, or referred to the committee of obstructions. This petition is also written on one of the pamphlets mentioned above.
8. Petition of Dame Sarah Kempe, widow. Prays that some convenient day may be appointed for hearing counsel for all sides on the whole matter.

Oct. 24. Petition of Edward White, steward and receiver of the rents of the Right Hon. the Lord Petre, His Majesty's ward, for and on the behalf of his Lordship: Lord Petre was by the Court of Wards committed to the custody of the late Earl of Northampton, who placed him with a Protestant tutor at Oxford, where he is now pursuing his studies, and has never given any assistance against Parliament, nor indeed could do so, being but about 15 or 16 years of age, whilst his estates lying mostly in Essex, have contributed to all payments required by Parliament; notwithstanding this the committee for sequestrations, have sequestered two-thirds of his estate, real and personal, as if he were a papist and delinquent, when he is neither, and intend speedily to sell his goods, cattle, and woods to the ruin of his estate: petitioner prays for justice and consideration. L. J., VI. 271.

Annexed:—

1. A memorial of what has been paid out of Lord Petre's estate, in Essex, towards the service of the King and Parliament, with a statement in support of the petition.

Oct. 24. Petition of William Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, that he may have counsel assigned to him, may have some money out of his estate, and all his books and papers, &c. L. J., VI. 271. In extenso. (Holograph.)

Oct. 24. Petition of the committee of the additional forces by sea for Ireland, to H. C.; praying that means may be taken to force those adventurers who have not yet paid their proportions to do so at once, for petitioners are daily followed and solicited by seamen and others to whom money is due, who complain that they and their families are likely to perish for want of it, and so threaten petitioners that, they are in danger of their lives, both at home and abroad. C. J., III. 287.

Annexed:—

1. A list of the adventurers who have not paid their subscriptions, with the sums due from them.

Oct. 24. Notes of proceedings this day, &c.

Oct. 26. List of persons appointed by the Commons as their committees to go into Scotland. See L. J., VI. 273.

Oct. 26. Petition of the Society and Company of Gun-makers of the city of London. Petitioners are likely to be ruined for want of money owing to them by the State for arms supplied, while great store of foreign arms are imported, many of which break and kill or wound those who use them. Petitioners pray that these foreign arms may be put to the same proof as English, and that petitioners' arrears may be paid them. L. J., VI. 273.

Oct. 26. Petition of Clement Walker, one of the deputy lieutenants and committees for the county of Somerset. Notwithstanding their Lordships' order the lieutenant of the Tower will not accept the bail offered by him unless a day certain is fixed in the bond, whilst he has been moved to another and a worse lodging in the Tower, on purpose, as he believes, to prevent his friends from coming to him. He prays that the terms of their Lordships' order may be carried out, that he may be better able to prosecute his business against Nathaniel Fiennes for the surrender of Bristol. L. J., VI. 273.

Oct. 26. Application for a pass for Mrs. Mary Powell, wife of the schoolmaster of Paul's school, into Berkshire and back, with a manservant, maidservant, a coach and four horses, and a saddle horse. L. J., VI. 273.

Oct. 26. Petition of George Earl of Desmond. Petitioner, in order to pay the assessment for the army within London and 20 miles compass, caused a sufficient proportion of timber to be felled at Osterley Park, but the poor of Brentford and the neighbourhood, under colour of a late ordinance for the cutting of underwood, have carried away most of the timber so felled, and though petitioner has treated for the cutting and sale of more, none will buy unless they can be sure of carrying it away. He prays for an order for protection of his timber, and ten days further time to make payment. L. J., VI. 273. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Order of the Committee of Lords and Commons for advance of money and other necessities for the army; that as Lord Desmond has promised, that if within ten days he cannot pay the assessment his woods shall be felled, no prosecution shall be had against him meantime. 9 Oct. 1643.

Oct. 26. Petition of Richard Butler, servant to Dr. Bennett, assistant in the House of Peers; Dr. Bennett is in Wiltshire and too unwell to attend the House. Petitioner prays that Bennett may be excused from attendance for the present. L. J., VI. 273.

Oct. 26. Draft ordinance for payment of 40,051*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.* to Mr. Turner and others for commodities sent to Ireland. L. J., VI. 272.

Oct. 27. Papers presented at a conference by Sir Henry Vane concerning the affairs of the armies in Ireland, and the affairs in Scotland. These papers were read in the House this day and are given in extenso. L. J., VI. 275-277.

1. Letter from the English Commissioners in Scotland to William Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons, to hasten the propositions and treaty between the two kingdoms, the sending of money for the Scotch army, &c. 15 Oct. 1643.
2. Paper from the committee of estates of the kingdom of Scotland against the cessation of arms with the Irish rebels, and desiring that one of the Commissioners should go to England about it. 11 Oct. 1643.
3. Answer of the English Commissioners that they have determined to send one of their number to England about the cessation. 11 Oct. 1643.
4. Paper from the committee of estates of Scotland, desiring that the Commissioner sent to England should use all diligence in explaining the dangerous state of affairs in Ireland, and the necessities of the Scotch, &c. 13 Oct. 1643.
5. Act of the Commissioners of the general assembly of the Church, directing that the solemn league and covenant, as approved by the Parliament of England, should be sworn and subscribed throughout Scotland. 11 Oct. 1643.
6. Act of the Commissioners of the Convention of Estates of Scotland, approving preceding act and directing that no person should hold any place or employment under Government, who has not taken the covenant. 12 Oct. 1643.
7. Copy of letter from the King to the Council of Scotland, utterly disallowing a proclamation made by them in his name. 6 Sept. 1643. On the same paper is—
8. Copy of letter from the King to the Council of Scotland against the Covenant. 14 Sept. 1643.

Oct. 27. Votes of both Houses concerning the affairs of Ireland and Scotland. L. J., VI. 277. In extenso.

Oct. 27. Copy of the complaint of the Earl of Stamford against Mr. Anthony Nicholls, M.P., employed by command of the Parliament as one of the committees and deputy lieutenants of the counties of Devon and Cornwall. The Earl accuses Nicholls of having marched off with the horse to Bodmin without any authority for so doing, and of having delayed there, and taken the officers to breakfast at his mother's house, when the Earl had sent for the horse, and was actually engaged with the enemy at Stratton, the defeat at which place was owing to this conduct of Nicholls and to the treachery of Major-General Chudleigh, whose order Nicholls produced for removing the horse. (Two papers.) L. J., VI., 278.

Oct. 27. Petition of Clement Walker, one of the deputy lieutenants and committees for the county of Somerset; the lieutenant of the Tower still refuses petitioner's bail, as yesterday's order was worded in the same way as the preceding order; petitioner therefore prays that he may be bound only to render himself at the bar of the House. L. J., VI. 278.

Oct. 27. Petition of Steven Spratt. Has been seven weeks close prisoner in Newgate in misery and want, for contempt of the House in refusing to answer their Lordships' question. He was ignorant that to refuse to answer was a contempt; is now heartily sorry and ready to answer any question. L. J., VI. 278.

Oct. 27. Draft ordinance for pressing 3,000 soldiers in Lancashire. L. J., VI. 279. In extenso.

Oct. 27. Two drafts of an ordinance for Isaac Pennington, Lord Mayor of London, to execute the office of Lieutenant of the Tower. L. J., VI. 279. In extenso.

Oct. 27. Notes of proceedings this day.

Oct. 28. Petition of William Lord Archbishop of Canterbury; that Mr. Hales may be assigned him as counsel, in addition to those already named. L. J., VI. 282. In Dell's handwriting, signed by the Archbishop.

Oct. 28. Answer of Isaac Pennington, Lord Mayor, and Lieutenant of the Tower, to the complaint of Clement Walker. Walker refuses to execute a bond to render himself again in such terms as counsel advise, but the writer submits to their Lordships' pleasure. L. J., VI. 282. In extenso.

Oct. 28. Petition of Henry, Bishop of Chichester, that the sequestration of his estates may be stayed. L. J., VI. 283. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Commons for sequestration of the Bishop's estates. 27 June 1643.

Oct. 30. Petition of the Clotworthies of the kindred of Robert Gray, deceased; for relief against John Batty, Richard Hunt, and Mary Gray, in the administration of the estate of the late Robert Gray, amounting to about 50,000*l.* The referees have made their report and sent in the depositions of witnesses in the cause, and petitioners pray that a day may be appointed for the hearing, and that all proceedings elsewhere concerning the estate may be meantime stayed. See L. J., VI. 283.

Annexed:—

1. Report of the referees. 12 Sept. 1643. With interrogatories to witnesses in the cause, and their depositions in answer.

2. Statement of Sir Henry Martin respecting the estate of Robert Gray, deceased.

3. Petition of Ellin Gray, spinster, in the behalf of herself and her sisters and brothers. An earlier petition relating to the same matter. (Undated.)

4. Petition of Joyce Powell, alias Clotworthy and others, the kindred of the late Robert Gray. Also an earlier petition relating to the same matter. (Undated.)

Oct. 30. Remonstrance of Henry Earl of Stamford (Stamford) to the Lords in Parliament, concerning his condition in his employments in the late wars. Has been employed as General of the Western forces for eleven months, and during that time received nothing but five weeks' pay for one troop of horse, while his house and estates have been plundered. Prays for payment of arrears, and that some malignant's house that is ready furnished may be allotted to him for his family. L. J., VI. 284. In extenso.

Oct. 30. Draft order for Sir Peter Killegrew to attend the French Ambassador, Prince d'Harcourt, from Oxford to London. L. J., VI. 284. In extenso.

Oct. 31. Petition of William, Archbishop of Canterbury; praying that it may be declared which of the articles of impeachment against him are intended to be charges of crimes and misdemeanors only, and which of treason; and that he may have further time to put in his answer. L. J., VI. 285. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order for the Archbishop to answer, &c. 24 Oct. 1643. L. J., VI. 272.

Oct. 31. Petition of Thomas Jenyns. Prays that if Sir Thomas Dawes persists in his contempt in neglecting to deliver in certain bonds to the clerk of the Parliament, in compliance with their Lordships' orders, a decree may pass for the cancelling of the said bonds. L. J., VI. 284.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order in the cause. 5 August 1643. L. J., VI. 172.

2. Copy of warrant for the attachment of Sir Thomas Dawes. 14 Aug. 1643. L. J., VI. 179.

Oct. 31. Answer and petition of John Limbry, Arnold Brames, and John Cradock, merchants, to a petition preferred before their Lordships by John Langham, alderman of London, and others. Petitioners have already defended three suits at law in which Langham and the others were nonsuited, and one suit is now by consent to be tried in the King's Bench; they therefore pray that the matter may be left to be decided at law. L. J., VI. 285.

Annexed:—

1. Order upon Langham's petition for the matter to be referred to merchants, unless Limbry show cause to the contrary. 18 Oct. 1643. L. J., VI. 262.

Oct. 31. Votes of both Houses for Alderman Kenrick to be one of the committees to reside in the north, &c. L. J., VI. 286. In extenso.

[Nov. 2.] Draft declaration of the Lords and Commons against the Articles of Cessation with the Irish rebels; in their declarations of the 19th and 25th of July and 30th of Sept., they have shown the wicked attempts to set up popery in Ireland, and now on the occasion of this cessation think right to express their sense of the heinousness of this attempt; to this end they publish the King's letter of the 11th of June 1643 to the Lords Justices, empowering Commissioners to treat with the papists of Ireland, and a copy of the Articles of Cessation, with some observations thereon, and the votes of the two Houses, that Parliament may be seen to be guiltless of leaving unrevenged the blood of so many thousand innocent British, both men, women, and children; from the Articles it will be seen that the deputies from the bloody rebels are called Commissioners from His Majesty's Roman Catholic subjects; what an insult this is to the English nation, to the surviving relatives of the murdered protestants; what an encouragement to the rebels throughout Ireland; the articles provide that these Roman Catholic subjects shall not be disturbed in any province except Ulster. Are the protestants to traffic with them for their own goods, or stand still and starve whilst murderers feed on the fruit of their labours? Whilst to make it still more evident that the destruction of all the protestants was determined on, the rebels being privy to the day fixed for the cessation took nearly twenty castles just before it commenced, and in the quarters assigned to the betrayed protestant armies there is not corn enough for ten days for the army of Leinster, and not one cow amongst many hundred soldiers, whilst the rebels have whole counties well stocked with corn and cattle for present and future use; while if the war had been prosecuted and the present harvest destroyed, as proposed by Lord Lisle and Sir Richard Greenfield, the rebels might have been destroyed, whereas now under the terms of the cessation they will be able to reap two harvests; if to this it be answered, that they are to pay 30,800*l.* in money and beeves, what is that to the lives of the murdered, or to the money of which they have robbed the protestants, what are 5,000 cows to those they have carried off, specially at the present increased price, and when they are to be paid at times when they will most of them prove useless; while lest any protestant should resist these articles in defence of their religion the Marquis actually agrees to assist the rebels in preventing their so doing. It is shown that the malignant party in Ireland is in combination with the malignants in England, for the Marquis of Ormonde in the name of His Majesty, and Lord Muskerry in the name of the rebels, admits free trade with all ships coming with a pass from His Majesty. What measure then might they expect who should come even with provisions from any other authority? When further, the Marquis undertakes not to molest any ship of the rebels bringing arms, ammunition, or merchandize to Ireland. How different was His Majesty's conduct when treating with his protestant subjects in England: then he would not proceed until all the forts, magazines, and ships were entrusted to him. Let it be remembered also how he formerly expressed compassion for the protestants in Ireland, and horror at the barbarous outrages of the rebels; is it imaginable that after all those expressions rebels and papists should be taken into a league offensive and defensive, that traitors and murderers should be set at liberty, while Lord Justice Parsons and others, who have vigorously resisted the rebellion, are imprisoned upon the accusation of men, such as Lord Wilmot, Lord Dillon, and others, who are mere Irish or degenerate English; is it consistent with the King's professions that provisions and money intended for the protestants in Ireland should be converted to his own use, that his assent should be refused to bills for their benefit, that in his letter of the 11th of June he should call the Irish odious rebels, but now Roman Catholic subjects, and promise to do to them as shall be just and honourable. Is this cessation just to the spoiled protestants or to the English adventurers? Is it honourable to the King or the English nation? Finally, that this black work of darkness might be all of a piece, after His Majesty had cut off all human help from the protestants in Ireland, lest God should be entreated to help them he made a proclamation at Oxford, on the 5th of October 1643, that the day set apart by petition of both Houses and consent of His Majesty for prayer to be made for the sufferers should be no longer observed, as if prayer had too long been offered on behalf of the distressed protestants, or that this cessation would give them remedy for the past and provision for the future.

There is nothing to show that this declaration was agreed to; it was probably drawn up by the joint committee appointed to consider of the cessation on the 19th October, when the printed book and declaration of the whole business was read. In the preceding letter, however, to the soldiers in Ulster, it is said that Parliament has sent a copy of the Articles of Cessation, "together with what sense the two Houses of Parliament hath of it." This may refer to the present paper. See L. J., VI. 263, 293, and supra. 19 Oct. 1643.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of the King's letter of 11 June 1643, mentioned in preceding.

Nov. 4. Draft ordinance for the association of the counties of Hampshire, Sussex, Surrey, and Kent. L. J., VI. 294. In extenso.

Nov. 7. Petition of Francis Mundy and Anne his wife; petitioners obtained a judgment in the Common Pleas against Sir John Chapman, late sheriff of Surrey, for the escape of William Hall, who was in his custody in execution for 180*l.*, Sir John brought a writ of error in the King's Bench, where, after long debate, the judgment of the Common Pleas was confirmed, and now he has brought another writ before their Lordships only for delay: petitioners pray that a short day may be given him to assign errors. L. J., VI. 298.

Nov. 7. Draft order for the vintners to pay the arrears of the excise due from them. L. J., VI. 298. In extenso.

Nov. 7. Two drafts of the ordinance for John Pym the elder to be lieutenant of the ordinance. L. J., VI. 298. In extenso.

Nov. 7. Notes of various proceedings this day.

Nov. 8. List of inhabitants of the hundred of Edmon-ton, desiring to be added to the committees for Hertfordshire. L. J., VI. 298.

Nov. 8. Draft order for payment of 1,048*l.* 15*s.* 2*d.* to Lyon Beecher for wheat, peas, and butter for Ireland. L. J., VI. 299. In extenso.

Nov. 8. Draft order for sequestering rents in London belonging to Thomas Rowe, porter of the Old Castle in the Isle of Jersey, and others. L. J., VI. 299. In extenso.

Nov. 8. Draft ordinance for Mr. Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons to be Master of the Rolls, and to have the custody of the house or hospital of the converts situate in Chancery Lane, being from ancient time annexed to the office as a habitation for the Master of the Rolls. L. J., VI. 299. In extenso.

Nov. 8. Application from George Kirke, gentleman of His Majesty's robes, for a pass for John Daintre, a groom in the office, to go to Oxford with four dozen of gloves, which are much wanted by His Majesty, and four yards of "taby," two ells and a quarter of taffety, to be a tennis suit, and two pairs of garters and roses, with silk buttons and other necessaries for making up the suit. Noted, "Exped." The Minute Book of this date shows that the pass was granted, though there is no mention of it in the Journal.

Annexed:—

1. Similar application for a pass for John Reeve to go to Oxford with 27 pair of silk hose, 3 silk waistcoats and 6 pair of laced boot-hose for the use of the King and Queen's Majesty. (Undated.)

Nov. 10. Application for a pass for Richard Worthinton, a Dutchman, servant to the Spanish ambassador, to go to Flanders. L. J., VI. 301.

Nov. 10. Draft ordinance declaring void all acts done under the Great Seal of England since the 22nd of May 1642, for putting the new Great Seal into use, and appointing commissioners for the purpose. L. J., VI. 301. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Paper of amendments. See L. J., VI. 288.

Nov. 10. Two printed copies of preceding ordinance.

Nov. 11. Application for a pass for Sir Dudley Carleton, clerk of His Majesty's Privy Council, to go to His Majesty and the council at Oxford to attend the duties of his place and to return. L. J., VI. 302.

Nov. 13. Desire of Steven Spratt, to some congregation not named, for their prayers that God would give him patience and move the hearts of the Lords to do him justice.

Annexed:—

1. Anonymous letter to Lord Howard: I wish your Lordship would release Mr. Spratt, for there is great heart-burning in the city about his imprisonment, for he has done the State much service; I say again and again if you love yourself then release him, I would have put my hand to this letter if I did not fear to be laid in the same place as he is. Farewell.

Spratt was in Newgate for writing a scandalous letter to Lord Howard of Escrick. See L. J., VI. 193, &c.

Nov. 13. Answer of Wm. Archbishop of Canterbury to the further articles of impeachment brought against him, pleading Not Guilty. L. J., VI. 303. In extenso.

Nov. 13. Draft order for repayment to the Commissioners of Excise of 23,000*l.* advanced by them for the Lord General's army. L. J., VI. 304. In extenso.

Nov. 15. Petition of Lionel Earl of Middlesex, to be heard against the assessment of his estate. L. J., VI. 305. In extenso.

Nov. 15. Petition of John Parker, John Partridge, and Thomas Harper, stationers; that an action brought against them by Lawrence Norcott may be stayed, and that he may be ordered to take a press and letters from Stationers' Hall, about which there has been litigation for many years. L. J., VI. 305. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Answer and petition of Lawrence Norcott, that he may have leave to carry the matter to trial, which is fixed for this week, and if he gain a verdict he will stay execution till their Lordships' pleasure.

Nov. 15. Two copies of the answer of Parliament to the French Ambassador's paper for promoting peace between the King and Parliament. L. J., VI. 305. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Translation of the French ambassador's paper. The original is given in extenso, L. J., VI. 302. 11 Nov. 1643.

Nov. 15. Draft ordinance for raising money for defence of Plymouth, &c. L. J., VI. 305. In extenso.

Nov. 18. Petition of the six poor almsmen of Eastham. Their Lordships were pleased to appoint the 13th of this instant November for the hearing of petitioners' cause, but the whole of that day was taken up with the Archbishop of Canterbury's business. Petitioners therefore pray that another day certain may be appointed. L. J., VI. 306.

Annexed:—

1. Particulars of the form of order desired by petitioners. (Printed.)

Nov. 20. Petition of Alice Wright, widow of Captain Gerrard Wright. Prays that an extent sued out of Chancery by her late husband, who was killed at the siege of Reading, may be assigned to her for the relief of herself and three small children. L. J., VI. 307. In extenso.

Nov. 20. Draft ordinance for the preservation and keeping together for public use such books, evidences, records, and writings sequestered, taken by distress, or otherwise, as are fit to be so preserved. L. J., VI. 307. In extenso.

Nov. 20. Printed copy of preceding.

Nov. 21. Letter from the Earl of Warwick in the Downs, to the Committee for the safety of the kingdom. Recommends to their favourable consideration a petition of some sea captains. Their petition speaks their suit, and is no more than land commanders have obtained.

The petition referred to is no doubt that of the sea officers of the 30th instant, praying that they may have some additional pay for service on land. See L. J., VI. 317.

Nov. 22. Petition of the Clotworthies, of the kindred of Robert Gray, deceased. Their cause against Mary Gray, John Batty, Symon Middleton, and others, about the administration of the estate of the late Robert Gray was appointed to be heard on the 16th instant, on which day, however, their Lordships did not sit. They pray that an early day may be appointed for hearing, and that all monies in the hands of Batty and certain debtors to the estate may meantime be paid into court. L. J., VI. 308.

Annexed:—

1. Schedule of debtors to Robert Gray, deceased.

Nov. 22. Draft order upon preceding petition, appointing the cause to be heard on the 27th instant. L. J., VI. 308.

Nov. 22. Petition of Sir Thomas Dawes. Thomas Jenyns having charged petitioner with absenting himself, in order to avoid the execution of the orders of the House against him, their Lordships, on 31st Oct. last, ordered him to appear personally before them on the 20th instant, but petitioner dares not go abroad, for some of his creditors, though they have got all his lands, still threaten his person with arrest. He prays to be allowed to appear by counsel. L. J., VI. 309.

Annexed:—

1. Order of 31st Oct., mentioned in preceding. L. J., VI. 284.

Nov. 22. Draft order upon preceding petition, for Dawes to be heard by counsel on Saturday next. L. J., VI. 309.

Nov. 22. Petition of Andrew Booth. Pursuant to their Lordships' order of the 31st of October last, petitioner is ready to bring in the deeds in his possession mentioned in the schedule belonging to Sir Philibert Vernatti, deceased. These deeds were, however, deposited with petitioner as security for a debt, and he prays that Mr. Jenyns may be ordered to pay him the debt before he delivers up the deeds.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of 31 Oct. 1643 in the cause between Jenyns and Dawes.

2. Schedule of deeds mentioned in petition.

Nov. 27. Further remonstrance and humble desire of Henry Earl of Stamford [Stamford], as touching his former and present condition, since his return from the West. Has been long a suitor on behalf of himself, his officers, and soldiers, who have served in the West. A Committee has been nominated in the Commons to examine his charge against Mr. Nicholls, an undoubted comploter with young Chudleigh at Stratton, where the Earl's army was betrayed. As many of his witnesses are appointed to serve in the West, the Earl desires that a message may be sent to the Commons to nominate a joint Committee to take their depositions before they go, and to pass an ordinance for the present relief of the soldiers. The Earl will esteem himself very unhappy if, on account of sinister information, he has not influence enough to obtain consideration and pay, for himself and his men, after he has maintained and recruited them at his own charge for so many months. See L. J., VI. 314.

Nov. 27. Petition of William Langhorne, merchant. About the 19th of August 1642 petitioner was committed to the custody of the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod for an alleged contempt in not performing an order of the House of the 17 Dec. 1641 in a matter in variance between the Earl of Warwick and Francis Mazzola, of Genoa; nothing has been objected against petitioner all this time, and he therefore prays that he may be set at liberty, and he will be ready to appear upon notice. Nov. 29. Articles of the treaty agreed upon betwixt the Commissioners of both Houses of the Parliament of England, having power and commission from the said honourable Houses, and the Commissioners of the convention of the estates of the kingdom of Scotland, authorised by the Committee of the said estates concerning the Solemn League and Covenant, and the assistance demanded in pursuance of the ends expressed in the same.

This document is the original treaty signed by the Commissioners on both sides, and is dated this day, though the terms had been agreed upon some time before, the Covenant having been taken by the English Parliament on the 25th of September, and a proclamation for raising troops in Scotland for the assistance of the English Parliament having been issued on the 18th of August. These articles are given in extenso L. J., VI. 364.

Annexed:—

1. Draft of preceding. 25 Aug. 1643.
2. Heads of same.
3. Amendments to same.
4. Differences betwixt the articles of treaty signed by the Commissioners of both Houses of Parliament of England, and the Commissioners of the estates of the kingdom of Scotland, concerning the covenant and assistance, as they were agreed on before by both Houses of Parliament.

Nov. 30. Draft ordinance for the Commissioners of Excise to repay themselves 2,000*l.* advanced by them towards the 5,000*l.* for Sir Wm. Waller. L. J., VI. 318. In extenso.

Nov. 30. Letter from Sir Wm. Armyne, and the rest of the English Commissioners at Edinburgh, to Wm. Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons; are sensible of the difficulties which press upon Parliament, yet are desirous of calling the special attention of the House to the affairs of Ireland, and of justifying the course they have themselves pursued with regard thereto. The commanders of the Scotch forces in Ireland finding that they got nothing but promises, and seeing their soldiers naked, and their meal almost spent, and fearing to be left destitute if the Scotch were engaged in operations in England, determined to send a deputation to Scotland to represent their case. The writers thinking, that the disbanding of the Scotch army in Ireland would be attended with the most dangerous consequences, felt themselves bound to do all in their power to prevent it until they received full instructions from Parliament, which they daily expect; whilst the readiness of the commanders in Ireland for the service, if only maintenance were provided for them, has induced the writers to agree to their propositions for money, meal, and clothes, and as Scotland cannot provide the money and clothes, they desire that any provision already made for Ireland may be speedily despatched to them.

This letter, with a letter from the Scotch commanders in Ulster and other papers on the subject of their wants, was read in the House of Commons on the 12 Dec. 1643. See C. J., III. 338.

[Nov. 30.] Two copies of a paper taken upon Sir Henry Anderson at Leicester, being pretended propositions for an accommodation between the King and Parliament. The principal terms of these propositions are that the armies should be disbanded, the papists disarmed and confined to their habitations, and the laws against them put in strict execution; no papists to be about the Queen except foreigners, and they to take oaths to be prescribed by Parliament; the government of the church to be settled by learned divines commissioned by the King; the forts, navy, militia, &c. to be put into the King's hands; the persons to be appointed to commands and the great officers of the kingdom for the first five years to be such as Parliament shall approve; the King to take an oath every session that he will exercise his power legally; Parliament to be adjourned to Feb.; a general pardon to be issued, and all ordinances of Parliament made without the King's consent to be reviewed by a committee, and all record of those deemed dangerous to be destroyed.

Sir Henry Anderson confesses that the latter part of these propositions was written by him.

These propositions should be sent to the Lord General; if he agrees to them, as the writer supposes he will, peace will be restored; if he refuse all men will join with the King in reducing the opposers to obedience, for the cause of the war will be removed; for Parliament said they took up arms for defence of the protestant religion, the privileges of Parliament, and the liberty of the subject, but if the fulfilment of the King's promises be secured, and a general pardon granted, except to those who have been notoriously active against His Majesty, their reasons are gone. The chief difficulties are first, the oath to maintain the Earl of Essex, but if he should follow the war when all the preceding propositions are granted, men might justly forsake him, and secondly, the oath of the covenant, but an answer may easily be given to that, as it was taken only to the maintaining of the true protestant religion, as the person taking it should conceive, and to the leaving the papists to the law.

This paper was presented to the House by the Lord General as scandalous and much to his dishonour, particulars of it having been divulged abroad, whilst the paper itself was kept secret, whereupon an ordinance was proposed that all scandalous papers should either be burnt or speedily examined. L. J., VI. 318.

Dec. 22. Petition of Lady Elizabeth Hatton. Thomas Johnson, a carpenter, in Shoe Lane, has begun to erect a tenement in the field at the north-east corner of Hatton House Garden, upon a new foundation, which will not only be a great annoyance to petitioner, but is not a fitting place for an honest habitation, but rather to receive and harbour ill-disposed persons, and is intended for an alehouse; she prays that the building may be stayed and Johnson ordered to pluck down what he has already erected.

Dec. 23. Order upon preceding, for stay of the building till the House be further informed in the matter. L. J., VI. 350.

Dec. 22. Petition of divers poor victuallers, and others, inhabitants within the county of Middlesex; upon petition to the Commons petitioners obtained an order that an allowance should be made to them for billeting the soldiers of Sir Wm. Waller; most of petitioners are so poor, that without present relief, they and their families are like to perish, they therefore pray their Lordships to confirm the order for their relief. See L. Dec. 22. Votes of the Commons for providing clothes, meal, and money for the Scotch forces in Ireland. C. J., III. 350.

Annexed:—

1. Propositions agreed upon between the Commissioners of England, and the committee of the convention of estates of Scotland, that the accounts of the Scotch army in Ireland should be made up, and clothes, meal, and money provided for them, that before the 1st of February 50,000*l.* should be paid at Carrickfergus for their arrears, that there should be one commander of all the British forces in Ireland, that if their arrears are not paid the forces should be transported into England, and maintained as the other Scotch forces there; that a supply of arms should be sent to Carrickfergus, and provision made for their maintenance, as long as they remain in the service of Parliament. 28 Nov. 1643. Some of these propositions are noted in the margin as having been resolved on, and are embodied in the preceding paper.

Dec. 23. Petition of John Brett and other poor people, on behalf of the Earl of Warwick and themselves. Pray that William Langhorne, now in the custody of the gentleman usher for contempt, may not be discharged until he has paid the damages agreed upon between him and petitioners, and that the Earl of Warwick may be informed of his arrest before he is discharged. Dec. 23. Petition of John Wheeler; was employed by the committee for the safety of the county of Surrey, to impress the servant of Thomas Hunt, and for obedience to the committee was through misinformation imprisoned by their Lordships' order, but upon his humble petition order has since been made for his enlargement. Is notwithstanding this still detained in custody for not paying fees to the amount of 1*l.* and upwards, a sum altogether impossible for so poor a man to discharge. Prays to be relieved from the fees. L. J., VI. 351.

Annexed:—

1. Another petition of same, praying for his discharge.

2. Letter from the committee for the county of Surrey to the House of Peers; the constable of Walton-on-Thames, acted by direction of the committee in pressing Mr. Hunt's man. Hunt was himself imprisoned about last Midsummer for carrying letters to Oxford, and is still under bail for it, the committee therefore desires that the constable may be set at liberty without paying any fees.

Dec. 23. Information of Henry Brodnax and John Gwinne against Stephen Spratt, for speaking scandalous words against Lord Howard of Escrick and the Parliament. L. J., VI. 351.

Annexed:—

1. Receipt for 3*l.* 1*s.* by Spratt for his time and charges for seizing the trunks of Lady Banbury, now owned by Lord Howard. 17 Aug. 1643.

2. Letter from Spratt, in Newgate, to Lady Diana Newport. Believes that her Ladyship had a great hand in his imprisonment. If the writer had prosecuted her for saying she wished God's curse might light on the Parliament, as eagerly as her friend prosecuted him, questions not that she would have seen some alteration before this time. Is confident it lies in her Ladyship's power to release him if she please. 5 Sept. 1643.

3. Letter from Spratt, in Newgate, to Sir John Woollaston. Details his proceedings in seizing Lady Banbury's goods, and prays Sir John to do him the favour to write to his (Sir John's) brother to procure him liberty to go abroad with his keeper. 5 Sept. 1643.

Dec. 23. Letter from the Earl of Stamford [Stamford] to the Lords in Parliament. His necessities with his servants and troopers are now so extreme, after four months' languishing, that unless some immediate care be taken they must either plunder or starve. Were it not for the goodness and charity of his honourable mother-in-law, the Countess of Essex, his wife and eight children might perish. Has served the Parliament faithfully since August 1642, and has endured as much hunger and suffering as any, having been besieged for six months in Plymouth and Exeter. His accounts have been audited, but his entertainment as general is not yet ratified. Prays that his miserable condition may be discovered to the House of Commons, with his earnest desire that there might be allotted to him for his present succour the 20th part of the ensuing estates, the Earl of Arundel's, the Dowager Countess of Rutland's, Lord Newburgh's, and Baron Trevor's. See L. J., VI. 351.

Dec. 23. Petition of Edward Trelawney. The cause in error between petitioner and Thomas Babb has been long depending. He has now nothing left to maintain his wife and children, and beseeches that a day for hearing the cause may be appointed. L. J., VI. 352.

Dec. 23. Draft ordinance concerning the sequestration of the revenues of the King, Queen, and Prince. L. J., VI. 352. In extenso.

Dec. 23. Draft ordinance for the Committee of the militia of the city of London to send the white and yellow regiments and other forces to the assistance of Sir William Waller. L. J., VI. 352. In extenso.

Dec. 23. Draft ordinance for Thomas Twiss, M.A., to be admitted to the rectory of East Horsley, Surrey. L. J., VI. 352. In extenso.

Dec. 23. Draft ordinance for reducing the duty on tobacco. L. J., VI. 352. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of the traders in tobacco inhabiting in the city of London and liberties, and other parts adjacent. They hear that it is intended to put an excise upon tobacco, and pray that before this be done they may be allowed to give reasons to show that it will not produce the result expected, and will be prejudicial to many thousands of persons. (Undated.) Endorsed, Not heard.

Dec. 23. Petition of the Clotworthies, of the kindred of Robert Gray, deceased, without wife or issue, praying that for preserving the estate of the late Robert Gray such debtors to the estate as are willing so to do may pay their debts into some safe hands, and not to any of the parties, till the cause be determined.

Dec. 23. Order in accordance with the prayer of preceding. L. J., VI. 353. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Petition of Simon Middleton and Katherine his wife, administrators of Robert Gray, intestate: that the cause between them and the Clotworthies may be referred to some of the assistants of the House to decide whether the Clotworthies have any title in law or equity, and that the preceding order may be discharged. (Undated.)

Dec. 23. Letter from the Earl of Essex, at St. Alban's, to Wm. Lenthall, Speaker of the House of Commons. Finds that the differences between the Earl of Denbigh and the Committee at Coventry turn upon ordinances, commissions, &c., all of which are at London, and therefore refers the matter to Parliament. L. J., VI. 354. In extenso.

Dec. 23. List of prisoners, arms, and colours, taken by Sir John Meldrum at Gainsborough. C. J., III. 351.

Dec. 25. Order for discharging all officers of courts of record, who have assisted the King against the Parliament. L. J., VI. 354. In extenso.

Dec. 26. Copy of the King's letter to the Lord Mayor and aldermen of London. His Majesty is willing to grant a safe conduct to those persons appointed to present a petition from the city. L. J., VI. 371. In extenso.

Dec. 27. Copy of letter from Lord Digby at Oxford to Sir Henry de Vic, concerning the proceedings of the King's forces, and enclosing copy of the King's proclamation for the Parliament to meet at Oxford upon the occasion of the invasion by the Scots. L. J., VI. 368. In extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of preceding.

2. Printed copy of proclamation. 22 Dec. 1643. Rushworth, Vol. II., Part III. 559. In extenso.

Dec. 27. Letter from Lord Digby to Mr. Curtius, His Majesty's resident at Frankfurt. Duplicate of preceding letter to Sir H. de Vic. L. J., VI. 367.

Dec. 30. Petition of Lieutenant-Colonel David Forreth, executor of David Ramsay, deceased. Prays that his cause against Fabian Phillips may be speedily heard. L. J., VI. 355.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order in the cause. 25 July 1643. L. J., VI. 147.

Dec. 30. Petition of Peter Smart. Prays that his son Ogle, who is imprisoned at Winchester House, may have liberty to go abroad with his keeper. L. J., VI. 355.

Dec. 30. Draft letter from both Houses, to the Lord General to advance his army towards Windsor. L. J., VI. 356. In extenso.

Dec. 30. Petition of Lord Newburgh. Prays leave to represent to their Lordships his sufferings and the condition he is reduced to, by the miseries of these times, before any further charge is laid upon him. He has been compelled to sell his plate, has been deprived of the benefit of his office, and of so much of his estate as abates two thirds of his yearly revenue. Has now no personal estate, but some ordinary and necessary goods, which he is engaged by marriage contract to leave to his wife after his death. His debts are three times the value of his estate, and increase daily, as he is compelled to borrow at interest to defray the ordinary expenses of his family. Notwithstanding this he has ever since the beginning of this Parliament attended at very great charge as an assistant upon their Lordships' House. See L. J., VI. 311.

Dec. 30. Letter from the Earl of Essex at St. Albans, to the Speaker of the House of Lords pro tempore, respecting the return of the Earl of Bedford to the Parliament. (Holograph.) L. J., VI. 356. In extenso.

Dec. 30. Petition of the Levant Company. Pray for license to import currants from the dominions of the Grand Seignior. See L. J., VI. 404, where the petition is set out almost in extenso.

Annexed:—

1. Copy of order of the Commons respecting the importation of currants. 24 Oct. 1643. C. J. III. 284.

[1643.]

Petition of divers of the parishioners of the parish of Austyn's, London; the present fixed maintenance for the ministry of the parish is not competent to maintain an able minister; petitioners therefore pray that the rent of certain houses in the parish belonging to the dean and prebends of Windsor, amounting to about 10l. per annum, may be annexed to their minister's stipend.

Petition of Alexander Baynham; prays that the dispute between him and the master and owners of the ship "John and Thomas," respecting certain goods shipped by petitioner at Genoa, may be referred to merchants by commission under the Great Seal.

Petition of Richard Beringer, to the Earl of Manchester, praying his Lordship to move the House to appoint another day for the hearing of the cause in error between petitioner and Cooke.

Petition of John Berry, of London, merchant; complains of unjust proceedings at law by John Southwood, and prays that, as now no relief can be had in equity, the case may be heard before their Lordships.

Petition of inhabitants of Caddington, in the counties of Hertford and Bedford. The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's were heretofore lords of the manor of the Berry of Caddington, and received all the revenues, while the profits of the vicarage of Caddington were barely 30l. a year. Petitioners have for some years past maintained the present incumbent, an able and industrious minister, out of their own purses, which charge is now so much the more heavy in respect of the free quartering of soldiers and continual payments for the public. Pray that the rents of the manor may be allotted to the vicarage, or that a competent maintenance may be allowed out of the revenues of the prelates, since by the last oath and covenant prelacy is extirpated.

Petition of the vicars choral, Sherborne clerks, lay vicars, and other inferior officers of the church of Chichester, to the Lords and Commons. Having been deprived of the means of subsistence by the ordinance of Parliament sequestering the revenues of cathedral churches, and being incapable of other employment, pray that they may receive from the sequestrators what they formerly received from the Dean and Chapter.

Petition of Vincent de la Barr. Prays that his suit against Richard Chambers, concerning a bill of exchange, may be taken into their Lordships' consideration, or referred to some discreet merchants for settlement.

Petition of John Despaigne, a French minister. Was pastor of the French congregation in the Level of Axholme and Hatfield Chase, and served very painfully for two years, but was, for want of his promised allowance, necessitated to depart from thence, having only received during that time 25l. Prays their Lordships to order that 135l. justly due to him may be paid by such members of the congregation as petitioner shall make choice of, they abating so much from their rents to the participants of the Level.

Petition of the inhabitants of Droxford, to the Hon. Committee for the county of Southampton. Petitioners have suffered much and are greatly impoverished by the late troubles, but have been always ready to testify their affection to the Parliament by the payment of all taxes. Their parish church has fallen into such decay that petitioners cannot with any safety use it for divine service, and they are unable to raise money for the necessary repairs. Pray that 100l. may be granted to them for the purpose out of the Deans' and Chapters' lands.

Petition of the poorer sort of feltmakers. In consequence of the scarcity of foreign wool, petitioners are now compelled to pay half a crown, and the excise, for what they formerly bought for 16d. or 18d., and their necessities are so great that they are often times forced to sell hats to the haberdashers for a less sum than the wool cost. They therefore pray that the excise may be taken off hats and felt.

Petition of James Gray, to the Earl of Manchester. Prays leave to proceed at law against John Digbie for the recovery of a debt, notwithstanding the Earl has granted him a protection.

Petition of Susan Hadnett. About two years and a half since petitioner extended certain lands in Middlesex and Lincolnshire belonging to Dame Elizabeth Gorges for 360l. forfeited for non-payment of an annuity. Lady Gorges has since died, leaving the lands to the present Countess of Lincoln, after payment of her debts. By the neglect of the petitioner's attorney the extent was lately quashed in the Court of King's Bench, and petitioner has since re-extended the lands, and has possession by virtue of such re-extent. Is informed that the Earl of Lincoln is endeavouring to obtain punishment against her and the Sheriff of Lincoln for this re-extent, pretending the lands to belong to his now lady, and that the proceeding is therefore a breach of privilege. Petitioner prays that she may be heard before either she, or the Sheriff, is troubled concerning the business.

Petition of Edward Hudson, clerk; has been for seven years past illegally kept out of the living of Goodmanham, Yorkshire, properly in the gift of Katherine Carlisle and her executor, by proceedings in law and equity, at the suit of Richard Potter, who is now in possession; prays for redress.

Certificate of Lawrence Norcott touching proceedings in the Court of Requests in a cause between Ann Adlington and Jane Philpot.

Petition of Francis Sadler, Tempest Miller, and John Colkowne, and of Humphrey Galbraith, on the behalf of himself and Lord Folliot, Sir Robert King, Sir Robert Forth, Sir Maurice Eustace, and others, in Ireland, the creditors of the said Francis Sadler; Sadler was a great dealer in large sums of money between England and Ireland, and at the time of the rebellion was and still is largely indebted to petitioners, but knowing the difficulty of raising money in such distracted times, they did not press him for payment; meantime Edward Topp, to whom Sadler owed 500*l.*, combined with Toby Rose, Anthony Boyse, and Thomas Garner, secretly to take out a commission of bankruptcy against Sadler at York, though he always kept church and markets at Bristol, Taunton, and Bridgewater, and Topp and the others further evaded all petitioner's efforts to join in the commission; petitioners pray that, as from the distractions of the times they cannot have any remedy elsewhere, their Lordships would call Topp and the others before them, that they may receive the punishment they deserve, and the petitioners have equitable relief.

Duplicate of preceding.

Application for a pass for Don Antonio Sarmierito, of the Council of War and Treasury of the King of Spain, who wishes to go from Flanders to Spain, and, being sick, desires to come to England and pass by land from Dover to Falmouth with his train, carriages, and all necessaries fitting for a person of his quality.

Petition of the copyholders of the manor of Thoydon Bois, Essex, to the Earl of Manchester. The manor is within the perambulation of the forest of Waltham, and petitioners have by the custom of the manor liberty to take estovers in the woods for their necessary fuel. They complain of the waste made by Edward Eldrington, Esq., the lord of the manor, in the cutting down of great quantities of trees, whereby petitioners are deprived of their common of estovers, and His Majesty is disinherited of his free liberty which he ought to have, according to the forest laws, for his deer and venison. Pray his Lordship to move the House of Lords to take some course to stay this great waste.

Petition of the gentleman porter and the forty warders of the Tower of London, to H. C.; at Midsummer, 1643, arrears of pay at 14 pence per diem a piece were owing to them for three whole years and a quarter, within the times of Sir William Balfour and Sir John Conyers, late Lieutenants of the Tower; they have during these troublesome times been tried by extraordinary service, and pray for payment of their arrears.

Petition of William Ware, that his case against Thomas and John Mitchell respecting a mortgage of lands near Chippenham may be referred to any two of the judges.

OXFORD.—OXFORD UNIVERSITY HUNDRED.

The first page of this return is as follows:—

The Protestation by the House of Comons commended to the Vni^{er}sitie of Oxford was vpon y^e 18th Februarie 1641, taken with such Marginall Notes and Interp^ttations as are vnderwritten by the Heads of Houses or their Deputies whose names are subscribed.

I, A. B., doe in the presence of Almighty God promise, vow, and protest ^A to mainetaine and defend so farre as lawfullie I may ^B with my life, power, and estate, the true reformed Protestant Religion, exp^{re}ssed in the Doctrine of the Church of England against all Poperie and Popish Innovations within this Realme contrarie to the same Doctrine and according to the dutie of my Allegiance his Ma^{ties}
Royall person, hono^r, and estate. ^C As also the Power and Privileges of Parliament, The lawfull ^D rights and Liberties of the subiect^E, and every person that maketh this Protestation in whatsoever hee shall doe in the lawfull pursueance of y^e same. And to my power and as farre as lawfullie I may, ^F I will oppose, and by all good waies and meanes indeavo^r to bring to condigne punishment, all such as ^G shall, either by force, Practise, Counsells, Plotts, Conspiracies, or otherwise do anie thing to the contrarie of anie thing in this p^{re}sent Protes-tation contained. And further that I shall in all Just and ho-no^rable waies endeavo^r to p^{re}-

A So farre as warran-table I may, and with subordination to the Oaths of Su-premacie and Allegiance.
B And shall bee called therevnto by lawfull
Authoritie.
C Against whom I verilie believe no Subiect of this Kingdome may with safe conscience take vp Armes either offensive or defensive.
D And common.
E So farre as the said Privilege, Rights, and Liberties shall bee made knowne and evidenced vnto
Mee to bee such.
F And shall bee called therevnto by lawfull authority.
G His Ma^{ties} Subiects.

serve y^e Vnion and Peace betweene the three Kingdomes of England, Scotland, and Ireland: And neither for hope, feare, nor other respect, relinquish this promise, vow, and Protestation.

Dr. Tolson, Pro vice chancello^r and Provost of Oriell Col.

Dr. Fell, Deane of Christ-Church.

Dr. Pinke, Warden of New College.

Dr. Mansell, Principall of Jesus College.

Dr. Baily, P^rsident of St. John's College.

Dr. Sheldon, Warden of All Soules College.

Dr. Potter, Provost of Queene's College.

Mr. Richardson, Vice-Principall of Brazen-nose College.

The Protestation by the House of Commons commended to the Vniv^rsitie was vpon the same day taken according to the printed Copie without the above-mentioned notes by such Heads of houses or their Deputies whose names are vnderwritten, viz^t :

Dr. Wilkinson, Principall of Magdalen hall.

Dr. Hood, Rector of Lincolne College.

Mr. Rogers, Principall of New Inne hall.

Mr. Trimmell, Vicegerent of Ballioll College.

Mr. Boles, Vicegerent of Pembroke College.

Mr. Corbett, Subwarden of Merton College.

Mr. Chapman, Vice-Principall of Alban hall.

Dr. Airey, Principall of Edmund hall.

Mr. Proctor, Sub-Rector of Exeter College.

In p^ritiā mei Johis French Notarij p^ublici et Registrarij vniuersitatis Oxon.

Then follow lists of the members of the several colleges, distinguishing those who have taken the protestation, or who were absent or sick, viz^t :—

Christ's Church College.	New Inn Hall.
Merton College.	St. John the Baptist's College.
Magdalen College.	Exeter College.
New College.	Oriel College.
Brazen-nose College.	All Souls' College.
Queen's College.	Wadham College.
University College.	Jesus' College.
Corpus Christi College.	St. Mary's Hall.
St. Edmund's Hall.	Trinity College.
Magdalen Hall.	Lincoln College.
Pembroke College.	St. Alban's Hall.
Gloucester Hall.	Hart Hall.
Balliol College.

There are many special provisoes and reservations attached to the return; thus, under Magdalen College Robert Barrell and Will. Hobbes take the protestation, "so far forth as it is not contrary to the maintenance of the King's Royal Prerogative, the doctrine and discipline of the Church of England by law established since the Reformation, the present statutes of the University of Oxon, confirmed under the King's broad seal of England, to all which they have been formerly sworn."

Mr. Good, of New College, gives his own explanation of the protestation, whilst the other members of the college take it with the same reservations as their warden, Dr. Pinke; so the members of Queen's take it with the same reservations as their provost, Dr. Potter. Mr. Sharsell, of Gloucester Hall, gives a special interpretation, while Joseph Crowther, of St. John's, "being doubtful in some passages of proposing the protestation, and not presuming to limit the sense of it, till he understands how the Honorable House will admit any to do so, doth humbly and thankfully accept the indulged license of deliberating." John, Bishop of Worcester, Rector of Exeter and Vice-chancellor of the University, takes the protestation without reserve. Dr. Kettle takes the protestation with this addition:—"I, Ralph Kettell, President of Trinity College, Oxon, having been brought up about sixty and three years in this University, do protest sincerely this protestation tendered unto us as consonant unto the oaths of Supremacy and allegiance which I have often taken, that subscription which I have often subscribed, and that dutiful prayer which this Parliament time is published for the holy safety of this Church & realm in England."

MS. OF TREAS.
AND.

MANUSCRIPTS OF HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF SUTHERLAND, AT TRENTHAM, CO. STAFFORD.

The manuscripts from which extracts are given below consist of ten volumes of original letters written in the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries; and the Commission is much indebted to Lord Ronald Gower for drawing attention to them, and obtaining the Duke of Sutherland's ready and liberal consent to their being brought to London for examination. They are full of interest; and it will be seen that I have drawn largely from them. A few repetitions of the same items of news will be found, although I have excluded many others. The letters of several persons writing at the same period of public transactions must necessarily have much in common.

The first volume contains some letters by Admiral Sir Richard Leveson. In 1599 and 1600 it seems that there was fear of a Spanish invasion. In 1601 he was before Kingsale in Ireland, and gives an account of the siege of the town, then garrisoned by Spaniards; and at the end of the year he tells of the defeat of Tyrone, although Kingsale was not yet taken. In 1605 he seems to have gone to Spain with the Embassy of the Earl of Nottingham. After these come Sir John Leveson's papers relating to Kent, for about 30 years: they deal chiefly with Subsidies and military matters. In 1589 Lord Cobham was ordered to raise 1,000 men in Kent to go into France to aid the French King: and Sir John Leveson tells how the men were aggrieved at the thought of a stranger being appointed to command them, and how he himself felt the slight of not being made their officer. In 1590 there was an order to raise 200 more for foreign service: and in 1595 a report of an intended foreign descent on the coast brought down an order to raise 600 men to aid in repelling it.

Mr. Burn, in his History of the Fleet Marriages, says that there does not appear to have been any clandestine marriage at the Savoy Chapel until after the passing of the Marriage Act. But from two letters in 1596 it is clear that irregular marriages there were frequent in the reign of Elizabeth. Lord Cobham's grandson and ward was married to his cousin at the Savoy in apparently an irregular way, and the chaplain who celebrated the marriage was committed to the Gate House.

In 1600 the Queen seems to have found fault with the clothing for soldiers which the county had been accustomed to supply: so she appoints her own clothiers. In this year there were levies for Ireland, and in 1601 for the Low Countries; and in the latter year the ancient courts for some of the Cinque Ports were revived after long disuse, much to the discomfort of many poor persons who were summoned to attend and pay for petty bits of wreck which they had found. Sir Edmund Barrett (who was created Lord Newburgh by Charles I.) went into Spain with the Earl of Nottingham in 1605; a letter by him is curious as showing the then wealth of Spain and abundance of coin there.

In vol. 2, a letter of 1626 mentions the fees payable on creation of Knights of the Bath. The Civil War letters are interesting. Some discontent appears at the favours shown to the Scots. Members of Parliament took instructions from their constituents as to the course they were to take in the Parliament. A news letter from York in June 1642 tells all that was going on there. In the same month Sir Edward Littleton (a Parliamentarian) tells Sir R. Leveson of an order made by the House of Commons that all members are to attend by the 16th instant. Sir Richard neglected this intimation, and at the beginning of August he and three others were served with a peremptory order to attend. In September 1642 he and his fellows declined to raise troops in their county, as requested by the Commissioners of Array. In December of the same year is an account of the Earl of Stamford's retreat from Hereford, and of Hopton's failure to raise troops at Ledbury. The ineffectual attempts of Lord Strange (soon afterwards Earl of Derby) to take Manchester are well told in diary by some one in the town in the last week of September 1642. There is news of the King at Salop in the beginning of October; and on the 15th of that month the Earl of Essex wrote a letter of contrition to the King. In 1645 Sir Richard Leveson was a prisoner at Namptwich, and he was obliged to get license from Col. Croxton to go to Trentham and to get sureties for his return. In the following year he compounded with the Parliamentary Commissioners, and he seems to have paid largely. (There are many papers connected with this.) There are accounts of the battles of Edgehill and Hylton Heath. A letter of Sept. 16th 1658 is curious for its satirical remarks on the late Usurper, and his daughter, Lady Claypole. Copy of articles for the surrender of Chester dated Feb. 1st 1645. A letter of 1646 gives a notice of and extracts from Grebner's Prophecies about England in MS., which he presented to Queen Elizabeth, and which Dr. Neville obtained from her and gave to the Library of Trinity College, Cambridge. There are a few letters during the Interregnum giving foreign news, and some filled with joy at the restoration of King Charles the Second.

Vol. 3. contains letters from Lord and Lady Newport and their sons Francis and Andrew. There is Court news during the Interregnum. A letter from Amiens shows how exiled Cavaliers quarrelled and fought among themselves; notices of the escape of General Lambert, and the landing, and reception in London of King Charles II., and Court news during his reign. The letters of Francis Newport during the civil war are full of news. It seems from a letter here that King Charles the 1st offered to go into Hull with only 30 attendants, whereas, from Rushworth's account, it would be inferred that he stood out for taking with him his whole troop of 300. The letters of Francis Newport in 1642, he being an M.P., are full of interest. His letters of 1660 give details of the King's restoration, the desires of the rebels to get safety, and speculations about the King's marriage, and Court and foreign news. The letters of Andrew Newport* are of the same character. In 1658 he gives an account of the trials of Dr. Hewett and Mr. Mordaunt; and at the beginning of 1660, of the behaviour of Monk and the proceedings in Parliament. The doings preceding, at, and following the Restoration are detailed: the punishment of regicides, behaviour of Col. Harrison at his trial and execution; a notice of the contest between the Marquis of Hertford and the Earl of Worcester for the title of Duke of Somerset; the conference between the Bishops and Presbyterian ministers concerning Church government; the Commons' vote that the bodies of Cromwell, Ireton, Bradshaw, and Pride should be taken to Tyburn, and that the hangman for the time being should bear Cromwell's arms; and the Duke of York's proving his marriage to have been in September 1660.

In the other volumes, the letters during the Civil War are of course noticeable. There is again mention of and extracts from Grebner's prophecies, certainly written in the 16th century, which were construed to predict the execution of Charles I., the succession of Cromwell, and the restoration of Charles II. The MS. is in Trinity College, Cambridge. Of Lord Marlborough's book of Dumb Prophecies, p. 182 of the Appendix, I have had no previous knowledge. In one of the volumes is a series of good letters by Sir William Dugdale. The Commonwealth letters tell much news during that period: the anxieties of Oliver; his interviews with sectaries who thou'd him; his ill-health; his frequent putting off giving a decided answer to those who asked him to be a King; at one time coming out en déshabillé to reply to a Deputation (p. 163); the people's dissatisfaction at the increased taxation; his own restlessness about Monk's inclinations, and the attempt to assassinate his son Richard (p. 166) must doubtless have made him splenetic; but still he could drink plentifully at a feast (p. 166), and allow dancing at his daughter's wedding. The respect paid by sovereigns to Cromwell is notorious; but privateers are no respecters of persons, and we find here (p. 165) that they landed in Kent and carried off a knight, and kept him for ransom. There are again several rather full notices of the trials of Dr. Hewett, Mr. Mordaunt, and Sir Henry Slingsby. Soon after Oliver's death the officers of the army met to discuss their grievances. In April before the Restoration is a capital letter about an ineffectual attempt to surprise York; and one in January, of the defection of Lambert's army. For some months before the Restoration, and after that event, the letters are numerous. The writers expatiate on the universal joy of the King's return and the splendour of his reception, and the rather slow business of the Act of Indemnity. Then we get personal notices of the King, his planting trees in St. James's Park, his tennis playing, and his bathing at Battersea; how the game of Hombre came into fashion; and how Mrs. Cromwell (the Protector's widow) failed in her attempt to carry off large quantities of furniture. Hugh Peters is said to be the man who decapitated Charles I.; and the authorities found the man who fixed to the scaffold the staples intended to confine the King in case he resisted. We read of the favour which Charles II. was obliged to show to the Presbyterians, and his neglect of the Cavaliers;† the long doubts as to

DUKE OF SUTHER-
LAND.

* The Memoirs of a Cavalier by De Foe certainly do not chronicle the actions of this Andrew Newport.

† Mention is made of the witty proposal for an Act of Oblivion for the King's friends, and of indemnity for his enemies.

DUKE OF SUTHER-
LAND.

the marriage of Anne Hyde with the Duke of York. Prynne's self-assertion was shown even in church, where he refused to kneel when taking part in the communion service; the parson with the bread passed on, and refused to give it; but he with the wine, not noticing the refusal of his coadjutor, gave the wine. This would form a good case for a Casuist. Speaker Lenthall's son was said to have two wives, and also to have counterfeited the Great Seal; and several letters speak of the dispute about the title of Duke of Somerset and Beaufort, claimed by the Marquis of Worcester under what seems to have been a forged patent.

Among the letters of the last century those of pp. 18 and 19 of vol. 7 doubtless refer to the meeting of Parliament on the 9th of October, and the plot in favour of the Pretender, which the King by the Chancellor communicated to the Commons. Those of Lord North show his view with regard to the (then) American colonies; and the good sense of Lord Thurlow's remarks on education will be admitted; and his two long undated letters (pp. 210 and 211) are valuable contributions.

The letters by Pitt and Lord Thanet are thus explained. Lord Thanet was in court at Maidstone when O'Connor, a member of the executive directory of United Irishmen, was tried for high treason; after O'Connor was acquitted, a detainer was lodged against him, and Lord Thanet was accused of complicity in the attempt to facilitate his escape, and was committed to the Tower.

The spelling of words has been nearly always modernised.

Vol. I.

Letters to and from the Vice-Admiral Sir Richard Leveson, from 1598 to 1605.

1. 1598, April 24. At the Courte. Gilbert, Earl of Shrewsbury, to Sir Richard Luson (Leveson) Kt., Admiral of Her Majesty's ships in the Narrow Seas. He has received his (Leveson's) letter and answers it "in as great haste as you wryte some tymes to my Lo. Admyrall when the ankens are in weyinge." He says that for the matter mentioned by Leveson he will use the advice of his cousin, Mr. Vincent Corbet, and if necessary write again. (Seal, a Talbot passant surrounded with the motto of the Order of the Garter.)

2. n. d. Draft of a Petition to King James by W. Leveson, of London. In the time of the late sovereign deceased, certain parcels of cloves were delivered unto the petitioner by the Commissioners then appointed for the selling of the Carrack goods brought in by Sir Richard Leveson, which cloves were both unmerchantable in respect of their ill condition, and also over rated unto the petitioner in respect of their high and unreasonable prices. He prays that His Majesty will grant a Privy Seal for so much as appeareth by the report of the Commissioners to be unmerchantable, and he will make speedy payment of the residue. He also prays some allowance for the pains he took in the King's service at Plymouth and London, about the Carrack goods, whereby he saved the King 4,000*l.*, and in that service spent 100*l.* of his own money.

20. n. d. Sir Richard Leveson to Lord Hume of Berwick, Chancellor of the Exchequer and Lord Treasurer of Berwick. (A corrected draft in Sir Richard's handwriting).—Recommending the bearer who was sent down to Sir Richard at Plymouth, and was employed in unloading and bestowing the goods of the Carrack from the 25th of June to the end of August, or thereabouts, during which time he continued upon his own charges. And after the bringing of the goods to Leadenhall in London his labour and diligence continued until the death of the Queen. He does not know that the bearer has received any recompense.

3. 1599, July 17. London.—Sir Richard Leveson to his cousin Sir John Leveson. "The report of some suddayne allarm hasteth me down into Kent, but my own particuler occasions command me to stay."—He will visit Sir John as he goes.

4. 1599, Aug. 2. The Downs.—Sir Richard Leveson to his cousin Sir John Leveson at Hallin.—He has safely landed Sir John's brother Peter at Ostend. He daily receives letters with alarms of the Spaniards approach, but from the sea hears no such thing. His ship is so leaky that he spends 10 hours out of the 24 in pumping her. He is now plying to the westward as far as Dungeness. About Thursday next he means to return to the Downs to take his youths [his cousin Jack and his brother] aboard, whom he prays Sir John to send.

8. 1600, June 20. Plymouth.—The same to the same.—He says that it seems that Her Majesty's ships under his charge were hastily set forth; he is full of wants, especially of men. How his victuals will hold out he does not know, and can only inform himself by the report of a religious purser, to whose conscience he must commit himself and the fortunes of his journey. The year being half spent he is troubled and fears he shall come too late. His instructions shall be precisely followed to avoid exception. . . . If the Lords purpose to enlarge his father, he wishes it to be deferred until his return, because the manner of his enlargement may much import him (Sir Richard) both in reputation and otherwise.

5. 1600, Jan. 12. Downs.—The same to the same.—He has received Sir Tho. Wal[singham's] letter, the contents whereof concerning Sir He[nry] P[almer] he will believe till he sees the contrary. . . . In expectation of the Spaniards he has kept the coast of France these ten days past, and has he thinks suffered more foul weather than any of the Queen's ships ever did in this place. Asks him to send the [letter] enclosed with speed to London.

6. 1600, Jan. 18. Downs.—Sir Richard Leveson to the Earl of Nottingham, Lord High Admiral. In his last letter he imparted to the Earl the state of the service.

This letter is about his wife, a daughter of the Earl. 7. 1600, Jan. 30. Dover Road.—Sir Richard Leveson to Sir John Leveson.—Thanks him for a letter and allows well of his judgment in suppressing his (Sir Richard's) letter to the Lord Admiral.

9. 1601, Sept. 2, Downs.—The same to the same. Understanding that Sir John is to encounter the French gallants at Canterbury, he sends enclosed the names of those that be men of the best quality. Confides as a secret that the King will not be drawn in open terms to break out with the King of Spain, but like a true Machiavel will awhile look on, expecting the event of both our ruins, and then like a greedy fox will take his prey. Only he is content to contribute in money for the relief of Ostend.

10. 1601, Oct. 29, Quinborow.—The same to the same.—He is yet unpaid by the Treasurer of the Navy for what is due to him for his service in the Narrow Seas, namely 20 shillings per diem from the 9th of December last, to the 25th or 26th of September; only he acknowledges the receipt of 100*l.* from Mr. Cooke. He asks Sir John to apply for the balance.—He hopes Sir John will remember him to the lady, &c.—"You told me of 'pearl, gold, stones, &c., I did then scarce believe it, but now I am assured of it, namely 4 bags of pearl whereof one is one hundredweight, 8 bags of pistolettes, one box of diamonds, cum multis aliis."

11. 1601, Nov. 7, Downs.—The same to the same.—He says that his entertainment in the Narrow Seas must be continued from the 9th of December to the 25th of September. If his note be otherwise it is false, wherefore he prays Sir John to correct it.

12. 1601, Dec. 10, Kingsalle.—Sir Richard Leveson to his cousin Sir John Leveson.—As to the business by land; the Lord Deputy is still before Kingsale, incamping upon the north side of the town. The Lord President's force stretching out to the north-west. The first approach was made upon the north side about 30 score from the town. The second about 14 score off, which within a few days made a breach assailable 40 yards in breadth as I conjecture. The breach being made it was not thought fit by our Captain and Council of War to enter for divers reasons, whereof I am unable to judge, being out of my clement. Now that design is altered, the cannon removed from that place to the north-west side; a breach must be made and assaulted. In the interim I must tell you that when the first breach was made, the Spaniards sallied out in the night very proudly, being in number 800, gave upon our ordnance, and pusht for them in our trenches, but were beaten back, losing at least 200 of their best men. . . .

The Lord Deputy is a gallant fellow, a man temperate in council and valiant in execution. But here is the truth of his case. Time hath been omitted, not through his default but by some other accident; Tyron and O'Donell are come down, being 7,000 strong, and hourly expected to lodge upon the backs of our camps. Don John de Aquila is resolved, and although he want flesh to eat yet he wanteth no bread, nor any muniments of war; if the Lord Deputy do give upon the town, he must subject himself to the danger of a strong and a powerful enemy behind him. This being so, each part must stand upon his guard expecting who shall famish first, and new supplies must be sent out of England. To conclude, unless the business be more royally undertaken, I am much afraid that here is a perpetual war grounded: sed hoc tibi; yet I must needs say that the Queen is very royal, having on this day 18,000 men in pay upon her charge within this kingdom, besides her ships. Now, sir, to that which appertaineth to myself, you shall understand that the second of December the Lord Deputy received knowledge that six Spanish ships with 2,000 soldiers were come in to Castle Haven, being distant from Kingsale 9 leagues or thereabouts, whereupon I addressed myself for that place, leaving Sir Amias Preston at Kingsale with the one half of my fleet: the 5th of December I set sail from Kingsale, for sooner the wind would not give me leave; the 6th of December I arrived at Castle Haven, where I was received with 8 pieces of great ordnance planted upon the shore and 500 small shot at the least, the place being very narrow. It was my purpose and direction to have boarded, to the end that every Spanish ship might serve as a bulwark for ours against the ordnance upon the shore, but the Spaniards having up their ships so near unto the shore as I could not come unto them did prevent me in that, so I came to an anchor with my ships; within four hours after my coming into the harbour I forced the Spaniards to quit all their ships and sunk one of them down directly. The Admiral with nine foot of water in hold cut his cable and drove upon the rocks, the Vice-Admiral with one other did likewise drive to the shore. The next day following I was constrained to ride there still, the wind being south-east, and to suffer the fury of their ordnance from the shore, which did much annoy me. The night following I caused all my ships to warp out before me, and so came off safely with all my fleet (I thank God for it). In this fight I lost but 13 men and had 30 men hurt or thereabouts, only three of my own servants hurt, all the rest well, &c.

14. 1601, Dec. 15, Kingsale Road. — The same to the same. — He sends inclosed a letter from Capt. Brett. The bearer will acquaint Sir John with all affairs there.

22. n.d. — George Brett to Sir R. Leveson. — As Sir Richard desires to know whether Sir John Leveson did at any time hasten the dispatch of the shipping at Rochester, He says that Sir John sent him (Brett) twice to Sir Henry Palmer to enquire their forwardness, whereof once he understood by Mr. Bucke that all the victuals were not yet shipped, nor could they be provided until Wednesday in the next week; the next he demanded the same of Sir Henry Palmer, &c., and received the same answer, that they were as desirous as Sir John to embark the soldiers, but because they were not yet fully victualled they thought it best to stop two or three days. This being on the Saturday when he (Brett) was there.

13. 1601, Dec. 27. — Sir Richard Leveson to Sir John Leveson. — These times are dangerous for men to write news, much more to write opinions . . . It has pleased God to bless us at last with a very happy and most strange victory strange, I say, that, being encountered with a soldier and a great captain as all the world accounteth Tyrone to be, having in his troops 4,000 able fighting men, and the number of our soldiers not exceeding 800 foot and 400 horse, that the day was ours. In this defeat there were killed of the enemy 1,000 bodies, seven or eight ensigns (I mean colours) taken in the field, and at least 1,500 arms of the enemy brought home by our people. The truth of it is this, as I understand by relation from others: Tyrone lying within four or five miles of our camp, purposed in the morning, about an hour before daylight, to give upon the camp and to charge it in every quarter; but the night being more spent than he imagined, the day appeared before he approached, by means whereof our scouts discovered his army, and our troops drew out. The enemy marching away in three bodies, very soldierlike as the judicial beholders do report, our horse charged one of their squadrons in the vanguard; but the enemy's foot delivering a volley of shot, our horse made a wheel. In the interim our seconds of foot coming up, the enemy's foot made a halt, whereupon our horse, discovering some fear in the Irish, charged again, and immediately the enemy brake order, cast away their arms, betook themselves to their heels, and never struck one blow after. Thus much for the state of the present affairs. Now I will be bold to deliver my opinion. Though it has pleased God to bless us with extraordinary success, yet I do not think that the town of Kingsale will be easily taken. That Don John will be drawn to composition, I cannot imagine; first because he is reputed to be a great captain and a gallant fellow; secondly, the colour of their pretence is masked under the cloak of religion, and all men's eyes of Christendom are now bent upon this business; thirdly, the cause being undertaken by the King of Spain and his first action of moment, and being seconded by the Pope, cannot be left off but with much dishonour. If then the town be not taken in by composition of necessity, it must be gained by force. And to withstand our force, I dare assure you there are yet 1,500 Spaniards in the town able to fight, the walls are indifferent defensible, and within the walls there are many castles which will require a time of gaining. Having now made the case as strong against us as I can, I make no doubt, notwithstanding, but the town of Kingsale will be ours: but when the town shall be taken, I cannot think that the war is at an end; for you shall understand that the Spaniard hath fortified divers other places upon this coast, as Castle Haven, Baltimore, and Beer Haven, all which are now possessed and kept by the Spaniard, and therefore will require a second work; moreover here is a general received opinion amongst us, and the intelligence is no less, that the King of Spain is now preparing a great army to be sent for these parts.

15. 1602, July 18, Plymouth. — The same to the same. — He regrets that he has been deceived by some person whom he had trusted. But he loves him still, and will think that his error proceeded rather out of weakness than out of baseness. . . . Asks Sir John to lay espial about all places, at Court especially, about the great Councillor, and ascertain two things, namely his love to Sir Richard's person and his opinion of Sir Richard's wealth. Asks him to be polite to F. C., and sound him as to his knowledge of Sir Richard's wealth; cannot understand how he has got any information . . . Out of his poverty he will find something for that honourable lady to whom Sir John and he are so much bound. — He desires to be commended to Sir Thomas Walsingham.

16. 1603, May 17. The same to the same. — The general report is that the King goeth shortly to Chatham; but Sir Richard doubts it, because the Lord Admiral says he knoweth no such thing.

18. 1605, April 24, Corunna. — The same to the same. — Sir John's son John* has passed the seas in good health, and so continues. Since their arrival at Corunna on the 15th instant, my Lord has stayed for horse and carriage for his train, which being great in number cannot be provided without much pain to this poor country. Our entertainment at Court is prepared, as I hear, with much state and ceremony, which maketh me suspect that our journey will be long and tedious. — He sends remembrances to Sir Thomas Walsingham and Wymarke. He has written to Sir Henry Palmer about finishing his lodging at Chatham.

19. [1605.] The last of April, from the Heyght of 43. — The same to the same. — He refers Sir John (for news) to Capt. King, who will wait upon him. — Mentions his camerado, Frank Coppinger.

17. 1605, July 22. The same to the same. — Besides the anguish of his leg, he has laid 24 hours in fear of an ague.

21. n. y., 14 March, afternoon. — The same to the same. — He is glad he has not writ to my Lord, and hopes the answer to his last letter may succeed to Sir John's content. — Since Sir John's boy departed he has written to Jackson that, if he were an agent to Sir Amias, he (Sir Richard) wished him to prosecute the matter. He will suppress the letter to Jackson if Sir John wishes it.

Letters and PAPERS of SIR JOHN LEVESON relating to the County of Kent: 1582—1614.

23. 1581, Dec. 15, Rushbrooke. — Robert Jermyn to Lord Cobham. — He sends an acquittance for 15l. which Lord Cobham had told him to send for half yearly. — Gives a good account of the progress in learning and good nature of his cousin Lord Cobham's ward.

24. 1587, June 8, Greenwich. — Copy Council Letter (signed by the Lord Chancellor Hatton, Lord Burghley, C. Howard, Francis Knollys, Francis Croft, Francis Walsingham, and J. Wolley), to [the Lord Lieutenant of the County of Kent], regarding a levy of men for the service and defence of the United Provinces of the Low Countries under the charge of the Earl of Leicester, the Queen's Lieutenant-General in those parts. The counties are not at present to be charged further than with ten shillings for every soldier towards the provision of a sword and dagger and for conduct-money, being careful at present to ease them of all such other charges (as armour and coat money) as has been heretofore accustomed. None of those which were heretofore trained are to be employed in this service. When the deputy-lieutenants have made choice of the number appointed, Lord . . . or his deputies are to have a view made of them before such captains as the Earl shall send down, so that he may have the liking or refusing of the persons: the men are then to be taken to the seaside, and be thence transported according to the directions which the captain shall receive from the Earl. (From the indorsement it seems that 300 men were to be levied in Kent.)

* He had on January 4, 1604, obtained a license to travel for four years. See Calendar of State Papers.

26. 1588, June 18, Greenwich.—Copy of the Queen's letter to Lord Cobham, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and Lieutenant of the County of Kent, or in his absence to the Deputy Lieutenants.—Thanks for obedience to her former orders to prepare resistance to foreign invasion.—Tells him (as the foreign army is already put to sea) to summon the best sort of gentry within his lieutenancy, and bid them have a larger proportion of furniture for horsemen and footmen, especially horsemen, and certify the result to the Privy Council.

25. 1588, Dec. 16, Warwick Lane.—Thomas Fanshawe to Lord Burghley, Lord High Treasurer.—Sends enclosed the names of those who were assessed at 6*l.* on land by the year, or at 8*l.* in goods, to the subsidy in the four hundreds in Kent, which Lord Cobham had written were omitted, namely, Maydeston and Eythorne, Sommerden and Goddesheathe. Lord Cobham had required to have the whole book of the last subsidy written out; but as he thinks his lordship cannot want all, he has only had his (Fanshawe's) own hundred copied.

27. 1588, Dec. 16. From the Court.—Lord Burghley to Lord Cobham.—He sends the book of the subsidy which Fanshawe had made out, and also Fanshawe's letter.

28. [1589], Sept. 22, Ospringe.—John Cobham to Lord Cobham.—Mr. Clifford, the young captain, says he will have the best of the band, and not such as Sir Thomas Sondes and John Cobham shall appoint.—He assures Cobham that Clifford shall have none out of the hundred of Melton (?) and Tenham but such as have been trained in the band. Clifford has said that some of the better are ready to ride out of the country. As yet Clifford has shewn no commission, and (the writer is told) he will not. He desires Burghley's opinion.

30. 1589, Sept. 8, Westminster.—Council letter (signed by Burghley, C. Howard, and Francis Walsingham) to Lord Cobham.—Her Majesty being about to send forces into France to the aid of the French King, under the charge, it is hoped, of the Lord Admiral, to be landed at Dieppe, and the same to be of the chiefest of the trained bands of those counties nearest the sea coast, Kent is set down for 1,000 men armed and weaponed; and Lord Cobham is required to get them ready under the command of the chief gentlemen of the shire who for their own fitness for service and estimations and credit with the soldiers he shall think fit to be their captains and leaders.

29. 1589, Sept. 13. About mid-day, Shornhill.—(Sir) John Leveson to Lord Cobham.—He has received Lord Cobham's letter telling him Her Majesty's pleasure that the 1,000 trained to be levied in that shire should be led only by men of skill and experience in martial service. He is much grieved that he (not having been so exercised) is not to lead the soldiers, who are in a state of discontent at the thought of having a strange captain. He remonstrates, and says that Captain Raines has promised to accompany him, with whom he did not contract for the burdening of Her Majesty, but for his own instruction.—He tells how the men who have returned from the Low Countries and Portugal are loud in their complaints against their ill treatment by the captains, some having scarce clothes to cover them, others are half starved for want of meat, and all are penniless. His neighbours look for the like entertainment at the hands of like captains, and show bad feeling. If the order is to be carried out, he begs that he may not be made the hand to deliver over the men to any other captain, or be hereafter employed, as hitherto he hath been, for a sporting and unserviceable leader.

31. 1590, March 24, Greenwich.—Council letter (signed by Lord Chancellor Hatton, Burghley, C. Howard, Hunsdon, Buckehurst, T. Heneage, J. Wolley, and J. Fortescue) to Lord Cobham, Warden of the Cinque Ports and Lord Lieutenant of the County of Kent.—They refer to a former letter directing 200 men to be raised to serve the Queen beyond sea. They, with their officers and leaders, are to be forthwith assembled, fully furnished with armour and weapons, and apparelled with ordinary coats. Of these, 150 are to be at the Port of Sandwich on the 7th of April, and 50 at Gravesend at the same time, where there is shipping provided for them and other bands out of other counties; whence they shall be transported to Flushing in Zealand. The Queen allows four shillings for every coat; to every soldier a halfpenny per mile for conduct-money, or at Lord Cobham's option eightpence per day. . . . He is to cause an indenture to be made between him and the captain, containing the furniture of the armour, weapon, and apparelling of every soldier, and to send a copy to the Council; the cause being that the armour, &c. may be preserved, and on their return be restored to the country. "For such bands as are to be sent into the Low Countries, besides their deduction of ten in every hundred by the name of dead paies, you shall also deduct out of the said number of every hundred the officers, as the captain, lieutenant, ensign, serjeant, chirurgeon, and dromme, because they are to be accounted in the Low Countries as parcel of the bands."

32. 1594, Oct. 22, St. Stephens.—Jo. Manwood to his brother [in-law] Sir John Leveson.—In answer to a letter he says, "Upon further consideration I thinke my Lord of Dover or Mr. Archdeacon were fit to be on, if any be elsewhere of that calling, and for the country Mr. Lieutenant and Mr. Edward Boys, which, for their abiding in the country, experience and meet places of dwelling, are fit."

34. 1595, July 31, The Court.—W. (Lord) Cobham to Sir John Leveson.—He sends a copy of Council letter, directing the forces of the shire to be put in readiness against any attempt by the enemy along the sea-coast, so that he may impart it to such as he shall think fit for the execution thereof.

41. 1595, Aug. 25, London.—W. (Lord) Cobham to Sir John Leveson, his deputy lieutenant. He received that morning the Queen's letter of mandate to cause 600 able and trained men within the county of Kent to be put in readiness and furnished with such armour and weapons as that the fourth part of them may be musketeers.—He encloses a copy, and prays Sir John to put it in execution.

37. 1596, May 29, Holywell. [Dr.] W. Lewyn to Lord Cobham. Expresses his grief at the disordered and inconsiderate marriage of his Lordship's grandchild and ward. Says that by the Canon law the children of brother and sister cannot marry; but by the Statute law of this realm all marriages made in the face of the Church are made good and lawful which are not contrary and repugnant to the law of God, as being not within the Levitical degrees, or otherwise forbidden by God's word. So that he takes this marriage indissoluble in regard of the Statute, in case the manner of solemnization were not contrary to the Statute; but the parties married, and the minister that married them in the night, and without consent of his Lordship, who was governor of one of them, and the persons that were present at the marriage, were all punishable by law, and that in very severe manner. He advises Lord Cobham, having possession of his ward, to examine him closely as to the circumstances of making and solemnizing the marriage, to see what strength the form of such marriage has, and how it may either be lawfully undone or necessarily stand and continue. "The Earl of Bath, that now is, made an untimely marriage by night with the daughter of Sir Thomas Cornwallis, which was undone, and the Earl since married to another, to the daughter (as I think) of the late Earl of Bedford." Says he will look at the Statute and deliver his opinion further. (See 33 post.)

39. 1596, June 7, Sheppie.—John Ayscough to Sir John Leveson.—Says that his neighbour Robert Allen has requested him to certify Sir John what arms and furniture he finds for the defence of that island, which is one corslet and two muskets furnished with able men to use the same, as appears by the muster roll made at the last musters taken by Mr. Thomas Gay.

He (Allen) is charged, the writer is informed, with two light horse, and so likewise is the writer's neighbour, William Haward, of Harty. He thinks those two horses should be converted into other furniture for foot to be employed in that island for the defence thereof against Her Majesty's enemies.

Mr. Lindsey, a gentleman of great ability and occupying in that country, findeth neither armour nor weapon, one bad caliver badly furnished excepted; and the neighbours murmur that they shall be deeply charged, and he go so free; he suggests that Lord Cobham should summon him to shew cause why he should not more plentifully furnish this country with men and armour.

35. 1596, June 13, Tunstall. William Crowmer to Sir John Leveson.—He had hoped to have heard that Mr. Collier had accounted before Sir John or some other, so that it might appear what arms were taken for the last voyage toward Callis (Cadiz), and what had been restored again. . . . and what money Mr. Michael Sondes had for that purpose received of Sir Thomas Clifford or Sir John Leveson, and what had been paid out of that to any of the soldiers, and what Mr. Collier had disbursed of the 7*l.* 10*s.* which he received of Crowmer. Tells what he hears has been done to those who restored arms and to soldiers. Says he himself wants 41l. 19s. 6d., which he hopes may be soon restored to him; and asks Sir John to say what he thinks fit to be done for the renewing of the band of light-horsemen in those parts again.

33. 1596, June 14, The Savoy.—W. Moune (Master of the Savoy) to Lord Cobham (at Court).—He says he has been to the Archbishop of Canterbury and conferred with him concerning Mr. Bigge, the chaplain of the Savoy, who had given offence to Lord Cobham. On Friday last, after dinner, Mr. Bigge was called before his Grace, in the presence of Dr. Cosin, Dr. Lewin, Dr. Bancroft, and the writer, at Lambeth, and confessed his abuse. He said he thought he might well do it, as his fellow chaplains, Mr. Horwode and Mr. Lyllye, had married without licence as many or more than he had. The Archbishop committed Bigge to the Gatehouse in part punishment until Lord Cobham's pleasure was known; meaning, it is supposed, at his next appearance by deprivation to displace him. . . . The writer says that he has examined John Field, a carpenter, who has been a special compounder of his mischief; he affirms that one Powell, servant to Mr. Ambrose Coppinger, and Dugdale his fellow servant, are sufficient (being well examined) to clear the substance and most of the circumstances of this unhappy marriage. . . . The Archbishop has taken good order by commission that no such disorderly marriages shall be offensively in the Savoy performed.

36. 1596, June 21, Wrotham.—John Rychers to Sir John Leveson.—(After business matters) He encloses a list of those who refuse to pay the money assessed for the repair of arms within the hundred of Wrotham (16d. in the pound for land and 12d. for goods).—He recommends three persons for sharp example, and gives particulars of them.—(The list enclosed is of seven persons; one William Webb is said to be "a paritor" [apparitor], and lives by the sins of the people.")

40. 1596, Sept. 24, Wrotham.—Geo. Byng to Sir John Leveson.—Asking a fortnight's respite to account for some "common money" for which he had been made liable by another person.

38. 1596, Nov. 7, The Court at Richmond.—W. (Lord Cobham to Sir Thomas Wilford and Sir John Levison, Knights, Thomas Fane and Thomas Walsingham, Esquires, his deputy lieutenants.—Alludes to his having not many days since sent to them a copy of a Council letter of the 31st of October last, about what was to be done in the county to withstand any attempt of the enemy; and alludes to his deputies' reply that they had given orders for the speedy performance of the contents of that Council letter. He incloses a copy of Council letter of the 6th November instant, directing further proceedings in the county, and directs them to take order for the performance of the contents thereof.

42. 1600, June 26, Greenwich. Council letter (signed by Tho. Egerton, C.S., T. Buckhurst, Nottingham, G. Hunsdon, Ro. North, W. Knollys, Ro. Cecyll, and J. Fortescu), to Lord Cobham, Lieutenant of the County of Kent.—They refer to the Queen's letter of the 25th instant, stating her reasons for asking a levy in Kent of 50 foot for service in Ireland. Reprobrate the choice of lewd and dissolute persons who run away before they embark or after they get to Ireland, and direct him to choose carefully, and to see that the arms be good and serviceable, and that in the said number of 50 there be 12 pikes armed with corselets, pouldrons, and good murreys; 6 bills with long stems armed as the pikes, 6 muskets with good murreys and rests, 6 bastard muskets with good murreys, and 20 calyvers likewise with good murreys; and that care be had to furnish them with good swords and daggers (the swords to be of turkie blades and close hilts), of which there hath been very ill choice made heretofore. . . . Hitherto the apparel had been provided by the county; but now (for reasons given) the Queen adds 8s. at least per man to the allowance of the county, and orders some chosen men to provide apparel for the whole levy; and, for the apparelling, Lord Cobham is to send to the Mayor of Chester so much as may suffice for the 50 men, at the rate of 40s. per man. For conduct-money each man is to have 8d. and their conductor 4s. per diem, for so many days as may suffice for their conduct to the port of Chester, where they are to be by the 25th of July, &c., &c. (2 pp.)

43. 1600, Feb. 24, Court. Henry (Lord) Cobham to Sir John Leveson.—Asks that, after the men are brought to Deptford and Greenwich, Sir John will repair to the Court to receive further directions. Sir (Thomas) Walsingham must remain behind with the 400 men. Sir — Sonds is presently to repair unto the ships, and to bring on 200 men with them for their safeguard. Hopes early to-morrow to see them.

47. 1601, July 19, Court at Greenwich.—Council letter (signed by Tho. Egerton, C. S., T. Buckhurst, Nottingham, E. Worcester, Ro. Cecyll, J. Fortescu, and another), to Lord Cobham.—For provision of shipping and victuals to be made at Sandwich for 300 men, to be levied in Kent and sent to the Low Countries; and for victualling and lodging of them there if they shall stay any time for their embarking, at the rate of 8d. a man by the day. (The indorsement says that this force was for the relief of Ostend.)

44. 1601, Dec. 18, Canterbury. Richard Oulmer to Sir Henry Brook, Lord Cobham, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, and K.G., at the Blackfriars, London.—Tells who has the records of the courts of the manor of St. Austin's and the manor of Minster in Thanet; and offers, as he knows the customs thereof, to hold the courts for Lord Cobham. Says that he encloses a copy of Sir Thomas Fane's letter to Sir Edward Wotton about the wreck on the Hoope. The letter itself remains with Thomas Paramor of Canterbury, Sir Edward Wotton's droytgatherer.

46. 1601, March 6, Blackfriars. Henry (Lord) Cobham to Dr. Newman, at Canterbury.—After mentioning that there had not been for many years any court holden for the Admiralty of the Cinque Ports two ancient towns and their members under his charge and government, he appoints Dr. Newman to hold such courts, and determine all causes belonging and incident to the office of Admiral of the said Cinque Ports two ancient towns, and their members.

45. 1601, March 9, Dover Castle. (Sir) Thomas Fane to Lord Cobham.—He has received by post Lord Cobham's letter of the 6th, concerning the keeping of his Admiralty courts by Dr. Newman. After search, he cannot find a precedent of any Admiralty court being kept by any other than the Lord Warden's lieutenant, nor yet of any Admiralty court kept in the late Lord Cobham's time, except one by Mr. Crippe, one by Mr. Barry, and one begun by him (Fane), but kept only at Hethe and Romney in respect of divers wrecks, at the complaint and petition of certain merchants. To remedy this state of things, he has prepared a form of commission (in Lord C's. name) for Dr. Newman, and one other mandamus directed to the mayor and bailiffs of the ports, who otherwise would hardly be aiding to Dr. Newman as is requisite. Both drafts he encloses for alteration and correction.

48. 1602, July 22, Dover Castle. Mark Packnam to Lord Cobham.—Tells how he went to Canterbury and conferred with Dr. Newman about appointing a time for the next Admiralty court, and for taking depositions of witnesses concerning the Hope, because it is fit they should be examined before the court is opened. The Dr. says he must keep court at Canterbury next week, but has appointed to be at Dover on Monday sennight, being the 2nd of August.

51. 1601, July 27, at the general meeting at Romney. The Mayors, Jurats, and Commons of the Cinque Ports two ancient towns of Rye and Winchelsea, to Lord Cobham.—According to the ancient use and yearly custom of the Cinque Ports and two ancient towns of Rye and Winchelsea, they assembled that day at Romney. They have paid Lord Cobham's servant, Thomas Nowell, 10l. in full discharge of his claims for service in a suit concerning the general incorporation. Mr. Verrall, of Sandwich (also recommended to their notice by Lord Cobham), claims 24l. or 25l. for services in a suit touching the Cinque Ports two ancient towns. They asked for a bill of items, which he seemed unwilling to give; therefore they postpone his claim to their general meeting next year. (Indorsed "The Assembly at the Brotherhood to my Lord.")

50. 1602, July 31, Dover Castle. Mark Packnam to Lord Cobham.—Acknowledges Lord C's. letter of the 24th. Has kept a copy of the book (sent to Lord C.) of the repairs done in Dover Castle in 1589. Dr. Newman had appointed to be here on Tuesday next to receive depositions concerning the Hope. John Bussher, of Margate, one of the principal witnesses, cannot be there on Tuesday, because he must be at Faversham fair to pay and receive money, but he will attend on Wednesday. Divers poor men are summoned to the Admiralty court on the 17th of August to pay small sums with which they are charged for goods which they have taken up and found;—they desire that they may pay the amounts to Lord Cobham's droytgatherer, instead of attending the court and paying there. The fishermen of Rye and Hastings have appointed to be at the Admiralty court for the controversies between them. (Enclosed is a slip of paper sent by Packnam, containing an extract from the customs relating to the fine for taking flotsam, jetsam, or lagan, without satisfying the Lord Warden and Admiral his moiety. The penalty was that the finder should lose his own part, and to make fine to the value of all the goods, at the discretion of the Admiral.)

49. 1602, Aug. 13, Dover Castle. The same to the same.—On Tuesday last Dr. Newman was there, and took depositions of John Bussher and others, concerning wreck happening on the Hope and other places in Thanet. For other places in Thanet where other men claim wreck, they could not depose. Sends enclosed copies of the depositions. They privately examined John Underdowne, of Byrchington, who, they were informed, could depose well for Lord Cobham, and found that he answered wholly on Mr. Wotton's part, therefore they would not swear him and take his deposition.

52. 1603. A plott drawne by Tho. Dunn, the carpenter for Dover harbour, for certen works now in hand.—(A plan about 14 inches square.)

53. 1603, July 7. Dover Castle.—(Sir) Tho. Fane to Lord Cobham.—The works of Dover Haven are in good forwardness; but if the harbour moneys promised by the Lord Treasurer out of the Exchequer this term be not paid unto Sir Thomas Fludd, treasurer for the harbour, the moneys already bestowed will prove to very little purpose. He says that the works are much admired.

54. 1605, May 24, Valladolid. (Sir) E. Barrett* to Sir John Leveson.—Since his coming into Spain (whereof he has intelligence in many letters to Sir John) he received at Seville 1,000 ducats (every ducat being 5s. 6d. there in value), for the repayment whereof he sent bills into Italy to Mr. Young, from thence to be sent to Mr. Slaneye; those 1,000 ducats being spent, with accommodating of himself with clothes at Seville, he was forced to take order with Mr. Nevinson for some more money, because the residue of his thousand ducats was only sufficient to discharge him between Seville and Valladolid, where the last penny of it left him at his arrival The exchange of money between Seville and London was 8 in 100. "This countrie is so full of money that they esteem less of 5s. than we do in England of 6d.; and after this rate all things are valued here; my lodging here will cost me 23 ducats a month, and I have only 3 chambers for my money. I hear by some gentlemen that are already arrived that my brother cometh along with Sir Richard , and next winter, if it be your will, I shall be ready to carry him into Italy My lord Admiral is expected here within these two days, and I am to go and meet him; there was never Prince nor Ambassador entertained with half the respect nor magnificence as this shall be."

55. 1609, Dec. 13, Halling.—Sir J. Leveson to Mr. Jervis Hall at Wolverhampton.—He has perused at Halling all his papers and old deeds, whereof he has an extraordinary great many, of lands that belonged to Lilshul Abbey, and other lands gone from the Levesons. (Land business.)

56. 1613, Dec. 4. Henry Hobart (Lord Chief Justice) to Sir John Leveson.

57. 1613, Dec. 5, Mereworth Castle. (Sir) Thomas Fane to Sir John Leveson at Blackfriars.

58. 1613, Dec. 10, Eyton. Fra. Newport to Sir John Leveson.

59. [1613], Dec. 11, Wolverhampton. Walter Leveson to Sir John Leveson.

60. n. d., Dudley Diggs to Sir J. Levison. (These five letters are of condolence with Sir John on the loss of his son.)

61. 1614, Sept. 17, Whitehall. Copy Council letter (signed by G. Cant (Abbott, Archbishop of Canterbury), T. Ellesmere, C. T. Suffolk, R. Somerset, Pembroke, E. Worcester, Ralph Winwood, Jul. Caesar, and Tho. Lake) to the Sheriff and Justices of the Peace in the County of Kent.—Refer to their late letter to them asking a contribution for the supply of Ireland, for the provision of the cautionary towns in Holland and Zealand, and for the furnishing of the navy. The importance of these things is improved by the troubles in neighbouring countries. The Marquis Spinola has collected a large army (which he sometimes pretends to have done under the charge of the Archduke, sometimes under the name of the King of Spain, sometimes under the command of the Emperor, whereby we may conclude they all three have combined together), and has carried all the towns in the countries of Juliers and Cleves, situate upon the tract of the Rhine, whereby the Elector of Brandenburg is deprived of towns long by him peaceably enjoyed, whose right his Majesty is bound to defend by virtue of treaties between him and the Princes of the Union in Germany, and the person and states of the Elector Palatine and his princess, the King's only daughter, are endangered.—To prevent the danger to this kingdom which these forces threaten, his Majesty commands a general muster throughout the realm, and that all recusants be disarmed The sheriffs, &c. are told to employ their best endeavours for the speedy return of the contribution.

62. 1614, Oct. 3. Walter Story to Sir John Leveson.

65. 1614, Nov. 20. Same to the same. (Business letters by a bailiff.)

63. 1614, Dec. 3, Lilleshall. Frances Cumberford and Richard Moulton to Sir John Leveson.

64. 1614, Nov. 20. The same to the same.

65. 1614, Nov. 20, Newport.—Walter Story to the same.—These three last are by servants or agents on business matters.)

66. n. y., Jan. 18, Lilleshall Lody.—Richard Moulton to Sir John Leveson.—Upon the 24th the joiner will come to the Lody to make a portal for the bed-chamber. Moulton asks if he shall finish that work in Sir Robert Harley's chamber with old wainscot before Sir John comes down or not. Has no money but what cometh by selling corn; cannot sell the corn above 2s. 6d. or 2s. 8d. the measure.

67. A note of lands.

Vol. II.

Fol. 1-6. One letter by Frances Duddleley, and six letters by Katherine Duddleley to Sir Richard Leveson. (These ladies were daughters of Sir Robert Dudley, called Duke of Northumberland and Alice his wife, who was created Duchess Dudley by Charles the First.) The letters are not dated, but were written before the marriage of Katherine to Sir Richard Leveson.—In one of the letters by Katherine she says that she sent him a ring only to shew the bigness, for otherwise it is most unworthy his acceptance. It seems to have been written shortly before the marriage, in reply to some enquiries by Sir Richard; for in a postscript she says, "I am very ignorant what belongs to these ceremonies, but I think men give no garters nor ribbons, but gloves and points; but I am not sure what the fashions now are."

Fols. 7-10. Four letters by Katherine to her husband, Sir Richard Leveson, dated respectively 8 May 1658, May 4, April 21 (or 27), and May Day. The last three are without the year. The writer seems to have been in London attending to some law business. In the letter of the 4th of May she says, "Lady Dorset was here on May Day, and most of her children, and would have had me to Hide Park with them, but I could not go."

Fols. 11 and 12. Two letters from Edward 4th Earl of Dorset to Sir Richard Leveson.

Fols. 13-17. Ten letters by Richard 5th Earl of Dorset to Sir Richard Leveson. The first is in 1651, while only Richard Buckhurst; the latest is dated in 1659. They are on private matters.

Fols. 18-22. Nine letters from Frances Countess of Dorset to Sir Richard Leveson. This lady was eldest daughter of Lionel Cranfield, Earl of Middlesex. The earliest is dated 1655, and the last in 1658. In 1656, she and her husband wrote to Sir Richard to ask him to be godfather to the child then expected, who was afterwards Charles 6th Earl of Dorset; but it seems that Sir Richard and his wife were not able to attend.

Fol. 23. 1623, March 29, Whitehall.—Charles Stanhope to the Mayors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, &c.—Order for supply of six able horses and a guide for Richard Lucem (Leveson), Esquire, who was going to Shrewsbury, and thence to Holyhead and back, about His Majesty's special affairs.

Fol. 24. 1626, April 10, Whitehall. (The Earl of) Pembroke to Sir Richard Lewson, one of the Knights of the Bath made at His Majesty's coronation.—The King says that he intends not the bill of fees rated and signed by the Earl Marshall and Lord Pembroke should conclude any other of his servants that have patents for fees not mentioned in that schedule; and that the gentlemen ushers of the King's Privy Chamber, his gentlemen ushers, daily waiters, and sergeants-at-arms having by their several patents, granted by his father (King James) and himself, 5l. to each company apportioned them upon all manner of Knighthood, Sir Richard is, in consideration of his late Knighthood of the Bath, to pay the said fees, amounting in all to 15l., for their use to the bearer Thomas Bartholomew, one of the grooms of His Majesty's chamber appointed for the purpose.

* A pencil note says that Sir E. Barrett was son of Dame Christian Leveson, daughter of Sir Walter Mildmay, married first to Sir Barrett. Sir E. Barrett was created Lord Newburgh by Charles I.

Fol. 25. 16 . . . June 15, Longford. (The Earl of) Shrewsbury to Sir Richard Lewson.—Thanks for past favours, and asks for further aid.

Fol. 26. 1631, Dec. 10, London. John Marsham to Sir Richard Leveson.—Asks for payment of some money. (Seal of arms.)

Fol. 27. 1633, Sept. 24, Forest Hill.—Jo. Normansell to Sir Richard Leveson.—Asks Sir Richard to be careful on whom he confers the parsonage of Kinnersley; Fouke Crompton having said that he had the next presentation, and would not dispose of it without Sir Richard's advice.—Asks Sir Richard and his lady to write to the Bishop of Lichfield, to induce him to give to Normansell a prebend there (then void) formerly possessed by N.'s uncle Baily.

Fol. 28. 1637, Feb. 19, Dutchie House.—E[duard Viscount] Newburgh to the postmasters at the several towns upon the road from London to West Chester.—Order to provide Sir Richard Leveson with four post-horses and a guide from stage to stage to West Chester, for himself and his companions, paying the usual rate.

Fol. 29. 1639, Feb. 26, Dutchie House. E. Newburgh to His Majesty's steward of the manor of Newcastle, co. Stafford, or his under-steward or deputy there.—Order to take the true quantity and number of acres of two pieces of land called the Lymes within the manor of Newcastle-under-Lyne, for the better preserving the rights of His Majesty's fee farmer (Mr. Saml. Terrick).

Fol. 30. 1641, May 20, Newcastle.—Edward Mainwaring to Sir Richard Leveson.—Acknowledges receipt of Sir R.'s two letters of the 10th and 11th, and the printed paper enclosed. Upon Tuesday following, being their court day at Newcastle, he caused an Assembly of the whole borough, and found all ready to make the Protestation. Whereupon the mayor, the minister, the aldermen, the schoolmaster, capital burgesses, and common burgesses, in all above 100, did publicly and solemnly pronounce it. He observed no want of alacrity.

Fol. 31. 1641, Sept. 1.—Thomas Crompton to Sir Richard Leveson.—Last night he received a letter from Lord Cromwell, dated 29 August, by which he finds the Scots are certainly gone, and that divers of the better sort are preferred to great titles; among the rest General Lesley is made an Earl. Our army is not yet disbanded for want of money; we want 150,000*l.*; but he hopes when the poll money comes, which cannot be long, that want will be supplied. Lord C. tells him that Parliament will certainly be prorogued that day sennight, being the 8th of that month, until the 20th of November next.

Fol. 32. 1642, April 28. Copy of a letter (1½ pages of small and close writing) to the knights of some shire, by their constituents, regarding the course to be adopted in Parliament; in reply to answer by the knights to the constituents' letter of the 5th. (It takes the King's side.)

Fol. 33. 1642, June 17, York. News letter (3 folio pages).—Arrived there on Wednesday evening, and found the King, Prince, and Duke of York well and cheerful; the Court full of Lords, many of the House of Commons and a multitude of other brave gentlemen.—York and the Northern parts loyal, a few inconsiderable men excepted. At present the King's guard of foot is 1,000, and of horse 200. No likelihood of levying a war against the Parliament. Does not hear of any intention to increase those numbers except upon extreme necessity. The King's going to Lincoln is yet uncertain. Lord Willoughby of Parham has done as much as may be in that county in performance of that ordinance of both Houses concerning the militia. . . . The truth thereof is not much unlike the business of Buckinghamshire and Leicestershire. One at Sir William Pelham's table in that county said that they had a gallant appearance at Lincoln, where there were only 15 of the trained band met, instead of some hundreds I think, and this being complained of to Lord Willoughby for a jeere, the captain was committed, and is now upon bail. The Mayor of Lincoln has delivered the key of the county magazine (which was in the city) to Lord Willoughby, and refused to publish His Majesty's proclamation. The King thereupon sent for him, but Lord Willoughby, who keeps a court of guard at Lincoln, as we hear, sent up the messenger to the Parliament, with 12 horse and pistols for his guard. It seems the Mayor of Leicester and divers gentlemen of the county opposed Lord Stamford's proceedings at Leicester. The King sent the Mayor a letter of thanks, and desires to know the rest of the gentlemen's names, that he may do the like to them. On Wednesday last the Earl of Manchester went hence to Newcastle to be governor there I hear of no danger yet from the Scots. . . . Tuesday last arrived the Earl of Bristol and Lord Paget, the latter having submitted to the King, and acknowledged the error of meddling with the militia of Buckinghamshire; and he and all the rest here did on Wednesday last subscribe certain articles, viz., to defend the King in his just rights, &c. . . . The King and Lords sate in Council on Wednesday afternoon. Certain propositions are to be sent up to both Houses; . . . with them the King will tender a full pardon to all except 12, viz., the six members formerly charged by him with treason, and Alderman Pennington, Mr. Venn, Sir Thomas Ludlow, Sir Peter Wentworth, Sir John Hotham, and Mr. Martin. Lord Fairfax, one of the committee here from the Commons, fell from his horse and broke two of his ribs last week. On Monday last a great stir here by some soldiers about the arrest of one of their fellows. It seems the Alderman at whose house the committee from both Houses lie, had some hand therein; the soldiers pulled down the posts at his door and broke his windows.—Mentions the King's answer to the second Remonstrance, and that unparalleled piece his answer to the third Remonstrance.—Commissions of array are in hand to go down to the several counties; the Commissioners in Warwickshire are the Earl of Northampton, Lord Dunsmore, &c., except such as Mr. Coombes and Mr. Purefoy, and others of that strain. Mr. George Sandon brought me yesterday to the Earl of Bristol, who told me that his nephew Lord Robert Digby died in Ireland last week. . . . This evening the messenger that was carried away from Lincoln towards London came to the Court, and the Mayor of Lincoln; for when they came to Grantham they better considered of the business, and so went no further. This evening came the Archbishop of York, and the Committee took leave of the King, and are to go to London speedily, all saving Lord Fairfax, who is hurt.

Fol. 34.—1642, June 6. (Sir) Edward Littleton to Sir Richard Leveson.—Tells him that an order has been made and printed that all members of the House of Commons who shall be absent on the 16th instant shall pay 100*l.* towards the war of Ireland. News that on Friday last was a great appearance at York: a petition of accommodation being to be presented, the Lord Savell (Savile) tore it in pieces; we have voted him and Lord Linsey incendiaries and enemies to the State; we sent down a messenger, which the malignant party have imprisoned. Sir, we have those affronts offered which never Parliament had, which is no small trouble to all honest men. The King declares, and we declare We are in preparation of defence. We have sent down divers of the House to see the militia put in execution. The King makes Lord Lieutenants and Deputies and his Commissions to be sent into all counties. The Scotch stand very right, and I could wish the English did so.

Fol. 35.—1642, Aug. 6. Order by the House of Commons that Sir Richard Leveson, Mr. Frances Newport, Sir Richard Lee, Sir Robert Howard, members of the House, be forthwith summoned by the Serjeant-at-Arms, his deputy or deputies, to make repair to the said House . . . to do their service there. Signed by Henry Elsing, Clerk of the Parliament. (Indorsed, Delivered by the messenger, 20 Aug. 1642, at Stafford.)

Fol. 36.—1642, Aug. 16, Beaudesert.—Will. Pagett to Sir Richard Leveson, Kt. Has received a commission from the King under the Great Seal of England for raising 1,200 foot for the defence of His Majesty's person, the two Houses of Parliament, the Protestant religion, the laws of the land, the liberty of the subject, and the privilege of Parliament; has "sent this gentleman one of my officers to beat up my drummes in your parts and about Newport." Asks Sir Richard's assistance.

n. d. The same to Sir R. Leveson, Baronett. Asks Sir Richard to meet him at Stafford on Saturday next, the 20th of August instant, upon special service for His Majesty.

Fol. 37.—1642, Sept. 2, Whitchurch. Letter by the Shropshire Commissioners of Array to the High Sheriff of the County of Stafford, recommending to him and the Commissioners of Array and the gentry of his county the result of their consultations at musters, the like whereof is sent to the other counties.—If acceptable, they desire to receive notice at Whitchurch on Thursday next, where some of them will weekly meet on that day to treat of their common security. Signed by (Earl) Rivers, Robert Killmorey, R. Cholmondeley, Tho. Savage, Tho. Aston, Tho. Cotton, John Weld, Ri. Lee, Tho. Hanmer, Paul Harris. (A copy of the Resolutions, dated 2 April 1642, is at fol. 41.)

1642, Sept. 5, Stone. Copy answer, addressed to the Sheriff by R. Leveson, Tho. Crompton, George Digby, Rafe Sneyde.—They decline "without supreme authority or greater motives of more demonstrable dangers" to raise the armes of their county."

DUKE OF SUTHER-
LAND.

DUKE OF SUTHER-
LAND.

Fol. 38. 1642, Sept. 3, Whitchurch. A letter to Sir R. Leveson, similar to the last but one above, signed by John Wild, Sheriff, Ri. Lee, Tho. Hammer, Paul Harris, Thom. Eyton, Richard Sneyd, Richard Lloyd, Franc. Ottley, Francis Thorns, Gerard Eyton.

1642, Dec. 13. Hu. Elliott to Sir Richard Leveson. One from the parts of Worcester (Worcester) and Hereford tells him that on Sunday morning the Earl of Stamford went away from Hereford, both bag and baggage, and left not anything in the town either of his or any others, for that it is said he plundered them in several (in several?), and set three houses afire to keep them in action that they might not pursue him. On Monday, news came to Worcester that their carriages could not pass, but that they were all in a dirty lane in the way towards Gloucester. . . . The Hereford people sent 700 horse after them, with what success not yet known. On Friday last Sir Hopton, who had promised the Earl of Stamford that he had 1000 dragoniers at four days' warning to be ready for his service, came into Ledbury and brought with him his colours and his drum, and there in a commanding manner called all the countrymen in order to bring in their dragonnes. The first man answered him that he had received His Majesty's book to the contrary, and that he durst not, lest he should be held a traitor. The others did answer alike, so that he went out of Ledbury, and his colours and drum were taken from him. It is said that Hopton has since come to Worcester and turned to the King's part. There is great store of horsemen in Bridgnorth, said to be the Earl of Chesterfield's servants, and likewise he himself, who has been lately plundered, and his lady much abused.

Fol. 41.—1642, Sept. 17, Court at Uttoxator. "Charles R." to Sir R. Leveson. Being informed that Sir Richard has in his custody four brass field-pieces and 40 new pike-staves, the King directs them to be brought to his magazine at Shrewsbury.

Fol. 41.—1642, Sept. 2. Copy of the seven Resolutions at Whitchurch of the Commissioners of Array.

Fol. 42.—1642, Sept. 25 and six following days. (Diary by some one in the town of Manchester attacked by the Earl of Derby.)—Sunday the 25th the Lord Strange (now since the Earl of Derby) came accompanied with Lord Molineux, Sir Gilbert Houghton, Sir Gilbert Gerrard (lately made colonel by His Majesty), Sir John Girlington, High Sheriff of Lancashire, Sir Thomas Middleton, Sir Alexander Radcliffe, Sir Thomas Barton, Sir Cecil Trafford, Sir John Talbott, and most of the gentry of the county, with all or great part of the trained and freehold bands in the county, and many Welchmen, in all 3,000 strong, with 5 troops of horse, troop under the command of his lordship, under Lord Molyneux, another under Captain Windebank, all dragooners, another under Capt. Barton, second son to the Earl of Lindsey, and another under the command of Capt. St. John, who was after slain; in the afternoon they, in two bodies, marched within musket-shot of the town, when some bullets were exchanged, no great harm done on either side, only a young boy slain on the town's side; both sides continued shooting from their centuries (sentries?) all that night. On Monday morning my lord sent for a parley, which was that the town would deliver up their arms and receive into the town a troop of horse, &c., &c. The town refused to billet any soldiers without consent of Parliament, or to deliver up their arms, which were their own, to be employed against the Great Council of the Kingdom, which they are bound to maintain in discharge of their late Protestation. His lordship's messenger threatened that the town should hear from him by the voice of cannon; the town said they expected no favour. About 2 p.m. his cannon began to play, and the town answered for about 7 hours. A barn at the end of the town and 8 houses were burned, but his lordship durst not approach the chains of the town. He lost in that attack above 120 men, as appears by the graves found in the fields about the town, and 5 men more were found in the sands of the river, and it is supposed that more were cast into the river, amongst whom was Mr. Mountain, a colonel of horse, and Capt. Skirton, and a lieutenant, with others of note. The town lost only 3 men. Of about 100 cannon's iron bullets none did harm except to houses, altho' they were 8 and 9 pounds in weight.—On Tuesday Lord Strange made another attack without success. Seven troopers, with their horses, were taken by the town, and one quartermaster shot, with the loss of two townsmen.—On Wednesday Lord Strange sent for another parley, and offered that if the town would give him 50 muskets he would take bag and baggage and begone. The town said they would not give him so much as a rusty dagger. Contrary to the truce, which was to have lasted the night, Lord Strange brought up some ordnance and planted them in Salford; he afterwards removed them (though with the loss of two men) or he would have gone home without them. One of the two slain was Capt. Standish, a gentleman of ancient family in Lancashire, who was to have married Mr. Archbould's kinswoman that married Sir John Harpur, of Cork.—On Thursday, about 10 o'clock, 100 musketeers, 50 pikes, and 50 halberds went out of the town to relieve a house near the town which Lord Strange's horse had taken. They were set upon by a troop of horse and about 100 musketeers; after an hour's fight most of the horse were driven into the river, and Capt. Snell and two more were drowned; the captain had two rings on his hand worth 80l. The town lost 5 men and had 8 more mortally wounded. On Lord Strange's side 13 were slain and two horsemen, well affected, taken prisoners.—On Friday Lord Strange's forces were so scattered that they durst not approach within pistol shot of the town.—On Saturday afternoon Lord Strange sent to the town for delivery of the prisoners, which were 85, in exchange for 16 whom he had taken, and this was done; and then he went away, with the loss of 220 men, as is conceived.

Fol. 43.—1642, Oct. 9, Salop. Ric. Weston to Sir Richard Leveson.—Finds that the Lords are possessed with a very ill opinion of the High Sheriff of Yorkshire, for they are certain he first invited Hotham to rally out of Hull, and are informed that he and Hotham were the first breakers of the capitulation, which has occasioned much trouble in the North; he is put from his office of sheriff, and Sir Richard Hutton succeeds him: his two brethren here in the army committed and cashiered from their several places. The troop in which he (Weston) is listed is commanded to march to-morrow. There is a rumour that the Earl of Derby has gotten the arms from Manchester, and will be here on Tuesday. The King intends to remove hence on Wednesday; his forces are great and increase daily. It is conjectured he will be above 25,000 strong before three days' march. The trained foot of this county he leaves behind to guard the town and county, and will leave in the town a garrison as great as they will require, and ammunition and ordnance.

Fol. 44. 1642, Oct. 25, Warwick Castle. (Copy.) Robert (Earl of) Essex to the King.—Begins, Most high and mighty illustrious Lord, the glimmering light of my life by which I now live, the law of my own conscience, hath taken from me, &c. (He asks the King's pardon for his rebellious acts.)

Fol. 45. 1643, June 13, Shrewsbury.—Arthur Capell to Sir R. Leveson. A printed paper, directing him to send four horses, men, and horse-arms, for the King's service, to Shrewsbury, by Monday the 19th of June, to the Red Lion, there to be received and listed. A MS. addition says that only two horse are expected, to make up those formerly sent, four in all.

Fol. 47. 1644, July 4, Evesham. The King's message to the Lords and Commons.

1644, Sept. 8, Tavistock. The King's message to the Lords and Commons.

(Both these are printed in the "Reliquiæ Carolinæ," and elsewhere.)

Fol. 46. 1644, Jan. 11. Copy of Propositions made at a meeting of the lords and gentlemen of the associated counties of Worcester, Salop, Hereford, and Stafford.—Twelve propositions, the first being that His Majesty would be pleased to declare Prince Charles his Highness, to be general of these associated forces.

Fol. 48. 1645, Nov. 20. Engagement to Col. Croxton (signed by Sir Richard Leveson) that, inasmuch as Col. Croxton has allowed him to go to Trentham for health and business, he will return to Namptwich and render himself a prisoner as before within 28 days after date.—Signed by Ri. Lee, Edw. Kinaston, Roger Whittacer, John Doodie, and Richard Atkins, as sureties for the performance by Sir Richard of his parole.

On the other half of the sheet of paper, Whittacer, Doodie, and Atkins sign an undertaking to pay to Marshal Travers all sums that Sir Richard stands engaged for, for the fees or diet of prisoners lately released from Namptwich, if Sir Richard do work his enlargement, be summoned to London, or do not return according to his engagement.

Fol. 49. 1645, Dec. 20. Engagement signed by Sir Richard Leveson, that as Sir William Brereton has allowed him to stay at Trentham for 14 days more, he will return to Namptwich and render himself a prisoner within 14 days after date.—Lee, Kinaston, Whittacers, and Doodie sign as sureties.

Fol. 50. 1645, Nov. 3, Nov. 12, Nov. 20, and Dec. 12. —Four passes, signed by (Col.) Thomas Croxton, for 1. Henry Smith, servant to Sir Richard; 2. Mr. Robson and Robert Grimes, servants of Sir Richard; 3. Sir Richard, with men and horses; 4. Mrs. Jane Brerewood, going from Namptwich to Peover.

Fol. 51. 1645, Dec. 16, Namptwich. Matth. Graners to Sir Richard Leveson.—Sends enlargement of parole for 14 days.

1645, Dec. 20, Namptwich. (Col.) Thomas Croxton to all commanders, officers, &c. Gives notice that Sir Richard Leveson has had his parole enlarged by Sir William Brereton for 14 days.

Fol. 52. (1646.) Foom of a warrant for pardon, under the Great Seal to, and restitution of lands of, Sir R. Leveson, he having been admitted to a fine of . . . l., for deserting to the Parliament and adhering to the enemies thereof.

Fol. 53. Rentall of the estate of Sir R. Leveson in the co. of Salop, delivered to the Committees [at Goldsmiths' Hall] upon oath.

Fol. 54. 1646, Feb. 27. Copy order by the Commissioners for compounding with Delinquents, that Sir R. Leveson having paid and secured the fine imposed upon him for his delinquency, the trunks, cabinets, hampers, boxes, and bags of writings, papers, court rolls, books, and evidences belonging to him and deposited in Mr. Edward Jones's and Mr. Proude's houses in Shrewsbury, should be re-delivered to him. Signed by T. Lincoln, Manchester, Mulgrave, Antho. Irby, Hen. Darley, D. Watkins, John Ashe, Robert Jenner.

Fol. 55. 1646, March 9. Pass signed by Wm. Lenthall, Speaker, for Sir R. Leveson and six servants (named), with his coach and horses, to go from London to Trentham in Staffordshire, or Linsell in Shropshire, and back.—Addressed to all courts of guard, officers, and others whom it concerneth.

Fol. 51. Copy (2 pp.) of the Engagement and declaration of the grand jury, freeholders, and other inhabitants of the county of Essex, in pursuance of their late petition presented to both Houses of Parliament the 4th of May 1648. (It is in favour of the King.)

Fol. 62. 1648, March 29. A letter signed "Jero-boham," addressed to Mr. Tho. Langley, Esq. . . . For news, three counties of Wales are risen for his Majesty, as also 2,000 of Major Langhorne's soldiers are gone to Col. Poyer; they have relieved him, and taken all their ordnance and ammunition; slain many. Among the rest, Col. Fleming is missing. They have taken Tinbey (Tenby) castle, as also a ship that lay before Pembroke Castle, by name the Expedition, with all the men and arms. An express last night, thus: the Parliament of Scotland have sent them [the Westminster men] their last resolution, and that in three votes, 1. They will maintain the King; 2. They will draw their kingdom into a posture of defence, and that with an army; 3. That they will send 12 of their Lords and Commons to treat with the like number of ours here, and they shall debate their business concerning both kingdoms, and will send 12 hostages hither, and the Parliament must send the like number thither. They also demand Manchester, Say, Wharton, with one or two lords more, with Martin and Vane, and many more of that faction, and that their Parliament is to end the 29th of this March.

. . . . Last night we drank the King's health, in abundant manner, being his coronation-day, and much celebrated it with ringing of bells and bonfires more than ordinary. . . . The Parliament would fain drawe the City in again, but the tome foolcs begin to be wiser; they proffer them the militia in their own hands, as they had it formerly, and the Tower also, and they will now release their aldermen and much more; but two words must go to a bargain.

Fol. 59. 1648, July 20, The Ligure before Colchester. —Protection for the house at Trentham of Sir R. Leveson, and his person, family, horses, cattle, sheep, and other goods. Signed by T. Fairfax, sealed with his crest, and addressed to all officers and soldiers under his command.

Fol. 60. 1648, Oct. 18. Pass for Sir R. Leveson to go from Staffordshire to London about his composition, and to return. Signed by T. Fairfax, and sealed with his seal of arms (16 quarters), and addressed to all officers and soldiers under his command.

Fol. 61. 1648, Jan. 10, Queen Street. Permission for Sir Richard Leveson (he having made his composition with the Parliament) to reside in town with his servants, &c., and to go to Trentham and return. Signature of T. Fairfax, and his crest.

Fol. 56. 1648, Jan. 12. Licence (by virtue of the powers given by the order of the House of Commons of the 5th of January instant), signed by Fran. Allein, for Sir R. Leveson to reside in London, or within 12 miles thereof, for 28 days, about the business of his composition.

Fol. 57. 1648, Feb. 2. Protection for Lady Leveson's horses in Trentham Park, co. Stafford, and Linsell Park, co. Salop. Signed by T. Fairfax, and sealed with his coat of 16 quarters.

Fol. 63. 1649, May 12. Copy order of the House of Commons (signed by Henry Scobell, Clerk of the Parliament), that the cases of the delinquents standing for consideration that day, touching the mitigation of their fines, and also the cases of William Bassett, of Claverton, co. Somerset, and Sir Richard Leveson, should be taken into consideration that day sevenight.

Fol. 64. 1650, Jan. 15. Receipt (partly printed and partly written), by Richard Waring and Michael Herring, treasurers of the moneys to be paid into Goldsmiths' Hall, to Sir Richard Leveson, for 1,923*l.* in full of his 6,000*l.* (over and above 3,846*l.* allowed for rectories by him settled towards maintenance of the ministers, and for interest due on the latter moiety, 136*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*), imposed on him by the Parliament of England as a fine for his delinquency to the Commonwealth.

Fol. 65. One page (probably written by Sir Richard Leveson while a prisoner at Namptwich), stating his desire to put in bail before Sir W. Brereton, "or the Governor of this garrison, as I did for my return when "I went lately to Trentham," for his appearance at Goldsmiths' Hall, rather than be taken to Shrewsbury for that purpose.

Fol. 66. A poem "On Oxford Mayors Election." Begins,—

It was when good Autumnus sheds the leaves,
That Mace from Mayor, as boughs from trees bereaves.
(60 lines, 17th century.)

Fol. 67.—A true relation of the battle of Edge Hill. 1 p. (Stated at the end to have been commanded by His Majesty to be written, and to be sent to the Commissioners of Array in Cheshire.)

Fol. 68. 16—, Oct. 30, Oxford. An unsigned letter to Mr. Bushill, giving a short notice of the battle [of Edgehill] This morning news was that Essex, Brooke, and their forces are marched to Northampton, and it is thought to meet with Sir John Hotham, to lay down arms by reason they be but 7,000 foot, most of their horse being cut off. (1 p.)

Fol. 69. (1648, March 19.) Long news letter of three pages, giving an account of the battle of Hopton Heath, near Stafford, where the King's army defeated the rebels. The writer is very severe in his remarks on the rebels, for refusing to give up the body of the Earl of Northampton, except on the terms of receiving back their eight drakes and ammunition, and prisoners taken by the royalists.

Fol. 70. [1658], Sept. 16. News letter (2 pp.). "My servant Moses is dead," was Mr. Hugh Peters' text on Sunday last. . . . Although Lord Lockhart of Dunkirk has often moved that Gravelin (being a maritime town) should, according to the articles, be surrendered by the French to the English, the French will give no ear unto it; and, which is worse, news letters come every day, informing of the lamentable mortality amongst the English; and yet there are more of the old soldiers, 20 out of every company, that are ordered by the Council to be still transmitted into Flanders; be-like to make a rare experiment if death or the grave can be surfeited or not. It was spoken all about London that the Lord Berkstead, Governor of the Tower, is dead; but it is not so. As his tailor was taking his measure to make him a mourning suit for His Highness, he was corrupted by a dead palsy, a shrewd disease, and which I believe that, although a long time it may keep him company, yet none but the resurrection can cure. I am informed that the Lady Claypoole, a great lover of plays and piety, did on her death-bed beseech His Highness to take away the High Court of Justice, and spake words which, leaving a deep impression on his heart, did accompany him his rdy rdyos idior. We have printed and published a libell representing that if their must be a protector over this nation, to govern as a single magistrate, it would doe better in the person of the King of Scotland then of any other, which would reduce all things into its lawfull and primitive channell, and be the happy mother of peace and union in the nations. This is highly resented, and much adoe their is to find out the printer and the publisher of the said libell. I am also credibly informed that many officers of the army have put forth a remonstrance, desiring that the nation may be governed by a parliament, according to their institution, after their dissolution of Kingshippe; but this bites as shrewd as the other, and the Long Parliament have showed to all posterity what may be expected from such men of God (as the pulpits then flattered them), and from such worthies of our Israel. I made mention in my last of an effigies of wax made to represent his late Highness. The charge of the wayters is great, &c. It is therefore not to continue above 14 days at the farthest. In the meantimes black velvet is bought all London over to hang in Whitehall and Somerset House; and because men cannot mourn enough for the death of His Highness, the stones and walls are taught to do it. It is not amiss to conclude that the Swedes have bin stoutly repulsed from Copenhagen, and there is such a mortality in the army, by reason of theyr luxury, and not burying the garbidge of the beasts which they have brought in to feed them, that they are ready of themselves to rase the seige, having bin five times notably repulsed by the Dances.

Fol. 71. A news letter of 1 page. Begins, Cardinal Mazarin is at last come to Paris, being met by the King himself and received in his own coach. He arrived there the 4th of February, new style, in the afternoon, &c. (French news.)

Fol. 72. 1645, Feb. 1. Copy of articles between the commissioners appointed on behalf of Lord Byron, Field Marshal General of North Wales and Governor of Chester, of the one part, and the commissioners on behalf of Sir William Brewerton [Brereton], Baronet, Commander-in-Chief of all the force in Cheshire, and at the Leager before Chester, on the other part, for the surrender of the city of Chester and the fort thereof. 18 articles. (2½ pp.)

Fol. 73. [1625.] Copy (4 pp.) of the speech of the Speaker of House of Commons to the King, on the occasion of his being chosen Speaker.

Fol. 74. [1642?] Copy of a Declaration or the Resolutions of the county of Hereford They resolve to maintain, 1. Protestant religion; 2. The King's just power; 3. The laws of the land; 4. The liberty of the subject. (This declaration is in favour of the King.) 2½ pp.

Fol. 75. 1657, Aug. 25, and 1658, Oct. 24. Two friendly short letters from C. Derby (Charlotte de la Tremouille Countess of Derby, the defender of Lathom House against the rebels) to Sir Richard Leveson.

Fol. 76.—1649, April 16, London. . . . to . . . 'Tis true the peace is concluded in France between the Queen and the Parliament of Paris; he (the writer) has seen letters from Paris saying that the Cardinal was not banished as it was demanded; he thinks that the Cardinal will revenge himself on the Italians. Those of Rouen and elsewhere bless themselves for their peace, and speak as if after a general one is made (as they are about it) all the neighbours Princes under the young King's banners will make a conquest of their land. The same letter advises a friend of mine to depart hence betime; to this purpose it shall not be amiss to send you a kind of prophesie that runs thus:—Grebnerius was in England with Queen Elizabeth, and presented her with a fair MS. in Latin, describing therein the whole future history of Europe, here and there limning in water colours some principal passages for turnes in the world of after ages. Dr. R. Nevill, then Dean of the Closet, very intimate with the Queen, got this book of her, and bestowed it on the library of Trinity College, Cambridge, where it hath lain public to the eyes of all beholders ever since. About five years since it was much defaced. In these predictions he described the troubles of Russia, and mentions the election of the Swedish King, Sigismund, King of Polonia, by which he should loose his inheritance; that of the Swedish usurper's race there should be one, Gustavus Adolphus by name, who should take a hint from the distractions in Germany to enter that empire with a small army, and really (really) into a mighty force, and fight many battels prosperously, but at the last pitched field he should perish. Then about that time should reign another Northern king, nomine Carolus, "qui ducet uxorem Mariam papisticam ex qua evadet regum omnium infelicissimus; tum populus ipsius ditionis eligit alium regem comitem qui durabit in imperio tres annos aut circiter, et postea idem populus sibi eliget alium regem equitem, non ejusdem familie nec honoris, qui detrudet sub pedibus suis omnia aliquando longiore tempore, et post hunc nullum. Paulo post apparebit quidem Carolus a Carolo descendens ab immensa classe in littus ditionis patris sui, et cum auxiliis Suedicis, Danicis, Hollandicis, Francicis, et Hispanicis prosternabit adversarios suos et administrabit imperium suum felicissime et erit Carolo magno major."*

Fol. 77.—1654, May 20, Rouen.—L. to Mr. John Langley at Trentham.— . . . Our merchants are joyful of the long-desired peace between England and Holland; they expect in brief to hear of the like between France and England. The King of the Scots is to have from the King of France 20,000 pistoles, and to go to Chambery to his aunt in Savoy, with the promise of an annual pension (if Mazarin will spare it) out of the King's coffer, who is profuse beyond measure in his plays and like shows, according to the Italian mode, to busy the King about toys and fooleries while he governs all the kingdom at will Though once he could call in derision and reproach all them that were for the Prince of Condé, Cromwells, out of ratione di stato, they are now good friends, as it appears by their great intelligence.—A report that Amsterdam will not henceforth acknowledge the young Prince of Orange their governor, as free to choose when and whom they please. The 1st of May last was the day the Queen of Sweden had set down to surrender her crown to her cousin Charles, Prince Palatine The King of France is to go to Rheims to be anointed with their miraculous oil and to be crowned.

1654, June 7. Jo. le Quesne to Sir Richard Leveson. —Notwithstanding Mazarin's subtle suggestion to the contrary, the King of France would go to Rheims to be crowned. The government of the province of Alsace being promised to M. de Harcourt, if he would surrender the town of Brisach into the king's hands, [he] did condescend to it; he, upon confidence of the agreement, went out of the town with some of his friends, came in again, went to the captain's house; being arrested, found a letter from Mazarin among his papers to take some good opportunity to lay hold on M. de Harcourt. The new politicians promise, and give order to break promise, all with one breath. The treaty between Sweden and England reported to be concluded but not signed.

Fol. 78.—1656, April 8, London. Jean le Quesne to Sir R. Leveson.—Mentions the successes of the King of Sweden against the King of Poland, and the anger of the Pope thereat. The Pope wants to effect a general peace, particularly a peace between France and Spain. To this purpose he has proclaimed a Jubilee, with plenary indulgence and general pardon, extending even to cases reserved to himself, to them that shall visit so many churches, &c., &c., and pray for rooting out the new heretics sprung up in the Catholic Church (he meaneth those that uphold Jean Sanius (Jansen's) opinions) The King of France is to answer the Pope's solicitations, who greatly taxes him for joining with the enemies of his Church in a peace and confederacy with Cromwell and with the King of Sweden. His Ambassador at Rome presented the Pope a letter from the King of France, and another "from Mazarin showing a great zeal for a general peace, nevertheless with this proviso, that it might be after this summer." The Pope stormed, and said he saw the Court of France was not inclined to peace, and denounced Mazarin's ambition, and alluded to Mazarin having prevented a peace between France and Spain at the meeting at Munster, when he (the Pope) was then Nuncio from Rome. "Lately 500 persons have left the town of Avignon to become Protestants, who have dispersed themselves in several towns in France."

Fol. 80.—1660, June 21, London. Charles Talbot to Sir Richard Leveson.—Says that since he came from Dover, waiting upon the King to London, he had given Sir Richard an account of the landing. The House of Commons did on Tuesday last, after excepting seven from the Pardon for life, and finishing "the twentieth for estate," grant the King for his life Tonnage and Poundage and proceed upon Poll money, and are restoring the King's and Queen's lands, and have voted 20,000*l.* to her out of the taxes. There are six Commissioners for the Treasury and Navy, that is, the General, the Earl of Southampton, Marquis of Ormond, two Secretaries of State, and one more; and the King is making lords and deputy lieutenants for every county. . . . As yet we ride 200 gentlemen of quality and officers as a guard to the King's person, and guard him by turn day and night (with the General's life guard) in the court on foot. . . . Mentions his (Talbot's) brother Langley. Says that the King has made his (Talbot's) brother Sir Gill. (Sir Giles Talbot) Master of the Jewel House, and knighted his (Charles Talbot's) son Jack, who is also sworn of the Privy Chamber in ordinary. The General has given him a troop of horse in the army; his second son is to have a troop at Dunkirk, and his youngest son is equerry to the Duke of Gloucester.

Fol. 81.—1660, May 29, London. Charles Talbot to Sir R. Leveson.—The King landed at Dover on the 25th, and this day arrived at London. Says he was one of the first that kissed the King's hand at his landing, and doubts not to be to him (as to his grandfather and father) a servant during life. On Saturday last, the King, at Canterbury, knighted Monck, and Winchilsey with Mordant for leading him up. After the Dukes of York and Gloucester leading Monck up to the King (Sir Ed. Walker leading them up), he made him Knight of the Garter, the King putting the George about his neck, and the Duke of York the Garter upon his leg, and the cloak with the Star was delivered him by the Herald, after reading of a parchment which declared that (for his princely blood and signal services he had done him) he did declare and make him one of the Honourable Order of the Garter, which emperors had desired, and that he should be farther considered.

1660, Nov. 24, London. Charles Talbot to Sir Richard Leveson.—Says he has spoken to Lord Brook about Sir Richard's commission for a troop, which shortly will be ready.—Says that the Parliament is to be dissolved the 20th of next month.

Fol. 82. 1660, April 26, London. Samuel Terricke to Sir Richard Leveson. This day the House has appointed a committee touching elections, and returned hearty thanks to the General for his great service done towards a settlement, and appointed this day fortnight for this place for a day of thanksgiving for God's mercies towards these distracted nations. It said there is a letter come to town from the King, to be presented to the Lords' House to be communicated to the House of Commons. The Protestant ministers of Rochelle and other places in France have given a large character of the King's constancy to the Protestant religion.

Fol. 83. 1660, May 3, London. Samuel Terricke to Lady Katherine Leveson.—His letter of the 1st of May told of the King's letters and declarations. . . . The 50,000*l.* is ordered to be forthwith paid to His Majesty, and 10,000*l.* the City presents him. A committee is appointed to take off all records of the Journal in the House of Commons since 1646 that are to the prejudice of the King. . . . In consideration of the Court of Wards, the House has allowed the King 100,000*l.* yearly.

Fol. 84. 1660, Nov. 17, London.—Samuel Terricke to Sir Richard Leveson. A Bill is preparing for settling 80*l.* yearly upon every minister forth of the Dean and Chapter's estate, which is agreed upon between His Majesty and the clergy; six months' tax at 70,000*l.* a month passed last Wednesday for paying of the navy and remainder of the army; two regiments of horse and seven of foot yet to be disbanded. Poll money comes short of what is expected; a renew will be had thereof. The ambassadors of Holland have presented His Majesty with a rich bed, thought worth 10,000*l.*, and 50,000*l.* in rarest pictures the world affords; there is a speech for a match with the King of Portugal's sister.—Notices some of the Parliament's votes of the 16th.—Mr. Calamy will be Bishop of Coventry and Lichfield. Serjeant Hales is Lord Chief Baron.

Fol. 85. 1660, Nov. 22, London. Samuel Terricke to Sir Richard Leveson. Mentions yesterday's votes in the House.

1660, Dec. 8, London. The same to Mr. John Langley at Trentham.

Fol. 86. 1660, Dec. 8, London. The same to Sir Richard Leveson.—No Bishop yet assigned for Lichfield and Coventry. Calamy that was intended is made Provost of Eton and Dean of some other place.

Fol. 87. 1660 May 1, Inner Temple. Sam. Baldwyn to Sir Richard Leveson. As soon as the House of Commons met this morning a letter was delivered by Sir Jo. Greenville (a Gent. of the King's bedchamber) to the Speaker, with a declaration inclosed. 'Twill come out in print speedily. (Baldwyn mentions the King's offers, and the speakers in, and proceedings of, the House after the reading of the letter.) . . . This place is transported with joy; the bells ring and bone fires are expected in every street.

Fol. 89. 1661, May 30. Rob. Milward to Sir R. Leveson.—Many are desirous to restore the impropriations to the right owners, but as yet it is not a fit time, though there is a Bill drawn.—Mentions the Bill to repeal the Act against Bishops and restore them to their votes in the House of Lords; and a vote that day for a Bill for a voluntary contribution for the present relief of his Majesty's necessities. " 'Tis thought the Presbyterians, who were most forward for it, will give freely. " I think there is not much expected from the Cavaliers; " some worthy persons of that party are not pleased " with this vote."

Fol. 90. 1661, May 25. Rob. Leveson to Mr. John Langley at Trentham. Cannot wait on Sir Richard on Monday, but before Saturday will wait on Langley at Trentham.—Here is no news, the Parliament not sitting this day. The King and the Duke of York are gone by water down the [river], where the Duke treats the King.

Fol. 54. 1646, Oct. 1, Goldsmiths' Hall. At the Committee for compounding with delinquents. Order that Sir R. Leveson shall pay 9,876*l.* as a fine for delinquency. But if he settle the rectories of Trentham being of the value of 90*l.* per annum, Barlaston being of the value of 50*l.* per annum, Sheriff Hales being of the value of 60*l.* per annum, Lilleshall being of the value of 80*l.* per annum, Treshall and Seisdon being of the value of 20*l.* per annum, upon the several ministers and their successors for ever, then the fine will be 6,000*l.*, half to be paid in hand, the remainder in three months. Signed Jo. Leech.

Vol. III.

Fol. 2. 1642, Sept. 16, High Ercall.—Sir Richard Newport to his brother (in law) Sir Richard Leveson.—By what you write of Lord Strange, that he is to join with the King at Chester, it may be conjectured that his lordship comes not to this county before the King; yet it is not certain but he may (he having an intention when I last writ unto you to have sent for me to him if he had then come) send to the sheriff 51, who are to be commanded by him to have me to subscribe to certain protestations, conclusions, and agreements which the Commissioners of Array have subscribed unto, and send about to others to get their hands unto, so that if it please you to accomplish my desire in my former letter (a copy whereof I send), &c.

In the former letter (a copy of which is with the above) Newport asks Sir R. Leveson to use his interest with Lord Strange that he (Newport) may not be made to engage himself to either side, so that he may use his influence to compose differences between them, as he had done on a former occasion.

Fol. 3. 1652, July 20. Rachell Newport to her brother Sir R. Leveson. . . . Lady Alice Egerton was married last week to the Earl of Carborough, she being his third wife, and he having divers children. Sir Robert Harley married his eldest daughter this week to the late Lord Derby's brother's son Mr. Stanley; the portion 1,500*l.*, jointure 300*l.*, maintenance 40*l.*, settled 500*l.* The Marquis Dorchester is presently to marry with the Lady Derby's second daughter; he asks no portion but what she will give her when she is able, but takes her for love. . . . The Earl of Worcester is taken and committed to the Tower. . . 30 or 40 of the Dutch fishing boats were taken by us; they were all sent home with a charge not to come and fish in our seas any more.

1657, Nov. 14. The same to the same. Little news, only the great wedding at Court on Wednesday last, and continues yet; the Lord Falconbridge with the Lady Mary will be next, all things being concluded. Lady Middlesex is still in the west, and I hope will there continue; her lord is wonderful brave in town, and I hope will think no more of her.

Fol. 4. 1658, July 13. The same to the same.—A fresh report of the death of the King of France. His Highness has made Lord Pembroke and his lady friends, and I hear Lord Middlesex will endeavour the same, now he has sold all her plate, most of the household stuff, and all Lord Bath's library: all goes in play and rioting. My daughter Bromley has a son come from Virginia; he has been there almost four years, and there is no profit to be had there, trading is so poor.

Fol. 5. 1658, July 20. The same to the same. . . On Friday and Saturday last came out of the Tower Lord Cleveland, Mr. John Russell, Sir William Compton, Sir Richard Willis, Col. Covert, and some others. The Duchess and Duke of Richmond are safe arrived in France from her creditors; great store of her servants are turned off, and her estate put into friends' hands to pay debts, which are very great. The Dutch ships are westward again, and they to return the East India ships of ours. Lord Dorchester's daughter was married to Lord Rosse on Thursday last, 10,000*l.* being paid down, and more promised after death. Sir William Whitmore's match is made up with Merchant Harvey's daughter, 10,000*l.* being the portion. The King of France is alive and dead every 24 hours. . . . We are sending great store of men into Flanders.

1658, July 27. The same to the same. Lord Shrewsbury, your neighbour, is in motion to two sisters, Mr. Brudnell's daughters by two wives, the elder living with her grandfather, the Lord Bru[denell], being unhand-some and crooked, the younger tolerable; it is thought he will not have the elder. Yesterday, the 26th, my son Newport went out of town (for Trentham). It is reported that Gravelines is besieged; great want of rain, and the town very empty.

Fol. 6. 1658, Aug. 3. London. The same to the same. . . His Highness, with his family, is settled at Hampton Court; Lady Claypole being still very ill, and the physicians much fearing her. There is a hot report now of a coronation which shall be shortly, but it is not believed until it is seen done. On Thursday last Lord Bridgman's daughter was married to Sir Thomas Slingsby, whose father was lately beheaded. There being a very great wedding kept upon Saturday last, I was invited, being one of the bride's kindred and friends, and to avoid unkindness I went; since I kept no coach of my own, six miles out of town going and coming was a great journey. The town is extreme empty, and the flux begins again in the town to be very hot to []; very hot and dry weather. Lord Falconbridge and his lady came out of the North last week, he being presented at York with a pair of silver flagons and 60*l.* in gold; the like was done to my Lord Richard at Bristol. My cousin Dodington, that married Lady Temple's daughter, has bought the Remembrancer's office in the Exchequer, which office formerly the Fanshaws had.

1658, Oct. 5. The same to the same.—Lady Manchester died this day sennight of a wheezing and shortness of breath, her lungs growing fast to her sides; . . . though her lord and she have been accounted great Precisioners, she would have none but a Cavalier minister to absolve her at her death, and desired her lord to give him 10*l.* for a legacy. Lord Harry speedily coming out of Ireland; he is lately made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and has power to make a deputy. Judge Windham and Judge Weelis, their judges' places are taken from them, because in their last circuit the country places complained of their ministers that they would not administer sacrament to them. Lord Bristol is very sick in Flanders, and his lady gone over to him.

Fol. 7. 1658, Oct. 12. The same to the same. . . The news now is of our new Lord General, the Lord Fleetwood; the army petitioning to His Highness for it, and he refusing it modestly; but they resolved to have him or Desborough; now they say he must not be called Lord General, but must have the whole power of the soldiers and militia in his hands, and nobody else have anything to do with them. Alderman Allen and his wife were both buried together last week; a mighty funeral, and he died a very rich man; how it was gotten God knows. The Lord Harry is not to come to England; he must look to keep that he hath in Ireland, for there is no more to be got here.

1658, Oct. 26. The same to the same. . . Col. Pride is lately dead. The soldiers are not yet contented, but they say will petition for a Parliament. His Highness's effigies has lain in state to be seen, and his funeral will be the 9th of next month. A world of sickness in all countries round about London. London is now held the wholesomest place. . . There is a great death of coach-horses almost in every place, and it is come into our fields. P.S. My Lord of Shrewsbury's match with Mrs. Brudenell is off, and is made up to Sir John Yates his daughter.

Fol. 8. 1658, Dec. 14. The same to the same.—Lady Dorset has been to Dover to send her two eldest sons into France. . . Mr. Pierpoint went yesterday to Sir John Evelyn's, to the marriage of his eldest son, which is to be on Thursday. Sir Richard Temple and his sisters are gone out of town. We had a great wedding at my Lady Whitmeare's, her daughter marrying with a merchant's son. It is thought the Opera will speedily go down; the godly party are so much discontented with it. Writs are out for a new Parliament, but nobody knows whether they will sit or no, the Levelling party is so much discontented.

Fol. 4. 1658, Jan. 4. The same to the same.—Much sickness in the town, especially feavers, agues, and the small-pox. . . A report that Lord Devonshire's son, Lord Cavendish, going out of France into Italy by sea was taken by the Turks; we hope it is not true, because a friend of Andrew's who we thought to be with him, we received a letter from him yesterday from Florence. Lord Goring, son to my Lord Norwich, is married, or shortly to be married, to a rich widow, Mrs. Baker, he having no fortune of his own. Mr. William is come from Guernsey, and quite released out of prison, but his brother John who came with him is gone this day to the Tower again.

Fol. 8. 1660, March 27. The same to the same.—Yesterday came out a very strict proclamation against all disturbers of the present government, and against agitators, offering 10*l.* a man for any that shall be brought in. It is reported that Okey is up in Bedfordshire with three of the regiments; two of the three are to be disbanded suddenly. Scott, they say, is one of the authors of this business, who desire to set up the Bump again. Several of the countries there are rising, and many of the General's soldiers are gone out against them; it is feared some of them are inclined that way, especially the discontented officers; it is reported he should have been murdered amongst them, if God had not prevented it.

Fol. 9. 1660, April 21. The same to the same.—Lambert was near being taken this week, being hid at a house in Millbank at Westminster; the house was beset with soldiers to take him; he had intelligence, and then dressed himself in woman's clothes and a mask, gave 10*l.* to a neighbour to break a wall to pass through the house; a coach being ready, he was conveyed away immediately. Desborough, Hough, and some others are taken at Homeby (Holmby); they talk and vapour much, but I hope it will come to nothing.

1660, April 28. The same to the same. I wrote to you on Tuesday last of the great appearance in Hyde Park both of horse and foot, a great number of them volunteers, many of them persons of quality. Monck was not there, but stayed for the examination of Lambert, who told him he was invited to it by part of the army, to which Monck told him he did believe it an untruth; he and those that were taken prisoners with him were that night sent prisoners to the Tower, and are kept very close. On Wednesday the House sat, and part of the Lords, divers of the Lords being kept out; but yesterday so many went in that I hear 40 were in the House. No Oxford Lords are admitted yet, but it is believed all will [be] next week. They have sent for Lords Oxford and Southampton, and the rest will follow. On Wednesday the Upper House sent to the Lower to desire a conference, which some few withstood, but it was carried by the major part against them. . . . Sir Harbottle Grimston is made Speaker . . . P.S. They have agreed for Monday to be set apart for a fast.

1660, Mayday. The same to the same.—A joyful day; a letter was read in the House from the King, wherein he refers all to the Parliament concerning himself; . . . also a declaration from him, wherein he is ready to forgive all offenders that seek for pardon, &c. . . . Luke Robinson stood up and recanted, and promises what a faithful subject he will be to the King. He was the first that spoke after the letter was read. Lambert has attempted twice to make his escape since he was taken. . . . York was like to be surprised by some of his party. My Lord Brook hath his castle again, and turned out the Governor and put in one of his own.

Fol. 11. 1660, May 26. The same to the same.—The King came to Dover upon Friday, but lay at anchor upon the Downs at least a day, waiting for the coming of the General. As soon as he landed and the General received him, he fell on his knees a good while, and gave thanks to God, as was supposed; from thence he went to Canterbury, and this night 'tis said he lies at Cobham, &c. &c. . . . To-morrow night we intend to bury her (Rachel Bromley, who died on the night of the 25th) in Great St. Bartholemew, in my grandfather Mildmay's vault.

Fol. 11. 1661, April 30. The same to the same.—Great preparations for the coronation to-morrow, and the next day the making of six new Earls and six new Barons. . . . Our cousin Lady Bath hath got her place of being Lady Bath again, it cost her 1,200*l.*; she has made two Knights of the Bath, George Fane's son, and Sir Chichester Raye's son; her lord is very angry at her changing her title; he says it is an affront to him. The Duchess, my sister's mother, has been ill of a fever. Lord Lee continues weak and ill. . . . Lord Bruncard's (Brouncker's) brother is either married or as good to the Widow Germine; great jointure and great personal estate. Glin is recovered of the fall he had when he was riding with the King; they jeer him in the town, and say he vomited up a great deal of Penruddock's blood, whom he condemned in the West. Last night was the funeral of the young Duchess of Richmond, who died in childbed.—Kellsey hath got a pass from the King to go beyond sea; under that colour they did take Fewson and Dakey with him, but they are brought back again. Yesterday the King did drive a chariot in Hyde Park with two horses. A proclamation is coming out forbidding all sorts of lace silver, bone lace, black or white, but what is made in England to be worn.

Fol. 12. 16 . . , Sept. 27. Eli. Newport to (Sir R. Leveson).

Fol. 13. 16 . . , Sept. 4, n. s., Amiens. R.N. to Andrew (Newport).—'Foreign news.—'Tis strange to hear of the dissensions amongst the exiled English, Scotch, and Irish in Flanders: I met with a captain of Lord Newburgh's regiment in Calais, who told me that he was fled thence three days before from Newport, for having killed Lord Newburgh in the streets; the occasion given was that his Lordship struck at him with a cudgel; but the fellow is a senseless officer, which makes me hope his relation is false. The next day I saw a relation of a quarrel under my [Lord Taffe's] hand between him and a Scotchman of my acquaintance, one Sir William Keith; the dispute was only for three royals and a half at tennis. Sir Wm. Keith was slain upon the place; upon this great occasion also were engaged four persons besides the principals. Upon Taffe's side Dick Talbot fought and wounded Dick Hopton in two places; and on Taffe's side again one Davis fought with Sir William Fleming, but no hurt done. . . . H. Wroth would be much pleased to hear that I have within these four days past waited upon the Cardinal, who is received in all towns like a king, with his arms upon the gates, and the burghers, magistrates, officers, and all people pay him the greatest honour imaginable. I waited his march, because the convoy was like an army, and those of Heedin would otherwise have taken me in my journey to Paris. From Abbeville I retired for convenience of quarters and took another road, being recommended by an Irish Bishop into the company of the Pope's Nuncio, who has entered already upon discourse of religion, to whom I have the confession of my faith as a good Englishman ought to do, and betwixt French (of which he has no great proportion) and Latin (of which I have less) we make shift to hold upon discourse without coming to argument. This night I lodge and am invited to supper with Marshal d'Aumont, who hath a design to buy an English gelding of mine for which he shall pay sauce. . . . I desire you will shew this at Byton and Arly (Arley), to both which families I am a very real servant, &c. . . . You will think it strange to hear that the Protector hath spies in the French Court and army, of which I was advertised by one that is much in those secret affairs, so that it is necessary to keep a watch upon our mouths here, as it is fit to do in England, for whatever the Cardinal hears passes immediately into England: never was any alliance performed with to much present tenderness: the time of jealousies draws near, for the Protector's age and infirmities give some of the moderate men considerations of the instability of their confederacy.—P.S. I met at Boulogne your boy Robin, very miserable, and spirited over in one of Capt. Cobb's company in Col. Cooke's regiment newly landed; the next news of him will be that he will be hanged for running from his captain, which he told Patrick was already in his thoughts.

1642, Nov. 29, Dutchie House. E. Newburgh to Sir R. Leveson.—Hopes that the example of the Staffordshire justices in providing guards for the safety of the county will be followed in other places. Complains of the pillaging round about, particularly in Essex and Suffolk. The fatal encounter at Braynesford has dispelled the hope of an accommodation between the King and the Parliament. The King's army is about Reading and Oxford. Alludes to the burdens which will arise by the contributions for the support of the armies on both sides, the daily messages between the King and the Parliament, and says that to the last sent by the Parliament inviting the King to return, the King gave an answer which in the first part was very sharp, but in the end invited them to send propositions.

Letters from Francis Newport, M.P. for Shrewsbury, to his uncle Sir Richard Leveson, at Trentham. They contain principally notes of passing events, and a few extracts are given. They commence in the year 1639, and are continued to 1661.

Fol. 14. 1639, Dec. 4, London. Francis Newport to Sir R. Leveson.—Complimentary.—You heare our cause hath gone well with us, I am certayne of noe other news though the rumour goes of the Spaniards truce with the French and the Turks with the Persian, and lastly of ours with Scotland, as I presume Mr. Langly is able to informe you, &c. P.S. I have heard since the writing of my letter that the Palsgrave was kept close prisoner, and us'd with little more respect than an ordinary fellow in the prison.

Fol. 15. 1642, April 26, London.—The same to the same.—The King went on Saturday last to Hull well attended, and would have enter'd into the Towne. Sir Jo. Hotham denied him; then he offer'd to enter onely with 30 men, as few as he could with his dignitie; that Hotham denied too, expostulating with the King upon the walls a long tyme. Upon this the King went backe to York, and sent a message to the Parliament consist-inge of the relation of this passage, tellinge us that he had proclamd Hotham a traytor, and desiringe justice against him. Upon this the House of Peers began three votes to us: first, that Hotham had done nothing but in obedience to the Parliament; second, that the Kings proclayminge him a traytor, beinge a member of the House of Commons, was a breach of our priviledge; third, that dginge it without due processe of law was a breach of the liberty of the subject. These wee joynd with them in, and have sent Sir J. Hotham 2,000*l.* more to pay his garrison, and have sent two ships more to fetch away the magazine thence. One party is much depressed at this newse and the other as much set higher. The Elector and the Duke of York were in Hull when the Kinge came there, havinge bin there ever since the night before, and Sir Jo. Hotham made some scruple of lettginge them out.

Fol. 16. 1642, May 3, London. The same to the same.—Two messages wee have lately received from the Kinge, which I have sent you inclosed. Since that wee have had a relation from Rushworth the clarke, who was sent downe into Yorkshire, of some passages there, which were shortly to this purpose; the Kinge made two propositions to the Yorkshire gentlemen: 1st. That they would defend his person from all violence; 2nd. That they would vindicate his honor in the affront hee received at Hull. To the first they answered they would by all means warrantable by the law of the land. To the second they desired him to aske the advice of his great Councell. Some of the rest of the gentlemen not satisfied with this answer retired within themselves to consider of an answer to make to His Majesty, which what it is yet wee know not; amonge those a cheife was Sir Fr. Wortely, who drew his sword, sayinge I am for the Kinge; another sayinge this must be ended by the sword. The House was putting the question to accuse Sir Fr. Wortely of High Treason, but that they considered it was onely affirmed by one that but heard it from another. The House is thinkinge of an accomodation, and to that ende hath refer'd it to a committee to draw a petition to the House to desire him to come neerer his parliament, and to hearken to the advice of his great Councell, expressing withall our loyalty and affection to him, and with this they will sende downe instructions by members of our house, Sir Ph. Stappleton, Lord Farefaux, Sir Hugh Cholmely, and the other is to bee Hen. Cholmely already there, to preserve the peace of that county in case any insurrection or takinge up of arms should bee. We hope this petition will doe much good, and tis all our prayers. Hen. Vernon was turn'd out of the House today, upon his election, very strangely, and but by three voices. We have very good newse often out of Ireland of great defeats wee give the rebells there.

Fol. 18. 1642, May 10, London. The same to the same.—Much business hath not bin dispatched this week in Parliament. The most considerable passages were: 1. We have made a vote to desire the Lords to joine with us to bestow 500*l.* in a jewell to be sent to my Lord of Ormond in Ireland as a mark of their favour, and to move the Kinge to make him Knight of the Garter, and this for the good service hee hath done there upon the rebells, and for his loyalty which hee preserves to this Crowne. The House's declaration upon the proceedings at Hull I have sent you, and the King's message to us upon it, which hath troubled us much, insomuch that Sir H. Ludlow said in the House that he that wryt it did not deserve to be King of England. He was challenged for it by two or three in the House, but it was interpreted in a mild sense as applyed onely to the writer, not to the King, how justly I do not question; see that he onely had a reprehension in his place for it, but the House hath in this as upon former messages voted the contriver of it to bee enemy to King and kingdom; and we are framing an answer to it; upon this we are resolved upon naminge evill counsellors, it should have bin ere this, but it is put of a week longer. The Bill for excluding the four shires is passed the Lords' House. O'Neal is escaped last weeke out of the Power, it is not knowne how. The Kinge hath send for my Lord Bankes and all his servants in ordinary to him. This day was a general muster of the trained bands of the city in Finsbury Feilds, being in all 8,000. Both the Houses of Parliament adjourned this day, that as many as would might go to grace their worke, it beinge the first putting of their ordinance of Parliament in execution; many great lords were there on horseback and in tents, and many commoners besides, much gentry besides, and the infinite shole of people. My Lord Savile is gone to Yorke.

Fol. 17. 1642, May 17, London. The same to the same.—We received a message from the Kinge last week, which I have inclosed, with an answer of the Houses to two former messages and a letter from our committees at Yorke, which told us the Kinge commanded them to bringe this his answer themselves, which they in all humbleness denying, as beinge commanded by the Parliament to reside there; the Kinge told them there that if they stayd there to hinder his service, hee would lay them by the heeles. Upon signification of this to the House, they made this declaration, which I have sent you, and the Lords joynd with them in it. We received letters yesterday from our Committees againe, that told us the King had summoned all the county of Yorke to appeare before him there last week, where hee made this speech to them, which I have enclosed. The greatest body of them made answeare, and did desire His Majesty to have recourse to his Parliament in a businesse of this high nature, and durst not presume to interpose between him and them. Some others consented to a guard, and they meete next Fryday at Yorke; 'tis a guard of horse. Wee are preparinge an ordinance of Parliament someway to hinder this meetinge. All these last passages at Yorke are ordered to bee printed together; and 'tis some ill fortune that they will not come out tyll to-morrow, soe that I cannot send them you tyll next week. Wee have voted a longe Remonstrance to the kingdome, which will suddainly come forth in print. The Lords have sent us downe a Bill that noe Lord to bee made hereafter shall have a voice in Parliament without the consent of both Houses. Wee have sent to the counties of Middlesex and Surrey and those nere London to have the ordinance for the militia put in execution. Judge Berckly's triall is on Saturday in the Lords' House. The Bill for the Synod of Divines is ingrossed in our House. The Kinge to-day sent a command to Sargent Major General Skippon to attend him suddainly at Yorke, upon which wee have made these votes. 1. That for the Kinge to command any free born subject to attend his person that has noe relation of particular service to him is against the liberty of the subject and the law of the land. 2. That his sendinge for Skippon to attend him is against the law of the land. 3. That sendinge for him, beinge employed in the service of the Parliament without their consent, is a breach of their privilege. 4. That we continue our commands to Skippon to attend our service.—The King hath likewise sent to my Lord Keeper to command him to issue out wryts and proclamations for the removal of the next terme to Yorke. The Lords have voted it illegall, and have commanded the Lord Keeper to issue out noe wryts nor proclamations to that purpose, &c.

DUKE OF SUTHER-
LAND.

Fol. 19. 1642, May 24, London. The same to the same.—There hath not been much business dispatched this week in Parliament, which hath been employed much in consideringe how to get more moneys (the 400,000. being all out already if it were come in); we do not know how to get it, but have resolved whatever comes in shall be retributed out of the forfeit lands in Ireland, and so must be beholding to any one that will bringe it in upon those conditions; for imposing any more they dare not venture on for fear of discontenting the kingdome. That compact of news from Yorke which I promised you last weeke Mr. Langley brings you now with the large remonstrance newly come out, the King's last declaration, his proclamation and letter to the gentlemen of Yorkshire, the votes and petition of both Houses, and the articles against the recorder. Many other pamphlets (it may be) he may bringe you, but these I send you are all pertinent and necessary for your knowledge. The last news that came from York is that there came 200 horse on Fryday last for the King's guard, and that hee dismissed all but 50 of them, and has there Sir Robert Strickland's regiment of foote attendinge on him, and has summoned all the gentlemen and freeholders of Yorkshire to bee there next Fryday again. Wee take the greatest care wee can to see the militia in all countyes put in execution, and have this afternoon made a Committee of Lords and Commons to consider which is the best way to secure the Parliament and kingdome against any force that may be offered, and a committee of our House to consider how to get moneys for a stock for the Parliament to imploy upon occasion for their service; for which purpose it is proposed a declaration shall go forth to invite all well-minded people to bringe in their moneys, their names beinge concealed as longe as the Parliament thinks fit, and shall be repaid again when the Parliament is able for it. The last news is that my Lord Keeper is gone downe to York with or after the seal without the Parliament's leave, for 'tis thought the seal was sent for from him (Tom Elliott cominge to him from the Kinge), and that he is gone after it, it may be to get it againe;

'tis uncertaine how, but the Lords have sent for him back again with all speed, and have ordered, in case of refusal, the power of the county to bring him back. News comes to us that O'Neal is taken in Norfolk. Judge Berckly's triall was to-day in the Lords' House, but not half perfected. Wee are in as many doubts of the issue of things here as you are there; I hope God will give a happy end to them.—P.S. The King sent for all his great horses at the mues on Saturday last, which went away on Sunday morn, and 'tis reported the Kinge intends to goe to Lincoln.

Fol. 20. 1642, May 31, London. The same to the same.—Most of this last weekes occurrences I send you printed. But you may please to know further that the magazine is come from Hull, the captaines of the ships that brought it rewarded with money and thanks. This last message of the King's a Committee is appointed to draw a declaration in answeare to it, and another to forbid any to have a hand in sellinge of the jewells of the Crowne, because wee heare of such an intent. Those committees were sent downe formerly to Hull: Sir Ed. Ascough, Hacker, and the rest, came up and are sent down again with large instructions to assist and advise Sir Jo. Hotham, and to preserve the peace of the county by requiring the people not to obey any commission coming from His Majesty under the Great Seal or otherwise to levy men. Divers Lords are, since the Keeper, gone down to the King, viz., Salisbury, Clare, Bath, Barkshire, Peterborough, Northampton, with others; Savile, you know, is suspended the House this sessions for refusinge to come upon the Lords' summons. Sir Jo. Corbet hath instructions to go down to Chester to see the regiments there and companies ship'd away, to informe what backwardnesse hath been in them. My Lord of Bristow's speech I have sent you, the last declaration of both Houses, the King's message and proclamation that came yesterday, with the votes and orders of both Houses. The Lords pass'd on Saturday 14 propositions to bee made to the King, which wee have agreed to in our House; they are framed and collected out of the former evils and remedies which were voted at Grocers' Hall. It is referred to a Committee to draw some propositions on the King's behalf, as these are on the subjects, to offer to him; and those shall bee forthwith presented to him, with an humble petition to return to his Parliament. If the King grant these, they are in great hopes of accommodation, and I think will bee willing, after they have set the businesse of Ireland in a god way, to dissolve the Parliament; otherwise things must go on as they begin.

Fol. 22. 1655, March 6. Francis Newport to Mr. John Langley at Trentham. Meeting with this enclosed,* I have sent it you to shew my freind, that he may see what scandalous things are hatched notwithstanding the great care and prudence shown by His Highness and the Council for the discovery of all disaffected spirits and the disappointment of their practices; yet the author of this libellous paper is conceived to bee a person of more bitterness towards His Highness and the Government then any of that party who now bear the great load of that crime; that is Mr. Harry Nevill, formerly one of the Council, whom His Highness may do well to make an example to all that shall dare to speak such bold untruths. News here is but little, save that there is like to be great disorders in our fleet, which it's fear'd will much retard the present expedition. I beleve you hear that Vice Admirall Lawson, a man of great influence upon the mariners in generall, hath layd down his commission, and some other captaines have followed his example, which is soe much taken to heart by the rest that General Desborough and Col. Kelsey are gone down in great haste to compose the disorders that are among the seamen, which wee hope they will effect. Yet in these perplexities and troubles the magnanimity of His Highness cannot bee sufficiently set forth, who, hearing that the Dutch had sold 40 sail of ship, to the Spaniard, sent for their ambassadors lately to him, and bad them tell their masters that he thought he had sufficiently stop'd their mouthes lately, but now hee saw nothing would serv their turne but beating out their teeth; and about three days since they coming to him again to excuse the business to him, hee told them that it was indifferent to him whether he fought with one or both of them, meaning the Dutch and Spaniard. It may be you have heard by this of the misfortune His Highness had the other day; his coach and six horses coming over the water in the ferry boat in Lambeth, the boat sunk and the coach and three of the horses were drown'd; unhappy people make idle observations upon it, and say my Lord of Canterbury's coach and horses were drown'd in the same place a little before he was sent to the Tower; but no doubt there is a special Providence that guards His Highness and upholds his authority. The most news is that it is current upon the Exchange that the Spanish Fleet, nere 60 sayle, are gone for the West Indies, where they are too likely to devour all those few that are left in Jamaica; we have 30 sayl of our best ships there; God send they escape the Spanish power, which is like to find them and their men but very ill provided to fight, &c.

* There is nothing now enclosed.

Fol. 23. 1657, Nov. 5, London. Fra. Newport to his uncle Sir R. Leveson, at Trentham.—The greatest discourse of the towne for this term hath bin the issue betweene Mr. Colt and young Dutton for Mr. Dutton's estate of Sherborne, which was try'd yesterday in the Upper Bench and held the Court from 9 in the morn till 9 at night, much gentry beinge present of both sexes; but it went with Mr. Dutton. The Lord Viscount Falconbridge is to marry the Protector's second daughter. The Swedes we heare are beaten every whree, though the bookes confess it not; the drums beat here for volunteers for France and Swedeland, but with little successe. At the last businesse before Mardike, which the books tell you of, wee heare the King of Scots' horse's bridle was shot out of his mouth, and the Marquis of Ormond's horse killd under him. Wee have sent over severall ships of materials for fortification thither, as of lime, brick, pallizades, &c., with many hundreds of beefes, and intend to keepe it, though at the dearest rate, &c.

Fol. 24. 1657, Nov. 14, London. The same to the same.—The freshest newse here is that the Dutch have taken 11 ships of the Portugal Braseel fleet which they have long waited for, having for a good while block'd up Lisbon with their own, and have declared war against Portugal. It is believed we shall not long keep fair with that nation falling foul upon our allies (howeever they have provocation enough), and for further probability of that we have for certain brought in a Dutch East India ship to Plimouth, which is there stay'd. This growing difference will not perhaps make more for the King of Scots' interest then the desperate sickness of the Prince of Conde makes against it. The Swedes begin look up againe with a late victory they have had against the Danes, havinge taken Frederick Ode, a strong hold upon the sound, by storm, and put 1,000 men in it to the sword; wee have a story of their late Queen, who is now at Fontainebleau, that havinge intercepted a letter of an Italian marquesse her domestique sent for Italy, wherein hee raillyed his mistresse, and related some of her extravagancies, shee sent for him, and havinge given him but an houres time for confession caus'd two or three of [her] laqueyes to run him through. The Lord Fairfax cannot yet obtaine of His Highnesse the liberty of his new son, the Duke of Buckingham, to reside within his dominions, hee telling him that it is not in his power to grant it, and 'tis beleived it will be remitted to Parliament. Great feasting and jollity hath been at Court this weeke for the nuptials, which is all the novelles and discourse of this place at present, &c.

Fol. 30. 1660, April 5, London. Francis Newport to his uncle Sir Richard Leveson, at Trentham.—The city was almost all of a blaze on Tuesday night with bonfires. The next weeke there go six Lords and 12 Commoners from the Houses with their answers to the King, which, I am told, are full of dutyfull and humble acknowledgments: the city send some of themselves likewise with their answer; the Lords appointed are Oxford, Warwick, Middlesex, Barkely, Brooke, and Hereford:—the Commoners are not yet named, they are chosen by balloting, which is not yet perfected; the Houses send the King 50,000*l.* which the city have lent them upon the public fayth, and the city send him 10,000*l.* in gold. To-day I hear the city have voted in their Common Councill to send the Queen 5,000*l.*, the Duke of Yorke and Gloucester and the young princess 1,000*l.* apiece. All the young lords are admitted into the Lords House to those of 48 which sat first, and they have since sent for the lords that were at Oxford, as Hertford, Dorchester, Linsey, &c.; upon which some of those lords that were created since the Great Seal went from London, went to the General and told him their right to sit as well as any others, as Lexington, Bellasis, &c.: the General told them he would not obstruct their sitting and confessed their right; but the King hath signified his pleasure for theirs and the Oxford lords' forbearance for a while, lest it give occasion to question the election of the unqualified members in the Lower House; so that there is none of the King's party lords sit that I know as yet but Barkshire, who does it only to secure him from his creditors. There are great numbers of the gentry dayly going over to the King, and 'tis believed there will [be] little less than a thousand go over with the Lords next week, and as many out of the city; 'tis thought they will find but bad quarters for so many at Breda. The Houses send the King five Bills to pass before his coming; first, a previous Bill to make this a Parliament, to make all the other Acts good; though I see not how that will hold water; for if they be not two lawful Houses already (which they are not), the King's assent to Bills passed by them cannot make them real Acts of Parliament, but that they will stand to the venture of, being all that can be done at present. The other Bills are, 1, for confirmation of sales, till the Parliament take further order, or make satisfaction to the purchases; out of which Act are excepted the estates of my Lord Craven, Sir John Stowell, and Alderman Bunce: the Duke of Bucks endeavours to get his excepted, but 'tis questioned whether it will be. 2. An Act of generall pardon and oblivion. 3. For tender consciences. 4. For the soldiers' arrears. The officers have all subscribed their obedience to, and acquiescence in, the determinations of the Parliament. I spoke with a gentleman yesterday as he came just from the King, and came by the fleet, who have all declared for the King, set up his colours upon all the ships, and shot off above a thousand cannon in token of their joy, while he was there. The Bills before-mentioned other Lord and Commons are to go with a week after the other, who are to attend his Majesty over; whose coming nothing now in the eye of human reason can hinder, if God permit. It is said Sir Harry Mildmay, Scot, Needham the news wryter, and some others are run away. Luke Robinson was the first man in the House, after the King's letter and declaration were read, that declared his assent for his coming in, tho confessed he had been of a contrary judgment, and divers others such as he are mighty Cavaliers now; who say, as the beggars did in the play to their King, Who is not glad that thou art chosen King now thou art King? Great preparations are making for the King's reception, and everybody makes themselves as fine as they can; 'tis said most of the nobility and gentry of the nation will go to Dover to meete him. The Lords sent a message on Thursday to the Commons to acquaint them that they had added Lord Manchester to the Commissioners of the Great Seal, and desired their concurrence; but 'twas not assented to, but to-day I hear 'tis carried in the affirmative. 'Tis believed to have a tendency to the removal of the Lord Chancellor Hyde; what effect it will have when the King comes will be seen. I believe there will little occur more worth your notice till the King comes, which may peradventure bee about three weekes hence, if not sooner, &c.

Fol. 46. 1660, May 12, London.—The same to same.—The Lords and Commons went yesterday towards his Majesty, and with the desire of the Houses to hasten his coming when he could. It is expected he will be here this next week, but what day is not yet known, neyther how he will come, whether through London, or privately by water for avoyding of danger to his person. There were two sea captains brought up in chaines last night (they call them Clarke and Sparke) who would have seduc'd some seamen and engag'd them to have fir'd the ship the King was to have come in. The Lords bring no Bills over with them to the King to pass, save only that for making this a Parliament; they have voted the Duke of York 5,000*l.* more. Lest you should not yet have been told the story of Sir Arthur Harley, I shall stuff this letter with it. He told the General not long ago that if the King came in he should be hang'd; the General told him he would secure him for 2*d.*; not many dayes since he sends the General a letter minding him of his promise, and encloses 2*d.* in it. The General gives his wife the letter to answer, who sends Sir Arthur the King's declaration, and bids him take hold of that. The citizens never had such trading in their lives, their shops are fuller of customers than commodities.

Fol. 46. 1660, May 15, London.—The same to the same.—All that is remarkable which the House of Commons hath done since I wryt to you last is, that in the Act of Oblivion they save agreed upon seven in number to be excepted for life and estate, but have not yet nam'd them; others there are who were of the King's judges also, but perhaps did not sign the warrant for his execution, who will be excepted only as to their estates. All the King's judges who are living are order'd to bee seized upon, but I believe they will catch but few of them; yet some are in hold already; our kinsman Sir Henry Mildmay is gone. There is extant a very fair journal of every day's proceedings, both preparatory and at the time, of the King's trial, and of every person that was present, which was ordered at that time to be kept among the Parliament rolls and in all the Courts of Westminster, for the honor of those that were actors in it, but it will hardly prove so. They intend, as I hear, to attain the blood of those that are gone before their fellows, and have this day voted a confiscation of the estate of Bradshaw and Ireton. The old Speaker's son, Jack Lenthall (dubb'd by Oliver), speaking to the Act of Oblivion on Saturday, and intending to throw a bone of contention amongst them, told them he saw no difference between those that ever had drawn a sword against the King, and those that more immediately acted towards his death, and did believe none would be made; which gave the House so great distaste that he was immediately call'd to the bar upon his knees, where he enter'd his peccavi. The King is expected speedily, but the time we yet know not; he is come down to the Hague, and the fleet (order'd to attend his command) gone to Skivelin. 'Tis expected he comes now with the first wind; but whether that will bring him eyther to Dover, Margate, and Harwich, as some suppose, is not known; so that those that would set forwards to meet him know not which way yet to go nor perhaps will not till they hear where he is landed. The Lords, &c. that were sent to him I cannot hear yet are gone from Dover; they took no order about their shipping before they went hence, and the fleet was gone before they came, only some three ships left behind; nayther doe they know (as 'tis believed) where to repair to his Majesty sooner than in England if the wind serve him which is now against him, &c. P.S. An Ostender has taken a ship wherein many of the Lords' fair clothes were.

Fol. 31. 1660, May 22, London. The same to the same.—The General received advertisement last night from Dr. Clerges (now knighted) that the King intended to embark as yesterday, and that if possible hee would come to Dover; whereupon to-morrow morning the General goes towards that place, and all the company, which is like to be very numerous. My Lord Northampton hath gathered a troop of gentlemen and others to that purpose, as likewise the Earl of Lytchfield, the Duke of Buckingham, the Earl of Lyncoln, my Lord Mordant, and Randolph Egerton, besides Robinson and Browne of the City. Wee had had a troupe of our freinds and countrymen, but that many of our countrymen came not to town 'till Sunday morning, and in this short time they could not get themselves ready. The road is like to be much pestered with multitudes of people. There hath been some dispute between the Lords and Commons about the privilege of their Houses; the Commons voted the persons and estates of the King's judges to be seized, and sent the vote up to the Lords for their concurrence. The Lords voted the same thing, but did not join with them, but expressed in their vote that upon the complaint of the Commons they did it; which the House of Commons resent as a breach of their privilege, though it be thought their vote to that purpose be a greater encroaching upon the jurisdiction of the Lords, who have the sole power of judicature. This day they had a conference about it, and are to meet again this afternoon; but I shall not be able to tell you at this time what the issue of it will be. We have newse out of Ireland that the old rebels begin to stir there, and have put some of the English out of possession, but no question our conjunction here will soon reduce them if they proceed. There is much complaint among the Lords that they hear of many blanke patents granted by the King of late years for honors which have layen dormant a good while, and now are sold for small sums to persons unworthy of them, such as Sir Richard Minshaw and others, which, as they hear, amount to a great number, and will be to the dishonor and the pesteringe, if not to the destruction of the Lords House; the consideration of which hath made many of us forbear to make claims to our right of entrance there, lest we should lead the way to all the rest, some of whom I believe we never heard of, nor the King neyther; and this 'till the King's wisdom shall direct some moderation in the business. To this end and some other there hath been a Bill brought into the House of Commons to make void all grants pass'd by eyther of the Great Seales since the first seal went from London in 1642, both of offices and honors; but there will be a proviso in it, that it shall not extend to certain persons within such a qualification, which I am assured by those that brought in the Bill will not touch those in my capacity: the Bill hath been twice read and committed. Divers have bin committed for treasonable words against the King. To-morrow we make for Rochester, &c.—P.S. Desborough is brought in to-night, and the boys hoot him along the streets, Phanatique, Phanatique. Mr. Henningham (Heveningham) has petitioned, and says hee was misled by Bradshaw, if that will serve his turn. You know Sir H. Mildmay is taken.

Fol. 32. 1660, May 29, London. The same to the same.—I cannot forbear telling you the joyfull news of the King's safe arrival at Whitehall, whither he came this evening, attended with such bodies of horse of the gentry and nobility as I beleve London scarce ever saw. The citizens played their parts very well too, but the particulars I must leave to the News Book to informe you of, it being too late now to undertake that task. Monk and Montagu were made Knights of the Garter at Canterbury, the Duke of Yorke doing the former the honor to tie his garter about his leg; the latter had his sent him to sea. I went to see Sir Harry Mildmay in Dover Castle, who denies to have any share in the judgment of the King, and desires me to try for his pardon; he is or pretends to be very ill of the stone.—The King met the two Houses to-night in the Banqueting House, where he told Mr. Speaker in short that he should be ready to grant any thing that should be desired of him for confirmation of the laws and settlement of the true religion, &c. P.S. The Hollanders entertained the King at the Hague most magnificently, and presented him in money, plate, and a bed, to the value of 60,000*l.*, and are very apprehensive of a breach with us, which is apparent by all their discourse, as they say that come from there.

Fol. 45. 1660, June 16. The same to the same.—Harvest draws on, and such ministers who enjoy your impropriations may be perhaps forward enough to persuade with their parishioners to pay them their composition-rents before hand, that is before harvest; to prevent which I thought it fit for me to advertise you that all your impropriations settled on the Church will certainly revert to you, and that you may do well to give notice to all that formerly paid you tithes not to pay any, or any composition money in lieu of them, to the incumbent ministers, and at harvest to receive them yourself, as I mean to do with mine. No trustee will sue you, and the incumbent cannot. The King is making lords lieutenants in all counties. The House of Commons is still upon the Act of Indemnity, and every day except some and acquit others who are brought upon the stage. The House of Lords, their chiefest businesses are receiving of several petitions preventing destruction and sale of woods in the King's forests and chaces, and asserting their own privileges in several cases. They have been troubled to-day with Purbeck Villiers, whom they sent for for treasonable words and blasphemous speeches; but he denied his honour, and claimed the privilege of a member of the House of Commons, so he remains in the custody of the black rod. The King is upon the water almost every night.

Fol. 32. 1660, June 26, London. The same to the same.—There is no course taken yet concerning impropriations passed away by compounders . . . P.S. Andrew is one of the esquires of the body.

Fol. 33. 1660, Aug. 26, Eyton. The same to the same.—Says he has presented Sir Richard's name to the King for one of the deputy lieutenants for Shropshire.

Fol. 27. 1660, Jan. 26, London. From the same to the same.—Here is inclosed a letter from the Council to my Lo. Brooke (the like being sent to other Lord lieutenants). He being with his mistress in Dorsetshire, I have sent it to you to be communicated to the rest of the deputy lieutenants of that county; I opened it least you should make scruple of it. I think I gave you notice formerly of a regiment of horse designed here to be raised under the command of the Earl of Oxford, who will now speedily be married to my lady Anne Digby; as also a regiment of foot under the command of my brother Russell; the charge of these with the life guards hath begot a resolution of disbanding all the inland garrisons, and amongst the rest ours at Shrewsbury and Ludlow, even in this time which their letters as you see speak to be full of danger, which will speedily be done, and which therefore requires the more circumspection from the deputy lieutenants to provide for the common safety. I have sent to those nearest hand in Shropshire that the next time you come over to Lillshall they wait upon you there to confer of matters. My Lord Chancellor's eldest sonne was married this week to my Lord Capell's sister that now is. The fair princess at Portsmouth is fallen ill again of a looseness, and we hear somewhat dangerously; Dr. Bates is gone down to her; she hath many prayers here for her recovery. I suppose you know my lord of Bristol hath bought Wimbleton of the Crown, &c.

Fol. 28. 1660, Feb. 7, London. The same to the same.—The chiefest errand of this is to acquaint you of you have not heard it already that Sir Fra. Lawley and Sir Richard Otley are thought the two fittest persons to be knights of the shire for Shropshire, and to desire your assistance for them. The writs will issue speedily. My Lord of Bristol is going over to-morrow upon private business of the King's, but whither is not known with us; tis supposed to view some lady; but whether to Portugal, Germany, or Sweden, we are left to guess. The King dined yesterday at Bedford House. The coronation holds certaine now the 23rd April; we have received our letters for our attendance.—The Earl of Anglesy is dead of the small pox.—P.S. The King hath given command for a new gallows at Tiburne, and the three supporters of that triangle are to be Cromwell, Bradshaw, and Ireton.

Fol. 29. 1660, March 23. From the same to the same.—You heard of the stop of my Lord of Bristol's journey to Parma, and of the management of some part of that affair, as is conceived, without the Chancellor's privity (by the Spanish Ambassador, Lord of Bristol, and Lord Aubigny), which is thought to be the occasion of it; when we have a Queene, Mr. Montague (Lord Montague of Northamptonshire eldest sonne) is to be master of her horse, Earl of Chesterfield her chamberlain, Mr. Harvey her treasurer. 'Tis I suppose no news to you that the Dutches of Yorke is with child. Most of the discourse here now is about the coronation; tis not yet declared who shall be High Constable that day, but most thinke my Lord of Ormond. Harry Howard (Norfolk) expects and is like to be Earl Marshall. Tis no news to you that Lord Valentia is to be Earl of Anglesea, and Lord Brudenell Earl of Cardigan. The City their choice of Parliament men does not at all please the Court; four rigid presbyterians, Fowke, Jones, Love, and Tomson. The Florentine Ambassador had audience on Thursday, &c.

Fol. 35. 1661, April 2, London. The same to the same.—All the accompt can be given from this place at present is that the Portugal match is conceived to stand fairest of any; and yet 'tis arriv'd that the Dutch have taken Goar in the East Indyes from the Portugee, which should have been part of the portion; if the Spaniard take their country from them too, we marry their whole nation and must keep them. The Duke of Parma's brother is here, but private, and hath taken his leave, as hath the Florentine this afternoon. My Lord Steward is made Duke of Ormond, and four new Knights of the Garter we are to have, the Duke of Ritchmond, my Lord High Chamberlain, Lord Chamberlain of the Household, and the Earle of Strafford (as some reward for his father's sufferings). Tis believed the City election will be questioned by the Committee of privileges as soon as the Parliaments sits.

Fol. 36. 1661, April 30. The same to the same.—The only thing that engageth men's thoughts and discourse is the King's marriage, concerning which the Council sat yesterday morn; but all the clarks were commanded out, and all the councillors enjoyned secrecy by the King himself, both before and after council; but tis generally believed tis concluded for Portugall. The Duke of Cambridge is very ill and much feared. You may perhaps receive some intelligence of the taking of Ludlow, Okey, and Hewsen; but it is not so. The books will describe the solemnitye of the coronation to you better than my pen.

Fol. 37. 1661, May 4. The same to the same.—The business of the match stands as it did then, generally believed for Portugall, but nothing declar'd. My Lord of Bristol is expected dayly. We hear of some insurrection in Sicily occasioned by the Gabells, and another (though now over) in Naples upon the King of Spain's inquisitors coming thither, which the people would not endure, not so long as 'till the Vice Roy might send into Spain to know the King's pleasure; upon which the inquisitors were enforced to take their journey to Rome. The Dutch fleet is gone into the East Indyes, where they are likely to dispossesse the Portugee of all, which will make our match the less considerable. A great dispute like to be about the Bishops coming into the Lords House; though there be scarce room now for the lay Lords, &c.

Fol. 37. 1661, May 7, London. The same to the same.—The Duke of Cambridge dyed on Sunday in the afternoon, and was buried yesternight without any solemnity; noe mourning in the Court for him (you may take it which way you will). To-day all the City Militia (trained bands and auxiliaries) mustered in Hyde Parke, six regiments of each and a regiment of horse; the King was there and threw his collection among the people; gammons of bacon, neates' tongues, and sweetmeats, which much delighted them. My Lord of Bristol is expected here to-night; some thinke the Portugall match is yet doubtful, but the learned agree it concluded; to-morrow 'twill be likely knowne, at least tis expected that my Lord Chancellor will tell us somewhat of it in his speech to both Houses. If any thing may be concluded from raiillery, there is this ground for it, that Sir Harry Bennet being lately come out of Spaine (one that the King hath a great kindness for), where he was an agent for the King, and promoted what he could the Spanish designs for the King's match, wearing his beard after the Spanish mode, the King jestingly told him he would cut of his Spanish beard with a paire of Portugal scissiors. The King and Lords ride to-morrow from Whitehall to Westminster Abbey in Parliament robes.

Fol. 38. 1661, May 28, London.—The same to the same.—There is nothing yet done concerning the impropriations; but there is a Bill depending in the House of Commons for the restoring of them to us, which hath been once read; another for restoringe Sir Jo. Packington to his land about Alesburye which was extorted from him in the same way; whether these Bills will pass, no man I suppose can yet say, but it is no ill sign when they are not thrown out at the first reading.

..... The last occurence here was the making my Lord Ashley (that is Sir Anthony Ashly Cooper) Chancellor of the Exchequer; and since that, my Lord of Peterborough, Governor of Tangier, that Port in the mouth of the Straits, and on the coast of Barbary, which the Portugee put into the King of England's hands, to which place when he goes he is to carry 2 or 3,000 men. This day the Quakers desired to be heard in the Lords House, and after four or five of them had talk'd one after another after their usual manner, they were commanded to withdraw, and so far were they from prevailing in their desires of toleration of them in their way, that the Lords have made a committee to consider of the best way either of converting or suppressing them. . . . P.S. No body yet designed to go to fetch the Queen; the Duke of Ormond goes not, and to avoid charge 'tis believed no other person of quality, besides the Vice-Admiral Lord of Sandwich.

Letters from Andrew Newport to Sir Richard Leveson.

Fol. 40. 1647, Jan. 25, London. Andrew Newport to Sir R. Leveson, at Trentham.—He encloses a pamphlet, of what moment he knows not, otherwise than as its censure of the army is somewhat severe, and may assure us that their pretences for liberty and law are but the delusory means to hedge in their own interests. 'Tis said that Jenkins and Sir John Stowell shall come to tryal on Thursday next. The rumour of the Prince's being in Holland last week was not true; letters of late come out of France and assure us of his being at St. Germins. The letter he sent to the Parliament is by them endeavour'd to be conceal'd, but I am told it will be privately printed; if it be, you shall not fail of one of the copies.—P.S. The impeached Lords are discharged from the Black Rod and sit in the House again.

Fol. 41. 1647, Feb. 1, London. The same to the same.—Though the House of Lords discharg'd their seven members from the Black Rod, and gave them liberty to sit again in the House, yet the Commons could not brook it, but have impeached the Lord Willoughby of Parham of high treason, and are preparing a pill for the rest too; Sir John Maynard of their own House lyes under the same impeachment also. It is ordered (but I think only by the committee of safety, not by the House because it should be less publick), that if the King desire Mr. Ashburnham should come to him, he should have liberty to wait upon him, but no other. The King lately sent to the Duke of York, bidding him not too much resent his confinement, himself patiently suffering it. Many last week did and still do confidently report the Prince to be gone out of France, but I have a letter from Sir Bi. Browne (the King's agent) in Paris, that assures us he is still there. 'Tis in every man's mouth that the Scots will suddenly invade England; grounded upon the protestations of some of the commissioners themselves. There is a very strict search made almost every night for those of the King's party that, contrary to the ordinance, stay in town, and money given to many to discover those that talk against the present proceedings, which stipend some that have been of the King's party most treacherously receive. Arthur Trevor lately made a supper, and amongst others invited Generall Mitton, who discover'd some discourse of Arthur Trevor's to some in authority, and caused him [to be] imprison'd, in which condition he now is. General Langhorne, lately going to Sir Thomas Fair, to take his leave, was check'd by him as a dangerous man, and is now upon bait in town. Some castles were delivered to Langhorne in South Wales, upon condition that the gentlemen in them should not be proceeded against as delinquents; the articles it seems are broken; the dishonour of which Langhorne supposes to reflect upon him, and having moved for performance of articles, but not heard, 'twas feared he might countenance those gentlemen if they should make head.

SUTHER-
LAND.

Fol. 23. 1656, May 31. [The same] to the same.—The honour of your concern for my enlargement does more endear it, and I should be very glad to know how I might employ that liberty I have in your service; as it is yet, I cannot do it so much as in giving you the ordinary occurrences of the town; hearing no more of them myself than is brought to me in a visit, by which means I cannot promise you the truth of any of it. They say our fleet did lately attempt the landing of some men at Cuba, and were beaten off with much loss. Our merchants here have lost this week near 20 ships (to the Dunkirkers), besides a Dutchman of 40 guns that was their convoy: 'tis said there is at Dunkirk near 70 men of war of all sorts, but their chief employment is stealing. The French have cut off 3 Lorraine regiments wholly as they were going to Quenois. There is a discourse of an intention to sell all decimations at ten years' purchase to the owners, and in case of refusal to have the 10th part sever'd and sold to any other purchaser. Great talk of a Parliament intended, and of an enlargement of the Major Generalls' commission, but in what particular I hear not. All the Major Generals have often sat close at White-hall; Worsley is very sick, and many think will not recover. Thus, sir, I have layd my bagatelles before you; you may please to pardon the little worth of them as coming from one that lives not on the Change, but the suburbs and shires; not out of his shop neither. P.S. Young Sir Charles Sedley is at this time very sick of a fever and the meazells, of which Sir William dyed.

Fol. 42. 1657, Dec. 3, London. The same to the same.—The Spanish foot are all drawn down about Dunkirk, which makes those in Mardike expect an assault, but by the officers' letters thence they seem not at all to distrust either their courage or force to defend it: they are very well mann'd, and since the arrival of store of deal boards hence, with which they have made them huts, in good health, which they formerly wanted by being in great numbers and measure exposed to the weather. The report here represents the Swedes to be in no good condition. The Dutch Embassadour, as you have heard, is gone home, but I can assure you upon no quarrel as yet between the two States, merely upon an account of his own. Some prizes (16 or 17 ships) that the Dutch lately took from the Portugais were by foul weather in their way to Holland drove into an English port, upon which the Portugall agent here caus'd them to be arrested, but a merchant told me lately they were again released to the Dutch. Sir Hugh Cholmely is dead, &c.

1657, Dec. 8, London. The same to the same.—This week's intelligence begins with the taking up of several Romish priests, eight in number, of whom there was such particular notice given that in each House they were call'd for by their names. In one house the servant mayde offer'd the priest the protection of her bed, and her company in it, that they might pass for a married couple; but the poor man chose rather to hazard his liberty than the scandal, and was taken. His Highness hath made lately several officers of his House, Sir Gilbert Pickering Chamberlain, Col. Phillip Jones Mr. Controwler, Mr. Waterhouse Master of the Green-cloth. And 'tis said generally that he hath made Whittlocke Baron of Henley. Jack Corbett our countryman hath married his son to a niece of Mrs. Harris's, one Mr. Cambell's daughter, and, as he says himself, the match will be, first and last, worth 15,000*l.*, &c.

Fol. 43. 1657, Dec. 12, London.—The same to the same.—Two days since I met with a list of the persons appointed to sit in the Upper House, which I have herein sent you, but I believe there are some names wanting, these not making up the number of seventy, and if I find it to be so I shall send you the list corrected. The news of the sad miscarriage of Sir Jo. Reynolds, Colonel White, and some others, is come to towne lately, who coming from Mardike for England, and for the greater expedition adventuring upon a small boat to transport them, were cast away upon the Goodwin Sands; their trunks were afterwards found upon the shore. P.S. Lord Bellasis was lately to wait upon Lady Shirley as a suitor.

Fol. 25. 1657, Dec. 19, London.—[The same] to the same.—There occurs little to acquaint you with but our great expectations from Mardike, where there are great preparations making both for the assault and defence, the French having sent several of their guards to assist in its defence, and the Boores in Flanders undertaken to raise 8,000 men for the reducing it, and the clergy of Bruges have advanced 400,000 florins for the service. Prince Rupert hath the command of 8,000 men under the King of Hungary, who, they say, will owe his Empire to his sword, in which the Duke of Sax &c. will assist him; the ecclesiastical electors are all of the French faction. The Swede loses, and is said to be very low reduc'd within his own contributions; 600 men that went hence to his assistance are drove back hither by contrary winds. New plots are said to be discoursed, and new confinements talk'd of. God bless us from a share in them, &c. P.S. Mr. Palmer that married Lord Westmoreland's daughter is lately dead.

Fol. 43. 1657, Dec. 26, London.—The same to the same.—After stating that he was suspected, and found he should not be long at liberty, he says:—Two nights since all the gentlemen at the comb-makers' ordinary were seized and sent to St. James's, prisoners. Yesterday several of the congregations that met for the solemnizing the day of the nativity were beset with soldiers, and most of the young men, not being housekeepers, retained prisoners; and this day divers gentlemen more were fetched out of the Tennis-court and sent to St. James' also; and the general discourse of the towne is concerning a plot, and the Scottish King's intention to attempt something from abroad, so that how long my present liberty will continue, or why I should believe the stars more propitious to me than the rest, I know not, nor very well how to dispose of myself if they do not do it to my hand.

Fol. 39. [1658] June 1, Tuesday.—[The same] to the same.—This day Dr. Huatt and Mr. Mordaunt were brought before the High Court of Justice; the former us'd many arguments against the jurisdiction of the Court from the Act itself by which they sit, which the Court over-ruled, and required him several times to plead, which he did not, and soe was ordered to be taken away. After him Mr. Mordaunt was brought to the bar, who urg'd the same arguments against the jurisdiction of the Court as the former, but would not be allow'd of any force more to him than to the other; at last he pleaded not guilty, and two brothers of Sussex (Mr. Stapelys) witnessed that Mr. Mordaunt encouraged them to serve Charles Stuart, who, he said, would suddenly invade England, and that Charles Stuart had writ him word so; but he said this to them apart. The examination and confession of another (who hath since made his escape) to the same purpose was read upon the oath of Mr. Scobell that it was so. It remains in the breasts of the Court what shall become of them; no sentence or acquittal hath yet pass'd, and the Court is adjourned to to-morrow. The French have perfected their line before Dunkirk, and are making their approaches; they have 35,000 men. The Spaniard lies within two leagues of them at Fernes with 14,000, &c.

Fol. 25. 1658, June 3. [The same] to the same.—My last gave you an account of the tryals of Dr. Huatt and Mr. Mordaunt. Yesterday they and Sir Henry Slingsby were called together to the bar: the Doctor and Sir Henry Slingsby were both sentenced to die (to be drawn, hang'd, and quartered); Mr. Mordaunt was pronounced not guilty. The Court spent almost the whole day in the Painted Chamber in consultation upon these three persons; Mr. Mordaunt was saved but by one voice (the President's). The Court is now adjourned till this day seavennight. There was news upon the Exchange to-day that the Emperour was chosen. The siege at Dunkirke continues; there was a great sally made out of the town lately, and they beat up some of the French guards, but the English had the honour to force them in again. Lord Falconbridge is expected here again on Saturday.

P.S. My Lady Huatt preferr'd a petition yesterday to the Court in the Painted Chamber that her husband might be permitted to plead, but when he came to the bar they would not allow him to speak a word.

Fol. 44. [1658], Jan 10. The same to the same.—We are, God be praised, now freed from some fears we lately laboured under, my Lord Fairfax having layd down his arms upon the return of the Northern Army to their obedience, and Monke hath written the House word that Fairfax did nothing in the late rising without his privity and consent, which hath removed the jealousy he lately lay under for that action. Yesterday Sir Harry Vane was turned out of the House for acting against the Parliament during the late interruption, and banish'd the town. Fleetwood, Whittlock, Galoway, Sydenham, Warreston, and some others will suddenly have the same measure. The House yesterday voted a bill to be brought in for confiscation of the estates of those persons that were engag'd with Sir George Booth, and gave the Council of State power to remand what prisoners they please that were released by the Committee of safety; the oath of abjuration is like to be laid aside. The nine officers that were voted out of the army by the Parliament when they sate last are banish'd the town to the remotest dwellings they have, and the inferior officers also lately cashiered. Col. Morley is Lieutenant of the Tower. Nudigate will be Chief Justice; Withrington, Fountaine, and Terrill Commissioners of the Seal. Monke is to march hither with what forces he conveniently can, and the Northern Army lately under Lambert to go into Scotland under Morgan.

Fol. 44. [1660] Jan. 28.—The same to the same.—The stream of Westminster Hall at last runs one way, and the opinions, so various of late concerning General Monke, are now reconciled, for he hath so clearly manifested himself (by letter) a faithfull servant to the Parliament as it now sits, that no further doubt remains of him. This night he layes at St. Albans, and next week we expect him here. We hear, notwithstanding, of addresses preparing in several counties for restitution of the secluded members, but the Parliament hath sent young Sir Robert Pye to the Tower for bringing one of that nature from Berkshire, and this lot of his we hope will make the rest take heed what they do. A troop of horse and a company of foot last night broke open the house of a draper in Paul's Churchyard, and carried away 4,000*l.* to Whitehall, for which they would shew the draper (a common councilman) no order. To-day the man was attending at the Parliament door, but what satisfaction he hath I do not yet hear. There is a tax of 100,000*l.* per month coming out.

Fol. 44. [1660] Jan. 31. The same to the same.—On Saturday the Lord Richardson, Sir Her. Townsend, and Sir Jo. Hubbard delivered the declaration of Norfolk for the re-admitting of the secluded members and against the paying taxes, their representatives not sitting; they were threaten'd the Tower but not sent thither, and yesterday they presented the same to General Monke at St. Albans, who gave them no very good reception. Buckinghamshire, Northamptonshire, and most other counties are either doing the same or have done it already. Yet the Parliament thinks fit only to fill their House by new elections; to-day they consider'd the qualifications for them, and have voted that no cavalier, no secluded member, nor any that sate in Richard's Parliament (except such as now sit) shall be admitted. General Monke will not be here before Friday; on Thursday his rendezvous is at Barnett. The soldiers now in town are marching out to give place to General Monke's men.

Fol. 44. 1660, Feb. 5. The same to the same.—The House hath not agreed the qualifications for the new elect Parliament, though they come daily under consideration. On Thursday the foot here were in a great mutiny for want of pay, and being commanded out of town, would not stir out of Somerset House, though a regiment of General Monke's foot were drawn up before the gate, till they had received some pay, and then they marched away quietly, as all the rest of the army formerly here hath done into remote quarters, to give way to Monke's army. Monke came in yesterday with about 6,000 men, but this malignant place shewed no great content at his entrance.

Fol. 70. [1660], May 8th, London. The same to the same.—This day the King was proclaim'd at Westminster, Temple Bar, and the Old Exchange, both Houses of Parliament attending the ceremony from first to last; but next week 'tis believ'd he will land, and that both Houses will wait upon him at the sea side; for this day they voted he should be desired to come as soon as might be, and have appointed a committee to consider of the manner of his reception, and to gather his revenue. No bills will be offer'd him till his landing, because they will not have them look'd upon as conditions of his reception, and 'tis said both Houses will wait upon him at the sea side. All proceedings in courts of judicature are to be in the King's name from hence forward. I will not derogate from the merit of this by offering any more intelligence. God make us thankful for this.

Fol. 70. 1660, May 15th. The same to the same.—By the last account we have of the King, we hear he intended to be at the Hague last night, whence without any stay he would come for England. The English fleet hath been at Skeveling, within two miles of the Hague, these two days, to attend His Majesty, and the General said to-day at dinner that he would take ship this day, and by God's blessing we do not doubt but to see him here on Saturday; to-morrow I think the company will go hence to wait upon him, I mean the gentry; the General 'tis said will meet him a days journey off with five regiments of horse. The whole transactions of the late King's trial and of the committees meeting at several times in order to it being drawn fair in a book, with intention to have them register'd in all the Courts of Record in Westminster, and in every county also, was lately amongst other papers taken from Scobell, and read in the House of Commons, by which they know precisely who were every time at the meeting of the Committee, who signed the warrant for execution, and who sate in the High Court at sentence. Yesterday the debate was how many should be excepted in the Bill of Indemnity, and agreed that of those which sate in judgment upon the King there should not die above the number of seven, of which they have not yet named any, but sent out warrants to apprehend all that sate. To-day Thurloe was impeach'd of high treason for something he did lately, and they sent to apprehend him, but I cannot yet tell whether they met with him or not.

Fol. 71. 1660, May 19th. The same to the same.—The contrary wind prevents the King's intention to be suddenly here, otherwise by this time he had been here, and will be so as soon as that will permit. Mean time he is highly courted at the Hague, and presented by the Hollanders with great sums of money. One Moorland, a clerk under Thurloe, hath discover'd a great many intelligencers, for which the King lately knighted him. Sir R. Willis is in the van of them, and hath betrayed the King all along. An order is sent to all sheriffs to seize the estates, both real and personal, of all the King's judges. Sir Harry Mildmay was taken two days since at Rye, attempting to go beyond sea. The old lords are so troubled at the great company of new ones, some of mean quality and less fortune, that 'tis thought there will be an expedient found to exclude many of them. 'Tis said the Princess Royal will come over with the King. The Spaniards are much troubled the King is out of their quarters, intending, as is supposed, to have put some conditions upon him, but God be thanked, he comes over without any engagement to any foreign prince or state.

Fol. 76. [1660], May 29th. The same to the same.—I am but newly come from Court, though it be almost ten at night, after a dusty but very pleasant march in other respects. The King came to Whitehall to-night, where both Houses met him, to whom he gave most gracious answers as to the laws and religion. Monke and Mountague have both the blew garter. Monke is Master of the Horse also, Jeffry Palmer, Attorney, Sir Orlando Bridgeman Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. The greatest acclamations through the whol town that ever were seen.

(46b.) [1660], June 9.—The same to the same.—The King, by the advice of his Council, is settling the militia in all counties under Lords Lieutenants. The King having press'd the expediting of the Act of Indemnity, and the Houses haveing an intention to punish in some degree divers others besides those seven that were the late King's judges who are to dye, which would take up much time, they have resolv'd first to confiscate the estates of all that sate in the High Court of Justice upon the King, excepting 3 only, Hutchinson, Lassalls, and another; and they have excepted out of the Act 20 more not yet named, who are to be punish'd as shall be provided in another Act not yet made, by fines as is suppos'd, in which number I believe you will find Haslerigge, Vane, St. John, Glynne, Maynard, Ellis, and divers others that have been active since 48. The King went yesterday to Hampton Court early and return'd by 12 at noon; he had by the way a great fall off his horse, but God be thanked no hurt; in the afternoon the House waited upon him, to claim the benefits of his declaration for pardon, in the name of themselves and all the Commons of England, which prevents the taking out of particular pardons; but this still with exception to those persons that the House have excepted and shall except.

Fol. 74. [1660], June 12. The same to the same.—Since my last the House hath been employ'd wholly or principally upon naming those persons they intend shall not have the benefit of the Act of Indemnity, but of the 20 they except, there are but few named yet, the favour that some of them find in the House making the debates long. Yesterday the great debate was concerning the old Speaker, Lenthall, in whose favour the General spoke much; but upon division of the House the opposers of Lenthall were the major part by 80; so he will receive no benefit by the Act. Sir Harry Vane was excepted likewise, and found but one (Noe) in the whole House to favour him. To-day they have excepted one Major-General Burton of Norfolk. Luke Robinson was expell'd the House yesterday. Sir Harry Mildmay is sent for from Dover. I think I told you in my last that the militia will be settled in the countyes under Lords Lieutenants. P.S. Thurloe hath been with the King privately, and with the Chancellor since. 'Tis said he will be (as he us'd to call it himselfe), Ingenious.

Fol. 74. 1660], June 16th.—The same to the same.—The weather is not so hot, but the debates in the House equal it in warmth; several persons guilty enough to bring them within the exceptions finding friends enough to excuse them; amongst which Serjeant Glyn yesterday found great favour, and was laid asyde after much dispute. One Blackwell, a rich man, the same day was excepted, and to-day Alderman Pack. Villiers, that married Sir John Danvers his daughter, was yesterday sent for by the Black Rod; he is now a member of the Lower House; but the Lords look upon him as Viscount Purbeck, and so take cognizance of him, to-day he was brought before the Lords, and by my Lord Monmouth was accused to have said in his hearing at my Lord's table, that it was a very commendable and just action to put the last King to death; that if an executioner had been wanting, he would have been the person, &c. He desired to advise with counsel before he answer'd, and a copy of his charge. It was told him that as yet there was no more but an information and no charge; but order is given to the Attorney and King's counsel to draw up a charge. In the mean time he is committed to the Black Rod. He was offer'd his seat as Viscount Purbeck when he came in, but he refus'd it, and said he had searched the Petty bag for a patent, and could find none.—My Lord Middlesex asked him (when he was withdrawn), whose son he was, because he renown'd his peerage, he said he was son to the lady that married the Lord Purbeck. My brother is Lord Lieutenant of Shropshire. The King to night supps with the Lord Mayor; last night he suppd with the Lord Chamberlain Manchester.

Fol. 47. 1660, June 20. The same to the same.—The King pressing the House of Commons continually to hasten the naming of the 20 persons they intended to except, yesterday the number was completed as you will find by the book. To-day the proclamation of pardon to all but those the Houses except was proclaimed by the Heralds in several places. The House to-day gave the King tonnage and poundage, and a Parliament man now tells me that the Committee of Religion to-day voted that all ministers that were put out of their benefices merely for their affection to the King, and were not otherwise scandalous, should be restored to their respective cures. Bourdeaux the French Embassadour that was, had new credentials sent him to the King, but the King refus'd them, I suppose upon Bordeaux his own account, because he hath been so great an enemy to his Majesty. Lord Craven is made Governour of Shrewsbury by the Generall in whose disposal all garrisons are. Sir, I humbly beg the favour of your minding Mr. Doughty to send me the terrier he promis'd me for my Lord Suffolk, with whom the Duke of Yorke intends to hunt often next winter.

Fol. 47. 1660, June 26.—The same to the same.—According to your command I have attended Mr. Sneade. An address of the same nature with that you propos'd, hath been in discourse among your countrymen already, and this afternoon they meet again to resolve whether they shall proceed or not; to-morrow I wait upon him again and by next post 'tis possible you may have the result. The Act of Idemnity I believe will be sent to the Lords from the Commons to-morrow for their concurrence; 'tis variously discours'd whether the Lords will except more persons or not. Mr. Scott is taken in Flanders, and by this time is in Dunkirke; he is turn'd a good subject already, if you'll beleive his letter sent hither to one he desir'd would be his friend. There are new discontents in the army, to remove which I know no better remedy then to persuade your neighbours to part freely with their money; the presbyter is not well pleased neither, but I hope God that hath given us this beginning will perfect our happiness. There is a Dutch Embassadour coming over with very rich presents; six sets of coach horses and six coaches very rich with them, two suits of hangings, each of 10,000*l.*, a suit of gold plate, two of silver plate, and all the jewels of the Crown that were pawn'd there. 'Tis believed by many that the tythes that were pass'd away in part of compositions at Goldsmyth's hall, will be restor'd; many intend to petition for it when the time is proper; and if you please to give me order and direction to have it, I will cause one put in for you; in the mean time it may not be amisse to warn the tenants not to pay them where of late they have. Sir I am much obliged for your concern for me in the employment His Majesty hath put upon me; but your information was too favourable; the bed-chamber had 14 in it before the King came over, which number is six above the establishment, and the supernumeraries 'tis said will be reduc'd; I think there was scarce one place in the whole court void of any consideration when the King came; besides that he was pleased to bestow upon me (as he tells me) as an earnest of his further favour, which is, Squire of the Body, a place of honour, but small advantage otherwise then by being certaine of having the King's ear once a day. The General's title is Duke d'Albermerle (a place in Normandy belonging to the Plantagenets from whom he derives himself), Earl of Toddington or Torrington, Viscount Goldstream, and Baron of Potheridge (his house). Coldstream is the river in the north that lay between him and Lambert last year.

Fol. 48. June 30. The same to the same.—There was a motion made for a longer day for the King's judges to come in, and 'twas press'd with much earnestness by some, but it was rejected at last, and according to the Proclamation all of them that rendered not themselves within the 14 days therein limited are to forfeit life and estate. There was a form of thanksgiving publish'd to be us'd on Thursay last, and in the front 'twas said, Publish'd by authority; the Presbyterians in the House are scandalized at it, and have appointed a committee to examine the printer by what order he did it. The Presbyterians are very high upon the King's bestowing favours upon some of them by the General's recommendation. St. John (late Chief Justice) got a proviso brought into the House to-day in his own favour, but 'twas thrown out. I cannot yet give you an account of Mr. Sneade and the other gentlemen of your country; Mr. Sneade went early out of the House this morning, so that I could not speak with him. Your picture is gone down by Mr. Slannier.

1660, July 5.—The same to the same.—I am just now returned from the great entertainment the City gave the King and both Houses at Guildhall, the King sat under a state at the upper end of the hall in the middle of the table, the Duke of York at the end on the right hand, and Duke of Gloucester on the left; a degree lower (divided with a rail), were four tables, two on each side of the hall for the Lords, and a degree lower than that, six tables, three on each side for the Commons, the King's own music on one side of the hall in a little gallery, and opposite to them 24 viols and violins in another, and long galleries round the hall full of women; after dinner there was some pastime by men habited like lawyers, soldiers, countrymen, &c., which took up the rest of the day. I should have told you first that the King went in his coach, his Pensioners going on foot before him, and querries by the coach side on foot also; he had gone in an open chariot but that the rain prevented him, and this is the Landskippe of this days business. The Bill of Poll money is engrossing, and will suddenly be sent up to the Lords, that of Indemnity will not so soon be ready by reason of the multitude of provisos that were brought in and not yet all debated. We have great complaints of the negligence of the young men of the Commons House who either by the Court or other entertainment of the town suffer themselves so to be called away from attending the House and committees that many votes are lost by that supineness. At length I have met with Mr. Sneade, but he had not the address about him, having put it into the hands of one of the King's servants who was so employed this day that I could not get a sight of it. P.S. Lord Culpepper is very sick and like to die.

Fol. 49. 1660, July 21. The same to the same.—Says he did not fail to perform his (Leveson's) commands concerning Lady Anne Holborne and communicated with Sir Richard Temple who would see them obeyed.—The business of the Lords this week hath been much upon hearing the complaints of those persons whose relations suffer'd by High Courts of Justice in Cromwell's time, and some by Commission of Oyer and Terminer, as those particularly of Mr. Penruddock's party in the West; by such a Commission, Judge Windham condemn'd some, at which time he declar'd the taking up of arms against the supreme magistrate de facto, to be High Treason by the statute of 25 Edw. III.; and being call'd before a Committee of Lords this week, did avow it, still to be his opinion; he is since sent to the Tower; Lady Huett and Sir Henry Slingsby's relations have petitions depending before the same Committee. Lord Swinton, a Scotchman, one of Montrose's Judges, was sent yesterday to the Gatehouse.—The Lords upon reading the Bill of Indemnity have excepted out of the bill all that gave sentence upon the King; what concurrence that vote will find in the Lower House we shall in a short time see. The Lower House hath spent much of this week upon tonnage and poundage, and have received a report of what the Committee of Religion voted on Monday last, deferring that debate until Oct. 23rd, desiring the King in the mean time to call some Divines to consult about Church affairs, and that vote was confirmed in the House, but not without opposition. P.S. The Portugall Ambassador had audience yesterday in the presence.

Fol. 75. Aug. 2. The same to the same.—The House of Lords are still upon debate of the several heads of the Act of Indemnity; the moderate speech of the King's (which I sent you) stopp'd the career they intended so that they have satisfied themselves with the excepting of 5 more persons for life to be added to the 7 that the House of Commons left to the law; and in estate none shall be punish'd: these 5 are Lambert, Haslerigge, Sir H. Vane, Coll. Axtell, and Coll. Hacker; the 4 first of these were of the 20 that the House of Commons intended to punish in their estates: Hacker was the man to whom the warrant was directed to see the King executed. But the House of Lords have order'd also that if any of the remaining 16 shall hereafter presume to bear any office, civil, military, or ecclesiastical, that they shall receive no benefit by this Act of Indemnity; 'tis disputed whether the House of Commons will allow of the pardon of these 16 when the Act is return'd to them. The House of Commons hath voted Sir George Booth 10,000*l.* out of the Excise for the repair of his losses in the action of last summer; to-day the concurrence of the Lords was desired, but they thought fit first to consult the King about it, because the Excise money being his, they thought it became them not to dispose of it without his consent; to-morrow I believe 'twill be order'd in the Lords House by the King's allowance. A months pay is voted by both Houses to the army. Jack Bromely is made a cornett to a troop of horse. I believe Sir John Talbott is married this day; for the women that are of the council are gone out of town to the house where his mistress (Mrs. Slingsby) lives in great privacy.

Fol. 76. 1660, Aug. 7.—The same to the same.—The greatest debates of the Lower House are at present concerning the bill of sales, and they have agreed that none of the King's Judges, of any High Court of Justice, of Barebones Parliament, of the Committee of safety, of Cromwell's counsel, nor any decimator shall have their purchases confirm'd. They are now upon the Poll bill again and excise. Yesterday the Lords upon the motion of Generall Mountague pardon'd Sir Gilbert Pickering, and after him one Major Lyster who had sate once upon the King. To dispatch the bill of Indemnity the sooner yesterday, they threw out all the private provisos therein which were very many. There was liberty given to some Lords to bring in Bills for reparation of their losses, and accordingly one was brought for my Lord Newcastle, Duke of Buckingham and Bristol: after some debate, my Lord Bristol was desired to propose the question, which he did in these words, Whether their Lordships did consent to the Bill in favour of my Lord Newcastle without exclusion of the other Lords; the Duke of Buckingham finding my Lord Newcastle named, and himself not, stepp'd from his seat, and in some heat more than usual asked my Lord Bristol why he named my Lord Newcastle and not him, and pressing him in an extraordinary manner for his reason in so doing, my Lord Bristol told him he thought my Lord Newcastle a man of more merit than him; the Duke said he believ'd him not, and return'd in some anger; of which passage the King having immediate notice, they were commanded not to stir out of their lodgings, and so it rests yet. To-day the Lords thought fit to except some persons from receiving benefit by the Act of Indemnity that sate upon the Lords Hamilton, Holland, Derby, and Capell, and agreed that 4 persons should be excepted, for each Lord one, and 'twas resolv'd that 4 Lords in the House nearest of kindred to those that suffer'd should each of them name one presently; Lord Derby named Col. Croxton, Lord Pagett named one John Blackwell (for Lord Holland), Lord Denbigh named one Wiburd for Hamilton, and Lord Capell named Mr. Edmund Wareing, our late sheriff; and the whole House immediately consented to the excepting these 4 persons. Lord Landerdale is made Secretary of Scotland, Glencarne Chancellor, and Crawford Lyndsey Treasurer.

Fol. 49. 1660, Aug. 11. The same to the same.—Since my last, the King hath received notice of a design manag'd by the fanatic party to gain Portsmouth, the Governour and his deputy being absent, some attempts were made to corrupt the under officers, amongst which they met a man not for their purpose, who discover'd it. The Bill of Indemnity hath pass'd the Lords House, with some alteration and was this day sent down to the Commons where 'tis believed there will be some new dispute concerning it. Lord Devonshire is Lord Lieutenant of Derbyshire. Lord Chesterfield 'tis thought shall marry my Lady Elizabeth Buttler, daughter to my Lord of Ormond. There is some discourse of adjourning the Parliament.

Fol. 50. 1660, Aug. 16. The same to the same. . . . When the Lords sent down the Act of Indemnity to the Commons with their amendments, the House of Commons nevertheless adhered to their former votes concerning those that should die; only joined with the Lords in excepting Hacker; and for clearing 16 of the 20 they had formerly resolved to punish by a future Act in estate, they joyned with the Lords also, and so sent up the Bill again. The Lords upon reading the Bill adhered to their votes also, which occasioned a conference to-day in which the Lords gave their reasons for adhering to their first vote. . . . The King hath given order to Sir Ed. Turner to acquaint the House of Commons that by that clause in his speech, "If there be any other of such dangerous principles that the safety of the nation cannot consist with their liberty, they should allso be punish'd," he meant Haslerigge, Vane, Lambert, and Axtell.—The young Duke of Richmond is dead in France, and the Lord Lichfield son to the Lord Aubigny that was killed at Edge Hill, is now Duke of Richmond.

1660, Aug. 18. The same to the same.—Our great bodyes move so slowly that 'twill be the next post at least before I shall give you their resolution concerning the Act of Indemnity; the House of Commons are not yet of a mind what they shall do with the Judges of the King; the proclamation of summons seeming by implication to pardon them if they rendered themselves; all they did to-day in it, was to desire another conference with the Lords concerning it, which 'tis supposed will be on Monday. The Excise is continued for three months, and the King came to the Lords House to-day to pass that Act, Lord Roberts being deputy of Ireland, had some scruple how the forces of that nation should be commanded; for as the King's Deputy he had some pretence to it; but the General being by his commission Captain-General of all the forces in the three kingdoms, that command could not well be taken out of his hands; to solve it, therefore the General is made Lieutenant of Ireland.

Fol. 51. 1660, Aug. 23. The same to the same.—Our great expectation of the Bill of Indemnity is not yet satisfied; yesterday the Lords had a Conference with the Commons in which the Chancellor represented the sense of the Lords for adhering to their former votes for taking away the lives of all the King's Judges; the Commoners appointed to manage the Conference made their objections, and were answer'd very well by the Chancellor, one by one; to-day report was made to the Commons of yesterday's conference, and much debate there was, but they agreed only to have another conference with the Lords to-morrow; many are inclin'd to a concurrence with the Lords, and as many think themselves obliged by the Proclamation and their former votes not to take away the lives of those that rendered themselves. Marquis Hertford and Earl of Worcester, both pretend to be Duke of Somerset; Hertford by restoration, the other by patent from the late King; yesterday a Committee of Lords sate upon it; Worcester produced his patent, but with all said the King gave it him, with some conditions which he acknowledg'd were not by him perform'd, and therefore referred himself to the King. I saw a Petition to-day to the King subscribed by most of the Lords for restoring the Earl of Arundell to be Duke of Norfolk. Earl of Newport is made Gentleman of the bedchamber, which many wonder at. 'Tis now doubtful whether Lord Roberts will goe into Ireland to act as deputy under the General. 'Tis now believed that Wareing and the other three that sate upon the Lords, and Lambert and the other three that were excepted by the Lords with him will not die; they will ('tis sayd) be left out of the Act of Indemnity; but the two Houses 'tis thought will petition the King for his mercy towards them; I hear the King should say he would take such a course with them that they should not be able to give any disturbance.

1660, Aug. 25. The same to the same.—Yesterday the Commons shew'd their reasons why they could not agree with the Lords in excepting those of the King's Judges that rendered themselves; and to-day the Lords offer'd this expedient, that all the King's Judges should be excepted from benefit by the bill, (in which case they are left to the law which will certainly condemn them); but that those that rendered themselves upon the Proclamation should not be executed but by Act of Parliament: upon report of this to the Commons, they agreed with the Lords, and now, if the Act can so soon be ingross'd, 'tis believed, it will be pass'd by the King on Tuesday next. Haslerigge shall forfeit estate only; Axtell both life and estate: Lambert and Sir H. Vane are excepted both for life and estate also, but the Houses will petition the King to pardon the lives of these two. Wareing and the other three that sate upon the Lords are pass'd by wholly. The King returned last night from Hatfield.

Fol. 52. 1660, Sept. 1. The same to the same.—Mentions the proposed adjournment of the House upon the next Saturday until November 6th.—No more private business will be attended to; they will intend principally to the ordering of the money for disbanding the army and satisfaction of the arrears of the Fleet. My Lord Southesk, a Scotchman, killed a countryman of his (one Carre) t'other day in a duel, for which he is in prison. One that dispersed seditious pamphlets was this day brought into White-Hall. The Princess Royal (they say at Court) will be here suddenly.

Fol. 52. 1660, Sept. 4. The same to the same.—The Duke of Gloucester hath been very sick and 'tis thought he will have the small pox; Lord Oxford hath them and is dangerously ill. Lord St. Albans, Lord Crofts, and young Harry Jermyn are come over. Mons. de Rovigny is come to demand the Princess Henrietta for the Duke of Orleans, and 'tis believed the King will give his consent. Hugh Peters was taken in Kent Street on Sunday last. The Admiral Montague is gone to fetch the Princess Royal, and 'tis thought she will be here towards the later end of the next week. I believe the Prince de Ligny is landed by this time, Embassadour from the King of Spain. Lord Hertford will carry the Dukedom of Somerset.

Fol. 53. 1660, Sept. 8th. The same to the same.—The House of Commons, upon computation of the King's revenue, found it to be 900,000*l.* per annum, and ordered an addition of 300,000*l.* per annum more, but have not yet agreed whence that shall issue. There is a bill to be brought in for annexing Dunkirk to the Crown. A bill is agreed for making Marquis Hertford Duke of Somerset. The army is to disband as soon as money comes in by the Poll Bill to pay their arrears; if that money shall not be sufficient they have voted the King two months contribution of 70,000*l.* per month to help; the order of disbanding is to be by lot; only the Duke of Yorke's and Gloucester's regiments and the General's are to be disbanded last, except those that are in fortified garrisons. The patents for late honours are to be brought in to the Chancellor to be inroll'd. The House of Commons hath given the King one month's contribution of 700,000*l.* for his present supply. The Committee of the Common Council had voted a petition for renewing the Covenant, but it was thrown out at the Common Council. Lady Dutchess of Richmond (the elder) is come to town from France. The Parliament adjourns not till Tuesday next, it being not possible to finish some bills sooner. P.S. Be pleased I beseech you to mind Mr. Doughty of the terriers he promised me. The King will have the benefit of them this winter.

Fol. 53. 1660, Sept. 13. The same to the same.—The King went to the Lords House and passed about 20 bills, after which he spoke very well to the Houses, and after him the Chancellor made a large speech to them also. . . . The Houses adjourned till 6th of November, but first voted a present of 10,000*l.* to be made the Princess Royal at landing, and as much to be sent the Queen of Bohemia. One of the bills pass'd to-day was for restoring the Marquis of Hertford to the Dukedom of Somerset, of whom the King spoke so obligingly that it was judged the greater honour of the two. Dunkirk was voted by the House of Commons to be annexed to the Crown, but the Lords thought it unreasonable now that the Spanish Embassadour was just upon his entry, & so it stopp'd at present. The Lords voted the bringing in of late patents of honour to be inroll'd, but that found a stop at the Commons House, so that sleeps too. The Spanish Embassadour

(the Prince de Ligny) came in to-day. In the Bill for restoring ejected ministers and confirming those in possession that are in places of dead incumbents, the Lords have reserved to themselves their presentations, but the Commoners have parted with theirs, pro hac vice. . . . The Duke of Gloucester is pretty well, but my Lord Oxford is very ill. P.S. 10,000*l.* was lately given the Duke of York and 7,000*l.* to the Duke of Gloucester.

Fol. 54. 1660, Sept. 15. The same to the same.—I did never with less satisfaction give you any intelligence that I now do . . . death of that most incomparable [Duke of Gloucester]; when I writ on Thursday . . . appearance, and the judgment of all the physicians as they had ever seen anybody the tenth day in that disease, at 6 a clock that night; he was thus when the physicians left him. Immediately after they were gone he bled at the nose 3 or 4 ounces, and then slept about half an hour; when he waked he presently lost his senses, and about 9 that night died. Next day he was open'd, and his lungs were found as full of blood as they possibly could hold, besides two or three pints of blood that lay about them, and much blood in his head, which took away his senses. The physicians never gave him anything from first to last, so well he was in appearance to every one; his body is removed to Somerset Howse. The court is in deep mourning and will continue so for 6 weeks; after that in half-mourning till the coronation of the King, the 6th of February next. The King is the most afflicted man for the loss of his brother. . . . P.S. The Princess Royal is expected almost hourly at Gravesend; the barges are gone to meet her, but we hear not yet of her landing. The King puts not his footmen, &c. in black nor any other.

Fol. 54. 1660, Sept. 22, London. The same to the same. On Thursday last Dr. Juxton, late Bishop of London, was install'd Bishop of Canterbury in Henry the 7th Chappel at Westminster. The Duke of Gloucester was buried there last night; his body was removed by water from Somerset Howse to the Parliament stairs, where the Duke of York, all the nobility, and the King's servants met it.—He hopes the militia is in good forwardness, as the discontented party, he hears, are preparing new troubles, &c.

Fol. 55. 1660, Sept. 25. The same to the same.—He thanks for the complement of the terriers, and begs they may be sent up as soon as he (Leveson) has a conveniency, for 'tis said the King intends for New Market within a fortnight or 3 weeks.—The Princess Royal came to Whitehall to-night, but is seen by none to-night; she is unprovided of mourning, having not heard of her brother's death till she was on ship-board. The Lord Hatton, I hear, will be Lord Privy Seal. Lord Chesterfield is married to my Lord of Ormond's daughter.

Fol. 55. 1660, Sept. 29. The same to the same.—We hear of Princes abroad though nothing to be transmitted of our own. The nobles and great officers of Sweden all apply themselves now to Christina formerly Queen of Sweden, and the last Queen and young Prince they say will be put out of the country. Our greatest discourse now is concerning Coll. Warden whom you found lately acquitted by the Council upon the petition of Sir George Booth and other gentlemen of that county, but Coll. Vernon, that first accused him, hath since been with Scott in the Tower, who hath accused him of all the villanies imaginable, even to the endeavouring to put the King into their hands when he escaped after Worcester Fight, the betraying of Mr. Cooke, for which he had 500*l.*, and giving notice of all that pass'd in Sir George Booth's business; this being read yesterday at the Council under Scott's own hand, there was an order issued for the apprehending him, and I hear since he is taken. We hear the King goes to Portsmouth next week and the Princess Royal to Hampton Court that while. We expect daily the proclamation concerning religion; the presbyterian ministers, we hear, are very unreasonable. Dr. Reynolds (the King of their Israel) they say accepts of a Bishoprick. P.S. He again asks for the terriers.

Fol. 56. 1660, Oct. 6, London.—The same to the same.—Thanks for the arrival of the terriers.—Disbanding the regiments.—The Queen hath sent word she intends to be here suddenly, within less than a month she is expected, and the young Princess with her; ships go suddenly to fetch her. The Prince de Ligny went hence to-day towards Flanders. There are such great villanies discoursed of Coll. Warden that was in Sir George Booth's engagement (by Mr. Scott), that 'tis a great question betwixt him and Willis which is the greater knave. The King's judges are to be tried on Tuesday next at the Sessions House in the Old Bayly. By your servant on Monday I shall acquaint you with some passages that are not fit to be sent by the common conveyance.

Fol. 57. 1660, Oct. 8, London.—The same to the same.—In mine by the last I told you that by the return of your servant you should receive an account of some passages that were not fit for the publique conveyance, which in short is this. There hath for some years been an amour between the Duke of Yorke and Mrs. Hyde; of late she hath kept her chamber and 'tis said she is with child; several discourses there are concerning it; some say with great confidence there was a contract, and that by some dexterity it is taken out of her hands again; others say there was no contract at all; the King hath been in much trouble about it, and the Chancellor is so still; for the dilemma must necessarily be of ill consequence both ways, how it will end is not yet known, but you shall have an early notice, &c.

Fol. 58. 1660, Oct. 11, London.—The same to the same.—There is little of discourse or action now in town, but what concerns the trials of the King's judges; yesterday they were first call'd, their indictments were read, and all but Sir Hardres Waller and Charles Fleetwood pleaded not guilty; but with some difficulty as the Diurnall will tell you; the other two confessed the fact and their guilt. To-day your neighbour Harrison was the only man tryed; for excepting against 35 jurymen (a privilege allowed in cases of treason), noe other could be heard this day: with much assurance and glory he avowed the fact, and spake as much treason and blasphemy now as he had acted before; he said he had often pray'd with tears that God would direct him, and it was revealed to him to be a just action to put the King to death, who (he said) had made war against the Parliament, and was guilty of all the bloodshed in the war; when they endeavoured to prove his hand to the warrant for execution, he wish'd them not to lose time, and calling for the paper, said he believed it to be his hand; the jury concluded him guilty without going from the bar, and he was immediately sentenc'd to be hang'd, drawn, and quartered; after this he went away smiling without any appearance of trouble. Last night the Duke of Buckingham and Mr. O'Neale fell out in the Princess her drawing room; the lie was given to Mr. O'Neale; but the King being near came in immediately, and so it stopp'd; what is since done I do not yet hear, but the passage being so publick, I believe will have no ill success.

Fol. 58. 1660, Oct. 13, London.—The same to the same.—There is nothing here worth your knowledge, but the tryall of the King's judges, and in particular of your neighbour Harrison, who was hang'd, drawn, and quarter'd to-day at Charing Cross; he trembled much when he first came upon the ladder, but excus'd it by the ill-usage he had in Newgate since his condemnation, and said he thank'd God he came with as much content to die there as he did to commit the act for which he suffer'd; he was going he said to sit at the right hand of Jesus to judge us all. Yesterday Scroope, Carew, Scott, Clement, and Jones were condemned; to-day Hugh Peters and Cooke, and they say Hewlett will be proved to be the man that cut off the King's head. The main argument of all of them is that an Act of Parliament warranted them (supposing that small remnant of the Commons House to be one), which Scott said was as much a Parliament as this that is now in being, and that irregularities ought not to be condemn'd in that if allowed in this. P.S. My Lord Treasurer's daughter, the Lady Andry, that should have married my Lord Piercy, died yesterday morning.

Fol. 59. 1660, Oct. 20.—The same to the same.—Last night the French letters came which say the Queen intended to begin her journey this way, yesterday; the Duke of York intends to meet her at Calais, to which purpose he goes hence on Monday or Tuesday next, and they say the King will go the later end of next week to meet her in Kent; Count Soisson is landed extraordinary Embassadour from France. The Portugais make offers of very great advantage to England for the King's assistance against the Spaniard, but what ear the King gives to them is not yet known. Axtell and Hacker were hang'd yesterday at Tiburne; Mr. Heveningham was condemn'd yesterday; his life 'tis thought will be sav'd, but his estate we hear will be given to my Lord Dover, grandfather to Mr. Heveningham's wife, who is daughter to Lord Rochford The Duke of Somerset is like to die.

Fol. 59. 1660, Oct. 23, London.—The same to the same.—Yesterday a conference was held before the King at the Lord Chancellor's, betwixt the Bishops and Presbiterian ministers concerning Church government; the Presbiterians agreed to an Episcopall government, but they would not have the Bishops have any power but joyntly with the presbiters, and with their consent; at last they agreed that the Bishop should act with the advice and assistance of his prebends and six ministers of the dioces: the Presbiterians pleaded much for power of suspension from the Communion to be given to ministers, but that would not be granted, and they yielded at last that power only to the Bishop and his assistants (as above); some liberty is given them to forbear some ceremonies if they please. Some parts of the Common Prayer (which are particularly mentioned) they must use, other parts they have liberty in, and some others are to have some small alteration; they are agreed in all matters and very suddenly. A declaration of Church government will be set out. During this conference Mrs. Hyde fell in labour, and notice being given of it, the King sent for the Lady Ormond, Lady Sunderland, and Lady Corke; these with some Bishops, the Lord of Ormond, Manchester, and the Secretary were commanded to be present at the labour, and to ask her (as they did) whose child it was; she said the Duke of York's; they further ask'd her if she were married; she said she was (to the Duke); they ask'd her also if any other man had known her, and with many imprecations she said, none; thus the matter rests; 'tis said 'twill be brought into Parliament. The Duke goes to meet the Queen on Thursday; the Princess on Friday; the King on Saturday. Count Soissons comes in to-morrow, his audience will be on Friday. P.S. Mrs. Hyde's her child is a boy.

Fol. 60. 1660, Oct. 30, London.—The same to the same.—On Sunday last there were five Bishops consecrated in Henry 7th Chappel, Dr. Sheldon for London, Dr. Hinchman for Salisbury, Dr. Morley for Worcester, Dr. Sandreson for Lincoln, and Dr. Griffiths for St. Asaph. To-day the King's declaration concerning the affairs of the church came out, which I have herein sent you. We hear not yet of the Queen's landing; the King went to meet her on Saturday, expecting her to land at Dover on Sunday night, to which purpose he intended to be there that night also. When they return we shall hear what will become of the business betwixt the Duke and the Chancellor's daughter; some call her Dutches of York already; in the Chancellor's house altogether so.

Fol. 60. 1660, Nov. 6, London.—The same to the same.—The Parliament being now met again, there will be a plentiful subject to write upon: and I hope they will be exquisite courtiers, for they have this first day of their sitting complemented the young Princess Henrietta with 10,000*l.*, and ordered the Council to wait upon the Queen with their congratulations for her return hither; yet 'tis doubtful how long she will stay, she having promis'd to return into France within six weeks. An account was given into the House to-day of the disbanding of about 20 regiments of foot and four or six of horse; withall that the poll money by computation would not amount to above 250,000*l.*, by reason the Act was not duely observed in many places The Chancellor is made Baron of Hinden, and his patent was this day read in the House. The old Countess of Carlile died yesterday suddenly of an apoplexy. My Lord Bath (lately Sir John Greenville) is Groom of the stoole. The Duke d'Anjou will marry our very pretty Princess Henrietta.

Fol. 61. 1660, Nov. 13, London.—The same to the same.—Though the Queen hath been so long here, and 'twas believed her coming was principally upon occasion of the Duke's late adventure, yet we cannot yet hear what end that affair will have; though the marriage be in a manner confess'd, yet her discoursing it before he gave leave which ('tis sayd) she promis'd not to do, hath so enrag'd the Duke that his affection had not greater measures than now his hatred has. The great delay in paying in the poll money and the underrating in many places, hath left the nation almost as much in debt as when that Act came out. The debt upon computation amounting to 1,300,000*l.*; to satisfy which, the House hath partly concluded upon a years tax of 70,000*l.* per month, and to-morrow they say 'twill be so resolv'd. There hath been some discourse, but without ground, that some others of the King's judges were suddenly to suffer, and I take the occasion to tell you so, because possibly you may have heard that report from other hands. The Queen intends her return to France within these three weeks. I think I told you before of Sir Harbottle Grimston's being made Master of the Rolls, and that Maynard and Glyn are the King's sergeants. The French Embassadour goes back about two days hence. There was a bill brought into the House lately against alimony, by Mr. Ferrers, of Derbyshire, which received a great debate, and the House was divided upon it; but the favourers of the Bill carried the vote by 16, and to-morrow, I think, 'tis to be read again; the women begin to make strong parties against the Bill, yet how it comes to pass I know not, many of the young men are ill courtiers.

Fol. 61. 1660, Nov. 20, London. The same to the same.—The great business of the Court concerning the Duke's marriage is yet in a mist, which they say will not be dispelled till the Queen is gone, and her day of remove is appointed to be Monday sevensnight. We are all troubled to lose our very pretty Princess Henriette. She goes with her mother into France, where she will be married they say this winter, and some say the Queen will return hither at spring. Yesterday young Lenthall (the old Speaker's son) was put into the Tower for counterfeiting a Great Seal. There is a pamphlet which undertakes to prove the Long Parliament not yet dissolv'd. The author* is taken, his book to-day voted seditious, and an impeachment to be drawn against him. I have sent you a 20s. piece of new gold, which you will receive by the means of Mr. Jenkyns, my brother's servant. I sent it by a tenant of mine to him, not daring to adventure it by the post.

Fol. 62. 1660, Nov. 27th, London. The same to the same.—The House being to dissolve the 20th of next month, and the Queen's journey intended to begin on Monday next, the King consider'd that if the wind should not be fair when he had brought the Queen to Portsmouth, they might stay so long there that he could not be here again to dissolve the Parliament; therefore the journey is deferr'd, as 'tis believ'd till after Christmas, for that will not be a time for travel; besides that the weather will be too cold for her. To-day the House of Commons voted the other half of the excise of beer, and ale, coffee, and other outlandish drinks, to the King for his life; the first half being perpetuated to satisfy for the Court of Wards. There hath been a long debate in the House of Lords about vacating a Fine in the case betwixt Leveston and Powell; they have voted already upon hearing the evidence that the Fine was gained by terror and force, yet they are very tender of vacating the greatest assurance the law can give, especially since the business comes unduly before them, that is, by petition, not by writ of error, and therefore they give intimation to the complainers that they should bring in a Bill, that the Fine may be vacated by the legislative power.

Fol. 62. 1660, Dec. 1, London. The same to the same.—The passage of most remark this week in Parliament was concerning the King's declaration touching ecclesiastical affairs, which the Presbyterian party would needs have turned into an Act; and a Bill was brought in to that purpose, but after a very long debate, and a division of the House, it was carried by about 26 voices in the negative, at which John is very angry. The Spaniard hath had two losses lately, one of his fleets going with 5,000 Neapolitans against Portugall, which was wholly cast away, and as some say here the Portugalls have beat some of his men and taken many: besides this there is a report (but not assured), that Mexico is revolted from him, and declare a free trade with all comers. The Duke d'Anjou sent a gentleman lately to the King to desire his leave to write to his sister (the young Princess), which is granted him. P.S. All the estates of the King's judges will be settled on the Duke of York.

Fol. 63. 1660, Dec. 6, London. The same to the same.—I should have told you 10 days since the ill success we then had in the Lords House with the Bill we brought in thither to restore us to our impropriations, which, by the means of my Lord Chancellor (to gratify some of all sorts of the clergy), was rejected; but though I was loath to be the first intelligencer of so ill news, yet I must humbly advise you now to take as little notice of it as may be, that the country parsons may not be encouraged the more to oppose us in it, for we that are concern'd here do not think ourselves much the further of them notwithstanding this, and do resolve to keep possession till a better opportunity offer itself in our behalfs. A Bill is depending for augmenting the small vicarages out of the impropriations of Bishops, but it touches not ours. The Bill for restoring the Duke of Norfolk is pass'd both Houses. The City are much troubled at the Commons refusing to make the King's declaration for ecclesiastical matters a law. A great consecration of Bishops last Sunday at the Abbey, and their feast at Haberdashers' Hall on Tuesday. Our Bishop is not yet resolved on since Calamy refused it. The House of Commons voted yesterday the carcasses of Cromwell, Ireton, Bradshaw, and Pride, to be forthwith taken up and drawn upon a hurdle to Tiburne, there hung in coffins a while, and then buried under the gallows. It is intended to be mov'd that the hangman pro tempore may for ever hereafter give Cromwell's arms; but that, perhaps, being a wrong to others of the name better deserving, may not be granted. It is uncertain whether the Queen will go so soon after Christmas, as [was believ'd]; the King thinks it may become the Duke of Anjou [to fetch] his mistress, our young fair princess, better than for her to go Here was a general belief that Col. Ludlow was taken in Mich. Oldsworth's house in Westminster, but it proves not true. It is believ'd the Coronation will be put off till May, but there is no declaration of it. Perhaps the phancy of this inscription upon some new medals of English coin to be presented to the King for his approbation, may somewhat persuade the protraction of it till that time, namely Natus, renatus, coronatus 29 Maij. Plays at Court every week. Lady Anne Digby to be married to Lord of Oxford, the King makes the joynture. Lord Cranborne is dead.

Fol. 64. 1660, Dec. 8, London. The same to the same.—I received yours, in which told me you had received the piece I sent you; I believe I shall send you another shortly, for the King likes not this, though in the next there will be no other difference but what arises from the manner of stamping; that I sent you being done with a hammer, the other with a screw, which makes a very great difference, though the cut be the same.—Parliamentary news.—The Chancellor is to be made Duke, but I know not yet his title. My mother hath sent you a book and the King's picture, by one Charnocke or Jarnock.

Fol. 64. 1660, Dec. 11, London. The same to the same.—I can now assure you that which is not yet confess'd, and hath so long been the great dispute of the Court, I mean whether the Duke would own his wife. I dare now give you my word he will, and that she shall be acknowledged Duchess of York as soon as the Queen is gone, whose journey begins the 26th of this month. The Queen is grieved much at it, and thinks there was never more want of the Pope's power here than upon this occasion. The Princess Royal is in as great a trouble, and for this reason only is resolv'd to return into Holland. More Dukes we shall have at the Coronation, Lord Ormond and Northumberland; that the Chancellor would be one too I told you before. On Saturday night last, one of the King's frigates lying at Woollage (Woolwich), with the portholes of the lowest tier of ordnance open, the seamen being asleep, rolling by the strength of the great wind, took in so much water at the portholes, that she sunk, and the men in her were drown'd at a low water; she lies pretty bare, and they have got some of her guns out already, and hope to weigh her up too.

Fol. 65. 1660, Dec. 15, London. The same to the same.—Since my last there is a discovery of persons that are now put to act the same game that but last year was the fate of honest men, and several are apprehended, but none of any quality, for endeavouring to make an insurrection. Amongst the rest, one Major White (a mean fellow), was endeavouring to corrupt one of the under porters of Whitehall gate (they having been comrades under my Lord Fairfax), who discovered him to the General; he confesses little as yet, but that he said he would pull the white star off the General's cloak. In his chamber there were found several confus'd lists of men, of which they can make little. We have a report here that the ship in which Argyle and Leard (Laird?) Swinton were sent towards Scotland, is cast away, and they in it, and 30,000*l.* also lost there, that was sent to disband some men in Scotland. Upon our stages we have women-actors, as beyond sea. We hear nothing yet of the Parliament's being prolong'd, though some say there are endeavours made to obstruct the settling the King's revenue, that it may prevent the dissolution.

Fol. 65. 1660, Feb. 5, London. The same to the same.—These two or three days last past have afforded us a more than probable discourse of that which will be an infinite satisfaction to the whole nation, a treaty for the marriage of the King with the daughter of Portugall, to which purpose principally they say the Portugall Embassadour is now return'd, but hath not yet had his audience, and the conditions they offer are very considerable in their consequences besides the money: 'Tis said they will give the King a good harbour in the Straits, two towns in the Indies, by which means we shall recover that very great trade now almost lost, besides this they will give a very considerable sum of money 1,700,000*l*. In Portugall, by some that come thence we hear they looke upon it there as already concluded in a manner: My Lord Bristol goes hence on Friday beyond sea as 'tis thought for Portugall, but 'tis given out for Flanders to see his daughter there. Most of the nobility attended the Lord Treasurer to-day to Westminster to the Checquer chamber to be sworn. I believe you will heare of writs for a new Parliament sent out immediately after the term. There was a quarrel lately betwixt the Duke of Buckingham and Admiral Montague as they went over with the Queen; the Admiral sent him a challenge next morning, but they were prevented fighting, the quarrel being publick; the Duke is much blamed, and the King very angry with him for it, besides, 'tis beleived it may hinder his being restored to the Bed-chamber and Council, both which favours the King intended him.

Fol. 66, 1644, Feb. 16. The same to the same. Since my last we have had so general a report of the King's being married some time since to a lady in Flanders, niece to the Prince de Ligny, that having writ you word of a treaty with Portugall, I was unwilling to let my next want what moral assurance there could be of the idleness of this last rumour: for besides that there wants an invitation both from the person and interest, I do assure you the King himself laughs at this as at many other wives the world hath given him. 'Tis resolv'd now that a new Parliament shall meet the 8th of May next, to which purpose writs will issue on Monday if they cannot be ready to-night. I am told privately that the Duke of York intends to prove his marriage before the Council on Tuesday next.

Fol. 76, [1660], Feb. 21, London.—The same to the same.—The only notice I have now to give you is that on the last Council day the Duke of York proved his marriage before the Council to have been in September last, my Lord of Ossory and the Dutchesse her woman being present, his own Chaplain Dr. Crowder performing the Minister's part; he proved also a contract in November was twelvemonth.

Fol. 66, 1644, Feb. 26, London.—The same to the same.—If the late obligation for the observance of Lent strictly appear severe to you that possibly cannot undergo the penance of a fish diet, I hear you will be absolv'd in some measure from it by a new and more indulgent order; for upon debate in the Council lately, I am told it was resolv'd that 3 days of the week should be dispensed with, (viz.) Sundays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, which will be more convenient for you in that I think, you have no Bishop as yet settled in your diocese. The writs for the Parliament I hear will be ready to-morrow night, I have an intention to stand for Burgess of Shrewsbury, which will occasion my coming into your parts, then I shall at leisure give you a more perfect account of our transactions than by letter I can. A gentleman of my Lord St. Albans came on Sunday night to Whitehall; by him we hear that our Princess is to be married in Lent on St. Joseph's day, the only Saint that admits of marriage during that term: the Cardinal he says was pretty well this day sevenight when he came away, but letters bearing date since that time represent him very ill again: by the discourses in France of his estate he is very rich and leaves most of his estate to the son of Mareschal de la Meilleray who married lately his niece.

Fol. 67, 1644, March 2, London. The same to the same.—The Dutch having prepared a new Fleet of 20 sail, as 'tis suppos'd against Portugal, the King in friendship to the Portugais hath sent to the Dutch to desire that he may be judge betwixt them; some go further and say the King hath sent to them to declare their intention for that fleet, and that he gave them time but till the return of the Post, that if it were against Portugal he would send as many ships after them; this I cannot assure, but of the first I am certain. Prince Maurice of Nassau is this night come to town extraordinary Embassadour from the Elector of Brandenburg. My Lady Elizabeth Darcy (daughter of the late Lord Chesterfield) died to-day. The writs for the Parliament I hear were finish'd yesterday; if so, I believe they will be sent abroad to-night. Sir Fred. Cornwallis is to be a Lord at the Coronation.

Fol. 67, 1644, March 5, London.—The same to the same.—Since my last we have certain notice of the death of Cardinal Mazarin, and that he left the King of France 30 millions of livres in ready money besides 20 millions that he acquitted the King of which were due to him: he left his niece her husband, threescore thousand pistoles a yeare besides, and other great legacies to severall other persons. He deputed (or recommended) three persons to the management of affairs there, Monsr. de Lions, Monsr. Tillet and Fouquet the superintendant of the Finances. Yesterday there was a kind of a contract betwixt my Lord of Ormond's second daughter and my Lord Cavendish (my Lord Devonshire's son), the King joyning their hands, and the friends and parents of each party present, they are not to marry this year and half, she being but young and little. The writs for the Parliament are now upon distribution. There is now a treaty of marriage (or proposals at least) betwixt the King and the Duke of Parma's daughter, but 'tis not public yet.

Fol. 34, 1644, March 12, London. [The same] to the same.—The scene of marriage is varied again; the treaty with the Duke of Parma being at an end, and they say that with Portugall renewed. The Catholike faction here, as freinds to the Spaniard, prevail'd with the King for instructions to treat in Italy, and the Spaniard offer'd to endow any ally of his as his own daughter; upon this my Lord Bristoll went over. The Chancellor was not made acquainted with this treaty when first sett on foot; but discoursing it afterwards, hath now prevail'd so far that it is stopp'd, and my Lord Bristol sent for back: the Chancellor hath possessed the Council upon this occasion with the practises of the Spanish faction here amongst our Catholikes, and 'tis believed the Catholike Lords will be in danger of losing their personal sitting in the Upper House upon it, and sit henceforward by Proxy only. The Spanish Embassadour finds himself aggrieved at this proceeding, and told the King he found his master's concerns were not respected; that he heard the Portugall Embassadour should say he had outwitted him, but believed it not till now, supposing he had treated with more advantage with the King himself, than the other could do by the Chancellor, and wish'd the King to consider how dangerous it was for him to give ear to the counsels of him (in this affair) that had married his daughter to the Duke next heir to the Crown: in the end that if the King pursued the interest of Portugal, his master would be obliged to make war upon him; to which the King very shortly replied the King of Spain might do what he pleased in that; he valued it not. Thus stands the affair of the marriage at present, &c.

Fol. 68, 1644, March 19, London.—The same to the same.—I have nothing new to acquaint you with but what we hear from beyend sea, first of the marriage of the Princess which was intended to be yesterday or Sunday last; the King sends my Lord Crofts, the Duke, Mr. Jermyn, and Mr. Rawlins to congratulate. We hear likewise that Mr. Mountague (Watt Mountague) is in disgrace in the Court of France, and banish'd the Court for endeavouring to continue the administration of affairs in the Queen mother of France, and her cabinet; the King saying he would now have no more Premier minister but look to his own concerns himself, and that he would sooner have done it, but that the Cardinal had deserved very well of him, by his great services: Cardinall de Rets was coming to Paris expecting to be employed also, but is commanded back again. I have herein sent you Argyle's plea before the Parliament in Scotland; he hath also petitioned the King for his mercy.

Fol. 68, 1661, March 26, London.—The same to the same.—Our chief discourses are concerning elections for the Parliament, amongst which the late ones of the city much surprize us, some being chosen there that could never before find credit amongst them, nor had now (as 'tis believed) but for their known and remarkable opposition to the Bishops. The same interest is prosecuted with great earnestness in many countries, what success they will have the books will tell you. Our Princess is not yet married, though word was sent from France, the wedding would be on Sunday sevenight; three days since a gentleman was sent over for the King's approbation in writing, which was before forgot. We have little talk now of the King's marriage, and 'tis very doubtful where 'twill fall.

Fol. 69, 1661, April 2, London.—The same to the same.—The King of late hath been pleased to send the Garter to four of the nobility, the Duke of Richmond, Lord Lindsey, Lord Strafford, and Lord Manchester; the instalment intended 'at Windsor had like to have bene deferr'd for want of blue velvet to make the robes, which occasioned a discourse here that it was put off, and it had been soe, but that one hath undertaken to dye blue enough out of other colour'd velvets. The discourse that is of the King's marriage inclines yet to the Portugais side, the chief difficulty in it is whether the conditions offer'd will ballance the consideration of a war with Spain and the Low Countries against one in Portugal, against the other in the Indies. I must not omit to acquaint you with the late bloody battle fought upon this quarrell betwixt four cooks of the two several factions in which one was kill'd and the rest very much wounded. The King's cook (a French man) was kill'd, the others belong'd to the Spanish Embassadour, my Lord Bedford, and Lord Ossory. Though the City intended an example to the rest of the nation in their election, by the returns that are just come we find men of another temper in most places. Mr. Pierpoint lost his election for Nottinghamshire to a private gentleman, though he had the conjunction of several Lords in that country. My Lord Fairfax lost his also in Yorkshire. My Lord Crofts married 'tother day (the Lady Heale) whose husband died about two months.

DUKE OF

Fol. 69. 1661, May 11, London.—The same to the same.—The King will go to Worcester this summer in July and to all the places where he was conceal'd in those parts in his escape.—Yesterday the King went to the House again and sate there in his crown and robes; the occasion of it was to hear first the Speaker's desire to be excused from his employment, which the King would not allow of, and then the Speaker accepted of it in an eloquent speech. The Queen of Bohemia 'tis said by some will be here suddenly, but I hear by others I have more reason to credit, that there is a frigate sent to stop her. The picture of our intended Queen is at Whitehall; by that and the report of those that have seen her she is a lovely little woman. The House of Commons have voted they will give thanks to the King for communicating his intention of marriage, and promise to stand by him in it. P.S. The Duke of York is now Governor of Portsmouth. Coll. Rutherford (long in the French army) made Lieutenant General of our forces in Flanders.

Fol. 72. 1661, May 18, London.—The same to the same.—The business of the House of late hath been first the passing a bill for security of the King, in which they have forbidden all covenants, tumultuary petitions, factious preaching, charging the King with an intention to introduce Popery, &c. On Thursday morning their whole debate was concerning Sir Jo. Morley, one of their members for the North upon a petition to proceed at law against him for having betrayed the King's Councill abroad, for which he received money of Cromwell; great part of the House thinking it fit he should be immediately suspended the House and confin'd lest being conscious of the fact he should escape; but after several hours debate, the vote was only for liberty to the petitioner to prosecute. Lord Roberts is made Lord Privy Seal. Last night about 12 a clock the Queen of Bohemia came to town, and yet the notice of a frigate sent to stop her (of which I gave you notice formerly) was true; for notwithstanding she received that message, she came, which troubled the King a little, in regard the reception that was fit for her to have and him to give could not so suddenly be prepared, insomuch that last night she was forced to lodge at Drury-House (my Lord Craven's). Yesterday there was a motion made for the burning the Covenant by the hand of the hangman, and that dispute lasted 5 hours; the opposers of the motion attributed the restoration of the King to it, and some others that said they had taken it, undertook to say they had served the King as well with that as others that were openly professed of his party; this made the heat much greater; at last being put to the vote, it was carried in the affirmative by 125 voices, and to-day they send to the Lords for their concurrence.

Fol. 71. 1661, May 21, London.—The same to the same.—Notwithstanding the confidence of some men here that the King's match with Portugal would occasion a war with the Dutch, in respect of the great competition betwixt those two nations for the trade of the Indies, in which 'tis believed the King will assist the Portugais, yet we are made believe now, that the Dutch desire our friendship as much now as ever, and at this instant the King hath prepared 20 or 23 good men of war, and the Dutch above 30 to joine in an enterprise upon Argiers and Tunis, where the Turk does so abound in ships which rob all passengers, that they resolve to fire them all. To-day we hear Argyle was to be hang'd in Scotland, the very day he caus'd Montrose to die; yesterday the Lords concurr'd for the burning the Covenant by the hangman, and to-morrow is the day appointed for the execution. The Militia bill was this day debated, and in the end reffer'd to a committee, 'tis said the Lord Lieutenants will have power given them to raise a month's pay as occasion shall offer, and to march into the neighbour counties to joind with their neighbours if it is requisite. To-day the King christen'd a new pleasure-ship and nam'd it (himself) La Katherine, the name of the Infanta of Portugal.

Fol. 72. 1661, May 25.—At ten a clock every morning the Howse of Commons debates the several paragraphs of the Militia bill, so that that is the greatest business yet upon their hands and will be so a long time, for they proceed very slowly, and yet we had need to be constantly in some posture of defence, for 'tother day in the north one (whose name I cannot yet learn) that lived in Leeds in Yorkshire had got 3 or 400 men ready to attempt something, but was chased his country and last night was taken in Holborn and this morning brought to White-hall; 20 or 30 witnesses are come up against him, in few days we shall have a perfect account of the whole; we do not yet hear when the ships go for the Infanta of Portugall. But some of the conditions of the marriage are now upon performance, particularly the delivery of Tangier (a town of the Portugalls in the bottom of the streights) into the King's hands. Mr. Noel, my Lord Cambden's son is married to one of my Lord Treasurer's daughters; Lord Cambden hath settled 8,000*l.* per annum. Sir John Nicholas (son to the secretary) is married to a sister of Lord Northampton. There is a bill now in the Lords House for the making a brook in Worcestershire navigable betwixt Seaverne and Shirbrige, that the coals there may be brought cheaper to Worcester, Gloucester, and these Lower Countreys, which will absolutely destroy all the water-sale of coals out of Shropshire, the trade of Bridgnorth and in part of Shrewsbury; yet it will certainly pass the Lords House, whatever it does that of the Commons.

Fol. 73. 1661, May 30. London.—The same to the same.—There were so many members absent of both parties from St. Margarets on Sunday last, when they were appointed to receive the Communion, that neither party thought fit to take notice of it in the House next day. Mr. Prynne and some few others refus'd to take it kneeling. 'Twas moved next day that Dr. Gunneing might have the thanks of the House for his pains, and be desired to print his sermon; Secretary Maurice and Mr. Prynne oppos'd it; the former said it was a scandalous sermon, but the House order'd thanks, and in waggery some desired that those two opposers should be the persons order'd to carry them, but not so order'd. Yesterday, being the day of the King's birth and return hither, was observed with great solemnity in all churches. To-day the House of Commons order'd a bill to be brought in by the solicitor, to enable the King to send commissions for receiving the free and voluntary contribution of his subjects towards the supply of his occasions. And another Bill to be brought in by the same person to vacate the Act (made in the Long Parliament) that excluded the Bishops from the Lords House. Some officers of the late King's were lately upon a design of petitioning the Parliament for some consideration towards their arrears, but have thought fit to stop for the present; however, I have sent you a paper publish'd by them, which may be worth your reading. P.S. 'Tis believed Argyle is by this time dead, as an express says that came thence, and saw the scaffold up.

Vol. 4.

Letters from Stephen Charlton to Sir R. Leveson.

Fol. 1. 1631, July 30, London.—Sends by bearer a book lately sent from France containing a long letter from Monsieur to his brother the King of France.—Hears that the Queen mother will remain at Ghent.

Fol. 2. 1642, Oct. 25, London. . . . News this day of a great battle between the King's army and the Earl of Essex. There is one that proffered to pawn his life that the Earl of Essex has taken the King and the Prince prisoners, and routed the King's army . . . and that Prince Robert (Rupert) is slain. . . . It is certainly reported that they have had a very great battle and a bloody one 5 or 6 miles beyond Banbury. . . . The main battle began on Sunday last about one o'clock p.m. and lasted until 6 at night; and then it was hard to say who should have the better. But on Monday morning Lord Brook's forces and Col. Hampden's and Col. Goodin came up with 600 or 700 fresh men and 10 or 12 pieces of cannon, and fell upon the flank of the King's army and wholly routed them, and this is the general report; and they say that the King's horse had a great advantage over the Earl of Essex, but his foot they say fought like devils; and besides they say that the country came in pel-mell to help the Earl of Essex. "And yet for all this I was all this morning at the Parliament House, and no man could tell me that there was any certainty of this. I saw my Lord of Newberg there, and Mr. Robert Legh likewise, and they know nothing of a certainty." . . . Some think that the King got the better and that the Earl of Essex was slain; it was a bloody blattle, 4 thousand men slain on each side, and neither King nor Prince within 3 miles of the armies when they fought. . . . The Parliament put into Windsor Castle above 14 or 1,500 men at the news they heard that the King was coming to London or Windsor, but now they have sent them back again. One told that he heard that once the King was in danger, and there was a great cry in the army of Save the King. Order by Parliament yesterday that Pauls shall be kept shut, and all trades shall shut up their shops for a small time, and all prisoners that are in Tower or Gatehouse shall be kept close prisoners. Some 300 or 400 Scots are come by sea hither and more will come shortly. . . . It is certain that the Queen will be in France very speedily. . . . She is daily expected there.

1642, May 25, London.—Sends in a sealed box two pair of pendants, one for Lady Newport, the other pair for Mrs. Stevenson, price 60*l*.; if she do not like them she may return them within 14 days. . . . The foreign news, that for certain the Spaniards have given the French a mighty overthrow in Artoys about Chat-teler, where they have killed above 6,000 on the place and derouted the whole army and taken all their baggage, munition and cannon. . . . The Spaniards have also given them another overthrow at Perpignan or thereabouts. The Cardinal de Richelieu is so sick that it is impossible for him to live. The Swedes have given the Emperor a great overthrow lately.

1642, June . . . Fears for the peace of the kingdom. Refers for news to inclosed papers. The Earl of Warwick is come from sea on purpose to exercise his place of Lieutenant for the Militia in Essex; and this day he is to muster up the trained bands of that county at Burntwood. Now this is done by the appointment of the Parliament, and the King hath appointed another lieutenant for the same county (whose name I cannot yet learn), but it seems they have both chosen the same day and the same place for the mustering their men. . . . Because of the order which I send you, I hope you will be here by the 16th of this month, or else you will be in danger to lose 100*l*. . . . The Parliament advance but little, because of these great distractions, only make all the shift that possible can be for money to supply Ireland. The drums beat daily for that service both by sea and land; there is a further store of shipping [] for these parts of a matter of 18 or 20 sail. . . . Lady Newport's pewter plate trenchers are under the hands of the graver. . . . The Parliament have voted the Lord Savile and the Lord Lindsey enemies of the Commonwealth. . . . Last week this city granted to lend the Parliament 100,000*l*. for the Irish business, to be paid out of the 400,000*l*. last granted to be levied by the Parliament, and now the companies of the city are very busy in ordering the leviation (levy) of the said 100,000*l*.

Fol. 5. 1642 [], London. . . . The Parliament have lately received a letter from the Earl of Essex intimating that he had sent to Lord Dorset to intreat him to acquaint the King that he had a petition to deliver to him from the Parliament. The King answered that his ears should always be open to any petition that the Parliament should make unto him, provided they sent it by any except those whose names were mentioned in his Declaration as traitors. This message the Earl of Essex sent to the Parliament upon Saturday night last from Worcester, and desired them to send down some of the Parliament men that are well acquainted with the counties of Hereford and Salop, and to advise with him concerning the state of those two counties. Sir Robert Harley and Sir John Corbet are two of those that are gone down to him for that purpose. . . . This message took up all the day yesterday in both Houses, upon which they passed some votes: 1st, That the restriction in the King's answer did not stand with the honour and privilege of Parliament, &c. . . . The Earl of Bedford is come to the Parliament to vindicate himself from some scandals raised upon him about the passages before Sherbourne, and as I am told he has cleared himself. The Earl of Bath is taken in the west country, and they are bringing him and Sir Hugh Pollard and three more of quality up hither. News for certain that in Yorkshire there is an agreement of peace made in Yorkshire between those that stood for the King and those that stood for the Parliament, Lord Fairfax being the principal man for the Parliament, and the Earl of Cumberland for the King; it is thought the Parliament is not well pleased at the agreement. The cavaliers whom the Marquis of Hertford left behind him in the west country, as soon as he was gone, wheeled about and went into Cornwall, and are now in Famoeth (Falmouth) and in a very strong castle there close by, that was in the custody of Sir James Bagge's son-in-law. The Earl of Leicester is come to town and great preparation is making for [] Ireland, but he hath been strongly opposed [by some of the House of Commons, whereof one Mr. Martin was [] though Mr. Pym hath carried him through the []; the Earl of Bedford is appointed speedily to return to his charge unto the Earl of Essex, and it is thought that it will be he shall carry the petition to the King. One thing more in the King's Answer, viz., that he will have the petition brought by day and not by night, and that a trumpet shall sound when it is brought to him. Certain news that the Earl of Warwick has taken the two ships which revolted from him, viz., Capt. Kettleby, captain of the one, and Stradly of the other; but Stradling escaped ashore at Newcastle, the other submitted. News, confirmed by several letters from Manchester, that those of the town have slain about 300 of Lord Strange's forces. . . . The Earl of Northumberland is married to Lady Elizabeth Howard, and I sold him my necklace of pearl to present unto her; I am to have 650*l*. for it. . . . I am at Charing Cross about the business of my pearl, and also about the selling of my Barbary nag to Mr. Holles.

Fol. 6. 1642, Aug. 9, London. . . . Colonel [Goring] hath declared himself for the [], to keep the town and castle of Portsmouth for the King, and refuses the Parliament to have any interest therein, although within these few days he wrote a letter to them that he would stand for the Parliament with the hazard of his life and fortunes, 'till he had gotten 5,000*l*. from them to make some fortifications about the town; and so soon as he had got the money he was absolutely for the King. . . . It is thought he has made sure of the Isle of Wight likewise for the King: . . . but for all this we are in good hope of pacification before they come to blows; for all Hampshire and those parts are stark wild at Col. Goring and swear they will cut his throat or else lose their lives, as is reported; they will not obey the Commission of Array there or in Somersetshire where the Marquis of Hertford has been much baffled, and all his followers, consisting in most of the prime gentry of that shire, only the clothiers of the country and the freeholders, inasmuch that he was forced to retreat into Wells. . . . In Warwickshire the Lord Brook has carried the militia clean against Lord Northampton. . . . There was a little scuffling between them, but no harm done; and it was about 5 or 6 pieces of ordnance which Lord Brooke bought here in town to send to Warwick Castle which the Earl of Northampton would have taken from him for the King; but Lord Brook was too hard for him as you may perceive by a printed paper here inclosed. . . . Serjt. Hide of the House of Commons was sent to the Tower last week. Judge Malloc, upon Friday last, was brought from Kingston Siz (Kingston Assizes?) by a troop of horse to the Parliament for causing some distraction at the Assizes in Essex and Kent amongst the people. Sir Kenelm Digby was on Saturday morning sent for by the Parliament and taken in his bed, for raising some horse privately in the city, and have found out 15 or 16 of his horses in several stables about the city. The county of Essex have sent up 500 horse to go along with the Earl of Essex and sends the city word that they have 500 more at their service. This day news from Somersetshire that the Marquis of Hertford is taken prisoner in Wells, and a number of the noblemen and gentlemen that did assist him in the Commission of Array. (The writer refers to inclosed papers.) And from the inclosed from the High Sheriff of Yorkshire you shall understand of the truth there. . . . I have sent Doctor Hinton the six dozen of pewter plates.

Fol. 7. 1642, Aug. [], London. I have learned that the Marquis Hertford was not taken, but fled away from Wells in the night with all his company; or he would have been taken the next morning; for there were gathered the next morning about Wells above 40,000 men for that purpose; and the Earl of Pembroke and the Earl of Bedford are gone down into all those parts with commission from the Parliament to raise forces and trained bands, and to pursue the said Marquis and all with him as traitors to the King and Parliament. We hear the King is now at Leicester, and thence he goes to Warwick and West Chester, and many fear he will cross the seas (which God forbid if it be his will). The Isle of Wight stands firm for the King and Parliament, and Lord Pembroke is made Governor of it. Lord Spenser is gone from the Parliament to the King, and Sir Jacob Ashley is gone from his government of Plymouth to the King. News this night that Lord Northampton has taken 6 pieces of ordnance from Banbury with 800 troops, but it is thought he will not carry them far. The Earl of Warwick has taken a ship bound from Holland to Newcastle, laden with 300 barrels of gunpowder and other munition of war, sent by the Queen. All this I have learned for certain since writing my other letter.

Fol. 8. 1642 []. After referring to inclosed papers, he says there has been a great deal of distraction in this city (London) yesterday concerning a petition, which some considerable men in the city have underwritten for peace. (Copy inclosed.) The petition was carried yesterday to the Common Council for their approbation and advice on it, and as they were at Guildhall for that purpose in a civil way without any weapons, comes a troop of horse and some companies of foot (not of the trained bands of the city), and beset the Guildhall in a warlike manner, and abused these petitioners in a most uncivil manner. . . . The Common Council then being sitting in the Hall, some wiser than some, caused the doors to be shut, and then they took away the drawn swords from those soldiers that were within the Hall. . . . Some were hurt, but no great harm was done. At length the Common Council sent for their petition, and after long debate would by no means consent thereto, but have chosen seven aldermen and 19 common council men to draw up [another in] the name of the common council, and [] for peace, to be sent both to the King. News this day, out of the West country, that six troops coming out of Plymouth, commanded by Capt. Tomson, Capt. Pim, and others, have fallen upon Sir Ralph Hopton and routed his army, and taken prisoner the high sheriff of the shire, Baronet Senior, and his eldest son, and 9 or 10 more of quality, and shipped them at Dartmouth for London. Sir Ralph Hopton was forced to pass over a brick wall, or else he had been taken. News from Cheshire that they are all up in arms, and have put the Earl of Derby to flight; the Earl of Newcastle is got into York. (The writer then mentions a report of the Lords and Commons having agreed on an accommodation, and what he has heard of their propositions). Those that were baffled yesterday at the Guildhall are resolved to deliver their petition to the Parliament, and show their grievances, how they were abused.

Fol. 9. 1642 []. Distraction in Shropshire.—We hear that the Earl of Essex with the greatest part of his army is hastening from Worcester into that county, having reduced that town already, altho' it has cost the lives of above 16 or 17 of his men, and of above twice as many of the King's side, as the news reports, Col. Wilmot being slain in the conflict, and Prince Rupert and Sir John Byron, and the rest of the King's forces that were at Worcester are retired to Bridgnorth, where it is thought the Earl of Essex will not let them rest long.—Charlton thinks that the Shropshire gentry have brought ruin on themselves, and that the houses which the King's forces have spared will be ruined by the Earl of Essex.—There is great preparation of dragoniers to send into those parts, because the Parliament are resolved to have a flying army, to consist mostly of horsemen, to follow the King wheresoever he goes. A report that the Marquis of Hertford has lost five of the seven pieces of ordnance which he had, and almost all his ammunition and provisions, as he was going from Miniard to pass over the river into Wales somewhere about Bristol. The county rose up against him, besides the pursuit which the Earl of Bedford made, so that he escaped very narrowly himself; many of his soldiers he has left behind him at Miniard [at the] mercy of the country. The Earl of Bedford [] told me yesterday that the Marquis of Hertford is utterly undone. They told me also that some in the P[arliament had] private intelligence from my Lord of [] that some of the commanders and some of the army had a resolution to revolt as soon as they could have the opportunity, but are discovered. They told me likewise that they heard there was a falling out between Lord Paulet and the Marquis of Hertford. We hear that Prince Rupert behaves himself so rudely, whereby he doth himself a great deal of dishonour, and the King more disservice. Here is a number of money and plate brought to the Guildhall daily. I hear that Sir Peter Ricquart is come off by lending the Parliament 1000*l*. The Parliament have cast out of the House of Commons a matter of 46 for several misdeameanors, but I did not see your name in the list. . . . Out of Ireland we hear that there has been a famous victory by our side against the rebels at Munster, our side being but 2,300, and the rebels being 10 or 12,000, and commanded by Lord Musketh, and our forces being commanded by one of Lord Cork's sons, and one that married Lord Ormond's daughter; there were slain of the rebels 670, and three pieces of ordnance taken from them. . . . Our side lost but five men, whereof Lord Cork's son was one; it will certainly be in print to-morrow. They say that the King of France hath 18 or 20,000 men in Picardy not far from Calais, upon what design is not known; but the Parliament take special notice of it, and have given order to the Earl of Warwick to have an eye on those parts. Report that the Queen is expected at Newcastle the first fair wind, and that she hath bred a combustion 'twixt the States in Holland. The Emperor hath lately received another defeat of at least 4 or 5,000 men.

Fol. 11. 1656, April 29, London. News from Germany and France that the King of Sweden is absolutely beaten, and in a very bad condition. News from France that the Pope has sent two cardinals into France with a bull of excommunication against Cardinal Mazarin as a chief of a general peace between the Kings of France and Spain; the excommunication to pass unless he use his best endeavours to conclude the peace; and the Pope has written to the Archbishop of Rouen to assist the two cardinals. When the cardinals came to Paris, and delivered their message, Mazarin asked them to have patience for two days; but the next day the King and Mazarin ordered that 12 or 15,000 men in arms should be ready, and caused the two cardinals to be sent to the Bastille, and have sent soldiers to seize the Archbishop of Rouen. A quarrel is likely between the clergy and Mazarin; for all the clergy in France, except the Sorbonists, are for the peace. This coming upon the difference between the King and the Parliament of Paris and the other Parliaments, regarding the alteration of the money, of which the Cardinal is the chief, if the Cardinal do not play his part effectually it will be his utter downfall. If the King of Sweden, and this Cardinal fall, the two best pillars of our hopes here are gone. We can not hear yet whether the King of Portugal has agreed to the articles which his ambassador and our Protector concluded, nor whether our fleet be gone out of Lisbon Road.

Fol. 12. 1657, April 4, London. On Tuesday last the Speaker in the name of the whole House went to the Protector, and acquainted him with the vote of the House, and they humbly desired him to take upon him the kingly government. After much discourse he told the Speaker it was a very weighty business, and therefore required time to consider, and that he would seek God in the business, and in a few days give the House his answer. Since which time we hear that the chief commanders in the army have had several meetings, and have sought God in the business, and are generally against the proposition, and also several of the Protector's own council. . . . This morning I was told that yesternight the Protector gave in his answer to the House that he would not take on him the kingly government. Some say that he will have the city of London petition him to take it upon him. News from France about the embargo upon all the Dutch ships in the harbours and ports of France, and all Dutch merchants goods in France, because of the Dutch having taken two of the French ships in Toulon roads in revenge for the French having a little before taken two of their merchant ships in the Straits. . . . The searchers and officers of the Custom House have been in the Downs, and have seized upon 20,000 pounds [], which they found in two or three ships that were outward bound for the East Indies, which makes some of our Eastern merchants look blank upon the business and dare not own it. There is five ships come into the Downs from the f[leet], and have left 20 of their ships upon the coast of Cales, but we cannot hear of anything they have done worth their labour.

Fol. 13. 1657, April 7, London. The House is much troubled that the Protector refuses to take upon himself the kingly government. I am told that yesterday they have voted again that the kingly government is the most needful (for) this nation. Thereupon the House was very much divided. . . . They say that the [army?] will have a rendezvous within a few days upon [Black]heath about (it). Many think that the city must [petition and] then it will be done.—News from France about the seizure of the Dutch ships.—P.S. It is reported by a Parliament man that the House is resolved not to alter a tittle of what they have voted concerning the kingly government.

Fol. 14. 1657, April 11, London. After a short notice of the meeting on the Wednesday previous between the Protector and the whole House in the painted chamber, and his then desiring a further time to consider their proposition of kingly government, the writer says—In the mean time here is discovered a new plot amongst the faction of Sindercome as it is reported; it is discovered but two days ago. They have apprehended at least 30 persons, and some of them in arms ready to perfect the plot, and many other arms and ammunition taken amongst them, and they say a matter of 5,000*l.* or 6,000*l.* in gold taken about them. The Protector has been himself there two nights till two or three o'clock in the morning in examination of them; and some he has sent to the Tower, and some to Lambeth House, and some he keeps in Whitehall; but they say they are all very obstinate and resolute fellows, and will not put off their hats to the Protector, and thou him at every word that they speak to him. The report goes that there are at least 10 or 15,000 of this gang, and this has bred as great a distraction at Whitehall as the business of kingly government: and these fellows go by the name of Fifth Monarchy men. This noon at Exchange I was told that Major Harrison and Col. Okey and another Colonel are in this plot and are apprehended and sent to the Tower: seven of our frigates are now before Dunkirk, and four before Ostend to try if they can keep their ships from going out or coming in.

Fol. 15. 1657, April 14, London. Yesterday the Protector and the Parliament had a conference according to appointment. . . . He gave them some objections in writing against his taking the kingly government: this was all that passed and so they parted; and immediately the House chose a Committee to answer his objections. This was told me by a Parliament man yesternight, who told me that his opinion was that the Protector would not accept the kingly government, but withal he told me that he found five for one of the contrary opinion. The certainty of the great plot is without contradiction, and the report goes that it would have been the bloodiest business that ever was invented if it had taken effect, throughout all the kingdom, but especially in London, Whitehall, and all the suburbs. They say that the Tower should have been blown up, &c. &c. I am told that, besides those I mentioned in my last, Sir Henry Vane is one, Col. Rich, Col. Lawson and several others. The Protector immediately sent forces into several counties that he suspects by his intelligences to have any hand in the business. . . . He has those that are in hold continually in examination, and they say he examines them himself.

Fol. 16. 1657, April 18, London.—There have been several applications this week made by the House to the Protector to shew him the necessity that he should take upon him the kingly government: and twice he has put them off because of his indisposition of health.

They have solicited him to shew to him their Committee's answer (to his objections), but it seems he is not yet in perfect health to afford them a conference: and yesterday was promised them a resolution from him; but I hear this day upon the Exchange that it is put off till Monday next at 10 in the morning. The general report goes that never man was troubled as he is at this instant. The House as I hear are resolved to make a King, either him or some other; but that is hard to believe, because I think they have no such care, or else they must be confident that he will take it upon him in the conclusion. As it is generally thought, he will only stand for the City to petition him to it.—News from Holland that there they have seized Frenchmens shipping and estates as well, as they have done the Dutch in France, &c.—News that the Emperor of Germany is lately dead. Our ships at sea have met with a Dutch ship coming from St. Domingo with hides, indigo and tobacco and cochineal, and some friars in her, and it is supposed that there is some silver in her; they have taken her and brought her into the Downs.

Fol. 17. 1657, April 21, London.—Since writing the last, as I went home to Putney I called at Westminster, and there met with a Parliament man a kinsman of my wife, who told me more exactly what had passed on Thursday 'twixt the Protector and the House. As thus: the House having been two days before to speak with him, but could not because of his indisposition of health, but on Thursday he came out of his chamber half unready in his gown, and a black scarf about his neck; and made his apology for the loss of their former labour; and when he had done his speech, Serjt. Glin spake to him in answer to all the objections he gave them in writing to shew them how he was not capacitated to take the crown upon him: and when Glin had ended, the Master of the Rolls, Lenthall, spake very boldly and [] in answer to the said objections and urged Magna Carta, and the Petition of Right, and that a kingly government was a right due and most proper for the people of this nation. When he had ended his speech, then spake the Lord Broghall (Broghill) excellently well to the same purpose; and after him spoke Whitlocke shewing invincible reasons and arguments of necessity that the Protector should take upon him the kingly government. When he had ended his speech, the Protector applied himself unto the Lord Whitlocke and told them all that he must confess they had all convinced him in all his objections, insomuch that for the present he knew not what to say to them, but desired them to come to him the next day; the meantime he would take a farther consideration of it, and then he would give them satisfaction, so the House went to him on Friday, but they lost their labour; for he was not well and could not be spoken with. So they returned to the House and adjourned to the Monday following, which was yesterday. So yesterday they went to him again, and as I hear he hath put them off till this day in the afternoon 3 of the clock, and hath given them some slight hope that he will take it upon him. The opinion of most men is, that he will take it upon him. Report that the Queen of England is dead in France, and that our English ships coming from Smyrna have had a great fight with four Spanish men-of-war in the Straits, and that one of them is burned and the other sunk.

Fol. 18. 1657, April 25, London.—The Protector has given to the House some proposals whereby he may be capacitated to take the crown upon him; what the proposals are I cannot certainly relate, only I hear that he requires the laws to be regulated and some of the 12 articles moderated, and that they must add 600,000*l.* more per annum to the 1,300,000*l.* which they have formerly allotted to him for maintenance; then he will maintain the war with Spain out of that revenue. . . . It is reported that these proposals have given the House so much work to do that it will take them up a month's time at least before they can do anything else if they continue sitting. . . . It is certain that the major part of them are much discontented, and would fain begone into their country. Report that the Spaniard has besieged a town belonging to the King of Portugal on the borders of Portugal, and is there with 20,000 men, with intent to break into Portugal.

Fol. 19. 1657, May 5, London.—We are still expecting what will be the Protector's resolution. . . . He still puts the House off with farther delays to take better consideration, and to seek God in so weighty a business.

Upon his ultimate result the House adjourned till this day, and what will be done this day will be the work of my next advice. The news of the Prince of Conti is thought to be but a fable, because letters from France make no mention of it, but report that the Dutch and French are like to go together by the ears, their Ambassadors being commanded home on both sides. It is said that the Dutch Ambassador spoke so boldly to the King of France at his audience that he told him that the Cardinal Mazarin would undo him and his kingdom; which caused that the Queen Mother would not give him audience at all, nor the Cardinal either; [when] he came to take his leave of them. One of our State frigates called the Constant Warwick, meeting with three Spanish men of war of Biscay, is reported lately to have taken one of them and sunk the other two; another of our frigates have taken a Dunkirk man-of-war and brought her into Plymouth.

Fol. 20. 1657, May 23, London.—We have reports from several foreign parts, and in the first place from the East Indies, that the Hollanders have taken from the Portugals a town called Columbus, upon an island from whence the Portugall had all the cinnamon which brought a great revenue to the King of Portugal; and it is said that the Hollanders have taken all that island, and are like to take more from the Portugalls in those parts; if this news be confirmed, the Hollander will go near to make the King of Portugall but a poor King; for most of his revenues came from those parts and from the Brazils; and it is thought, with the aid of the King of Spain, the Hollander will be masters of that ere it be long, and then the King of Spain, with the assistance of the Hollander, will quietly have the kingdom of Portugal again, having already got footing in it; we shall in time hear more of this business, which will be of great importance. From Holland we hear that there is more likelihood of an accommodation 'twixt them and France; we hear from France that the King of France and the Queen his mother are upon their journey towards Bollen to view the 6,000 men from hence in those parts, and it is said the King will have 40 thousand more to join with them, so that it is the general opinion of all men that they will lay siege to Dunkirk and make the seat of war there for this summer; from Hamburg they write that the Swede hath given such an overthrow to the Pole that he will hardly recover it; the Princes of Germany are all preparing to be in a posture of arms about the election of a new Emperor; what will become of it no man knows; it is a general jealousy here that we shall fall out with the Hollanders before it be long; we hear no news at all of any action our navy have done at sea. As for Parliament and Whitehall news, it is thought that the Parliament will be dissolved within a few days and a new one chosen at Michaelmas next, or this adjourned till then; and then they are to meet again and the excluded members shall be called to sit amongst the rest, and then being a full House they shall vote a kingly government, and it will be accepted of by the Protector.—P.S. Here is a notable book cast up and down the street in nature of a libel, and directed unto the Protector; it is by report one of the strangest books there hath yet come forth; first an admonition to the Protector and then to the soldiers, and chargeth them with all the misery of these kingdoms as causers of them and threatens them God's judgment infallibly to fall upon them for it.

Fol. 21. 1657, July 11, London.—There is news come from Calais that the King of France his forces have taken the town called Momadie; it is a little garrison which the Spaniard had in Luxembourg upon the frontiers of Champagne, and did much trouble the French in those parts, and they say it will be of great importance to the French now they have it, because they will have Commencement to come to lay siege to a town or two not far off that place, which are of greater importance; it seems this garrison was surrendered to the French upon composition; we do forbear to believe the truth of it till next post. We hear that at Frankfort this next month will be the great meeting for the election of the Emperor: some say it will be the Archduke Leopoldo that will carry it, others say that the Duke of Bavaria hath a great party for him amongst them; for that purpose the King of France sends two Ambassadors to the election, and they are two of the greatest men in France except the princes of the blood. Some say the Swede will be in a strait before long, for the Dane is resolved to fall upon his country with above 40,000 men, and the Muscovite on another part of his country with above 200,000 men, and the Tartar comes with a very powerful [army] to assist the Pole, so that it is the general opinion that he will be much worsted this summer. It is confirmed that the Venetian forces by sea have had a great victory over the Turk, having taken, sunk, and destroyed above 30 of his men-of-war, besides other ships of carriage. Nothing more from Portugal . . . but some say that there is a fleet of Hollanders that lie before the port of Lisbon, and will not suffer any provisions to go in. Lord Montagu is gone down to the Downs to take command of the fleet now there and at Port[smouth] ready to go out, but no man can tell their design; some say for Dunkirk, others for Portugal.

Fol. 22. 1657, June 23, London.—Since his last, news is come by ship from Portugal contradicting the report given in his last of the success of the Portugal against the Spaniard before Olmanza, for it is certainly reported that the Spaniard hath taken Olmanza and another frontier town not far off, &c., and that the Grand Chamberlain of Portugal is revolted to the King of Spain. (This Grand Chamberlain is he that was Ambassador here, and had his brother beheaded here for the riot done in the new Exchange.) It is here generally feared that the Spaniard will go near to be master of all Portugal unless they have speedy aid from England and France; and therefore it is thought the Protector will with all expedition despatch away for Portugal 2,000 men, seeing it concerns him much to do it.—Other foreign news.—It is said that we have 50 or 60 sail of men-of-war at Portsmouth and in the Downs ready to go upon some design; Lord Montague goes general of them.

Fol. 23. 1657, June 27, London. News from France that the Prince of Condy attempted to surprise Calais, but failed, and was forced to retreat after he had burned some houses in the suburbs, and is returned back to the main body of the Spanish army, which is in the upper part of Flanders waiting upon the French army to see what they will do, &c., &c. Nothing more concerning the Portugal business. . . . [] was performed the ceremony of giving the Protector his oath in Hall and making him Protector Royal. I doubt not but you will have it all at large in the next Monday's pamphlet; the meantime I will only acquaint you with what I heard, that there were [a pair] of scaffolds built upon each side of a great canopy [] at the upper end of the Hall where the Speaker sate, and on [one] side sate all the Parliament men, and on the other side sate the [], the Lord Mayor and all the Aldermen, and they say the [Earl of] Warwick carried the sword before the Protector, and [then after he was] sworn, he was proclaimed Protector Royal in the []. Some say that those Dutch ships that were seen in the Downs, mentioned in my former letters, are gone in behalf of the Spaniard and their own interest to block up Lisbon . . . , for they have likewise war with the Portugal. If this be true, the Portugal will be in a sad condition before long, and then Blake's fleet will want a place of retreat upon all occasions, which will be a business of great concernment for the Protector's designs against the Spaniard.

Fol. 24. 1657, June 30, London. The pamphlet that came out yesterday will shew all about the late ceremony at Westminster. It is said it will be proclaimed before the Exchange. In the meantime the merchants, and generally all trades in the city, are much troubled, and storm highly at the proceedings of this titular Parliament, I will not say they curse them to the pit of hell, for by the Acts they have made they have raised yet more and more the customs and excise of almost all commodities, to the destruction of trade.

1657, July 4, London. You will hear more at large in Thursday's pamphlet, concerning the great triumphing through this city upon Wednesday last, in proclaiming the Protector and chief magistrate over the three kingdoms and the dominions thereunto belonging, especially before the Exchange. The Lord Mayor, in his crimson velvet gown, and all the aldermen in their scarlet gowns, attended with all the officers of the city, guarded with the Protector's life guard, and 500 of the best horse in the army, and 30 or 40 trumpeters of the army, and all the trumpeters and waytes of the city, with such a noise as never was heard. All the world is discontented at the Acts the Parliament have made concerning import and excise, which is the most abominable thing that ever was heard of.—After some reports of foreign news, the writer says, there are two or three more ships come to Portsmouth from Blake's fleet: the Dankirkers have lately taken one of our frigates.

Fol. 25. 1657, July 14, London.—Here is nothing at home but crying of Acts up and down the town.

1657, July 18, London.—The Protector hath taken Major Lambert's commission away from him, and has transferred all his soldiers under the command of Col. Fleetwood, which many conceive will breed ill blood, and hope the old proverb may prove true, that when thieves fall out true men may come to their goods. They say that Sir Gilbert Pickering and Col. Sidenham are put out of the Council of State, and more removals are expected. They say that the Protector is sending an ambassador for Muscovy, to mediate the differences between the Emperor and the Swede, for we begin to fear that the King of Sweden is not in a good condition. . . . Montmedy holds out still against the French. The report goes that the Spaniard hath killed a great number of the French before that place.—In a P.S. he says that the Excise and Customs are let to farm to Martin Nowell, Alderman Dethick, and one Blake, his son-in-law, Sheriff Teaine, Alderman Frederick, Mr. Ford, and three or four more, and that they are to pay 900,000*l.* per annum.

Fol. 26. 1657, July 25, London. News is come to the Protector from General Blake, that he hath taken a Flemish ship, which was coming from the Canaries, bound either for Amsterdam or for Calais. . . . She had aboard her above 200 Spanish commanders and 300,000 pieces of eight, besides store of cochineal and other rich commodities. News likewise this week from Amsterdam that two Dutch ships are lately arrived there with the value of 300,000*l.* sterling in pieces of eight, from the Canaries, which is for the King of Spain's account to pay Don John d'Austria's soldiers. There is besides in these ships to a great value in P[] commodities, all which goods and plate were part of that which was [taken] in the Canaries out of those ships which Blake destroyed at the Canaries, before they were destroyed, and so were the goods and plate in this ship which Blake hath now taken.—Reports from Portugal and Germany.—Two of the King of Denmark's ships are very great, carrying 104 pieces of ordnance apiece. . . . A flying report that Lambert should be taken at Gravesend, in a ship, intending to go privately beyond the seas, but was brought back and is sent to the Tower: some question the truth of it; . . . but it is certain that there came this week from Dunkirk shallops, which landed a party of musketeers upon the Isle of Tennes (Thanet), and went to a knight's house not far off the sea, and plundered his house, and took from him a matter of [] or 1,500*l.* in money, and carried the knight away with them, and would have taken his eldest son and his wife also [if it had not] been that he engaged upon his honour to cause 1,000*l.* to be sent to them in Bruges within a certain time for his ransom. Meantime they have taken the knight for security till the money be paid. It is supposed that they were most of them Englishmen.

1657, July 28, London.—A report, since the French letters came yesterday, that the siege of Montmédy is raised. Several merchant ships are lately arrived in the Downs from Smyrna and Leghorn, and one or two from the East Indies, and at least 10 or 12 from the Barbadoes, most of them from Barbadoes laden with coarse sugars. Our fleet is not yet gone out of the Downs, neither can we learn upon what design they are bound. At home very little moving, but very busy about this new farming of the Customs and Excise. . . . Some say that two or three of them do begin to fall off, and are afraid to hazard their fortunes in so casual a business; as indeed they had but a sad example in the last farmers in the late King's time, which were all men of vast estate, and are now all utterly ruined, and under the judgment of a statute of Bankrupt.

Fol. 27. 1657, Aug. 1. Says he has taken Sir Richard's clock to Joanes the watch maker in the Strand.—News that Blake's fleet is come upon our coast; some of his ships are at Plymouth, some at Portsmouth, and other places. They say that Montagu is gone out of the Downs with his fleet of 30 sail of very good ships; he hovers so and fro about Calais and Dunkirk. I was told yesterday by a notable intelligent person that Montagu and his fleet are bound for the Baltic, upon design to relieve the King of Sweden, and be revenged on the King of Denmark for imbarging our ships at Copenhagen about two or three years ago. The King of Sweden is in a sad condition and can expect no aid but from the Protector. The news from Flanders is that Montmédy is relieved, but the news from Whitehall is that it is taken by the French. They say that an ambassador from Portugal arrived in the west country, who is supposed comes for aid from hence. A report that the Earl of Stamford and two of his men have murdered a man upon the highway near [] park. Some say that he and his two men are condemned to be hanged at the Assizes in the country; and that he hath obtained a reprieve for 15 days, and is coming to London to [try if] he can get his pardon, which is thought will not be granted. Our undertakers for the Customs and Excise are still at a stand, and can not yet resolve whether it is best to go on or [not].

1657, Aug. 4, London.—Report from France that Montmédy is surrendered to the King of France upon very noble terms, the Governor being slain and dying the next day after he was wounded. . . . The news of Blake's coming upon our coast is not so certain (for aught I can perceive) as was reported upon Saturday last, but it is generally confirmed that Montagu is gone with his fleet for the Sound, and so for the Baltic Sea to the relief of the Swede. . . . he hath no friends to stick to him at this time but the Protector and the King of France. The King of France cannot, having both his hands full; and for our ships, they are thought will come too late, if they should get clear through the Sound, where it is thought they will find opposition.—He says the report of the Portugal Ambassador having arrived is a fable. . . . It is this day reported that the Protector and those that have been in hand to farm the Customs and Excise have now absolutely agreed upon particulars. News yesterday from Leghorn, that the Turk's Tripoli men-of-war have taken an English ship bound from Leghorn to Skanderoon, very richly laden for the account of the merchants of [] city; she is esteemed to be worth at least 40 or 50,000*l.*; her lading was fine cloth and tin and 80,000 pieces of eight.—P.S. I hear nothing farther of the Earl of Stamford's business. The ship's name that is taken is the Recovery of London, of 350 tons, and 28 pieces of ordnance.

Fol. 28. 1657, Aug. 15, London.—The Portugal [Ambassador] is come to Greenwich, where he will stay till order is taken for his reception and entrance into the City in state, as accustomed. He says that the wine merchants and vintners of London had made several addresses to the Protector for a longer time for the putting of their wines at the rate accustomed, but that he refused, "So that henceforth we shall have [] and white wine for 7*d.* the quart and Spanish wines and [] for 18*d.* the quart. The old company of the East India [] have been likewise soliciting the Protector for a patent [for a] joint stock for that trade as it hath been formerly, but they are put off from day to day for his resolution, so that many are of opinion he will not grant it."

1657, Aug. 22, London.—News that Montagu with 30 sail of our ships is before C [] and waits for the King of France in person to come down into those parts with 30,000 horse and foot, and it is supposed their design is to lay siege to Dunkirk by sea and land.—News from Antwerp of Don John of Austria's doings.—News from Germany that the Swede has utterly routed the Dane.—The Portugal Ambassador has not yet made his entry into the City. The undertakers for the Customs and Excise have not yet agreed with the Protector.

Fol. 29. 1657, Sept. 12, London.—A report on the Exchange of an express from the Downs with news that the French have besieged Dunkirk by land, and that Montagu has besieged it by sea with 28 English ships.

If Dunkirk be not well provided it will not be able to hold out long.

1657, Sept. 19, London.—No news from Holland or Flanders these 10 or 15 days. . . . This day I was told that the French have not laid siege to Dunkirk.

Here is Col. Remolds, that went Commander over the English that went over into France, and hath brought over with him the Governor's son of Calais; they are come to fetch some mortar pieces and ammunition, which is granted them and have shipped it away, and they are gone post after it. There are three or four post packets now stopt in Dunkirk, and they will not let them pass, which makes a great disturbance in trade here.

Fol. 31. 1657, Sept. 29, London. Three posts have come together from Holland, Flanders, and Germany, which were stopt in Dunkirk, which confirms the taking of Mardike.—News of great defeat of the Swedes by the Danes at sea.—Other news from Germany.—A report, held true, of De Renter having taken 10 Turkish men-of-war.—For domestic businesses at Whitehall, they are so closely carried that we can not learn anything that is done there; but what they will have published you will find in the pamphlets. This day was chosen in Guildhall Alderman Cheverton to be Lord Mayor for this next year.

1657, Oct. 7, London.—Report of the French forces in Flanders.—Reports of three of our merchant ships of considerable value, one taken in the Straits by the Turkish men-of-war, and the other two coming from Guinea and the West Indies are taken by the Spaniard.—P.S. A sad business befallen the son of Sir Thomas Eytton, a very wild young man. . . . he was placed with a woollen draper, but played so many wicked pranks that his master at last turned him away; . . . and then he fell into company with as mad blades as himself, and upon the highway on this side of St. Albans, they robbed a coach and killed Lieut. Col.; and now young Eytton is taken for one of them, and is in Newgate and like to suffer for it.

Fol. 30. 1657, Dec. 19, London. It is certainly confirmed that the two great commanders mentioned in his last letter were cast away on the Goodwin Sands in a great fog, and a kind of a storm, and the bottom of the ship that they were in was seen upwards by one that was very near her when she was cast away. . . . One of their trunks is come ashore, and some swords and rich belts known to be theirs.—There hath been some brushing of late at Mardik, [] that the Spaniard hath taken a matter of 60 of our men.—Report that the Dane hath lately got some advantage of the Swede. . . . The Swede is much threatened by the Pole and Muscovite and German forces, which undoubtedly will fall upon him heavily this next summer, and then he must of necessity fall, for he hath neither men nor money nor friends to help him, but the Protector and the French, who have enough to do themselves this summer, as it is supposed. . . . there are about seven or eight Jesuit priests apprehended, and are put in prison on pretext of a plot.

Fol. 42. 1657, Dec. 29, London.—We conceive by some late actions that our great one at Whitehall hath a world of fears and jealousies in his breast, for on Christmas and the day following he hath caused at least five or six persons to be apprehended and sent to several places of security; and some of the persons of quality, whilst they were at sermons and receiving the communion in private houses, namely, Dr. Wyld, and the greatest part that heard him at a private house, where he doth ordinarily preach and administer the sacrament at certain times appointed, and so soon as he had performed his exercises both he and the greatest part of his auditors were seized by a troop of horse and carried to St. James's, and in the same manner was another that preached at Exeter House, and the most part of his auditors likewise, and some others in London as well as they. And the next they took several persons out of Tennis Courts, and carried them to prison. They say some are sent to Windsor and some are set at liberty. Most of the Papists are apprehended and secured through all parts of the kingdom.—News from France and Germany.—Here is great store of shipping lately come into the Downs from all parts, as six ships from the East Indies, and others from Mallaga with wines and fruit, others from the Canaries with wines, and some from Barbadoes, with sugar, indigo, and cotton, and likewise from Lisbon; in all, by report, 40 sail.

Fol. 32. 1654, Feb. 15, London. Reports about contests between the Danes and Swedes.—The rumour continues that we shall have another Parliament very speedily, and that the writs are under hand; yet have I not so much faith as to believe it. The Governor of Dover Castle is put out, and another put in his place. What I wrote you in my last concerning his own regiment is certain in the main, but not all his regiment, but the greatest part of them. The Protector made a great feast in the Cockpit for all his chief commanders within two or three days after he broke up the Parliament, where (as it is reported) he drank wine very plentifully with them. No news from France, but that at Mardik our Englishmen die there wonderfully of an unknown infectious disease; and many are sent over hither very sick, and not one that comes over of 20 recovers, (he says that those that visit them, even the surgeons themselves are infected.) We expect daily some strange thing or other to come forth concerning the promoting of the present government, and a power or order for raising money by Privy Seal or the like . . . One told me that the Protector had sent a Privy Seal to Prideaux, the Attorney-General, for 3,000*l*. It is certain that above a fortnight ago the Protector sent for the present Lord Mayor, to demand a certain sum of the city, who said they were so poor, that they were forced to go from door to door to beg contributions for the relief of their poor, which were more than ever; and many families that formerly had good handicraft trades, and lived very well, and now for want of work were ready to famish for want of bread; and this is too true a story. The Protector told him for all that, if he would not undertake to procure him money, he knew how to do it himself, and so parted.

Fol. 33. 1654, Feb. 23, London. The Protector's eldest son, Richard, had like to have been shot by one of his own soldiers, who gave fire at him with a musket, but it did not go off, so he escaped that danger; but his fath(er) continues still sick and keeps his bed; the last news I heard of him was that he had a very dangerous impostume in his back, and yesterday, sent for Boone one of his our city chirurgeons . . . whom I speak with to-morrow.—News from Germany and France.—News came yesterday of the taking four or five English ships by the Dunkirkers, which are for the Spaniards, and lie upon the coast of Biscay, and in those harbours and upon the coast of Spain, and scout up and down about the mouth of the Straits, and meet with many of our ships.

1654, March 20, London.—The city are [putting] themselves into a posture of arms, according to the Protector's [letter to the] court of aldermen and common council, and . . . the trained bands were commanded to shew their arms yesterday, which was done.—A report of Monck writing to the Protector that he should look to himself in England, and he would look to himself in Scotland.—News from Germany.

Fol. 34. 1654, March 6, London.—Refers to the proclamation by the Protector and his Council, that all Papists delinquents and those who had borne arms for the late King should depart from London to their own habitations, and not to go from thence above 5 miles. . . . It is reported that the Protector cannot take his natural sleep at night, but cries out upon Monck, failed Monck, so that it seems there is something in Scotland houseables him. . . . It is certain that the grantees of body of times were never more put to their shifts than at time; they say we shall have Privy Seals come forth very shortly . . . there is a report that an order given for the army to be drawn up to this city and round about it, which if it be, it will be to draw some blood from those of this city that are troubled with a pleurisy. Here continues still the rumour of setting out a fleet and sending 30,000 men into foreign parts; which cannot be done as the case stands at present; for many men say (I cannot say how they will stand to it) that [they] will know how they part with their money hereafter; and this is the common talk among many in the city; but when half a dozen red coats shall come to them they will be as tame as asses.—News from Germany.—A rumour for a long time, and it still continues, that we are like to have another squabble with the Dutch.

Fol. 35. 1654, March 9, London.—Here [is news come] to Whitehall that there is peace made 'twixt the Swede [and the Dane], but I cannot think how it can be done so suddenly. . . . The news was told me by Jo. Bu[] this day, who had it from a friend of his who was at Whitehall this morning, where he said was great rejoicing at the news. (He gives the conditions of the peace).—News upon Saturday from our fleet that lie before Dunkirk, that 5 Dutch ships would have gone into Ostend, and it seems they were empty ships, and our ships being resolved to search them, &c., which they refused, thereupon they fell into fight and our ships took 3 of them, and forced the other two to run ashore; and now some say they are Dutch ships and will cause a breach 'twixt us and them; others say they were ships that the Spaniards had bought from the Dutch. Immediately on the news order was given to General Goodson (one of our sea generals) to haste to the Downs and go forth with 16 or 20 sail of our ships of war that are ready in the Downs, and to examine all Dutch ships that should pass to and fro in our Channel, and to fight them if the Spaniard or the King of Scots have any interest in them, for we are very jealous that the Dutch will furnish them with ships to transport soldiers for some part of the North of England. Col. Lawson, a sea commander is lately sent to the Tower; and went in under the Traitor's bridge, as I am told, but upon what account I cannot learn.

1654, March 13, London.—News of the peace between the Swede [and the Dane] is confirmed. It is the opinion that we shall speedily fall out with the Dutch. The Lord Mayor of this city, and some of the Aldermen and Common Council men were yesterday with the Protector at Whitehall by his [order], where he made a speech unto them, and told them that this nation and this city were in great danger, because he was upon good ground certainly informed that the [King of] Scots and the King of Spain were preparing great forces to come for England, and had hired ships of the Hollanders for that purpose to transport their men and that here were many thousands in this nation ready to receive them, and to join with them, and therefore he sent for them to acquaint them with these things, and to give them order to put the militia of the city into a speedy posture of war, that they may be ready at an hour's warning upon all occasions, and that for his part he assured them he would live and die with and [not] stir from the city.

Fol. 34. 1658, March 27, London.—The report that the peace was bad for the Dane is confirmed. News from France that the Governor of Hesden in Picardy, not far from Amiens and Montreuil, has surrendered it to the Prince of Condé, being discontented at some pretended wrongs received from the Cardinal, &c. &c. At home we hear that great fears and distraction is amongst them at [] and in the army likewise, as it is reported that the whole army should be drawn off [from] London, and that there should be a general rendezvous upon Hounslow Heath; but that is altered, and train [bands] here in the city were ordered to be set up and a [day] appointed for a general training in Moorfields; but we hear that business is likewise dashed, and now they beat drums, for, volunteers both in city and country as (fast) as they can drive; for Cromwell himself hath [said] that the King of Scots hath come forth of Flanders [with a fleet] of ships, and will land in some part of England or Scotland; if he be not landed already for that? On Tuesday night last, there was a kind of alarm in this city; about 9 o'clock that night the Protector sent [order] to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen and Common Council to set a double watch that night in the city, and that each Alderman in his ward with the constables and Common Council men should, in person, go and make search in every tavern, inn, and alehouse for cavaliers and malignants, and suspected persons, and seize upon horses; which was done accordingly; the like was done in the suburbs by the soldiers, and some horses were taken and carried away to the Tower and other places, but I hear their owners came the next day and they had their horses again. There are 4 or 5 of their own tribe committed lately to the Tower; amongst the rest Sir William Walar (Waller?) is one.

Fol. 36. 1658, May 8, London.—Says that the report in his last of Dr. Hewet's death is false, and he is confident they cannot prove anything against him. It is commonly reported that the High Court of Justice will not go up, but if there be any trial for the prisoners upon the score of this new plot, it will be at the King's Bench bar. . . . P.S. Since writing of the premises the High Court of Justice was proclaimed before the Exchange at noon, to begin upon Wednesday next.

Fol. 37. 1658, May 11, London.—The High Court of Justice will begin to-morrow. The speech goes that one Slingsby will be the first that shall be tried, and the next will be Dr. Hewett. It is not known who shall be Judge of that Court; some think it will be Serjeant Glin, and their reason is, because his opinion only amongst all the Judges was for setting up the High Court of Justice for this business. They say for certain that Dr. Channell (who was the first discoverer of this pretended plot) is now run since he is come to London, and Capt. Staple hath his pardon for his infamous confession of that which some say he cannot justly prove.

Fol. 38. 1658, May 15, London.—Some of the High Court of Justice met on Wednesday afternoon and adjourned the court till Monday next. . . . A report that there has been a smart fight lately between [] and the Spaniards about Mardik or Ostend wherein [] hath been worsted, and that the Duke of York and Marquis of Ormond are slain in the battle . . . but few or none believe it true. . . . P.S. Robert Waring is dead since he came over from beyond sea with Sir William Whitmore.

Fol. 39. 1658, May 29, London.—On Thursday last the High Court of Justice sat, and three or four of the prisoners were brought from the Tower to Westminster, but the court adjourned till Wednesday; none of the prisoners were brought to the bar but were sent back to the Tower. The chief witness that accuses Dr. Hewet is run away. I cannot hear anything more about the trial of Sir Henry Slingsby; some say that Lord Falconbridge has begged his life.—Some French news.

Fol. 40. 1658, June 1, London.—News from France.

Fol. 39. 1658, June 1, late at night, London.—The High Court of Justice sat this day. Dr. Hewet and the Earl of Peterborough's brother were tried. The Doctor would not plead but denied their power. The other did the same for a long time, but at length pleaded Not guilty; they produced several witnesses against him. Both were sent back to the Tower.

Fol. 40. 1658, June 3, London. . . Yesterday the High Court of Justice passed sentence on Dr. Hewet and Sir Henry Slingsby (to be hung, drawn, and quartered). The Earl of Peterborough's brother is cleared. (He refers to the pamphlet for more particular relations.) . . . Sam. Terrick and his son are both broke for 20,000*l.*, whereof 17,000*l.* is money taken up at interest.

Fol. 41. 1658, July 13, London.—News from France of the bankruptcy (for 300,000 crowns) of a great Paris banker, which distracts our Exchange.—A great wedding upon Thursday next; the Lord Rosse doth marry the Marquis of Dorchester's daughter, and a tailor told me, that the Lord Rosse hath made him one suit will cost him 800*l.* sterling.

1658, July 20, London. I heard to-day that Cardinal Mazarin narrowly escaped. The Duke of Anjou (brother of the King of France) asked for an order for some money; the Cardinal made a short denial; the Duke pulled a pistol out of his pocket and discharged it at him, but one of the Cardinal's attendants stepped between the Duke and the Cardinal and received the shot and was killed. This was told me by one that said he saw a letter from Dunkirk which gave the relation. A report that ours and the French forces intend to lay siege to Newport, and that General Morgan going to take a view of that town was slain with a cannon bullet from the town of Newport.

Fol. 43. 1660, April 21, London.—Since my last Tuesday's letter, here hath been a strong report that the King will be here speedily. Several letters have been lately seen from him to the Council of State and to General Monck, and here hath been the Lord of Ormond and hath returned back again. The Earl of Newcastle and the old Lord Goring are come over and remain here still, and have been with the Council of State and with General Monck, and have had civil reception by them. A report that a person of quality has arrived in the Downs; some say the King, others a person to treat with the Parliament about the King's business.

Here was ordered a general training on Tuesday next of all the trained bands and auxiliaries in this city to be kept in Hyde Park. . . . News that yesterday General Monck and the Council of State received intelligence that a great party of the fanatics are rendezvoused at or about Edgehill, and therefore General Monck is resolved to march to them with all his forces, &c. (Charlton says he does not believe it.) P.S. This day the Council have sent Titchburne and Ireton to the Tower.

1660, May 1, London.—On Saturday last were brought letters from the King (they say Sir Richard Grenville brought them), one to the Houses of Lords and Commons, one to General Monck, and one to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen and Common Council of the city of London. The first and second were read this morning in the presence of both Houses and voted satisfactory; then they voted Charles Stewart the Second the lawful heir apparent to the Crown of England, Scotland, and Ireland; thirdly, they voted the Government of these three nations to be in the King, Lords, and Commons; fourthly, they voted a committee of Lords and Commons to be sent speedily into Holland to acquaint the King with these votes and fetch him home; and lastly they voted 40 or 50,000*l.* for the charge of bringing the King to England. (He gives briefly the substance of the King's letters.) P.S. We hear that many of the fanatic party are daily taken in the North and West; among the rest Major-General Harrison.

Fol. 44. 1660, May 5, London.—The city have granted a loan of 100,000*l.* to the Parliament, viz., 50,000*l.* to bring the King home, and 50,000*l.* to pay the arrears of the Navy and General Monck's soldiers. . . . Lord Craven and Sir John Stowell (as I hear) are in a very good way to recover their estates. The King's arms are now beginning to be set up in all churches and in the sterns of all ships and in all the halls in the city, and all the other arms pulled down, and ordered that the King shall be prayed for in all churches. They have voted 500*l.* for a jewel for Sir John Grenville for bringing the King's letter and declaration. . . . In Dorsetshire there hath been lately another rising of the fanatics, but they were quickly suppressed and their chief captain taken prisoner with 40 more.

Fol. 46. 1660, May 8, London. This day the King was proclaimed in the accustomed places throughout London and the suburbs. All the trained bands and auxiliaries guarded the streets. The heralds of arms the maces, and the sword naked, accompanied with all the noblemen of the Parliament, the two Speakers, and all officers and judges, the Lord Mayor in a purple velvet gown, all the aldermen in their scarlet robes, General Monck with a number of horsemen of his own troop assisted with the city troops and a great number of volunteer citizens on horseback, all riding with naked swords, flourishing them above their heads.—Cannon firing; bells ringing. . . . They are going to make boane fires.

1660, May 28, London.—The King landed at Dover yesterday about 3 p.m.; they say he lay at Canterbury yesternight, and this night he is to lie at Cobham and then rest himself, and on Tuesday come to London.—Preparations in London.—The Duke of York is to lie at St. James's and the Duke of Gloucester at Somerset House.—The King hath knighted all the commissioners that went over into Holland, as well those of the Parliament that were not knights before, as also those of the city. Alderman Langham and Alderman Adams are knights and baronets.

Fol. 45. 1660, May 29, London.—(A long letter about the King's reception.) Great concourse of people in all the towns through which he passed from Dover. At Blackheath not less than 120,000 people, men, women, and children.—All the horse came along with the King to this city. The King's life guard and Col. Monck's life guard always next the King's person; and a little before the King came to the City, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen met him and performed those obedient ceremonies due in such cases; and after that the Lord Mayor and General Monck rode bare-headed before the King all along the City, and the Duke of York on the right hand of the King, and the Duke of Gloucester on his left; there was not one musket or pistol shot off ever since the King came from Dover till he was in Whitehall; for there was a prohibition to the contrary upon pain of death.—On the King's landing at Dover, Monck fell on his knees; the King laid both his hands on his head, and afterwards took him on his arm and kissed him, and some say he called him father. He called for an Order of the Garter which the Duke of York had ready and gave to the King who gave it to the General, and the Duke of York took, and would by all means put it about his leg; and after that the King knighted him Knight Banneret of England, which being done, the King and the General had about an hour's discourse in private. . . . This morning the King was upon Blackheath by 9 o'clock, and there he was on horseback and thence to London. Sir Thomas Gower being in town told me you should hear from him by the post.

Fol. 46. 1660, June 9, London.—That design which the Presbyterians had against Bishops is come to nothing.—(He refers Sir Richard to the common constant weekly pamphlet for the proceedings in Parliament.) Report that the lives of some of the traitors are to be begged by some of the Court followers who are to have great sums of money for their pains, according to the degrees of the persons and the fact. . . . But your countryman Harrison will die, whoever escapes, for he justifies himself in his action and glories in it. His Majesty's only recreation as yet is at Tennis by 5 o'clock in the morning for an hour or two. Yesterday morning he went to Hampton Court and Richmond, and came back to Whitehall to dinner, only three or four to attend him. Lord Leigh and Lord Newport sit in the House of Peers.

Fol. 47. 1660, June 16, London.—Yesterday, in the House of Peers, Lord Purbeck was accused of some treason which he has spoken of the King, and likewise of blasphemy; and the same day in the House of Commons Serjeant Glin and Whitlocke for their actions in Cromwell's time, and they say Glin is got clear with much ado, but Whitlocke is put off till another time.—The trial of the regicides takes up most of the time of both Houses.—The King and the Dukes of York and Gloucester dined this day at the Lord Mayor's by a private invitation of themselves. The King has propounded to Dr. Reynolds and Calamy for the Presbyterian party to choose 10 others to join with them, and to Dr. Gauden and Mr. Bale for the Episcopal side to take 10 likewise to their assistance and decide the business of Church Government, and the King to be the Moderator. This is the news of the day.—The King and the Duke of York come every evening as far as Battersea, Putney, and Barn Elms, to swim and bathe themselves; and take a great delight in it and swim excellent well.

Fol. 45. 1660, June 19, London. At noon, Exchange was received the King's pardon for all those of his subjects, except those which the Parliament will not pardon. . . . A report that the Houses will shortly adjourn for a certain time till the funerals of the late King be solemnized, which time is not yet certainly concluded upon, but his corpse is to be fetched back from Windsor very speedily. . . . When they have done with those that have been the late King's tryers, they will fall on those that condemned Dr. Hewet and divers others in the same kind. Yesterday, the City sent some of the Aldermen and Common Council to invite His Majesty, the Dukes of York and Gloucester, and some of the Lords to a feast on next Thursday fortnight. A present from the King of Spain of 16 horses, both coach-horses and saddle-horses.

Fol. 48. 1660, June 23, London.—Scott being taken at Gant in Flanders was sent over and brought prisoner to Westminster upon Thursday last. The two Houses have finished the Bill for Pardon yesterday, and delivered it up to be ingrossed. . . . Lord Newport I hear is made Lord Lieutenant for Shropshire, the Lord Craven, Governor of Shrewsbury, and Sir William Whitmore his deputy. Great preparations for the late King's funeral. New Commissioners chosen for the Customs House, viz., Sir Job Harly, Sir John Werssenholme (Wolstenholme?), Sir John Jacobs, Sir Nicholas Crisp, and some others to be added.—Many applications for places at Court. Whitehall is like a fair all day, and many discontented and jealous that others are preferred.

Fol. 49. 1660, June 26, London.—The Act of Oblivion and Pardon is not yet finished: yesterday, Lord Leigh told me it was not come up to the House of Lords. . . . The King doth urge them very much to finish it. They have voted 20,000*l.* to the Queen in order to her coming over. Somerset House is preparing for her. I have sent you some pamphlets; amongst them are two of Waller's poems; I had much ado to get that which is bound upon leather, they have been so bought up of late that there is none now to be had under 5*s.* a piece. (A note of the charges says that Natures Secrets cost 1*s.*, and Waller's poems, 1*s.* 10*d.*)

Fol. 50. 1660, Aug. 11, London.—I hear that yesterday the Bill of Indemnity was passed in the House of Lords. . . . A Parliament man told me that he believed if the House of Commons found any difficulty in it for them to give their consent, they would refer it wholly to the King. I hear that the House of Lords have excepted 4 more for life out of the Bill of Indemnity, which was Major Crochson (Croxtan) that was governor of Chester Castle, and one Colonel Blackwell, and one Wybourns, of this city, a shopkeeper. . . . Some say that Fairfax's name is in question.

Fol. 51. 1660, Aug. 14, London. . . . I am told that Major Waring has procured a pardon from the King. . . . Lord Newport intends to go for Shropshire next week, but his lady stays here. . . . P.S. I am told that my nephew Job is the most leading man in the House of Commons and carries all before him when he appears and speaks; he is now chosen chairman in a committee for religion. He is to be made a serjeant-at-law the next that are made, and to be Chief Justice of West Chester, or, as some say, judge of the Marches of Wales; he is the highest man in the House for the King's interest.

1660, Aug. 18, London. . . . Reports about the Bill of Indemnity. . . . Hazelrigg, Vane, and Scott, that the Lords had excepted for life, they have since condescended that they shall be only excepted for their estates. The falling out between the Duke of Buckingham and the Earl of Bristol has caused a severe order by the King and his Council against duels. The Lord Digby is put out from being Chamberlain to the Queen. On Wednesday last some members of both Houses came to the city to borrow 100,000*l.*, and offered the Poll money for security; the Court of Aldermen and Common Council referred the matter to a Committee, in which some Presbyterians in the Common Council would have a petition drawn to be presented to both Houses to relate some grievances, the chief being, as I am told, that the King had not performed his promise in settling religion and the Church Government, because, say they, they see the King's whole design is to set up the Bishops; but I believe their motion did not take. . . . News here that the fanatics are up in your parts, and have seized upon the town of Stafford, and some say they are up likewise in Scotland.—News from Italy that there is an insurrection in Rome, and that the Pope has fled to a place of strength not far from Rome, where his treasure is. . . . The States of Holland have sent His Majesty a most stately pleasure boat to sail up and down the river, all gilt very richly within and without.

Fol. 52. 1660, Sept. 1, London.—The day after my last letter the King signed the Bill of Indemnity and the Bill for Poll Money, and a Bill for Judicial Proceedings. . . . They are about disbanding the old army, but I am told they will have a new army maintained of 6 or 8,000 men for some certain time.—We hear that the Spanish Ambassador is arrived at Dover, and that the French Ambassador is at Calais ready to embark, so that we shall have a great deal of gallantry here in the city very shortly. It is reported that Major Waring will come off both for life and estate, but that Lambert and Sir Henry Vane will suffer death. Col. Scrope and Ludlow and Carye and Axtall are already voted in Parliament to die, and some others, yet it is thought the King will pardon many.

1660, Sept. 8, London.—The Parliament have voted the King 1,200,000*l.* . . . The Duke of Gloucester has been dangerously sick of the small pox or some such disease; the doctors say it is a disease between the small pox and the measles; he is now past danger of death for this bout as the doctors say. The Earl of Oxford lies dangerously ill of the small pox, it is thought he will hardly recover. The King has lately sent a letter to the Lord Mayor that it is his pleasure to have all the old Aldermen that are living shall take their places again that were put out because they refused to act against his late Majesty during the late troubles, and all those put out that have acted against him. The Earl of Arundel attempted to make his escape out of the Tower, but was prevented. Col. Ludlow has made his escape out of the hands of the serjeant-at-arms, whereupon a proclamation is come forth upon pain of high treason for any man to harbour him that doth not discover him, and 300*l.* for any man that shall discover and apprehend him. . . . General Montagu is gone to Holland to fetch over the Princess Royal. We hear that Lord German (Jermyu) is lately come from France, and brings word that the Queen Mother is not willing to come over, but will stay in France to avoid inconvenience, and it is said the Duke of Guise is to marry the Lady Henrietta Maria.

DUKE OF

1660, Sept. 11, London. It is thought the Parliament will adjourn this day week. Great preparations for the return of the Princess Royal, who is arrived at Dover, and the Duke of York is gone to meet her either there or by the way, also the great Ambassador from Spain. The Prince de Ligne arrived at Gravesend upon Sunday last, and this night they say he lies at Greenwich, and to-morrow makes his entry into this city; he comes out of Flanders and brings 500 attendants, also nine score horses, some coach-horses, and some for the great saddle; some to present to the King, some to the Duke of York, and some to the Duke of Gloucester, with three rich coaches, one to each of them, with six horses apiece. He comes extraordinary Ambassador. News from Plymouth of another Ambassador from Spain come to be Lieger here. Yesterday evening was proclaimed before the Exchange peace and free trade with Spain.

Ludlow was nearly taken; they took his coat and the coats and cloaks of two or three that were with him.

Fol. 53. 1660, Sept. 22, London. The Ambassador that came by way of Plymouth, and comes to lie Lieger here, is arrived and has taken up his quarters at Crouné House, at South Lambeth. We hear that the Princess Royal comes not over till the spring, because of the death of her brother the Duke of Gloucester. The Prince de Ligne upon Thursday last gave His Majesty a visit, but none of his attendants were there in mourning; yet they say there are at least 40 tailors at work making mourning for him and his followers at his own charge.

Fol. 54. 1660, Sept. 25, London.—The King and Duke of York went by water last Sunday afternoon to Gravesend, to meet the Princess Royal, who landed at Margate, where the King and Duke of York met her; thence they came to Gravesend, and this afternoon they brought her by water to Whitehall privately; only the Tower saluted them as they passed by, and so did all the ships in the river, with all their great guns.—Some of the judges are sent for to try the traitors.—The Duke of Gloucester was buried privately in Westminster on Friday night. Speaker Lenthall's son, who was knighted by Cromwell, is charged to have two wives, and is liked to be hanged; for, as I hear, it will be manifestly proved against him.

1660, Nov. 6, London. (To Mr. John Langley.)

Fol. 53. 1660, Nov. 10, London.—The Parliament have voted a fast, and have voted the Princess Henrietta Maria 10,000*l.*, as a gift. . . . The Houses have been at Whitehall with the King, to thank him for his last declaration. . . . They are about settling the business of the Court of Wards, and how to raise 100,000*l.* in lieu thereof, and also upon the means to pay the rest of the army's arrears and the navy, and to make provision for the maintenance of the army hereafter. The East India Company were yesterday with the King, for some assistance from him towards the maintenance of that trade: he promised that in due time he could give them all the assistance they could in reason require. . . . It is thought that he will send next year about 25 sail of men-of-war into the East Indies, to curb the Dutch in those parts. The Queen Mother, it is thought, will return to France very shortly. P. S. A Frenchman has lately come with two very fine rubies, both of a bigness and goodness, 30*l.* a piece; also a very rare Oriental amethyst, price 28*l.* I shall endeavour to get them as cheap as I can. They are not to be matched in England.

1660, Nov. 13, London.—It was expected yesterday that Titchbourne, Henry Martin, Owen Ro, and Lilbourne, should have been executed; but it seems the Lieutenant of the Tower, and a vintner of the Castle in Cornhill have procured for His Majesty to have the execution deferred for some time, only for Titchbourne's sake; for Titchbourne absolutely saved the vintner's life from the gallows, and likewise the Lieutenant of the Tower, as they say . . . but on the other side, Lady Capel, Dr. Hewet's lady, and Love's widow, are importunate petitioners to the King for justice upon them, and I hear that the Queen Mother sent her secretary to the Houses to demand justice upon all those that had been the late King's judges: . . . I am told she is to return from France speedily, with the Princess Henrietta Maria, to accomplish the match between her and the Duke d'Anjou, which they say is absolutely concluded. The French Ambassador is speedily to return to France, having freighted ships to carry his goods. It is now the general vote about the town that the D. of Y. is really married to the lady that lies in of a son in exceeding great state, and all in the family give her no other title than the Duchess.

Fol. 56. 1660, Nov. 14, London.—A debate in the Commons on a matter between the Lieutenant of the Tower and a member of the House, one Sir Hugh Owen, who, making a visit to a kinsman in the Tower, previously to his going into the country, was on returning stopped by one of the wardens at the Tower Gate, who kept him prisoner until the Lieutenant came in, on suspicion that he had been visiting Sir Arthur Hazelrigg, for all that he told him that he was a Parliament man, and why he came, &c., &c. The Lieutenant came in between 1 and 2 in the morning, foully drunk, and gave the knight some uncivil language, and would not let him go out that night, but lodged him and his two sons in a chamber, and put a padlock upon the door, and in the morning, upon better consideration, let him go at liberty: and now Sir Hugh presents the Lieutenant in the House of Commons, and yesterday the business opened in the House by one of the members (a Councillor, as it seems), and hath made such a crime that it is thought the Lieutenant will at least lose his place, if not be imprisoned besides . . . The Count de Soissons, the French Ambassador extraordinary, is returned to France. . . . The match is agreed upon between the King of France's brother and the Princess Henrietta Maria.

Fol. 57. 1660, Nov. 20, London.—Report that the Lieutenant of the Tower will, by means of friends in the House, the King, and the Duke of Albemarle, get off at a genteel rate. The House busy for the last four or five days about ordering the tax and disbanding the remainder of the army by sea and land, and making provision for the navy for the future. This done, they will fall to the prosecution of those guilty of the King's death, which the Queen Mother, as I hear, prosecutes vigorously, before she returns to France. . . . Sir Henry Vane and Lambert will be tried and suffer death, and some others. (He says he has offered 56*l.* for the rubies; that the owner has trusted them to him, and he is resolved not to part with them, so begs Sir Richard that order may be taken with Robin Shelton for payment of the money.)

Fol. 58. 1660, Nov. 24. The King has sent a letter to the House of Lords, to be communicated to the Commons, that he intends to dissolve Parliament the 22nd of next month. . . . News from Spain of a great loss of shipping before the bar of Cales (Cadiz); five galleons of the King of Spain, bound from Cales to the West Indies, richly laden to the value of three or four millions; likewise five or six ships with 5,000 soldiers from Naples, and bound for Portugal against the King of Portugal, and all cast away in a storm, besides four or five English and Dutch ships, bound from Malaga, with fruit and wine from England. I have heard this morning that the Governor of Mexico is revolted from the King of Spain, and assumes that place for himself, and will entertain any trade with any nation: and they say he that is Governor of Peru is brother to the Governor of Mexico, and it is thought they will join together and keep those countries to themselves. . . . The business of the Chancellor's daughter is yet doubtful, whether owned or not owned, for aught I can hear, by the major part as yet. (He says he has agreed for the rubies within 20*s.*, which he is resolved shall not defer the bargain; he and a friend of better judgment are confident that there are not the like to be had in England.)

Fol. 59. 1660, Nov. 27, London.—Nothing of moment in the Houses; only the fellow that made the rings and the pulleys upon the scaffold, if the King should resist that, then those things should force him to it, he was taken upon Sunday last, and taken to Newgate and will be hanged as is reported before Sunday next. (He has received 56*l.* of Robert Shelton and delivered the rubies to him.)

1660, Jan. 26, London.—The King is in very good health and goes to Hampton Court often, and back again the same day, but very private; most of his exercise is the tennis court in the morning when he doth not ride abroad; and when he doth ride abroad he is on horseback by break of day, and most commonly back again before noon. The Duke of York continues his course of physic which I am told makes him look very thin. The Queen Mother and the Princess are still at Portsmouth. . . . A rumour that the Prince of Condé begins to stir up troubles in France and that the Cardinal should be killed. The Duc d'Anjou is at Rouen waiting for the Queen and Princess coming over. The Duchess of York is lodged at Whitehall till St. James's is fitted up for her Court; further, that the Chancellor will lay out 40,000*l.* upon St. James's House for that purpose.

DUKE OF SUTHER-
LAND.

Fol. 60. 1669, Feb. 12, London.—The King's coronation is settled for the 23rd of April next; and for that purpose the King has sent to the Lord Mayor, &c., to meet him at the Tower and wait upon him all along to Westminster. The Spanish Ambassador has been with His Majesty lately to demand Dunkirk and Jamaica for the King of Spain. His Majesty answered they had cost too many of his subjects' lives to be rendered upon those terms; and that was all that passed between them. The Ambassador said he must return to Spain to acquaint his master, for he had no more business but that in England; and so took leave of His Majesty. Concerning the match with Portugal. . . . I hear that the King of Portugal has sent him a blank to set down his demands, and it shall be condescended unto. And the Princess hath sent him word that, for religion, she will refer herself to His Majesty's discretions.

Fol. 61. 1669, Feb. 16, London.—We hear that Lord Digby is sent upon some design, but where, or upon what account is not yet known. Great opposition against the match with Portugal by the Spanish and the Dutch factions.—Reports as to other matches proposed.—The City has ordered 6,000*l.* to be expended for devices and pageants for the coronation day. . . . I hear that Lent will not be so strictly enjoined as mentioned in the proclamation, because there cannot be fish sufficient to serve half the city in time of Lent, and therefore it is reported only Wednesdays and Fridays will be enjoined strictly to be deemed for fish days.

1669, Feb. 19, London. It is not known where or on what design the Earl of Bristol is gone.—Several reports about it.—Upon a secret business which is somewhat dangerous to relate till the truth be known; the rumour of it is up and down the town, but very uncertain, neither do I believe it, and I hope it is not so that the King should be married before he came out of Flanders to a relation of the Prince de Ligne, and that the Earl of Bristol is gone thither upon that account. All at Court is peaceable and quiet since the King hath new modelled his life guard. I hear that he is going down to Portsmouth to see the mariners paid their arrears;—and then give some satisfaction to them of London and Chatham, for they say some of them are three years in arrear.—P.S. In Scotland they have given Argyle his charge of high treason.

Fol. 62. 1669, March 2, London.—I must beg your excuse for not writing by last Tuesday's post, because I was at Putney with my family a *Shroving. . . . Prince Rupert (as I am informed) is the only favourite of the King's, insomuch that he has given him 30 or 40,000*l.* per annum out of his own revenues for his present maintenance, and is resolved to make him Lieut.-General of all Wales, and president of the Marches;—meantime he is preparing to go for Germany to the Emperor to take his leave of that Court and to resign his military charge there and so return to England.

I am told that the King went into the Palatinate with an intent to have procured some money of the Palsgrave, which was refused; Prince Rupert being then there, seeing the unworthiness of his brother in that particular, made use of all the friends he had, and procured His Majesty a considerable sum of money, which was an act of much love and civility, which His Majesty was very sensible of then, and now he will requite him for it. . . . We can not yet hear what is become of the Earl of Bristol; his business is carried very private. . . . Sir Thomas Corbet told me that Lord Capel is made Earl of Essex.†

1669, March 9, London.—The Duke [] Ambassador, has had an audience; some suppose it is about a match between His Majesty and the late Prince of []'s sister, for this Prince Morice van Nassau is [nearly] related to her, and it is thought that the State have an interest in this embassy as well as [] of Brandenburg. Some say the Earl of Bristol is gone direct for France to the Queen Mother about the match between the Princess Henrietta Maria and the Duke de Juin (d'Anjou?) the King of France's brother. . . . His Majesty's chiefest recreation is to go twice or thrice a week to Hampton Court to oversee his workmen there; and most part of the rest of his time is to oversee his workmen in St. James's Park, where they are making stately walks and planting of trees for shade.

Fol. 63. 1669, March 12, London.—I am informed that the Earl of Bristol was sent to the Prince of Parma's Court to take an exact view of his daughter, but the King's mind altered, and he despatched a post to command him back again.—Report of a proposition for the marriage of the King with a sister of the late Prince of Orange. . . . The writ for choosing of burgesses is this day come down to the City. Yesterday the King sent to the City to borrow 100,000*l.* to pay the mariners; . . . but to-day he sent word that there was no occasion as sufficient money had come in from the several counties to the value of 30 or 35,000*l.* P.S. My cousin Francis Charlton of Apley, hath had his leg cut off, about the gartering place.

1669, March 23, London.—Charlton says that the election in the City not being pleasing to the King, as many letters as possible of those that were written into the county to incite them to follow the example of London, were sent to the Court so that the King might see what was written. He thinks that the King intends to draw up some more forces about the City to strengthen his own guard, as also to reserve the militia in all counties; this being very needful, seeing the Presbyterians, Independants, and Anabaptists, are leagued together in the plottings; their pretence being, as they give out, to be only against the order of Bishops; the King they say they will obey in all things as well in Church as State, but none but the King supreme in the Church.

Fol. 64. 1669, April 2, London.—Report of the match with Portugal being concluded.—This day all the colonels, captains, and officers of the trained bands of this city went to Whitehall to assure the King of their loyalty to him and to the Protestant religion.—His Majesty has 12 ships fitted ready to go for the Straits against the Turks, and the Dutch have 25 sail more in readiness for the same design. . . . A rumour that the Duke of York is shortly to go to Portugal to fetch the Lady for England. The Spaniard is making great preparations for this summer against Portugal. Lord and Lady Leigh with Lady Tracy came to town on Saturday. . . . P.S. There are 62 Knights of the Bath to be made, and 14 or 16 Knights of the Garter.

1661, April 9, London.—The match with Portugal is thought to be concluded, notwithstanding the opposition of the Spanish and Dutch.—Reports of what the King of Spain has offered.

Fol. 65. 1661, May 7.—The Duke of Cambridge* (the Duke of York's son) died on Sunday night last. This day all the shops in town are shut up because of the general training on Hyde Park, so that this day is made holiday, and to-morrow will be the like, for the King's going to the Parliament. . . . Prince Rupert about 15 days past went for Germany.

1661, May 11, London. . . . The House adjourned till yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock, when the Speaker of the House of Commons was presented to the King in the House of Lords, where the Speaker made a large and learned speech. This day they sit again. . . . All diligence is using to dispatch ships to Portugal to fetch the Princess. There is also an embargo of all shipping both in the Downs and in this river till the King's ships be gone. P.S. The Spanish ambassador is preparing to return for Spain, and I hear that the Portugal Ambassador doth return for Portugal in our fleet to carry the good news of the agreement of the marriage.

Fol. 67. 1661, May 18, London.—The Queen of Bohemia is arrived at Gravesend and is expected at court daily, if she be not come thither already very privately. . . . I hear that His Majesty hath sent an express into Spain to know whether he will own his ambassador's action concerning the seditious pamphlets which he dispersed up and down the city, and till that express be returned the Spanish Ambassador is not to stir from hence. . . . The Parliament have voted it to be a Premunire to say that His Majesty is popishly affected. I am informed they have damned the Covenant, and it is to be burned by the hangman; and when it was voted so, Prin (Prynne) stood up and made a motion that the Engagement might be burnt with it; another stood up and told him that it must be the work of another day. I heard this morning that His Majesty had gone by water to fetch the Queen of Bohemia.—A rumour that there is like to be civil war in France now the Cardinal is dead.

Fol. 66. 1661, May 21, London. A likelihood of an agreement between the Dutch and Portugese.—A rumour these 2 days that the Spaniard has got a footing in Portugal, &c., &c., but there are contrary news from Lisbon. . . . The Queen of Bohemia is come to town and lodgeth at my Lord Craven's house in Drury Lane, as I am told. The Solemn League and Covenant is to be burned to-morrow by the common hangman. P.S. The ships are not yet gone for Portugal, but ready to be gone so soon as the Duke of Ormond and his attendance shall be ready.

Fol. 67. 1661, May 25, London.—Proceedings in Parliament.—I do not hear that they intend to give His Majesty a power to raise money in the intervals of Parliaments, though I wrote you so in my last.—Expects daily to hear of the departure of the fleet for Portugal.—The Hollander and the Portugal have referred their business to His Majesty as umpire. The Spanish Ambassador has been very quiet lately, and something melancholy as they say. The Solemn League and Covenant was burned on Wednesday in three places, viz., in Palace Yard, in Cheapside, and before the Old Exchange. We hear that Argyle was hanged the 22nd of this month in Edinburgh by order from His Majesty, because the same day of the month was Montrose put to death in the same place, and the Scotch Covenant likewise burnt the same day. . . . P.S. I am told that all those prisoners that are condemned and are now in the Tower shall suffer death, except Heveningham, whose life is begged by Lord Rochford and the Earl of Dover, who are to have 1,000*l.* per annum of his lands equally between them.

Fol. 68. 1661, May 28, London.—Since my last Saturday's letter the two Houses of Parliament have received the Sacrament, according as it was ordered to be celebrated, upon Sabbath day last, which they did unanimously, excepting 3 or 4, whereof 2 were our citizen burgesses, viz., Love and Tenison who absented themselves. And Prynne was there, but would take it sitting, and the minister that gave the bread saw that he would not kneel and refused to give it him, and he that came after thought that the other had given him the bread and gave him the wine sitting and took no notice, by a mistake, so that Prynne received but the wine (as I am told), so that what they will do with them that were absent we cannot tell. There was one of the House of Commons desired the Speaker to excuse him because there was a difference between him and his wife and hath been for many years . . . ; and it seems there is the like difference between the Speaker and his wife. Saturday and yesterday the two Houses were upon the damning of the Acts of No Kingly Government and the Engagement and the Instruction and another Act which I cannot hear; but the 3 others were condemned to be burnt, which was performed this day at noon before the Exchange by the hands of the hangman. . . . It is thought all the prisoners in the Tower will suffer death according to the sentence. We are expecting the truth whether Argyle was executed as reported. To-morrow is to be performed a solemnity of thanksgiving for the King's coming into England and restoration to the Crown. P.S. The Spanish Ambassador remains still here and is very quiet. . . . Our ships are still in the Downs. To fetch the Queen to England some say the Duke of Ormond is to go, some say the Duke of Albemarle, others say both. One told me the Queen of Bohemia is come purposely to mediate a peace between the King and the Hollanders, and also between the King of Portugal and the Hollanders.

Letters by Sir Richard Temple, Lady Temple, and others, 1654–1658.

Fol. 69. 1647. [Sir Richard Leveson] to Lady Christian Temple, at Stow, near Buckingham.—About the fine imposed on him for delinquency.

Fol. 70. 1654, Jan. 19. Christian Temple to Sir Richard Leveson.—About her son John (who did not seem able to settle steadily to any business or profession).

Fol. 71. 1654, Feb. 19. The same to the same. About the same matter.

Fol. 72. 1658, Dec. 28, Whitehall. Richard Temple to his uncle (Sir R. Leveson).—A letter of 4 folio pages nearly all about the imprudent behaviour of his brother (John). . . . For affairs here, I do very much fear a good agreement between the Protector and Parliament for that I perceive the popular party much fixed on their former replies (?) and though now the bill has been twice read in the House and twice committed to a grand committee, and earnest endeavours of late used for a change of some things, viz., that the Council might be for life, and not expire with every triennial Parliament and a new chosen, that the provision for the maintenance of the 30,000 continued for my Lord's life might not determine every Parliament, that a negative to the alteration of the Instrument might be given to him, that a Parliament might not be called immediately upon the choice of every Protector to beget faction and raise disturbance, yet but little unless that of the negative like to be granted; besides a provision for the rest of the 57,000 men till they may be disbanded, and likewise seeing the preparations that are made on the other side with the army gives me great cause to suspect it, and our time expiring on Monday next, after which the 20 days of deliberation are only reserved, so that I fear they cannot pass the Bill in time. Our fleet is all gone out, bound I suppose for Hispaniola to surprise that and some rich islands neighbouring, upon design to fall into the Indies; but this is a great secret and I can but guess.

Fol. 73. 1655, April 4, Stowe. Richard Temple to Sir Richard Leveson.—Announces the death of his mother about 4 p.m. of the day before.

Fol. 74. 1655, May 24, London. The same to the same.—About his brother John and his sister Christian.—For news here, the commitment of Serjeant Maynard, Twiaden, and Windham to the Tower for pleading the cause of one Coney, a merchant, who refuses to pay tonnage and poundage, as having no foundation in law but upon ordinance of my Lord Protector and his Council.

Fol. 75. 1658, June 1. Richard Temple to Sir Richard Leveson. I have spent this whole day in attending upon the trial of Doctor Hewett and Mr. Mordant. The Doctor made many exceptions to the jurisdiction of the Court. . . . He desired to know their commission; this was declared to him by the President to be an Act of Parliament and a commission under the Great Seal. Then he desired to hear it read, but that was refused; to hear his judges called by name, but this was told him had been already done; he insisted that by the words of the Act, if all did not sit they were no lawful Judicature, and brought precedents that where none were said to be of the Quorum all must sit, and that the clause in the Act empowering them to hear and determine, did refer to the whole number and not to the 17 or more; and he made other exceptions, as the Parliament was impeached in their liberty of sitting, and that 150 of them were kept out by force, and that a House of Commons were not a Parliament; but that which he principally insisted on and desired [was] counsel to be assigned him: which, being refused, he offered to submit the exposition of the Act to His Highness' Council; if they would declare that the court was lawfully constituted according to that Act, he would proceed; and this being denied, and the Court asserting their own authority, he being not suffered to speak further to the last exceptions, he declared he would [not] bring such a scandal upon himself as to yield up the liberty of an Englishman, against his conscience; and so, after many interlocations, he was recorded to be guilty by standing mute and refusing to plead. After that Mr. Mordant was brought to the bar, who did not dispute the authority of the Court, but insisted upon it, that by that Act they ought to try him by Jury, because the Act did not refer to any other manner of proceeding, and that it was said they should proceed therein as in case of Treasons; this was ruled against him by the Court: then he urged for counsel, and that he ought not to be tried the same day he was indicted, and for this he produced many precedents; but this, upon long debate, was over-ruled, and so he proceeded and pleaded Not guilty. Then the two Statutes of Sussex were produced, and gave very slender evidence against him; all was but discourses tending to a design, but the main was he did acknowledge Charles Stewart had writ to him to encourage and stir up his friends to assist him when he should land; and that if the forces in Sussex were not strong enough, those in Surrey were ready to join with them, but what forces these were, or what they were to do, was very dubiously delivered; and it appeared that if anything was intended it was but newly begun, and came not to any perfect design, and there was but a single witness to any one thing or time. Captain Mallory being escaped, he [] himself, so as might [] the mercy of the court, and yet made a reasonable good defence. . . . It is feared he may be condemned, but hoped that the nicety of the case may prevail for a pardon. A rumour that the King of France is retreated to Paris for fear of the Prince of Condé, and that Lord Falconbridge is fain to follow him.

Fol. 76. 1658, July 13, London. Richard Temple to [Sir R. Leveson]. Some consultation about summoning a Parliament, but no resolution taken yet, because the Protector is informed that the boroughs in the West are engaged by the Commonwealth party, as they call it; . . . but I believe it will be called upon short notice and unexpectedly. . . . I hear it is under consultation to prescribe some rules for the discharge of those of the royal party still under restraint. The Protector's family is dispersed; Lord Falconbridge into the North with his lady; and my Lord Richard into the West with his lady; and all, as I suppose, to engage the gentlemen and others of the country to assist such in the election as they shall propose. Lady Claypole is so troubled with the sins of her youth called the griping of the guts, that my Lord watched with her himself all Saturday night, and it is thought she hath bespoken a place in another world. Affairs in Flanders are in a good condition. The French King well recovered by the Cardinal his nurse, who watched day and night with him, which hath more endeared him to the young King.—Other foreign news.

Fol. 77. 1658, Oct. 18, Stowe. R. Temple to Sir R. Leveson.—Gives intelligence from those who were eye-witnesses though not perfect ear-witnesses of a general meeting on Thursday of all the officers of the English army at the chapel at Whitehall, occasioned, as far as could be learned, by some murmur and discontent of many of the officers and soldiers which, as some say, they were about to express in a petition or rather remonstrance concerning the prerogative that the late Protector had exercised over them by turning divers of them out and taking their commissions from them without assigning any cause and without being convicted of any offence before a Council of War, and particular instance was given in the case of my Lord Lambert and others; to prevent which for the time to come they desired: 1st, that the Protector that now is should appoint Lord Fleetwood his general-in-chief; so the present Protector not having been a soldier, and so a stranger to their persons and merits, might leave the government of the army wholly to him, whom they did conceive for the reasons alleged, would have a greater care of their interests and respect for their particulars; and further that no officer might be cashiered or have his commission taken from him without being adjudged by a Council of War. . . . Col. Berry, your late governor of Salop and the counties adjacent, made a speech and was seconded by Col. Goff, son-in-law to Commissary General Whalley, a notable engine of the late Protector in the army, and some little was also said by Lord Fleetwood; but my friend being at some distance could hear but a little now and then, and that was to this effect, hinting the dangers that might ensue to the army by any division, and casting a fair gloss upon the late Protector's proceeding in this kind, pretending that it was his tenderness of them that were laid aside that put him upon it to choose that way rather than bring them upon the stage for things which would have brought upon them a greater punishment; and lastly, that if they had any occasion of offence, directing them to address themselves to their chief officers and in particular to Lord Fleetwood, who would be all ready to endeavour to rectify anything amiss in the places they were set in as well as if they had the absolute determination thereof committed to them. I hear that for the present they seemed all well satisfied, and my friend heard them all give a general honneur after Goffe's speech in token of satisfaction; so that the Devil is laid at present.

Fol. 78. 1658, Oct. 23, London. Richard Temple to (Sir R. Leveson).—The business (mentioned in the last letter) has been chiefly animated by Major-General Desbrowe, who married the late Protector's sister; what his aim is therein as to his own particular, unless it be to make use of Fleetwood's softly temper to be a stirrup to himself to get into the saddle at last, cannot be imagined; but all do judge it a strange attempt in him to venture so great grandeur as he is already in, being third man in the Government, for to bring it once more upon the dye; whether he hath some fear he shall bear the sway as formerly, or what it is, none can comprehend. The first address was intended to have been by Petition, but afterwards by timely notice of it, it was stopped by the Protector, and all the officers sent for to a conference, when I hear they found a reply beyond expectation from the Protector, in which he did express much courage and resolution not to part with the generalship, and told them he intended not to make any alterations amongst them, till he was better acquainted both with their persons and merits, but by Lord Fleetwood's advice. This answer did for the present pacify them; but, as I hear, the Devil is revived again, and yesterday a fast was kept by the officers at St. James's. Lord Fleetwood carries fair with both parties, and I suppose all endeavours are used by the Protector to engage him, if that can be effected. It is thought with some sudden and sharp course this cloud may be blown over, otherwise we may justly fear a tempest. I find the army endeavour much the restoration of the officers that were turned out by the late Protector, as Col. Okey, &c. Col. Pride is conceived to be dead by this time; he was very near it this morning. Goff and Ingoldsby and Whalley are thought to stand firm to the Protector, though none but Ingoldsby appears publicly in opposition. My Lord Protector and his Council set mighty diligently to manage this business as it concerns them. All persons, both foreigners and others that have made any addresses to the Protector, speak very well of his deportment, and say it is much beyond expectation. . . . Sir George Askue is made admiral for the Swedes, and hath liberty to choose his officers here; his merits have been much neglected here, but it seems taken notice of abroad.

Fol. 79, no date. John Temple to Sir R. Leveson.—Promising good behaviour:—Says he has more inclination to a merchant than to divinity, law, physic or court.

Fol. 80. Savile to Sir R. Leveson. Business.

Letters from John Dodington to his uncle Sir R. Leveson.

The first four are on family matters.

Fol. 84. 1654, Feb. 1. Several scandalous pamphlets against the Protector have flown up and down; and this day a report that upon the countries refusal to pay more taxes the soldier shall take free quarter. . . . An epidemical fear of new troubles possesseth all men.

Fol. 86. 1655, May 28, London.—Mr. Recorder Steele was yesterday made Chief Baron: one Graves of Lincoln's Inn, a poor sneaking fellow, is to succeed him, as is believed. By next term you must expect a new Lord Keeper who is Attorney-General Prideaux; a new Master of the Rolls who is Lord Commissioner Lisle; and Glyn Lord Chief Justice in Rolls his place, whose quietus is signed. Thus the statists of the times have disposed of affairs, but whether things must be thus or no is past my prophetic skill. There is a new recruit going with our Indian forces.

Fol. 87. 1660, June 5, London.—On family matters.—He mentions that his father (who had then returned into his own country) had suffered misfortune in the late King's service.

Fol. 88. 1660, May 15. Frances Doddington to Sir R. Leveson.—Family matters.

Letters from William Smith to Sir R. Leveson.

Fol. 90. 1642, Oct. 9, Shrewsbury.—On Tuesday we are commanded to march, but which way I know not as yet for certain, unless towards London as all men guess. It is here said that the General Essex is already gone towards Oxford, whence he intends to pass down his ordnance by water to London, and to post himself and his army after them. P.S. Before I could seal this letter here came one of Prince Rupert's trumpeters to me to let me know of his going to-morrow to the Earl of Essex; for I have Captain Wingate whom the Prince took at Worcester in my custody: therefore you may know the Earl of Essex is not gone.

Fol. 102. 1647,* April 31. (William Smith) to Sir Richard Leveson.—You cannot but have seen the army's declaration which caused the ordinance to be passed next day for making null and void all that was done in the absence of Speaker Lenthall, though rejected at 3 or 4 several days debate before. Since the Scots have pressed an engagement upon the Houses for the sending of the old Propositions agreed on by both kingdoms, and sent to the King to Newcastle, which the Houses not being able to denie have consented to send them, which will be a means to spin out time and hold the business further off from a conclusion, 'tis hoped the King and the army may correspond so well that he shall send such an answer to them as, though not satisfactory and consenting to them (which can never be expected) yet agreeable to the sense of the army, and if so, their mediation will be so sufficient as will easily make it satisfactory. Upon the passing of this vote for the old Propositions the House adjourned on Friday till to-morrow. The King is at Hampton Court; the head-quarters of the army at Putney, but nothing is resolved on 'till they see the King's answer to the Propositions; and even then they themselves either know not, or (I can assure you) will not be thought to know what to determine. The Ministry of Scotland excite them there with all earnestness and violence to come into England as one (one?) man to settle their covenant; and 'tis believed they will, at last. Chancellor Lowden and Lanericke, Duke Hamilton's brother, are on their way hither, Commissioners from Scotland; their errand is not yet known. Argyle was absent from the Council at their sending, and made a public protestation afterwards against anything that conduced to the making of a breach between the two kingdoms. Baten, vice-admiral of the navy, is engaged to no party, and to his friends vows privately that he will obey no commands but the King's; he is provided for four months. They are still upon the disquisition of the late business in the City, and upon a report of the progress they have made in it they have committed some citizens, I hear, yet none of the House. 'Tis likely you have heard that Sir Philip Stapleton, who went over with five more of the impeached members, died of the plague at Calais, almost as soon as he landed: the people of the house where he died made the rest of the members pay them 80*l.*, before they would let them come forth, for bringing the sickness into their house: it decreased here 80 last week.

Fol. 89. 1647, Feb. 29, London.—We hear from Scotland that the Council of State are met, and that upon their first sitting the Lord Chancellor Lowden made them a short rehearsal of what had passed between their Commissioners and the Parliament of England: it was moved that the Commissioners should have thanks given them; some opposition was made by alleging they ought not to give them thanks till they were fully informed of what was done. After a short debate it was put to the Question and carried in the affirmative that they should have thanks; four only voting the negative. I desire not to be mistaken; this passed in the Council of State, not in the Parliament of Scotland which meets not till the 10th of March. There is order given in Scotland that Mr. Marshall shall not be permitted to preach in any church within that kingdom. . . . 'Tis said the Scots demand the King should be brought back to Holdenby and reside there according to their agreement when they delivered him to the Parliament. . . . A Scotchman of credit said very lately that he did believe though Hamilton and Argyll should be in as great a measure friends as they are enemies, and both endeavour to hinder their countrymen from coming into England, that they could not prevail. Some letters of the Queen and Duke of York going to the King were intercepted; but the Parliament not being able to decypher them, sent order to the Isle of Wight to have the King's cypher searched for, which was so well performed that the King's Cabinet was broke open before his face; but by great chance the King had the cypher in his pocket, and with scorn to their incivility, burnt it before their faces.

Fol. 91. 1647, Sept. 27.—The Parliament are upon a new model of propositions; some few of the old ones will be taken, and some of the army's proposals; . . . but if they continue masters of the army, I look for little good by them; if not, I look their propositions should break their own necks; for there has been snapping lately in the House between some of the root and branch men and the officers of the army that are members. Ireton, moving the army's proposals might be considered there, and sent to the King, gave occasion to one Scot (an insolent fellow and enemy to the proposals as all of that spirit are) to let the House know that there had been underhand treaties between the officers of the army and the King, to which end Ashburnham and Sir John Berkeley were continually at the head-quarters, agents for the King, which he desired might be examined; to which Cromwell by way of reply took occasion to vindicate his own innocence and to declare his readiness to obey the Parliament's commands, but if the House should think fit to examine that business, he desired it might be examined withal, which members of the House had been at head-quarters likewise endeavouring to debauch the army and seduce them from their principles of this violent party, though there are not a considerable number in the House, in opposition to the rest, yet there are too many of them of the body of the army which causes continual dispute and jealousies between the general officers and adjutors (sic) which is the greatest hope we have the officers of the army will come to an agreement with the King, for fear their own factions and the odium they contract from the kingdom by being necessitated through them to keep up their army the longer, will at length undo them; if they do not I do not see how the King and the Parliament can ever agree; for in their new propositions they have absolutely voted down the Bishops and the sale of their lands, which the King making a matter of conscience I believe will never consent to; and then they have absolutely agreed he shall have no negative voice in the Militia after the expiration of the time they propose to have it settled in them, which is in effect to have it in them for ever. They have accused the Lord Mayor and 4 Aldermen with two or three Common Councilmen of high treason. The aldermen are Bunce, Langham, Cullen, and Adams. Some aldermen have shaken off their furs and say they will serve in that condition no more. I hear the City will lend no money which will cause the army to take some violent cause for raising it upon them. A rumour that Hamilton has undertaken the sudden disbanding of the Scotch army.

No man living can tell what the issue of this business will be; . . . yet Ash. and Be. are in good hopes which is all the comfort I can give you. Lord Digby and O'Neal are arrived in France lately with great danger. Digby has gone for St. Germain to the Queen, where he saw Prince Rupert (who is well recovered of his shot in his head, and now in great esteem there) and my Lord Gerard to fight with, if the Queen do not salve matters. Some of our Presbyterian ministers are found to have been interested in exciting the apprentices in the late business of the City and are sent for; I hear Calamy, Burgess and Care named.

Fol. 90. 1658, Oct. 9. W. Smith to Mr. John Langley. All our courtiers are preparing for the greatest funeral that has been seen in England. Yesterday His Highness presented all the officers of the army with complete mournings; nevertheless there are many discontented persons among the Marshalists whose often assemblings, though as often forbidden, do hold their meetings, insomuch that the obsequies being over, it is believed some discontents will break out. It is said the funeral will be solemnized on the 5th day of November next. . . . Much honour is performed to the corpse which lies at Somerset House.—Foreign news.—We hear of a great ship burnt at Chatham, it is said to be that which was called the Princess Royal, which now is called the Resolution, which ship was a better ship of war than the Sovereign Royal.

Fol. 92. 1658, Oct. 23. W. Smith to John Langley. —His Highness's funeral is designed to be on the 9th of November. . . . The Dutch hold a reasonable handsome correspondence with His Highness, their Ambassador being daily received in a very respectful manner at Whitehall.—The French are not so much caressed there as formerly.

Fol. 94. 1660, June 23, Drury Lane. W. Smith to (John Langley). . . . The fire between the Presbytery and the Episcopacy is not yet extinguished; for Jack the Levite labours to confound Aaron the jure divino priest; but God holds the balance and will do justice. As to the Publicans Office the Parliament have out-acted their predecessors and given His Majesty the Customs during life; tho' before they have been given only from one Parliament to another. . . . The Commissioners use all means they can devise to raise money from such as have been sucking and gathering it per er nefas for these years of rebellion; but the Lord General is composed all of mercy and has highly interposed in the Lower House for favour towards some of the most rich and potent of the Rump, whereby many great offenders have found more favour than ever they did, or intended to show to those that are now more justly their judges; but his Lordship is now removed to the Lords' House. (The writer then mentions all his titles and offices.) I know no man for coat armour to exceed His Excellency; this day I saw in a table of his Achievements 90 several coats of arms in his quarterings. Lord Jermyn, Earl of St. Alban's, is soon going to France and is to return with the Queen. . . . The King is every night feasted by one or other of the Lords.

Fol. 95. 1660, Aug. 4. W. Smith to John Langley.—

The Lords have delivered 63 of the regicides to justice without mercy, and so many of them as can be apprehended are speedily to undergo the execution thereof; this sacrifice is offered only to the Manes of his murdered Majesty. The Houses at present are about inquiry into the other bloody Courts which have bereaved the virtuous and loyal nobility of their lives. . . . The French Queen is said to be with child, and yet Her Majesty's magnificent entry into Paris is delayed because Cardinal Mazarin is indisposed of the gout. For Ambassadors, we look for Don Lewis de Haro's brother from Spain with 300 followers, Prince Rupert with a great train from the Emperor, and the Duc d'Espernon from France with no less state.

Fol. 96. 1660, Aug. 12, Drury Lane.—William Smith to John Langley.—As yet, no public persons come from foreign Princes. The two Houses of Parliament look still upon each other as if they had been long strangers. The Lords pursue justice, though with mercy beyond merit. The Commons prefer mercy, even to the detriment of justice; so as between their long debates the Act of Indemnity has not yet received the royal stamp. His Majesty is in continual action and merciful expressions, inasmuch as he rejoiceth all men's hearts who beheld the cheerfulness of his countenance . . . He is of late much invited to christen his servants' children, and after many such works of piety he went on Saturday last to the Tower, and performed the same work for Mr. Lieutenant's son there, during which solemnity the prisoners were carried all into the Mint, though some of them, as I hear, hoped and cried to have been carried to His Majesty. The Scots Commissioners have received great content from the King and his Council, and are going home filled with joy; the great officers are also settled, to their own desires; the Earl of Glencairn is made Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Crawford is Lord Treasurer, the Earl of Lauderdale, Secretary, and the rest are changed. On Thursday last His Majesty went below Gravesend aboard an East India fleet, consisting of seven goodly ships, returned with rich lading, amongst which one ship and her lading fell to his own share; for, as I hear, the ship and her lading were the adventure of Richard Cromwell . . . The same night, returning, he had the divertissement of dancing on the ropes before him in the great hall at Whitehall. Notwithstanding Mr. Calamy has lately, as I hear, petitioned His Majesty against his two royal brothers for going to plays.

1660, Aug. 18, Drury Lane. William Smith to John Langley.—The account between the Houses of Parliament comes off with discord, and is not like to be other so long as the Presbyterians can foment the difference. In the beginning of this week a committee of Lords and Commons went into the City to borrow 100,000*l*. The citizens not only denied it but told them that the Commons House were obstructing justice upon the murderers of the King and their loyal brethren. The members returned in wrath, and next day passed the Bill for Poll money, which the City bears with great regret; so, in short, the Parliament and City are all disjointed. About Wednesday next we expect the Prince de Ligné, Ambassador Extraordinary from his Catholic Majesty, who comes attended with 12 noblemen, each having three coaches with six horses apiece, and the ambassador six coaches in like manner, together with 20 lackeys and 20 grooms, besides pages. Camden House in London, together with Goldsmiths' Hall near adjoining, are prepared for the said ambassador. The extraordinary ambassadors of Denmark and the State of Venice are come already. The Earl of St. Alban's returns hither next week from France, and with him comes the most disconsolate Duchess of Richmond, having buried in France her only young son the Duke, who has left to the Earl of Lichfield his title of Lenox, together with his whole revenue. P.S. The Bill of Indemnity is again returned from the Lords' House, who will not be pacified without a proportionable sacrifice to justice; the City being of the same mind; God reward them.

Fol. 97. 1660, Aug. 25. William Smith to John Langley.—This has been a week both of action and passion. Almost every day there have been conferences between the two Houses, and yet they have not always parted like brethren. . . . Yesterday they came so near to agreement, as it is now resolved that Axtell, who was lately brought out of Ireland, shall be hanged and quartered, Vane and Lambert shall be left to petition His Majesty for their lives, and Hazelrigg shall not die, but lose his whole estate; . . . there is yet one scruple put to a further debate, viz., whether those who rendered themselves upon His Majesty's late Proclamation shall not find favour thereby; and this day a Conference is to be about that business. His Majesty came last night to Whitehall from Hatfield, the Earl of Salisbury's house, where he has been highly treated ever since Wednesday morning . . . The Danish and Swedish Ambassadors are arrived, but the Spanish and French not yet. The Earl of St. Alban's has returned from France, but not yet come to town, though Sir Kenelm Digby, Her Majesty's Lord Chancellor, is come. The Queen is sickly and weak, and therefore not judged fit to come from the pure air of France to our muddy climate, till the spring.

1660, Sept. 8, Drury Lane. William Smith to John Langley.—The Duke of Gloucester is taken with the small-pox, but, God be thanked, they come out full and kindly, and it is thought the worst is past.—Debates in the House about continuing the whole or part of the Army.— . . . The Sea-general, Montagu, is gone with 10 or 12 ships to bring over the Princess Royal of Orange, the King's sister.—A Frenchman has come over on behalf of the Duke of Anjou, that he may marry the Princess Henrietta, the King's youngest sister, now in France with the Queen . . . The Earl of Winchelsea is speedily going Ambassador to Constantinople, and Sir Thomas Bendish is coming home, who is like to have a sad entertainment in regard of Sir Henry Hyde's death and Sir Sackville Crow's base usage.

Fol. 90. 1660, Sept. 15. William Smith to John Langley.—Last night the royal corpse (the Duke of Gloucester) was privately interred at Westminster Abbey. His Majesty and the Duke of York are this day gone to Hampton Court for fresh air . . . On Monday last the Spanish Ambassador came very splendid to his audience at Whitehall, where His Majesty received him in a posture of melancholy, equivalent to the Spanish glory; his next appearance at Court will be as deep in mourning.—In daily expectation of the Count of Soissons as ambassador extraordinary from France. The Hollanders seem to be much troubled at a new Act of Parliament, which prohibits the foreign importation of any goods, but such as are of the same country's growth with the shipping which brings them. The Parliament have pretended great advancement to His Majesty's revenue, but the issue proves of little concernment to the proposals; the profits intended being raised out of His Majesty's estate already settled.

Fol. 99. 1660, Michaelmas day. The Princess Royal of Orange came with the King and Duke of York to Whitehall on Wednesday;—her loyal reception;—nevertheless, a miscreant villain in Kent getting into a pulpit affronted God with thanks for the death of the Duke of Gloucester, adding blasphemous desires for the same upon the rest of the royal stock. The rascal, as I hear, was yesterday brought to Newgate . . . It is said that Lambert is set at liberty, and hath his own inheritable estate restored to him at the request of Sir George Booth and Lord General Monck. A lioness in the Tower is delivered of three whelps, whereas it is said they use to have but one; this is received as a good omen.—The Count of Soissons is still expected; . . . the Prince de Ligni yet continues here.

1660, Oct. 12, Drury Lane. William Smith to John Langley.—The week has been spent in sessions and trials upon the Rebels. . . . Your countryman Harrison began and led the dance of that black Masque, . . . being this day between 10 and 12 to be hanged and quartered where Charing Cross stood. Five more received the same sentence yesterday, viz., Scot, Cook, Carew, Scrope, and Jones. This day Hugh Peters comes to his trial, being the man, as is by all reported, and as they say proved, to have given the fatal blow.—We expect Her Majesty 10 days hence, with her beautiful daughter Henrietta, but is not long to stay as is said. The traitors Whaley and Goffe are gotten into New England, but soon expected to be sent over. Sir Michael Livesey of Kent (another of the murderers), being gotten into the Low Countries, was met with by a gentleman whom he had formerly highly abused in Kent, who, demanding satisfaction of Sir Michael, the knight refused to own his name; whereupon the gentleman required him to draw, else he would run him through the body; Sir Michael did so, but was soon disarmed; whereat the people coming in and demanding the cause of their quarrel, the gentleman said, That was one of the murderers of the King: the Dutch boors, without further examination, cut Sir Michael in pieces, and trod his body into the dust. Harrison is now hanged and quartered, not vouchsafing any expression of repentance, but blasphemously said he should rise again within three days, and at the right hand of God be Judge of his Judges, and so died, not being half an hour at the place before he was executed. The Presbyterians would not yet be quiet if they durst stir, nor are they content, though they have the best offices in Court and City, while we poor Cavaliers are ready still to starve.

Fol. 100. 1660, Oct. 20. William Smith to John Langley.—Refers to Harrison's death on the previous Saturday at Charing Cross.—On Monday John Carew died in the same place and manner. On Tuesday despairing Hugh Peters and John Cook, the only penitent, were hanged and quartered in the same place. On Wednesday Thomas Scott, railing, and Gregory Clements, howling, because he said his sin could not be forgiven, died as and where the rest; and an hour after came John Jones, and made no bones either of his fact or fortune, and he with Adrian Scroope, who all along desired the prayers of the people, ended their lives by the same death in the same place; and now the stench of their burnt bowels had so putrified the air, as the inhabitants thereabout petitioned His Majesty there might be no more executed in that place; therefore on Friday, Francis Hacker, without remorse, and Daniell Axtell, who dissolved himself into tears and prayers for the King and his own soul, were executed at Tyburn, where Hacker was only hanged, and his brother, Rowland Hacker, had his body entire, which he begged, and Axtell was quartered. The rest of the condemned rebels are returned to the Tower 'till His Majesty and the Parliament resolve what shall be done with them.

1660, Oct. 27, Drury Lane. William Smith to John Langley.—This week, the Term beginning, Sir Robert Forster is made Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, Sir Orlando Bridgeman is removed from Chief Baron to be Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and Judge Hales is expected to be made Lord Chief Baron. On Thursday the new Serjeants at law (in number 15), invited His Majesty to their sumptuous feast at the Middle Temple Hall; but the King, having much domestic business, went not. On Wednesday the Duke of York and his royal sister, the Princess of Orange, went towards Dover, to prepare (the one by sea and the other by land) for bringing and entertaining the Queen's Majesty. On Friday the great French Ambassador had his audience at the Banqueting Hall. This morning His Majesty went by the first of daylight towards Dover to meet his royal mother, who is expected to be this night at Calais, together with Her Majesty's most beautiful daughter, the Princess Henrietta . . . who is to be speedily married to the Duke of Anjou, the French King's only brother,—after which Her Majesty will return and settle in England . . . Trade begins to flourish.—The Presbyterians have lately made some disturbances, which are reasonably well pacified by Bishopsrics and Deaneries, which are conferred on half a dozen of the most quarrelsome of them. . . . I am truly comforted in beholding His Majesty, but have not yet been benefited by his coming.

Fol. 101. 1661, April 13, Drury Lane. William Smith to John Langley.—The chiefest affairs now in hand are His Majesty's coronation and marriage, the first of which draws near, the four stately standing Pageants being now almost finished. The first His Majesty shall encounter is in Leadenhall Street, and it presenteth Anarchy and the confusion which that government brings: the second is erected at the Royal Exchange, and it holds forth Presbytery, and with it the decay of Trade; the third, which is the most sumptuous, stands in Cheapside, relating the honours due to the Hierarchy, and sheweth the restoration of Episcopacy. In this magnificent building, His Majesty is to be treated to a stately banquet, and to show the power which Episcopacy hath over Presbytery, just at His Majesty's departure will arise the form of the old Crosse, which anciently stood at the same place, at whose appearance Presbytery vanisheth. The last, which is also very glorious, stands in Fleet Street, and represents Monarchy, whereby the former disorders are brought into their first conformities:—and these are to be the works of Monday, the 22d of this instant April. On Monday next His Majesty intends to go towards Windsor, to accomplish the instalments of the Garter; 20 or more knights are to be installed, with the Duke of Richmond, the Duke of Ormond (created also Prince of Tipperary), the Earl of Lindsey, and the Earl of Manchester, are the last receivers of that order. There are also divers to be made Dukes, Marquises, Earls, Viscounts, Barons, and Knights of the Bath.—Speaking of the expected marriage, the writer says, We rest our hopes and expectations on Portugal, at which the Spaniard swells; nevertheless, it is said the Earl of Bristol has concluded a truce between Spain and Portugal . . . I am informed that our gracious Queen Mary will be speedily here; but I doubt it, because her last welcome was so starv'ingly expressed by this unworthy city, who again have showed their teeth in the election of their Parliament men, but the general elections of England in other parts have given better testimony of their loyalty . . . For the Coronation, the Lord Wharton's furnitures for his horse (as is said), will amount to 8,000*l.*, the bit of his bridle being valued at 500*l.* The Duke of Buckingham has written to some friends (as they say), that notwithstanding the malice of the cards and dice, he has bestowed 30,000*l.* upon a suit to attend His Majesty at his coronation.

Fol. 103. 1661, May 25. William Smith to John Langley.—I have been little in town for these 2 months last past. The principal news is in relation to His Majesty, and that towards his marriage, which you have in print from his own mouth. The Lady Infanta Katharina is expected about 3 months hence; on the 18th of July, His Majesty intends to begin his progress, which is intended towards Plymouth, there to meet the Infanta. In the Parliament, the last public work was the hangman's, to burn the holy Covenant, which he did on Wednesday last in London and Westminster. On Tuesday (as it is reported for certain) the great traitor Argyle paid the debt due to his many treasons and murders in the same manner which he inflicted on that matchless convert Montrose . . . The Dutch being to receive great sums of money from Portugal upon the conclusion of peace, would also have the benefit of their men-of-war abroad for 8 months which being resisted by His Majesty, it is thought we shall rather engage in the Portugal's assistance. . . . Some soldiers are lately sent over to Dunkirk, where, it is said, the Spanish forces have very lately seized upon all the horse of the garrison as they were grazing under the town.

Vol. V.

Letters by Wm. (afterwards Sir Wm.) Dugdale.

1642, Aug. 28, Nottingham.—W. Dugdale to Sir Richard Leveson at Trentham.—I was required by Mr. Secretary to cause these printed things to be safely conveyed to you, who desires that you will please to disperse them so soon as is possible, and to the best advantage of His Majesties service. The two letters do require a speedy and trusty delivery, and some account of them accordingly. Men and arms will be welcome hither, and therefore what furtherance of either you can make at this present will be most acceptable. There be two reasons why I enlarge not myself more to you in particular, the one is haste, the other you may guess at.

Fol. 2. 1648, Oct. 16. W. Dugdale to [Dr. Hinton?] I yesterday received yours, and by reason that next week the same party who left my last letter at your house is to pass that way again, I have sent you these inclosed in the meantime to look over, if you have not yet seen this book, I know you will think your labour well bestowed in reading it; by the other which I received by the last post you will see what is like to be the issue of the personable intreatye (for soe my neighbours call it). I am very glad to hear that the noble knight and my good friend Mr. J. Langley be in health.—Sends Mr. Dodsworth's service.—I met with an acquaintance in Paris this summer who hath been out of England now near 7 years; he resided in Rome two years, and hath made the best use of his travels that I ever yet knew any do; he came to Paris about Christmas last, and in his return by Florence was most nobly used by the Ladies father at Trentham, whom he magnifies for one of the most accomplished men in the world, and says that he yet speaks as good English as if he had never lived out of this kingdom. This gentleman showed me a pedigree printed in two large sheets of paper drawn by the Duke of Northumberland himself of his own family, and very finely devised upon a ragged staff (in regard of his relation to the old Earls of Warwick). The print was cut in copper at the Duke's own charge, and the copies he gives to friends, whereof this was one. . . . I thank you much for your friendly intentions towards my daughter, and should be very glad to dispose of her to wait on any lady whom you think to be principled with loyalty; &c. P.S.—My wife commends her best service to you and Mrs. Hinton.

Fol. 3. 1655, Jan. 26, London.—The same to (J. Langley?) . . . If I come into the country at Easter, which I hope to do, I shall be so busied about my Index that I cannot stir an hour. . . . I think I told you by my last of the honour done to Col. Pride, by knighting him; since that, the like is done to your quondam acquaintance Col. Barksted, the Lieutenant of the Tower. The sheriffs are all now in print; Mr. Thomas Chetwin for Staffordshire. On Monday last there was an unhappy accident at St. James; three gentlemen who had been prisoners about four months, the one his name is Holder (as I-heare) son to him that escaped when Sir Louis Dives got away; the other Tirrell; and the third Jackson or Johnson; attempting to make their escape, and being pursued into the park by a soldier, shot the soldier with a pistoll and broke his arme, and being since taken about Spring Garden, are laid in irons. But this is not all; for I hear that those that were out upon bail are now called in again. I am told that Col. Harvey (who hath the Bishop of London's seat at Fulham) though he be out of the Tower, is not forgiven his cosenage of the State; for they say that all he hath is seized on for no less then 56 thousand pounds, which they lay to his charge as pocketed by him unjustifiably. The Dutch are gone out with a great navy, if reports here be true, no less than 80 sail of men-of-war and 15,000 landmen, in aid of Dantzick against the Swede. I hope the Ecclesiastical History is with you before this time.

Fol. 4. 1655, Sept. 8, London.—W. Dugdale to John Langley at Trnham.—I hope that the Rationale, I told you of, will be very shortly with you; for it is delivered to your cousin at the Three Crowns to be conveyed by the carrier, who was to come from hence yesterday (as he said). Admiral Pen is come back from Jamaica with part of the Navy, but hath left General Venables dead there, and many more, as most men say. Some talk of recruits, and I cannot tell what; but others fear that we have lost so much by this voyage that there will be little encouragement to adventure again. It is said that three of the best ships were blown up or fired, and many men perished in the accident. They say that Pen is at Portsmouth. There is one Sturgeon, of the Protector's Lifeguard taken and imprisoned, as a framer or disperser of the libellous Queres, of which I could never get a sight as yet. The Protector hath been very ill the last week, but they say he is now recovered. His uncle Sir Oliver Cromwell is very lately dead by an unhappy accident; for I hear that he was out in the rain, and after his return sitting by a good fire without any company in the room, by some weakness or swoon fell into the fire, and was so scorched that he died about two days after. We hear of great hurt by floods, especially Northward, by the overflowing of the Trent, which they say here hath gone over cornfields. Here is now some talk of the speedy enlargement of those that are in restraint; and that we shall have a new Militia settled in 7 or 8 parts of the nation, each having their charge of those Malignants within their limits; and 'tis said that this is to be borne out by the Royalists only. Great preparation is making in Germany by the Emperor as I heare, so formidable is the Swede grown by getting this footing in Poland at such an easy rate.

Fol. 5. 1655, Sept. 15, London.—The same to the same.—I hope the Rationale is come safe to your hands. For news, I am to tell you that General Venables is printed to be alive again, though sick; but they say that our men die exceedingly at Portsmouth and other places since their return, the loss by this sea voyage being aggravated every day more and more, so far as people dare spoute. And they say that the Spaniard is lately gone out with 23 stout ships, which we doubt may meet with those 13 that are left behind at Jamaica. Mr. Palmer and Sir John Packington are out of the Tower; but the enlargement of others moves slowly either out of that place or any else. 'Tis now said that we shall not permit the Swedes to raise any men here. On Friday last week Bidle the Socinian was tried for his life at Newgate sessions; who confidently justified himself, pleading the Instrument of Government for his warrant, which holds forth toleration unto all that do profess faith in God by Jesus Christ except those that are popish or prelatical; so that they have set him aside, not knowing how to touch him, to the great grief of the presbyters. Very busy they are in most counties as I hear to establish godly ministers in all places, there being strict scrutiny made into those that are the present incumbents, in so much as they have questioned Lambert Osbaston for impudence, ignorance, and debauchedness, and having proved that he pledged an health about six years ago, have outed him of a rich parsonage in Hertfordshire, where he was very well liked of for his good hospitality.

Fol. 6. 1655, Sept. 22, London.—The same to the same.—I hear that the Tryers are very busy in many places [in putting] such men out of Church livings as are scandalous in any respect; of which sort they have lately met with Lambert Osbaston, who had a fat parsonage in Hertfordshire, and, charging him with impudence, ignorance, and debauchedness, have outed him. For the first of these faults they judge him at large; for the second they say he is ignorant in the things of God; and for the last they had proof that he drunk an health about six years since. But we have sad news to our merchants, whose traffic is with Spain; for the Catholic King is so much incensed against us for the business of Hispaniola and Jamaica, that he hath caused all those merchants' goods and books which are within his dominions to be seized on and the persons of the men secured. And if the report be true that I hear this day, General Venables and Admiral Pen with some other that were in this unsuccessful expedition were yesterday committed to the Tower. We are afraid that the Spaniard will destroy those that we left in Jamaica, which are not many, there being 13 ships with them; for they are gone out with a great navy and above ten thousand men aboard whereof many are gentlemen. I hear that the Kentishmen and many others do get their liberty upon bail. Yesterday the Lord Mayor was feasted at Whitehall, and made a knight to boot.

Fol. 7. 1655, Michaelmas Day.—The same to the same.—For news we have very little here, except the imprisonment of Col. Venables and Pen in the Tower for that miscarriage in Hispaniola: but I hear that the merchants have certain intelligence that the King of Spain's Plate fleet is come home safe; so that then Admiral Blague may put up his pipes for this year. For want of matter I here send you some notes of a sermon for which it is said the preacher is committed; but there be that say that in his later prayer he prayed God to forgive His Highness for those things, and that he is not in restraint.

Brief notes of a sermon preached before the L. Protector at Hampton Court (by the Minister of Hampton) about the midst of August last. The text Prov. cap. 29. v. 2.

1. The imeriall actings of a bad ruler, like Absolon, who got into the Throne by flatteries.

2. Being advanced into it, he advanced only his own relations.

3. He lays heavy taxes upon the people to debase their spirits and subject them to his designs.

4. He gives God thanks for victories, that the people may think his cause is righteous.

5. He gives a toleration to all sects; and countenanceth all but the true religion.

6. Jehu like, he pretends Reformation, when he intends to set up Calves at Bethell.

7. He persecutes all that are not of his faction, and are contrary to his present interest.

Hast thou killed and } Here he spoke of Ahab taken possession. } ing Naboths vineyard, &c. He said that when David out off the lap of Saul's garment his heart smote him, and so made a parallel betwixt that and cutting off the late King's head: and how David was troubled for what he had done, though he was ordained to succeed Saul.

Mr. Gage, his text to our English in Hispaniola wherein he preached to them, after they were beaten. Joshua, cap. 7. ver. 7.

Fol. 8. 1655, Oct. 9.* The same to the same.—I am very glad to understand (as I do by yours of Sept. 29th) that my noble friend is in good health, being much obliged to him for his valuation of my work in the press; which you may be sure I speed forward all that may be, but doubt that before Lent it will not be perfected. Of those Monuments in Pauls and other places I shall confer with you at our meeting, which I hope will be shortly; for I hear not of any new restraint like to be upon the Cavaliers as yet. Some are got out within these few days, upon security given to act nothing prejudicial to the present Government: but others do stagger at the latitude those would have, and to the time, being desirous that their bonds might have some limit, their sureties conceiving it too dangerous to seal such bonds, where the condition is subject to the interpretation of those that are not their friends; for what they say is prejudicial must then expose them to the danger of the forfeiture. But I was told about two days since by a principal person that is in this restraint, that they are now resolved at Whitehall to limit the bonds to a twelvemonth, and that it shall be particularly exprest in the condition, what they mean by such prejudicial acting, &c. For other news, we hear the Palsgrave is dead, so that having left an only daughter, Prince Rupert is to succeed as Palatine; but whether it be true that he is dead, a short time will discover. Winslow (a Committee man of Haberdashers Hall) died in the return from Hispaniola. I hear he raved much of Haberdashers' Hall in his sickness. Birkinhead (brother to our Oxford Aulicus) who betrayed Col. Booth and Mr. Wenman about three years since, died likewise in that voyage. We talk high here of sending another Armada to conquer Hispaniola, notwithstanding this ill success. It seems our superiors are not pleased that so much of these matters should be communicated by the press; for they have restrained all the pamphlets but Politicians, which is to be viewed by the Secretary of State. On Wednesday last came in a Venetian Ambassador hither in great pomp. From Amsterdam we hear that the Swede is totally routed, and the King fled with xij men. If this prove true, 'tis great news. Hugh Peters lays about him to some purpose, to restrain the Presbyterians from growing up; the pulpits in divers places do ring with his declamations against them: He calls it a perivig religion and now magnifies the old. You will receive by the carrier, two little books, one a journal of our late expedition to Hispaniola, which may not abide the light here; the other a discourse [by] James Howell called Some sober inspections into the passages of the late Parliament, wherein, cogging up [the] Protector (for to him he dedicates it) with some superlative language for destroying that monster (as he calls it) [he] hath taken the boldness to speak more truth, barefaced, than any man that hath wrote since they sate; nor doth he spare the Scot and Presbyterian. Read it through, I pray you, upon my recommendation, though in some things he do commit little mistakes, and in others doth blunder a little.

Fol. 9. 1657, Feb. 13, London.—The same to the same.—This is to tell you that my printer finished yesterday, but my last plate will not be done till Tuesday, yet do I hope that I shall have two books bound to send away by the carrier for you on Fryday next. Our news is so little here, now that the Parliament is broke up, that it is scarce worth relating. On this day sevenight His Highness made a long speech to all the officers of his army, setting forth the story of our times from 3^d Caroli, and therein his own, and how that the authority he hath is a thing far from his own seeking: as also of his calling this Parliament, whereunto, being advised by his council, he yielded, though he professed it, in his own judgment, no way seasonable. Next of the necessity of his dissolving it, in order to the public safety, professing his zeal thereto, and intention to govern by the laws, except in case of urgent necessity, wherein he must be constrained to have recourse to extraordinary ways: but it seems his rhetoric did not charm them all, for I hear that 17 or 18 have either laid down their commissions, or that they are taken from them, and 'tis said that 6 of the officers of his regiment of horse are in restraint at a private house near Charing Cross. Here hath been an expectance of a Declaration from His Highness to satisfy the world for this his dissolving this Parliament; but as yet we see it not. And a great noise we have had of a Proclamation for banishing the Cavaliers and Papists 20 miles from this city; but I hope it will prove no more than a rumour. So likewise of new Decimations and many other ways for raising vast sums of money, which perhaps arise more from people's fancies than any true ground. I was this day told by one that saw a letter out of Oxfordshire, that 35 gentlemen in that county are newly secured; but all is quiet and calm here as yet, which God continue.

Fol. 10. 1657, Oct. 17, London.—The same to the same.—You shall receive that book of the Tower Records which you mention by the carrier this next week.—The Duke of Buckingham will have but a short enjoyment of his fair lady in England, I doubt, unless his and my Lord Fairfax his friends, who labour hard to get the sentence pronounced against him to be recalled can prevail: for a troop of horse is gone down into Yorkshire to seize upon him, and where ever he is taken, he is to be conveyed to Jersey, there to be confined to a sad restraint, as I hear. Other news from hence there is none, but that we have sent 4,000 suits of clothes, with store of provision and warlike habiliments to our men in Flanders. But the rumour here is, which I hope is not true, that those in Mardike are very sick, and, which is worse, that the rest at Burbroke (2 leagues thence) where they were designed to winter, are for the most part slaughtered by the Prince of Conde, who fell in upon them with a strong party. . . . He fears the Swede will lose Pomerania and perhaps more.

Fol. 11. 1657, Oct. 24, London.—The same to the same.—I hope you have, ere this, received that book of Mr. Prynne's setting out, intituled "An Abstract of the Records in the Tower."—Of news we are very barren. The troop of horse which went into the North for the Duke of Buckingham were answered by my Lord Fairfax, upon his honour, that he was not there, so that it seems he is slipt aside for the present. I am certainly told that my Lord Fairfax is coming up to mediate for him, and to endeavour to redeem him from this confinement to the isle of Jersey; what the issue thereof will be, we shall shortly see. The young lady is transcendently pensive at this sad news in reference to her husband, and so is her mother. They were married by one Mr. Vere Harcourt (Sir Simon Harcourt's brother), a great Presbyterian, who assured my Lady Fairfax that he saw God in the Duke's face. Our news from beyond sea is not much. It is confest on all hands that the Swede is sinking apace. Rumours we have had of some disaster befallen our English at Burburgh, two leagues from Mardike, but I hear it not certainly confirmed.

Fol. 12. 1657, Nov. 14, London.—The same to the same.—For news we hear that the Dutch have taken xj. Portugal ships with rich lading, and that our navy hath stept an East India ship belonging to those butter boxes about the Lands End, so that some say we and the Hozen mogens are like to fall out. This is all that I can tell you from abroad. But from hence here is more; for on Wednesday last was my Lord Protector's daughter married to the Earl of Warwick's grandson; Mr. Scobell, as a Justice of the peace, tyed the knot after a godly prayer made by one of His Highnesses divines; and on Thursday was the wedding feast kept at Whitehall, where they had 48 violins and 50 trumpets and much mirth with frolics, besides mixt dancing (a thing heretofore accounted profane) 'till 5 of the clock yesterday morning. Amongst the dancers there was the Earl of Newport, who danced with Her Highness. There was at this great solemnity the Countess of Devonshire (grandmother to the bridegroom), who presented the bride with 2,000*l.* worth of plate. And ere long the other daughter is to be married to my Lord Fauconbridge, as 'tis said. I hear that my Lady Fairfax and her daughter (the Duchess) have been several times at Whitehall of late to wait upon the great ladies there; but alas now, all this is not regarded, for I am told that the females there do say, Proud tits! are their stomachs now come down? There is talk of many that are to be summoned by His Highness to sit in the other House; but forasmuch as 'tis not yet certain who they will be, I forbear to name them.

Fol. 12. 1657, Nov. 21, London. The same to the same.—Your character of Mr. Prynne's book, which I sent you is very suitable to it, and of the same mind do I perceive are other men of understanding here; yet I must tell you that the Title thereof makes it sell, and at a very high rate.—I have sent you a catalogue of the nobility baronets of King James his time and King Charles, with the knights of King Charles, and those made by His Highness, newly printed, which sells here at double the true worth of a book of that size. From beyond sea we hear that the Dane hath had a foul blow by the Swede at Frederick Rode; but all this will not help the Swede I doubt, so powerful is the Pole, and now in Pomerania against him. Some say that Cardinal Mazarin is sick, and that Marshal Turenne moves for a peace with the Spaniard. It seems that the Dutch have taken a great prize from the Portugale, no less than xj ships, valued at two hundred thousand pounds, so that 'tis doubted that these butter boxes adhering closely to the Spaniard will be our enemies, which is the rather supposed because that their ambassador is newly gone from hence.

Fol. 13. 1660, Aug. 7. From the Herald's Office.—The same to the same.—I received your kind letter yesterday. I am well pleased that you jump so right with me in your esteem of Tom Philpot's book,* with Kilburnes and Guillims late edition. I have caused Mr. Secretary Morice his book to be delivered to your nephew to be sent to you. . . . The Act of Indemnity is almost dispatched with the Lords, who, in pursuance of the King's desires, have struck off all the provisoes of moment (as I hear), excepting that for the murderers of his father, and for Haselrig, Vane, Lambert, Axtell, and Hacker. I believe it will be sent down again to the Commons very speedily. Yesterday there passed some hot and high words in the Lords House betwixt the Duke of Buckingham and Earl of Bristol, by reason the Earl of Bristol did set a higher value on the Marquis of Newcastle's actings and sufferings for the King than of the Duke's; in so much as it amounted to a challenge as some say; whereupon by appointment of His Majesty they are required to keep their houses as I hear.

Fol. 14. 1660, Aug. 25, London.—The same to the same.—I thank you for your kind intimation of those old writings concerning Wolverhampton, and shall endeavour to get the sight of them as soon as I well can. I will deliver that book written by Mr. Blunt,† concerning the King's escape from Worcester, some time the next week, to your nephew. I know not yet any thing to the contrary, but that I shall set out of London towards Warwickshire on Monday next come sevenight. Our great expectance here is when the two Houses will finish the Act of Indemnity; several conferences they have had about it, and 'tis hoped that upon their meeting again this day upon the same occasion they will dispatch it. The Commons do much insist upon it, that those of the King's murderers who came and rendered themselves upon the King's proclamation, shall not be touched as to their lives, in regard there may be no cause to say that they were betrayed by that proclamation, which implyeth that in case they did come in and

SUTHER-
LAND.

Fol. 36. 1649, Oct. 27, Westminster. The same to (the same). After mentioning Lady Temple's business, he says, "I doubt my lady's business will require some money speedily, for two clerks are now employed in writing copies of many books lately found in the Star Chamber office at Gray's Inn, which, after the rate of 12d. a sheet, may arise to above 100l. Lady Newport is removed into St. James's. . . . Riding in the Strand upon Thursday, I met Mr. Andrew, who told me all there were in good health."

Fol. 37. 1649, Oct. 30, Westminster.—The same to (the same). Lady Temple's business.—Saturdays and Mondays the House sits not. The King is thought to be still in Jersey: little speech of him, less of the Scots: the subscription to the new government is refused by none, all submitting to it without scruple, and so will to any else that comes, whilst it stands, which makes some of that kind think it not a sufficient engagement.

Fol. 38. 1649, Nov. 3, Westminster. The same to (the same). . . . The motions in the House are chiefly about taking off the great taxes; to this purpose the revenue of the Crown lands is designed for payment of soldiers' arrears; two-thirds of Papists' lands for payment of the army, with such other propositions hereunto pertinent. The young King is said still to be in Jersey.

Fol. 39. 1649, Nov. 6, Westminster. The same to the same. . . . Here is little news stirring, all negotiations being carried with much greater secrecy than ordinary; the House is still debating upon a way for taking off the taxes; two days last week were spent about it, and this day it comes on again in course to be handled; they say their army in Ireland prospers with fresh conquests, yet that very many die daily of the country disease, and that Col. Trevor hath lately beaten up some of their quarters with much execution. The young King is said to be removed from Jersey for Scotland, being the only place left him; and venture he must, wherever he is. The design of our jar with France is thought to be purposely to provoke the common people there unto a distaste and breach with their own king, which hath wrought so far as they of Bordeaux have seized a strong castle there, and ousted Duke Epennoun, the old governor of Gascoigne, and have petitioned their King to take off the embargo of English manufactures, expecting then that our prohibition of their wines will then be recalled. P.S. Here is a fresh report that Montrose is landed with some considerable force in Scotland, and that his design is for England; and that thereupon Lambert is drawing his strength together to prepare against him.

Fol. 29. 1649, Jan. 30, Coventry.—The same to the same.—I hear at Lichfield that the young Lady of Weston is courted by the Earl of Londonderry, the Lord Talbot, and another from Sir Henry Willoughbys; being more than before I heard named; so as 'tis doubted a younger brother will not be entertained.

Fol. 31. 1649, Feb. 9, Westminster.—The same to (the same).—After relating his doings with regard to the business of the fine, he says, "'Tis reported that the King is in France, that his treaty with the Scots begins at Breda, the 15th March, that Cromwell will be here shortly, but his stay not long, that the French have recalled their prohibition of English manufactures, and that the States here will do the like for French wines."

Fol. 32. 1649, Feb. 16, Westminster. The same (to the same). . . . Sir John Davers is put from the Council of State; Gen. Fairfax is melancholy mad, troubled in mind three or four times a week, yet hath not taken the engagement; some say Cromwell will be shortly here; others say he cannot come away thence.

Fol. 35. 1649, Feb. 27, at sunset, Coventry.—The same to the same.—His (Langley's) horse having been shod by a smith in London so straight, and pared so near the quick, that at St. Alban's he was obliged to remove, and mend the shoe of his near fore foot; he must go so gently with him that he cannot be at Trent-ham before Friday evening.

Fol. 40. 1655, May 17, London. The same to the same. . . . Here's a deep silence of news. The Protector consults close and daily with his army officers. 'Tis thought he will settle a legislative power in himself: that the Judges act not according to their instructions is ill taken. Grey brought his Habeas corpus, which the Governour of Windsor refused to obey; one Cones, a London merchant, was imprisoned for refusing to pay custom; he also brought his writ of Habeas corpus last Saturday, when pleading for himself the case of ship-money, Prideaux, Attorney-General, told him the law was changed; his further hearing was adjourned to next Saturday. Some report the peace with France is concluded, being purposely deferred, either to bogle the Spaniard in the enterprise of our navy at the West Indies, or to make his grand ambassador partaker of the affront.

Fol. 41. 1655, May 19, London.—(The same to the same).—A London merchant, one Cones, lately desired to pay customs, for which his goods were seized and himself imprisoned. Upon Saturday last he brought his writ of Habeas corpus returned into the usurper's bench, where Sergeant Mainard and Sergeant Twisden with Mr. Windham, being of his council, spoke their sense of the law in that case for their client; against whom Attorney-General Prideaux prosecuted. In this dispute same pickant (piquant) words were interchanged of what was and was not law; but at that time the further hearing thereof was adjourned unto this day. In the mean time while yesterday, about 10 o'clock, those three great lawyers were summoned at Westminster Hall, to appear immediately before the Protector. After long attendance they were admitted to him, who told them they were factious persons and traitors to the Commonwealth, &c., and committed them instantly to the Tower, in three several coaches, that they might not confer together, where they remain close prisoners; yet this day Cones was brought again to the Upper Bench, where he spoke for himself modestly and stoutly. He required his former counsell. Judge Rolles said if he could bring them thither they should be heard. Cones replied if his lordship would declare it for law that in his case he ought to pay custom, he would pay it willingly; but the Court took exception at the return of the writ, and therefore adjourned the matter again unto Wednesday next, and remanded him to prison; he had counsell there, but it was not then seasonable for them to interpose. This stormy surprise startles the gownmen extremely. The Lord of Cherbury died about a week past at his house in the country.

Fol. 43. 1655, Sept. 19, Trentham. (Copy.) Sir R. Leveson to Frances Countess of Dorset. A complimentary letter.

Fol. 44. 1656, April 28, Trentham. (Copy.) The same to the same.

Fol. 44. 1656, May 17, London.—J. Langley to (Sir R. Leveson).—About the disposal of Trentham Tithes. . . . Some say the business of calling a Parliament, decimation, and doubling the taxes are set aside; others doubt it.

Fol. 46. 1658, April 24, London, Covent Garden. The same to the same.—Mentions the arrival in London of my Lady to her lodging at Mr. Coppinger's, next above the George, in Bedford Street, Covent Garden.—There is report that a higher Court of Justice is in forming; that Mr. John Russell's, Sir Compton, Sir Henry Slingsby, Doctor Hewet, a minister, &c., are commonly suspected to be in danger. That some blank commissions have been found, which have occasioned these proceedings.

Fol. 47. 1658, April 27, London.—The same (to the same). . . . Mr. Andrew Newport was here on Sunday evening, and presents you with his kindest salutes, yet is not very visible by daylight.—I see many troops of horses trumpeting to and fro, and companies of foot grumbling with their drums daily in the streets; some thinking the pretences (pretence is?) of fears to form the high Court of Justice, and securing the royal party in prisons is chiefly occasioned to draw the soldiers about the town, for doubling his guards and strengthening himself for reception of Kingship, when the seasonable time comes by Parliament or otherwise. Infinite other conjectures there are, whereof 'tis like some may hit. . . . P.S. Sir John Wollaston died upon Sunday night last.—Left almost all to his wife, did little good unto any else, &c.

Fol. 48. 1658, April 29, London. The same to (the same). . . . This morning was the trial at the upper bench, upon indictment of the Italian for forgery; the proof was very direct against him; the hearing held from 9 until 1 o'clock; then the jury went out and the judges rose; but the opinions of all the Court was so clear, that no doubt but the verdict will be for us, yet cannot be known until to-morrow morning. The two ladies were not there present, being otherwise advised by counsell, nor durst the pretended Duke appear in Court, nor could anything be proved against Sir James Croft, so he is like to escape. . . . The only discourse now is about erecting a high Court of Justice, Commissioner Lile to be president, and that some will speedily be questioned, though others say it will be like a pedagogue's rod, only held up to awe the boys; however, few like it.

DUKE OF SUTHER-
LAND.

Fol. 48. 1658, May 1. The same to (the same.) . . .

The trial upon the information passing so clear for the ladies, their next work is, that the Italian being found guilty of the forgery, and he, having four days' respite to speak in arrest of judgment, which we suspect not, then are we to move for judgment upon the verdict, and that the forged writing in the register book may be cancelled and obliterate, which we expect will be easily granted; for it must be done by special order of the court, upon our counsell's motion; and except this be effectually accomplished, all that hitherto hath been performed signifies little. The forming of a High Court of Justice seems to be at a stand for the Commission, extending to about 150 persons, amongst whom all the judges are comprehended to better countenance the procedures thereof; but they much boggle at it, and refuse to act by it, conceiving the last Parliament, being a stain'd company, was not of sufficient power to authorise them safely to undertake the execution thereof against the express provision of our known laws and divers Statutes to the same effect. Thursday and yesterday morning both the Chief Justices were in long dispute at Whitehall, concerning these particulars, which hath given some stop to that career; yet their fears or something worse still possess them, for every night the soldiers search divers houses, and take thence many into prisons.—Earl Warwick's hearse (who died about a fortnight since), with many mourners and coaches, passed through London towards Essex unto burial.

Fol. 49. 1658, May 4, London.—The same to (the same).—Domestic. He then writes at the end of the letter that "The judges still boggle at the High Court of Justice, the Prot[ector] told Chief Justice Glin that lawyers are always full of quirks. He replied it could not be otherwise, when soldiers drew up the Act; yet many think they will do their work that way which by a jury they could never perform. 4,000 men more are shipped for Mardike."

Fol. 51. 1658, May 8, London.—The same to (the same).—This morning, after serious dispute, judgment was granted in the Upper Bench against the Italian, upon the verdict of forgery; the next work is to attack and lay him in prison, if he run not away before. 'Tis reported that the French lately have been trepanned (trepanned) at Ostend, being by secret confederacy to be admitted into the town, upon a sign of hanging up a white flag, and shooting off a gun at an appointed time; and when they were entered, 1,500 of them were presently cut off, &c.

Fol. 50. 1668, May 11, London.—The same to the same.—To-morrow the Commissioners for the Court of Justice are to meet, and then to resolve upon what form they will proceed, which is thought will be after the arbitrary way without jury; then salis est accusare. Four principally are said to be fixed upon; Sir Slingsby, a Cavalier uncompounded, Dr. Hewet, a minister of the Royal party, young Mordant, a Presbyterian, and one Gifford, a Papist. This Court is to continue until the next session of Parliament, which is thought still will be about September. These rigid proceedings offend most men's thoughts. The business of Ostend was very foul; on the French side, Marshal D'Aumont being prisoner, and almost all his men slain. Parson Waring, who attended Sir Willm. Whitmore, died lately of a violent fever; he is much lamented by all, especially of that family.

Fol. 51. 1659, Feb. 2. Tho. Langley to his uncle, Mr. John Langley.—This day, the soldiers being to march out of town, the horse are gone; but the foot are mutinied, because they had not their pay, and have possessed themselves of . . . house, and 'tis said killed one of their captains last night, and do cry for a free Parliament; and just now the apprentices cry, Arms, Arms, for a free Parliament. Now what we shall have God knows.

Fol. 51. 1659, Feb. 29, Trentham. (Copy, by Mr. Langley, of a letter from Sir Richard Leveson to Sir Thomas Gower, at Stitnam, in Yorkshire.)—Complimentary.

Fol. 54. 1660, April 21. Thos. Langley to Sir Richard Leveson.—We are here all in a bustle at present, hasting into arms: and General Monk's army marching into the country, it is said towards Edgehill, where Lambert, as some say, is with 7,000 Quakers and Anabaptists.

Fol. 55. 1660, May 1. Thos. Langley to Sir R. Leveson. . . . This brings you the joyful tidings of our King's coming home, with all the speed as so great a reception will allow, there having been several votes this day in Parliament about it; also they have voted three Lords and 12 Commons, to be sent to him to Breda. The high resentment of the news in this city is expressed by ringing of bells and making of bonfires.

Fol. 55. 1660, May 3. The same to (the same). It is resolved by the Parliament, that four Lords and eight Commons, shall go to Breda to fetch home the King, and by this city that two Aldermen and four Commons shall go with them, and to carry His Majesty 10,000*l.* from this city, as a testimony of their loyal submission to his royal authority, he being proclaimed at Westminster already, and expected to be proclaimed in this city to-morrow. Further, the Parliament hath voted our late King's death to be murder.

Fol. 56. 1660, May 5. The same to the same.—I must correct my last as to the proclaiming of the King, which hath not been yet done; and now this city have chosen 21 Commissioners to go to fetch the King at their own charge, being some of the most eminent persons of the City, which are to carry him a letter and 10,000*l.* This city also lent the Parliament 50,000*l.* to send the King, who likewise send six of their Lords and 12 of their Commons with it, and their letters. This city lends the Parliament 50,000*l.*, to disband four or five regiments of their soldiers, all which moneys is already near raised. It is said the whole Parliament do intend to meet the King some part of the way. There are six rich coaches providing to fetch him in. The Hollanders have presented him with 200,000 dollars, and two very rich coaches. His entrance here it's thought will be about the end of this month.

Fol. 57. 1660, May 26. Tho. Langley to (Sir R. Leveson). This morning about 3 o'clock came advice to the Lord Mayor that the King was come to Canterbury last night, and landing about Deal or the nearest part to that place; and this night it's thought will come to Cobham Hall, and on Monday near London, and so make his entrance through here on Tuesday which is the soonest expected; the bells here have rang all day since 4 o'clock, and order given for bonfires this evening; the Earl of Cleveland leads out to meet his Majesty that day of his entrance here the gentry of Buckinghamshire and Hartfordshire; also the three regiments of horse that came out of Scotland with General Monk are likewise to go out that day to fetch in the King, all in their armour as they marched out of Scotland; the King hath conferred many honours of (on?) General Monk, as Duke of Somerset, Earl of Essex, vice-Chancellor of Oxford, Warden of the Cinque Ports, Knight of the Garter, one of his Majesty's Privy Council, and General at sea and land, and more is said; his Majesty hath also knighted all our City Commissioners and made Mr. Callamy and Dr. Reynolds two of his chaplains.

Fol. 57. 1660, May 29. The same to (the same).—Our joy and admiration hath been great here this day of the coming safe home of our most gracious Sovereign to his lodging at Whitehall, where he is safe arrived, blessed be God.

Fol. 58. 1660, Oct. 13.—Tho. Langley to his uncle, Mr. John Langley.—This day Harrison was executed at Charing Cross, carrying it out confidently to the last; yesterday was condemned five others, Scott, Jones, Scoop, Clemence, and Carew; this day were condemned Cooke and Peters; Cooke delivered himself lawyer-like to the judges for two or three hours in several cases, which were answered effectually by Sir Orlando Bridgeman and Sir Heneage Finch, the King's Solicitor; it is said on Monday Scott is to be executed in the Palace Yard at Westminster, and that the King hath been pleased to give his wife his estate; Captain Smyth tells me Cromwell's wife is married to a courtier, an elderly man, but he did not know his name, but a favourite of the Kings.

Fol. 53. 1660, Feb. 19. The same to the same.—

Fol. 59. n.d. J. Langley to Sir R. Leveson.—Business.—The Lord Keeper salutes you with much respect.—This morning I was at Bedford house to visit Mr. Newport, but he was not stirring, however, I learnt from Lord Newburgh, Sir Ed. Littleton, Sir John Jennings, Sargeant Evers, Mr. Palmer, and others that the house is full and no likelihood yet of calling or danger to them that are absent; your nephew is the bravest gallant about the town, in himself, his lady, coach and footmen, &c.

Fol. 58. 1661, April 9. Thomas Langley to Mr. John Langley. . . . This day there is chose for Parliament men in Southwark, Sir Thomas Bludworth and one Col. Moore, both right honest men; the presbiters, independents, anabaptists, and quakers joined together in abundance, but could not carry it; some of them brought swords, and when they saw they could not have their wills, drew them and hurt some of Bludworth's men, but are sent to prison for it; there's many lying reports scattered by them in the city, but so long as amounts to no more, shall be passed by; yet I may mention one upon the Exchange to-day, that the King had sold his three kingdoms to the Spaniard, and that the life guards were most papists, and that in the countries all the papists were listed, and that there would be a general massacre; but an account of this report was carried up to Court presently; this serves to show you the present temper of ugly spirits.

62. Draft in J. Langley's hand of a letter by (Sir R. L.) to Mr. Crakenhorpe.—C. seems to have applied for a presentation to or promise of the next turn to Black Notley, to which his late father seems to have been formerly presented by Sir R. L.'s father. Sir R. commends Crakenhorpe for his works and virtues, but excuses himself from making any agreement for the living, for which to contract until a vacancy is in some sort a profanation of holy things. On a vacancy, if C. is unprovided for, Sir R. will be mindful of him.

On the back is draft of a Latin letter in L.'s hand, perhaps to C.

61. n. d. (J. Langley to Sir R. L.) Gives reports about the siege of Colchester, the movements of the Scots, and a pretended design to poison the King. The Prince of Wales has left the Court of France and gone to Holland.

LETTERS BY MR. SAMUEL HINTON.

Fol. 63. 1641, May 2. S. H. (Samuel Hinton) to Sir Richard Leveson. . . . News we have by the post from London who returns so speedily that ere we have read our letters he is gone. So, the petition sent by the Earl of Stamford and the gallant answer,—the petition of the gentry at York and the answer declaring the behaviour of the Governor at Hull and his being proclaimed traitor by the King and rewarded by the Parliament with 2,000*l.* for his good service,—Sir Francis Wortley and six more of the petitioners sent for as delinquents,—is only confirmation of what you heard before. That there be 1,000 English slain in Ireland by the rebels, but with a greater loss (for so it must be or the paper will not sell), and that all will be gone if supplies go not in greater numbers and more speed, is confidently reported here; but you are nearer to Chester and can tell whether His Majesty will be there, and at the Lord Stranges, which is rumoured here. The names of the divines chosen to assist in this Lay Clergy Synodical Assembly to make a new face of religion are printed. We hear that on the 29th of April 200 Kentish gentlemen, well appointed, went to the Parliament and presented their former petition; the Parliament rose, demanded their weapons (swords and pistols) which were delivered, and promised answer as this day. The Earl of Stamford and seven more are gone down with Commission and money to levy men to keep Hull; these things portend dangers.

Fol. 63. 1642, May 16, Coventry.—The same to the same.—The King's answer to the Declaration about Hotham being read in the House, Mr. Prin did attend it with a gracious smiling, which was favour enough for the King. One of the members said if it were the King's own act he had forfeited his crown. Some called a bar, but more votes were for interpretation, and that was by this moderate gloss (never Canonist made worse) that it was not forfeited but forfeitable. Your Lord Lieutenant moved to have the malignant party named, and a staff set at their doors. How safe it is to conjoin with these potent super-monarchs I leave to your wisdom to judge. P.S. This day I am informed that divers parliament men leave the House and go to the Bath, and some say they will yield up Hotham to be tried and are fearful.

Fol. 64. 1649, April 19. S. H. (Samuel Hinton) to Mr. John Langley.—My humble services to my noble Lady and Sir R. and give them this following relation:—One Grebnerus, a German, presented Queen Elizabeth with a manuscript declaring what future events should happen in Europe. Dr. Nevill, Dean of Canterbury, and Master of Trinity College in Cambridge, procured the book of the Queen and gave it to the library of the College. Mr. Will. Clutterbooke, library keeper there, since Manchester's expelling all honest men out of the college, &c., hath upon conference, with other excluded fellows, and rubbing up their memories, given to his friends this ensuing piece of Prophecy of England. Rex septentrionalis nomine Carolus ducet uxorem papisticam Mariam, ex qua evadet regum omnium infelicitissimus. Tunc populus ipsius ditionis eliget alium sibi regem comitem, qui durabit in imperio tres annos aut circiter. Et postea idem populus eliget alium regem equitem non ejusdem familie nec honoris, qui detruget omnia sub pedibus suis aliquanto longiore tempore; et post hunc nullum. Paulo post apparebit quidam Carolus ex Carolo, descendens ab immensa classe, in littus patrie suae cum auxiliariis Danicis, Suedicis, Hollandicis, Francicis, et Hispanicis; et prosternabit suos adversarios; et administrabit imperium suum perfectissimè, et erit Carolus Magno major. Quod faxit Deus! Thus far I follow a copy; may I add (and that upon the faith of a Christian) this book I saw above 20 years since in that library. It had an epistle dedicated to Henry of Bourbon, then King of Navarr; in which he told him he should be King of France. I saw much of the business of the war in Germany and I well remember that there was foretold the fall of the Earl of Essex, and to my best remembrance in these words. Hoc anno peribit Regulus quidam in Anglia infelici morte, cujus filius, &c., shall be greater or more famous in arms than his father. Sir Tho. Leigh had Clutterbooke to read to him in Camb[ridge] under his tutor, and he met him last summer or the year before, in London, and they had speech hereof; told him much of this above, and promised then to recollect himself and give him a fuller accompt. This for the credit of the truth that there was such a book, which is performed: do you muster up your thoughts with your best and latest intelligence from the first action it mentions. Now if this find acceptance, let me know if you have heard of the Dumb Prophecy presented to the Earl of Marlborough; if not, I will give you a full account of it, and as good testimony for the truth of its stranger predictions (I mean if it did foretell and is not forgot since events too sad are happened) as I have done for the former.

Fol. 65. 1649, St. Mark's Eve.—S. H. (Samuel Hinton) to Mr. John Langley.—Since you will have it, I will speak for the Dumb Prophecy. The particulars made known to me are tragical, but I will give you my relation and my authority. At the trial of the Earl of Strafford, the Countess of Marlborough was with much ado persuaded to be at the hall one day. Some great crime he so finely wiped off and cleared himself that the auditors thought he would be quit; a lady asking the Countess her opinion she said she thought he would perish, and gave this reason, that in her husband's Dumb Prophecies (a book only filled with pictures, but not one word writ or printed in it) she saw the representation of such a court, and such a man at the bar, and his face in that picture so like the Earl of Strafford, that she feared he would be cut off, in regard that in that book in the next leaf there was he again pictured with his head on the block or cut off. This was related to Mr. W. Dugd. (Dugdale); he afterward casually at Oxford, when it was a garrison, met with the Marquis Hartford's secretary and one Mr. Longe, High Sheriff then of Wiltshire, who was near allied to Marlborough, who did assure him that it was a true relation. Upon farther discourse, Mr. Dugd. asked where the book was. Longe replied it was burnt, and that he gave his consent to the burning of it; and gave this strange reason to him (some years now since at Oxford), that amongst other things there was the picture of some such other court, and the King as at the bar, and on the other (next) leaf an hearse and the Crown pictured as set upon it, and this W. D. told me, upon his faith, was true; and the secretary heard it as well as himself. . . . Let me tell you my opinion, that both this and the former of Grebner appear to me two of the strangest things that I ever heard in my days; and let me not forget that Sir Tho. Leigh told me he had all of the King in this book from the Lord Marlborough himself. P.S. I have forgot whether I formerly told you that I saw part this prophecy of Grebner printed (but not fully as my relation) in the end of a book writ by Brightman * many years since.

Fol. 66. n. d. July 27. The same to the same.— . . . The Mayor and Sheriff of Coventry refusing to proclaim the proclamation for the Commission of Array, the High Sheriff of Warwickshire doing the same, Sir Arthur Haselrig and Lord Gray coming with 500*l.* and Dr. Bastwick to book (boot?) to keep the magazine which the Earl of Stamford had taken away, it pleased His Majesty to visit Leicester as he had Newark and Lincoln (his speeches in all 3 places printed now); his train was four miles at Leicester of gentry, priests, and others; his approach made Haselrig and Gray fly, but Bastwick is taken and in Leicester Gaol, and next Assizes to be tried for waging war against the King. Some 60 men, hired by Sir Arthur Haselrig, kept the magazine, but on Monday resigned it, and it is kept in several hundreds. The King commands Serjeant Whitnide to give the major and sheriff of Coventry notice that they must attend him as on Sunday last. The poor spirited rascals were ready to die (at Leicester they report of our major, as some write, of Ben and the Colonel), but they sent to Warwick to the Lord Brook three messengers, and divers of our inhabitants fled to that sanctuary; at last the major procured a rabble to say he should not go, nor went not. Brook had about 1,000 men in his castle, but the King went away yesterday towards Beverly, and Brook discharged part of his army. But the King will shortly see our parts and undeceive us. His answer and propositions to the Parliament are in print, gracious, full of strong reason, and trim'd with the same neat quipps as formerly. Tomorrow the Earl of Northampton, Lord Dunsmore, Sir Tho. Leigh, and the rest of the Commissioners of Array begin at Southam to train: on Friday at Stratford-upon-Avon, on Saturday at Coleshill, and there I intend to be. This is all true.

Fol. 67. 16—, Sept. 20. Sam. Hinton to Mr. Thomas Davies at his house near the Butchers-row, Lichfield.—I had rather the news that I was last Saturday committed by the Council of War in our city to the custody of our sheriff should be made known to my friends from myself than by relation of another. The cause of my imprisonment I know not; only one Mr. Phipps, a physician, and now an officer in the army here, objected (after I was ordered to be committed) that two or three years since I should speak some words before him and Sir Tho. Leigh at Layton Buzard against old Parliament men, and wish for young twigs that might be easily bound; that I should, at a tavern, tell him that I liked the Popish religion better than ours, that I had been at counsellings and consultations against the ways of the Parliament, and that I was a malignant party. Truth is, if Sir Thomas could remember discourses of Mr. Phipps after a plentiful meal, and Sir Tho. then taking physic, he would call to mind that Mr. Phipps was full in discourse against Bishops and the Church government, &c. . . . Lastly, I was told I set my hand to a petition to the King; I denied it not, but said I thought no honest man would have refused it. This 'is all I know why [I] am a prisoner, and although I requested to be confined to my own house, offering oath and bond to be a true prisoner, in regard of my wife's long sickness &c., to the sheriff's house I was sent, and there remain.

Fol. 68. 1660, May 13. S. H. (Samuel Hinton) to Mr. John Langley. . . . His Majesty is thought to be at Dover, and on Tuesday to enter London. Will. Dugdale rides all this day to be there to meet him. The Lord Leigh of Stonly goes up on Tuesday, as many persons of quality do from all places. General Monk is made Duke of Somerset. The King sent his wife a jewel, his picture in it. The House of Commons carry (carry) all bravely for Church and King, thwarted the Lords' bill who proposed to have the nominating of the King's servants. You will hear that some have endeavoured to disturb business. . . .

Mr. Ayloff's Letters.

Fol. 69. 1652, Dec. 1 (or 11 or 21 or 31).—G. Ayloff to Mr. John Langley.—Since the [engagement with the Dutch wherein we lost three ships] 'tis said we have lost five or six merchant ships off Malligo and Barbadoes; the Dutch fleet continue still to hang about our coasts, indeed to the blocking up our harbours (for indeed the State have sent over to all ports that no shipping stir out), a disgrace that never happened before to this nation that hath in all times been masters of our seas; but we are providing a good fleet that will be suddenly ready to set out; and so, if the winds do not, we will drive them away. The Dutch have set out a Placat (they call it) in Holland, declaring all enemies to their state that send ammunition or materials for war or shipping into England. The Spanish Ambassador has been at the House to appeal from the Admiralty about those ships of the King of Spain's plate and bullion that were taken, but they were directed to go on in the Admiralty; however some fancy the dispute is only to colour the paying for our taking the French ships and hindering the relief of Dunkirk. The French agent having mended (as it seems he had power to do, the superscription of his letters, which was at first A mes tres chere et bones Amies le gens du Parlement de Engleterre, but now Mes Amies, le Parlement de Republique d'Engleterre) had audience this day, not in the House of Commons, but only by a Committee in the Lords' old house, which he took exceptions at, but was answered that if his Master or an ambassador came [they] could but give him reception in the Parliament House; so that passed; and he made a great compliment of his master's desire of the good understandings that might be between the two nations, &c.; however, we take him but for a spy. They say my Lord Digby is sent by the King of Scots into Holland, and my Lord Wilmott sent to the Diet, in Germany; here's a report that my Lo. of Bristol is dead.

Fol. 70. 1655, July 14. The same to the same.

The council joined with a committee of the officers ('tis said) are close upon consideration of the persons under restraint, and some say are framing some engagement or oath of abjuration; 'tis thought shortly something shall appear. The apprehension (if any were) of the great Swedish army must needs be removed by this Ambassador's or Agent's coming from the King of Sweden (he is expected suddenly, and Dorset House taken for him) and something the more, for the person being one of our own nation, one Sir Geo. Fleetwood brother to the deputy of Ireland; he has been ever a soldier in the Swedish wars. They say the Judges of the northern circuit, Chief Barons Steele and Parker, carry a particular commission to try the gentlemen of Yorkshire secured upon that rising; it may go ill with some of them 'tis thought. Some say that General Blake's fleet are come upon the coast of Spain. . . . There was like to have grown a little breach between the late married couple, the Earl of Middlesex and his lady, but 'twas quickly peaced; it seems he does not well brook some of her servants, and perhaps begins to think the articles too much derogatory to the honour of a husband; his mother perhaps doing not all the best offices.

Fol. 70. 1657, Nov. 17. The same to the same. . . .

The discourse of the town has been much filled up with the great marriage at Whitehall, which was solemnised there three or four days last week with music, dancing, and great feasting, and it now begins for two or three days at the Earl of Warwick's. The marriage of the other sister to Lord Falkenbridge they say is concluded. They are now busy about the other House, as they call it; the Judges all had a meeting lately with the commissioners of the great seal to consult about framing the writ of summons; the old form or style does not fit; they say now it must go virī notabiles. . . . I forgot to tell you that amongst other lesser presents to the bride, the Lady Devonshire gave some pieces of chamber plate all of gold with one (they call) the piece royal: 'tis such as I have seen used for the waiter to carry a glass upon. The Lady Claypoole's was two sconces of 100l. apiece, they say; and somebody I heard presented a good quantity of Barbary wine.

Fol. 71. 1658, May 15. The same to the same.

The day after you went, I hear 60 of the commissioners of the High Court met at the Painted Chamber, but they say did nothing but appoint to meet upon Monday next. The judges of the Upper Bench were all there, and the Barons of the Exchequer, but my Lord St. John is sick. I heard it spoken, by one that pretends to know it, that writs for a Parliament are in hand. Here has this day a news gone about that the Duke of York and Marquis of Ormond are killed. 'Tis in some letters to Whitehall, they say, but not upon the Exchange that I hear, and some late letters from France mention nothing of it. 'Tis supposed by some at some attempt upon Mardike; others the French army beat up Spanish quarters, in which the Duke and Ormond were; for it is certain the whole French army is come near Calais, and the King himself in Calais; for I was told the French Ambassador sent away this morning to Calais some bottles of Canary for the King of France's own drinking. . . . Some wonder why Ormond should be named with the Duke, he not meddling in arms; and then why there should be such negligence about his quarters. . . . Here appears a little face of strictness about town; all those that were formerly prisoners at St. James are summoned in, and all that are in town gone thither this evening, and I hear that some are taken about the town here into custody this day; and I hear some troops of horse have been marching the city to-day, and 'tis rumoured as if it were to search for Charles Stuart, but some conceive the care and vigilancy is in respect of the sitting of this High Court, for their better and more assured quiet proceeding.

Fol. 71. 1658, July 15.—The same to the same.—

Alludes to the death of Sir Ben. Ayloff's wife, and his own preparations for his approaching trial at Carlisle Assizes.—Our Ambassador in France, Lo. Lockhart came out two days since, 'tis thought upon some great and private affairs with his Highness; yesterday all the Council attended with him at Hampton Court where the Protector is; 1,000 horse are gone or going for Flanders and divers regiments of foot; so as if we and the French gain farther there, some will doubt we may fall out in the sharing of it. The Dutch and we are peaced again; we have restored their ships, and they engage to do the like for ours taken by them in the Indies; here has been a day or two since a fresh report of the French King's relapse; but he is well, or at least able to go to Paris. This day was the marriage of the Lord of Ross and Marquis Dorchester's daughter. The Duchess of Richmond is gone into France; given out she goes to visit her brother, when the truth is conceived she even little better than runs away for debt, and because she can live no longer here.

Fol. 72. 1660, May 15. The same to the same.

The Act of Oblivion is the thing they are now vigorously upon; wherein their indulgence to except but seven persons (which 'tis said the General was the occasion of) is much wondered at; though the numbers be resolved, yet I do not hear that the persons are yet established, which perhaps may be kept secret till as many as can be found may be secured, and that 'tis thought has made many hide themselves, for there is they say a stop upon all po[st]s; but 'tis said there are about 20 secured here and fetching up; 'twas moved that the executioner might be enquired out, and the Speaker said that would be known in due time. Here are frequent reports of the King's sudden coming, indeed, that he has been landed at Dover; but perhaps that has been cast out to hinder the great concourse of people going over to the King, which 'tis said he could wish would somewhat abate. I was told that the messengers of both Houses were still at Dover; only Mr. Holles I heard got over in a packet boat upon Tuesday, by whom His Majesty's pleasure may be known touching the manner of his reception and the house he will come to. Whitehall is forwardest in preparation, though St. James and Somerset are under the same order. The King had sent for the Navy upon Friday last, which attend as 'tis said at Helvelsluce; and His Majesty took the Hague in his way, and perhaps is there still; a barque went down yesterday to Dover, and 'tis said the General will march to-morrow. . . . This day 'twas moved to name the seven, to put the others out of terror, but took not; they have ordered bills of Attainder against the late Protector, Bradshaw, Ireton, and Pride, for confiscation of their estates; 'twas moved the Lo. Gray of Groby might ha' been another, but was not. One thought the seven too few; he would have had of all professions, some soldiers, lawyers, courtiers, clergy, but 'twas not seconded; 'tis said divers are run away, as Mildmay, Ludlow, Lo. Mounson, Lisle, and Martin; but they have a plentiful world of these delinquents, enough to hang, enough to confiscate, enough to banish, enough to imprison, and enough to run away. They have secured Thurlow (Thurloe); some think rather to squeeze some discovery out of him, than for anything capital. Cromwell's wife and her daughter Rich, are gone from their lodgings in the Charter House, nobody knows where; great store of packs of hangings and other goods are secured in Thames Street by guards of soldiers, which the report goes, were ordered to be conveyed away upon her account.

Fol. 74. 1660, May 29. Gui. Ayloff to Sir Richard Leveson.—Writes to give an account in short of this blessed day of the King's most glorious entrance into the city of London and so to Whitehall, which was with as high expressions of joy and affections of his people as is imaginable, being as well brought in with very gallant company and troops of the citizens as of very splendid troops of the nobility and gentry; of the nobility, the Earls of Derby, Northampton, Cleveland, Litchfield, Lo. Mordant, Lord Maynard; Lo. Faulkland, Lo. Gerrard who had the command of the life-guard of His Majesty, all which with the General's lifeguard and Army Regiments, by estimation could not be less than 8 or 10,000 horses; the two Houses attended in the Banqueting house; after His Majesty had a very little while reposed, he sent for the lords into him, and then immediately came in to the House of Commons in the Banqueting house. The Speaker made some speech, to which the King desired to be excused for making any long reply by reason of weariness, but told them they should not be more ready to propose anything to him for the good of his people in laws, liberties, and religion, than he would be to grant, &c.; so the Speaker and every member kissed his hands; He rid very plain in cloathes, so did both his brothers; he and they shewed great courtesy to all balconies and windows of ladies, and moved their hats often; Gen. Monk has a blue ribbon; what office of state, or other honour will be conferred, 'tis better the next may tell you; they name him of two, Master of the Horse and High Treasurer; and perhaps it may be neither; the uncertainty for other officers and Bishops silences me. Some think Bishop Juxon is too weak of body to be Canterbury, and 'tis doubted whether the Bishop of Salisbury will accept it; then 'tis feared it may fall upon the Bishop of Ely, which is not much wished; and if to neither of these, then Dr. Sheldon may chance to be the man. My Lo. Newport and Mr. Andrew went both to attend the King.

Fol. 73. 1660, June 5. The same to the same.

'Tis not to be imagined how many are dissatisfied; innumerable flocks of people hovering here to see how they may light upon places and preferments; the Court and royal party grudging at every favour to the presbyterian, and they on the other side thinking they have not enough, and all that is done to them, being wrought by the General, has begot much murmuring at him; 'tis thought too much that Lord Manchester should be Lord Chamberlain, and four or five others of the Privy Council, as Hollis, Anseley, Mr. William Pierpont, Sir An. Ashly Cooper, and Mr. Secretary Morris; and besides there is some little competition between Sir Gilb. Gerrard, and Lord Seymour for Chancellor of the Duchy, which I conceive there is no great question, but his lordship's interest must carry it if he please; some talk as if Sir Ed. Sidenam has almost got in again, and that Reynolds is knighted, and the cancelled knight baronetship of Sir Harry Wright restored; and all this the General's doing; Sir John Whitlock [and] Thurlow has been with the King; Whitlock presented divers medals and manuscripts that were the late King's; Thurlow 'tis said has turned over a leave in a black book, that makes some tremble; 'tis said two of the Duke of Buckingham's servants and it may be higher; Banfield is slunk away, and others perhaps we may hereafter hear of. They are towards finishing the Act of Oblivion; yesterday they settled it, for accounts of all public receipts to be from 42; this day they fell upon the seven to be excepted for life; two I hear are agreed, Harrison and Gregory Clement; for the other five I hear they would box for them, but 'twas said the King's party in the House would be very fain to have excepted all that voted the abjuration of the family of the Stuarts; and 'twas debated with some heat, 'till the General interposed and told 'em that he knew His Majesty's mind (and had come to declare it) was inclined to moderation and mercy, and so mollified the matter. The dispute for the High Chamberlainship between the Earl Oxon and Linsey, is referred to a committee of Lords. There was a petition hatching,—the city to have churches settled according to the covenant; but it was blown off and received no birth.

Fol. 75. 1660, Sept. 11. The same to the same.—Mentions the adjournment of Parliament and the probable bills to be brought in for disbanding the army and the supplies for the King; and then goes on to say that—The great Ambassador from the King of Spain will come in to-morrow; the Prince de Lingia, that has been much a friend to our King in Flanders, he comes in the greatest equipage that ever was. Camden house and two other houses are provided for him. The Duke of York is gone away with a good part of the fleet to settle his sister the Princess of Orange, who will very shortly be here; the Duke of Gloster is in a good condition for one that has the small-pox. . . . The King has bestowed 7,000*l.* a year upon the Duke of Albemarle out of his own lands, and (which I am not so much pleased withall) most of it out of the Duchy. The whole manor of Enfield, with the manors, houses, and parks of Theobalds and Cheshunt, Ashdowne forest, the Grogle Chace, and other lands in Sussex, the honour, manor, and all lands belonging to Bullingbrooke, Bescott park, and divers other things to him and his heirs male, &c. The report was that Ludlow was taken since the proclamation, but it proves not true. The proclamation for the peace with Spain, &c. came out yesterday.

Fol. 78. [1660], Sept. 13.—The same to the same.—Giving a short account of the death of the Duke of Gloster. Parliament was adjourned that morning, and 20 Acts were passed. P.S. The Prince de Lignia came to town to day; . . . his 12 coaches and chaises came yesterday before him. They say we shall have one out of France in as great splendour, some say the Prince of Anjou.

Fol. 76. 1660, Nov. 6. The same to the same. The list of sheriffs is as true as I could write by a copy I could scarce read; they were prickt yesternight by the King at the council table, and then Glin and Maynard made the King's sergeants; Sir Harbottle Grimston is Master of the Rolls, and they say Hales will quickly be Chief Baron. The old La. of Carlisle is dead; well yesterday morning and died last night. The Lo. Chancellor is made Baron of Hendon in Wilts; he refused a higher title of Earl which was offered; the business of his daughter will go very smooth and well for aught appears; the King shows great testimonies of favour; goes often to his house. The Lo. Treasurer has had an odd kind of sickness; . . . the death of his daughter wrought deep (they say) upon him. The Queen is in very good health, and very good humoured; this day the King went with her to see her house of Wimbleton; 'tis given out she will return over a month, and that her resolution was so when she came away out of France; limiting the number of her train and herself but to two or three trunks, and her servants to small proportions of luggage; but perhaps these arguments and the resolution may not be infallible; 'twill be a cold winter voyage to go back.—P.S. There came in a Dutch Ambassador to-day. The Parliament met; the House of Commons voted to give the King thanks for the Declaration, and would have it pass in an Act, though the King declare in it that 'tis against his judgment. 'Twas moved to have a review of the Act of Pole money; it falls so extreme short of expectation.

Fol. 76. 1661, April 2. The same to the same.—The Coronation and inquiry after elections is the greatest subject of discourse. That example of London has not corrupted all places, for 'tis said in most the choices are good. Vast gallantry against the Coronation is provided, but many of the Lords have got dispensations to be absent, that there will be less than a 100 'tis thought ride; four new Knights of the Garter will then go forth; the Duke of Richmond, Earl Linsey, Earl Manchester, Earl Straford. They reckon upon 76 (70?) knights of the Bath, but I wonder why knight baronets already should be of the number, as I hear of divers as Sir Tho. Trevor, and Sir Ducey and others. The match with Portugal keeps much life still, though perhaps 'twill never be; nor is the Spanish Ambassador gone. The Lord Crofts has got the great widow Heale, after her six weeks mourning. The King presented him, and 'twas done instantly; and now she's shod round.

Fol. 77. 1661, May 7. The same to the same.— . . . The Earl of Bristol landed yesterday at Deal, and is expected in town to-night. Last night was buried the Duke of Cambridge, the Duke of York's son: there appears no outward mourning, and perhaps there is little inward. The City Militia appeared this day in Hyde Park before the King, both trained bands and auxiliaries. The King honoured them both in the gallantry of himself and the rest of the Court, and also in taking a special view of them round about, where there was as high acclamations whilst he was present as their volleys of shot could make when he was gone; for till sooner they began not to exercise. We hear yet of no product of the meetings and consultations that has been between the Episcopal and Presbyterian clergy. . . . The Lady Jane Seymour, the Duchess of Somerset's daughter, was this day married to the Lo. Dungarvan; 'twas very private. The Lo. Chancellor was not well yesterday, but perhaps 'twas but in order to his being better to-morrow; that is the better provided for declaration of the King's pleasure to the houses.

Fol. 79. n.y., May 3. Guicciardine Ayloff to Sir Richard Leveson.*— . . . This business of Hull and Yorkshire takes up all the time of the House, and all the discourse of the town, and therefore you can expect no variety. Yesterday morning, Rushworth, the clerk assistant in the House, came to town out of Yorkshire, (whither he had been sent with a warrant to summon up those first petitioners) and gave a full relation of the state of things there; truly you'll easily discern in what case the King is by that last petition of the Yorkshire gentlemen: the gentlemen of the county being assembled by the King's commands, and after the King had delivered his mind to them requiring their advice and assistance touching Hull, and commanding the sheriff not to execute any warrant from the Parliament, they desired time to give answer (which in effect was that petition) and to chose 8 as a Committee to draw it. Sir Fra. Wortley and the party with him being denied to join with that Committee of the country, Sir Fra. and some 20 more drew their swords and flourishing them about their heads, cried out, they would be for the King, and so went a little in the town and there settled to be as another Committee for the country, but what they did is not yet known: here Rushworth came away before they had determined anything but this act of Sir Fra. the House were about, and 'tis likely will conclude treason, though they did suspend it for the present. The consequence of Rushworth's relation was to settle a committee to be sent down, which are my Lo. Howard of the Lords House, and my Lo. Fairfax; Sir Phill. Stapilton, Sir Hugh and Sir Henry Chomley; their power you may imagine was for the militia, the sheriff, the post passages, and what may be imagined necessary and conducive to that service; but at last there grew a question whether they should go to the King from the Houses; or if not sent, whether, if His Majesty should send for them, what observance to his commands they should give; these questions the two Houses last night were divided about, but I hear this day they are agreed they shall attend the King with a petition, which was this day a drawing. A petition to the King now? there's . . . said that I know of this business. 'There came a packet this afternoon from the King whether . . . more in it besides a commission to pass the bill of tunnage and poundage (which I hear my Lo. Keeper instantly (did?), I do not hear of. . . . They are setting out a declaration to the kingdom wherein they use the phrase (God so deal with us, &c.): they say 'twill be high and sharp both touching Hull and the militia. You know they sent 2,000*l.* down by the last committee to Hull, my Lo. Stamford, Willouby, &c., and this day they have concluded of 2,000*l.* more to be sent thither. 'Tis much talked they will fall to naming the evil councillors within this day or two, which I'll believe when I hear; there's Colonels Vavazor and Feelding with the King at York, of whom they say they have a very ill council. They have this day in the Lords House cleared my Lo. Loftus, the old Chancellor of Ireland, of all the charges laid against him by the late Lo. Lieutenant. The Queen is gone a little short progress to be out from the Hague some ten days. She was on Friday at Rotterdam, thence to Utrich and so about to some other towns.

Fol. 80. n.d. G. Ayloff to Mr. John Langley.— . . . This day the House fell upon the adding some more persons to be excepted for estate, to be liable to fine and mulkt as the House should determine, which were St. Johns, Keeble and one Burton that was one of those that had his hand in the sentencing above 20 to death in Norfolk; but they had so many friends that it could not be done: this day 'tis thought St. Johns will escape through the net, though lesser fishes are caught; they will go on with them to-morrow: the General interposes much in all, but very earnestly for the Speaker Lenthall. They say the States of Holland are sending Embassadors with a noble present of a cubbard of plate of gold. There is a Chancellor of the Duchy settled by the King, my Lo. Seymour, who was pleased to send to me, and I think I shall be in the same employment again in the Duchy business, which I am not more ambitious of, for any ends of my own than to serve my friends. And truly the stewardship of Newcastle has been much in my thoughts, how I might preserve it for Sir Richard if he please; and because my interest is yet nothing, being but a new creature there, I could wish some first hand might be found to move it first: a word from my Lo. of Dorset or such like I should carefully second; I am not yet acquainted with the temper of this lord; my late ever to be honoured lord I knew well how little he would look upon such a thing in the gratifying a friend, &c.

Fol. 81. n. y. Feb. 15. () to John Langley.— This day came out the declaration of the House of Commons concerning the King, which was not sent on to the Lords at all.—Mr. Ashurst and Mr. Birch sent letters yesterday of their arrival at Edinburgh, and that the convention of Assembly was put off for two days, at which time 'tis talked here they will declare to send to the Prince some of their Lords, though the business be concluded already, and we expect to hear shortly the Prince to be in Holland, for it is conceived that the Scots will come in, though the Parliament hope otherwise, and 'tis thought those commanders that are gone and going are to negotiate the taking them off if possible they can; but the King's party have confidence they will not, and upon their coming in under shelter of that army may spring up an army of English which shall have an English general and not at all subject to the Scots; the Parliament, 'tis thought, apprehend something in this way, and provide. The General wrote to the House to-day that 'tis necessary to have the isle of Jersey taken, and the Parliament go high in everything; all the packets that came out of Scotland were broken open, and I heard that by some in the city immediately a post express was dispatched thither to give notice before it could come by the ordinary, though I scarce understand the drift, yet it shows some active minds in some. The Lord Willoby would not stand to it and venture himself, but is gone into Holland; Judge Jenkins was brought yesterday to the bar before the two Speakers to answer some Bill which he had refused; and being asked, told thme they were no lawful Judges, because not made by the King, and had never taken the oath that Chancellors ought and sat there with a counterfeit seal; and told them that Mr. Solicitor at my Lo. Strafford's trial urged that to offer violence to the law was to use violence to the King, which was high treason, and cast them down a paper of his reasons why he would not answer, which you may imagine had law enough in it, and 'tis said will come out in print. The servants that were about the King are all put away, so as now there are but a few persons that attend of all sorts; Maule and Murray are there still, that the Scots may have an account of their King.

Vol. VI.

Contains letters of Mr. Bernard Grenville to Sir W. L. Gower and letters of Lord Granville of Potheridge and the Countess of Rochester, Dr. King, Sir William Wyndham, John Chetwynd, Esq., and Cornelius Wood, Esq.

Fol. 4. 1684, June 10, London.—B. Grenville to W. Leveson Gower.—That this paper may be more acceptable, I have robbed the Earl of Sir Richard Bulst[rodes] intelligence received this moment, that it may divert you in your country retirements, and am to add that the Dutch letters bring that Sir Thomas Armstrong was seized and secured at Leyden in Holland by the King's minister Mr. Chudley, and was immediately put on board one of His Majesty's yachts that was attending the transportation of the Prince's French players for England expected with the prisoner this night. The Duke of Albemarle having taken up his quarters in my solitary house in York buildings until he can better provide himself, affords me no more time to lengthen our domestic intelligence.

Fol. 4. 1684, June 21, London.—The same to the same.—He complains of the non-payment of money by the Treasury. In a P. S. he says that Sir Thomas Armstrong was executed yesterday at Tyburn, as the sentence passed upon him.

Fol. 5. 1684, July 22, London. The same (to the same). Business.

Fol. 5. 1684, July 29, London. The same (to the same).—Various are the discourses on this trial of skill of the Lord K. and P. S. in planting their relations in the Treasury, which gives a ras (race?) for the present where the White Staff was designed.—The King's day for his removal to Winchester is fixed for the 26th of the next month, and the Duchess returns from Tunbridge on Saturday next, and the Duke of Ormond and his secretary Sir Ceryll for Ireland the beginning of the next week; the Earl of Pembroke is married to the Attorney General's daughter and the uncle Sir Cerill is not far from it. The young Countess of Yarmouth died suddenly this morning.

Fol. 6. 1684, Aug. 27, Marre. The same to the same.—Speaks of his having reached this northern corner, where Providence has cast his lot, after many heats and storms with contentious Lords and vexatious adversaries. His wife proposes more satisfaction and advantages from the innocent wheel and country plough than from her Court attendances and expectations. "Within three or four days we are going more northward in the 'Bishopric and Cleveland, to settle our concerns there; our stay will not be long in a place, but when I fix my day as to my approaches back to vile London, you shall receive fresh assurances, &c."

Fol. 7. 1684, Nov. 12, Marre.—The same to the same.—I was this week repairing to my duty at Court, resolving to try my fortune by my diligence this winter in Whitehall, my Lady Bathe having kindly lent me her lodgings there, and the Duke of Albemarle is resolved to content himself this winter with my house in York Buildings. I gave him possession at my coming out of London, upon his being hurried into a sale of his Danby purchase. Thus the cedars at Court are as liable to changes as we shrubs.

Fol. 1. 1684, Jan. 17, Whitehall.—The same to the same.— . . . By your letter to my brother B., I find some of your corporation of Newcastle are designing this way to establish their concerns: if my appearance personally may be useful to them or any particular persons your friends I will attend my Lord Chief Justice or the Attorney-General.—P.S. 'Tis the discourse at Court that your Lord Lieutenant, the Earl of Shrewsbury, is treating with the Lord Chamberlain for his white staff, and the Lord Bruce has bought the Lord Lindsey's Bedchamber place. My Lord of Ormond will not stay to deliver the sword to his successor. My Lord of Arran is returned.

—Mr. Bridges had contracted for his Bedchamber place, but His Majesty has denied him positively his consent to sell. The Duke goes for Scotland the next month, and my nephew Lansdowne for Spain.

Fol. 1. 1684, Feb. 3, Whitehall, 10 at night.—The same to the same.—Sends the most acceptable good news of the King's hopeful recovery, which yesterday we were almost in despair of: His Majesty being seized in his chair and bedchamber with a surprising convulsion fit, which lasted three hours, and accompanied with other dangerous symptoms which usually follow those distempers. But the physicians, I praise God, have been so successful in their timely applications by bleeding, cupping, blistering, and all such seasonable remedies and courses, that they now this evening declare him in no danger, without return of new fatal accidents, which God grant we may never see, but that his sacred life may be yet preserved many many years amongst his subjects. P.S. The young Lady Ossory is dead in Ireland.—My Lord Allington died on Saturday last.

Fol. 2. 1684, Feb. 10, Whitehall.—The same to the same.—Speaks of the universal grief on the occasion of the King's death.—His present Majesty's speech at Council gives some allay and great satisfaction, and when the approaching Parliament comes I doubt not but Mr. Levison will give fresh proofs of his hereditary loyalty to this Prince; and when you come to town I will wait on you to him whenever you command my service.—'Tis said the Lord Dartmouth succeeds Master of the Horse, Admiral Herbert (Mr. Sidney's) place in the Robes, and Mr. Graham's Privy Purse. Of the new Queen's syde, the Lord Clifford, Lord Chamberlayne, and 'tis believed the Earl of Peterborow will be Groom of the Stole; how the fates will dispose of we old Bedchamber men, relies entirely on His Majesty's gracious goodness and charity towards us; and in that number none more unhappy than myself, after 25 years' services in prosperity, and some in gaols and the worst of times. P.S. The Queen Dowager, 'tis believed, will remove to Somerset House; Mr. Speaker Seymour kissed the King's hand yesterday.

Fol. 3. 1684, March 12, Whitehall.—The same to the same.—P.S. My brother has received his doom (his key and office), bestowed on the Earl of Peterborow, His Majesty having graciously promised him the continuance of his pensions and salaries of 5,000*l.* a year, with a compensation for his place, and his six years' arrears. God grant I may see it. Otherwise my brother in his old age will be uneasy in his fortune after 40 years' services. Sir Richard Mason, that occasioned my troubling you, died this morning in his lodging at Whitehall. A fever rages that proves very mortal, and gives great apprehensions of a plague. . . . Queen Dowager removes her Court to Somerset House the week before Easter.

Fol. 2. 1684, March 24, Whitehall.—The same to the same.—Hopes he may be returned to serve in the Parliament, and prove his loyalty.—There are reports spread in the Court that reflect on you in promoting elections of such as are not principled to contribute the supporting His Majesty and Crown.—My Lord Brandon is one named you vigorously appear for: I have adventured (to contradict these scritch owles), and that you only seek your own peaceable and regular election at Newcastle, out of no other consideration but that you may have an opportunity to serve your prince and country, as becomes a dutiful subject, and whose ancestors have always bled for the Crown, and that the same blood runs in your veins, and resolutions of shaking off all those calumnies cast upon you. If you approve I will show your last letter to the King, and pray in your next mention how unjustly grounded are these new scandals spread of you.

1685, Sept. 29. The same to []. Apologises for not paying some money, "not having received 500*l.* out of the Hearth Money. 'Tis true my son George, being under some wants and ill accidents at Paris, I did, by Mr. Gay's help and assistance, procure from Alderman Duncombe that sum to disengage him."

Fol. 11. 1686, July 28, London. The same (to the same). On business.—In a postscript, "'Tis said that His Majesty has denied leave to the Earl of Danby and the Lord Weymouth, travelling beyond the seas. . . . I have a second letter of the 4th of June, from Captain John, from Malta, confirming the Ambassador's death, and his sailing back to Leghorn."

Fol. 12. 1686, July 30, Windsor. The same to the same.—P.S. The great ministers meet at Whitehall on Wednesday, upon their new commission, and the Bishop of Durham is summoned to attend, and be of the Quorum. My Lord of Carlingford is recommended by His Majesty to the Prince of Orange, to the same command my Lord of Ossory had in the States service (of the King's subjects). Mr. Cutts is in the number of the wounded at Buda, which, 'tis feared [is] not yet taken.

Fol. 12. 1686, Aug. 10, London.—The same to the same.—The camp is this day broke up, and my brother's regiment has quitted the field, with the same reputation and favourable declaration from His Majesty that they had gained at their entrance. Their quarters for some time is to be at Portsmouth, towards which place they began their march this day. . . . Captain Killigrew is going again to sea, and to be in the Mediterranean. . . . The Bishop of London appeared; [he] has given [to] him 'till Monday next to give his answer.

Fol. 14. 1688, Aug. 23, St. James.—The same (to the same).—You have before this the intelligence of the Lord and Lady Bathes preparing suddenly bag and baggage for Stowe; a letter from His Majesty yesterday quickens the Lord's journey, being commanded further to repair to his government. A general council is summoned to meet at Windsor to-morrow, and a new Dutch Ambassador daily expected; and, notwithstanding the approach of winter, a war between Holland and France is much discoursed. The Bishop of Rochester has voluntarily resigned his ecclesiastical commission, and written a letter to the Archbishop his reasons, with another letter to the Lord Chancellor to the same effect. Judge Allibone died yesterday.—The Duke of Ormond treated most splendidly the University of Oxford this day at his house in St. James' Square. The procession began at Northumberland House; the doctors and scholars walking in their formalities in the street to their new Chancellor's.

1686, Aug. 24, London. The same to the same.—His Majesty being gone his western progress as far as Bridgewater and Bristowe, I have now my quietus from Stowe to begin mine northward, which I do to-morrow.

Fol. 14. n. d. A fragment of a letter from the same to the same. We have another prodigious rise at court; the Lord Keeper's brother, Sir Dudley North, and the Lord Weymouth's, Mr. Henry Thynne, this day declared Commissioners of the Treasury; none unfortunate and contemptible but those that entirely depend on our master. Sir George Downing is likewise dead, and the other sheriff of London, Sir Peter Rich, succeeds in the Custom-house. The Duchess of Ormond died this morning.

Fol. 15. n. d. Part of a letter from the same to the same.—I am this morning come from Windsor where I found the Lord Montague received graciously both by King and Queen, and creeping, as 'tis said, into favour at court. The camp breaks up within 15 days, and to-morrow is to be the great day, the Lord Arran treating their Majesties. My brother writes me he has received orders from my Lord Treasurer to call a convocation in Parliament of Tinnors.—Most of the volunteers, Spanish as well as English, are killed before Buda. Named in the last letters—slain: Captain Rupert the Prince's son, Mr. Wiseman, Mr. Talbot, Mr. Moore, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Bellase wounded, with some others. My Lord George Saville is in the number of the wounded volunteers, and Will. Herbert received his [wound] on the first attack before Buda. 'Tis said Dr. Cartret [Cartwright] shall be Bishop of Oxford.

Fol. 16. n. d., Tuesday at 2.—The same to the same.—His Majesty has been at last moved in your concern, and declares he is very well satisfied with you since my Lord of Bath's last engagement, and you have his free leave to go into the country and return when you please. These are His Majesty's words, &c.

Fol. 17. Two letters from John Granville, probably the Hon. John Granville, afterwards Lord Granville of Potheridge.

1688, July 31st, aboard the Bonaventura, in the Downs. J. Granville to . . . We are a second time returned out of Sole Bay into the Downs, where we shall continue till the King goeth for Portsmouth, where he intends again to visit us this summer. Last night Jack Lusons commission came down to be Captain of the Mary; since my being here I have seen three or four ships disposed of, and the Lord knoweth when will be my turn.

Fol. 18 et seq. Letters from Jane Lady Hyde, afterwards Countess of Rochester, daughter to Sir William Leveson Gower, to her sister-in-law Catherine Lady Gower; also to Lord Granville, of Potteridge, her uncle, on the subject of Sir William Wyndham's marriage. 1707. Letters from Lord Granville. Letters from the Earl of Rochester, &c.

Fol. 45. 1704, Dec. 31, Turin. J. Chetwynd to Lord Gower.—The enclosed paper will give you an account of a sally made from Verrue the 26th instant, which succeeded so well that we do not know but Monsieur de Vendome may be obliged to quit the siege; if he does not quit it, I hope this will not be the last serenade we shall give him. Monsieur de Chertogne was very much esteemed amongst the enemies and was to be Governor of Verrue, into which place we brought him much sooner than the Duke of Vendome could do; this siege costs the enemies very dear, and will so ruin their infantry that we hope they will not be in a condition to do any more mischief this winter, and before spring I hope we shall receive our succours, else we shall go nigh to lose his R. H., or he lose his whole country, for when the enemies are masters of Verrue we have only Turin left and not half troops enough to guard it, and it is impossible for us to get any recruits. It is not yet certain whether Mr Hill will go to Venice; if he does I am to stay here.

Turin, the 30th Dec. 1704, s. n. The 26th inst., in the afternoon, R. H. ordered about 1,000 men from Crescentin to Verrue to make a sally from thence to ruin the enemies trenches and batteries, and drive 'em from their advanced posts: the troops which were to make this sally were divided into two bodies, who marched out of Verrue about 4 of the clock in the afternoon, and gained the enemies batteries, which were the farthest off of the place before they were discovered, which gave such a general consternation in the trenches that our people met with no great opposition in the execution of their orders; we levelled their trenches, destroyed several of their mines and nailed up 4 mortars and 14 or 15 pieces of cannon, and set fire to their carriages and everything else that was combustible. Mons. de Chertogne, Lient.-General, who commanded in the trenches was wounded in two places and taken prisoner with 8 officers more. Mons. d'Immeccour, Major General, was killed in the action, and de Chertogne is since dead of his wounds; we lost about 200 men, but its believed the enemies between 4 and 500 men. At the time that this attack was made by the foot, General Feltz, who commanded the horse at Chivas, had received orders to pass the Po, and make a false attack on that side upon the enemies camp, which order he executed so well that the whole French camp was in confusion, and we are assured that several of the officers had already sent away their equipages from the head-quarters; if this sally had been but half an hour sooner, it is certain that the Duke of Vendome would have fallen into our hands, for he was then in the trenches.

1704, Jan. 13, Turin.—The same to the same.—Mr. Hill, being obliged to go to Genoa about six weeks since, he thought it for the Queen's service to leave me here, and gave me directions to present my credentials to H. R. H., which I did in a day or two after he went, and I have been here ever since upon the foot of the Queen's minister, and as such I attend H. R. H., and I have had the honour to write to Mr. Secretary Hedges every post.—I am now on my departure, for Mr. Hill has sent me directions to be ready to go upon the first orders; however, if he bids me to stay till his successor arrives, I will stay; so far am I from standing upon punctilios, especially in anything that may relate to the Queen's service, but I am so far from being desired to stay here by anybody except his R. H., that my Lord Treasurer or Mr. Secretary Hedges have not been pleased to take the least notice of me in any of their letters to Mr. Hill, tho' he was so kind as to recommend me very kindly to both of them.

Letters from Cornelius Wood, Esq.

Fol. 46. 1706, Oct. 9. From our camp at Grames.—Cornelius Wood to my Lord (Lord Gower). . . . As for that affair of Cardugen (in which, by accident, I was), I will truly relate to your Lordship the whole matter; we made a great forage towards Lisle, to cover which there was 6,000 foot and 600 horse, the whole commanded by a major-general of foot, and Cardugen as brigadier had command of the horse, whose escort was advanced a great way before the gross of the foot; the foot went out at 12 o'clock at night, and the horse escort at 3 the next morning, and the foragers went out at 6 the same morning. I went out about 7 in the morning out of mere curiosity, having no concern at all with this whole detachment; I met there my Lord Reby, who was also there in curiosity; my Lord Reby came to see Cardugen; but they, telling us he was gone to reconnoitre with two esquadrons, my Lord was returning, but I persuaded him to go on to those two advanced esquadrons; when we came at them, we espied some people bearing towards us, which we found to be the French.—I did then advise Cardugen to draw his two squadrons back, and occupy the mouth of the defiles, whereby he might with safety retire to the gross of his escort, which advice he at first embraced, one squadron marching while the other faced the enemy, and I myself, with 8 English dragoons, advanced towards the enemy to amuse them: but he had (which I knew not of) sent for two other squadrons, to support those two before mentioned, and had ordered his dragoons to and line the hedges. I then went up and told him, Cardugen—This will throw all into confusion;—you are too near your enemy to dismount your dragoons; instead of one dismounting ten will run away. He then told me, but with great civility, that he had the direction of that affair, and was to answer for it. 'Tis true, said I, I have nothing to do here; I would only have given you my friendly advice and assistance. I then galloped out to the 8 English dragoons which was next the enemy, being resolved to take my fate with the hindmost. The French, seeing our people in confusion, pushed upon us and entered the defiles pell mell with us, and 4 of the English dragoons that was advanced with me was taken.—The French pushed through the defile, but farther durst not advance, seeing the gross of the escort stand in the plain before them. There was not a horse lost of the forangers that day, and but 8 men killed of ours and three of theirs. I stayed there 5 hours after this, till all the forangers and escort was come home. My Lord, I have told you all this to let you see I commanded not there that day; for if I had I should not have advanced my horse through those defiles, or, if so great an oversight had been made, I think I could have brought them back without being ruffled; but some men's eyes are so dazzled with the beams of their superiors' favours, that they cannot see to explicate themselves from a difficulty which their want of experience may have thrown them into. While the water runs smooth every one is a good officer; but 'tis only men that has been long accustomed to dangers that can stem the tide of a very evil accident.—We are now covering the siege of Aicth.

1709, July 23, n. s. Camp before Turney.—The same to the same.—We once believed that peace would soon have brought us to our native country, but you see the scene is changed, and war rings through every quarter; so since the united consultations of so many refined politicians can't bring this war to a happy conclusion, we are trying what men of our boisterous profession can do. We are now besieging Turney, for which service there was detached 60 battallions of foot and 60 squadron of horse and dragoons, amongst which number is your humble servant: we hope to be masters of the town in two or three days, but the citadel will require some time longer to take; we go by way of sap to get the castle, they having many mines, one of which we discovered last night; our grand army which covers the siege lies not far from us, and Marshal Villers we hear is still at his old camp between Lintze and Belinre, &c.

1709, n. s., Sept. 14. Camp before Monse.—The same to the same.—On Wednesday last we fought a great battle with the Frenchmen, and obtained a very memorable victory, beating them from behind the strongest entrenchments I ever saw; this victory came not to us without some loss, many brave officers and soldiers being killed; but the joy of victory is so grateful to the living, that it banishes the memory of the loss of such as perished in the pursuit of it. I was all along at the siege of Turney, both of the town and of the castle, and brought the horse from thence to the grand army but the day before the battle; and the foot from Turney came up but an hour before the battle begun, making more than ten thousand men in all, which was a very good addition to our forces; I doubt not but this good success will bring forth something for the good of the world in general, of the Confederate in particular, and peculiarly for that of our own country. We are now going to besiege Monse, and I hope it will not be long before it is in our hands.

Vol. VII.

Letters to John, Lord Gower and his son from Lord Hatton, the 2nd Duke of Bedford, the Duke of Hamilton, Lord Cheyne, the Duke of Marlborough, Atterbury, Bishop of Rochester, the Marquis of Granby, Lord Wm. Manners, Lord Downe, the Earl of Winchelsea, the Duke of Kingston, the Earl of Kinnoul, the Earl of Cardigan, Sarah, Duchess of Marlborough, the Earl of Essex, the Earl Bathurst, the Earl of Carlisle, Lord Bruce, Lord Brooke, the Earl of Anglesey, Lord Banbury, &c. 1700—1725. Also letters to Katherine, Lady Gower, &c. from the Countess Granville, Lord Carteret (her son), Mrs. Elizabeth Granville, Lord Landsdowne, &c., K. Duchess of Rutland, L. Duchess of Rutland, the Countess of Mar, Lady M. W. Montagu, the Countess of Gainsborough, the Countess of Plymouth, the Countess of Exeter, &c., and Mrs. Bridget Noel.

Fol. 1. 1702, Nov. 25, Kirby. Lord Hatton to [Sir John Leveson Gower, afterwards Lord Gower].—"That the Queen has thought fit to take into her councils persons of your worth and character is such a satisfaction to the most loyal part of her subjects as obliges them to take all opportunities of expressing it; and Her Majesty having been pleased to confer upon you the office of Chancellor of the Duchy, I am apt to think it will not be disagreeable to you that I lay before you what concerns the stewardship of the Duchy lands in this country, and inform you that the stewardship of the manors of Irthelstoe and Raunds as also of the Hundred Court of Higham Ferrars in this county was in the hands of my father in the reign of King Charles the 1st, and in mine all the time since the restoration of King Charles the 2nd, till my Lord Stamford put me out of it to place there some men more agreeable to his humour."—Asks to hold the place under Sir John's authority.

1703, May 15, Southampton House.—The Duke of Bedford to John Lord Gower. Mentions the marriage of Lord Granville, and speaks of him in complimentary terms.

Fol. 2, n. d. The same to the same.—On money matters.—He speaks of his buildings in Covent Garden as having put him extremely out of money.

1705, May 11, Streatham.—The same to the same.—Says that he charged his servants some time ago not to stir on either side during the elections, until they should have further orders. Asks for the names of those who have stirred, and what they have done; he himself is inclined to help those that Lord Gower approves, but the reason he has been doubtful is that if he opposed Sir John Wolstenholm it might possibly make a turn in the election in Bedfordshire, upon which he owns his own mind is extremely set, and that it would be a great vexation to him (the Duke) to lose it.

Fol. 3. 1705, April 22, Preston.—The Duke of Hamilton to Lord Gower.—The gentleman you recommend to this place is so deserving that we ought to return your lordship thanks for affording so worthy a person to serve for the town; we must all be ashamed that he is so ill matched in a brother burgess, but the gentry in these parts are not very fond of London journeys, for if anybody of tolerable character had stood they had infallibly have carried it from the two candidates, Mr. Molyneux and Rigby.

Fol. 6. 1706, Jan. 2. The Duke of Marlborough to Lord Gower.—I have been some time without making any answer to the honour of your Lordship's letter, because I really don't know how, to make any answer that is like to be agreeable. Your Lordship can not but be sensible that both my Lord Treasurer and myself have given sufficient proofs of our desire and inclination to serve you, and I believe I may answer for him and for myself that we were both very sorry when you and your friends thought fit to put it out of our power to continue doing so; much more might be said upon this head, but I choose to make it as short as I can, being unwilling to enlarge; however, I do assure you that whenever I can think I may succeed I shall move Her Majesty as you desire.

Fol. 4. 1714, Oct. 16. Lord Cheyne to Lord Gower.—Relates that Lord Paget professes great honour and friendship for him (Gower), and intreats his interest for his (Paget's) son, who is a candidate for Staffordshire, and that he would be merciful to the young man at first setting out, and not exert his interest to the utmost. Paget and Ward are joined.

1714, Oct. 30. Lord Downe to Lord Gower.—Hopes that Sir Arthur Kaye, and he having joined their interest, will have Lord Gower's interest at the next election for the county of York.

Fol. 33. 1714, Nov. 3. Lord Lansdowne to Lord Gower.—I shall mention nothing more but what relates to the honours of the family, which I think ought to be insisted upon to be restored. My Lady Carteret having the Cornish estate, should be created Countess of Bath, and as I am entitled by virtue of King Charles's warrant to assume the Earldom of Corbeil, as the direct male descendant from Sir Beville, I cannot think a patent would be refused me for it, if it was represented to the King, as an article that would give peace to the family. I would not have you indifferent in either of these articles, nor look upon them as vanity; you will find them of use. It is likewise my opinion that the Granville name should go along with the estate.

SUTHER-
LAND.

Fol. 5. 1714, Nov. 9, Lisle Street.—Lord Cheyne to the Rev. Mr. Plaxton, at Lord Gower's, Trentham.—He is sorry that Mr. Phillipson does not comply with Lord Gower's desires—thinks him (Gower) happy in having Mr. Plaxton's aid in putting his affairs in order; wishes him success.—Says nothing is dear in town but horse meat. Chair hire is as cheap as ever and more commodious for both sexes.

Fol. 5. n. d. [1715, March 17.]—The same to the same.—Thanks for papers received.—Hopes the surveyor is at work, and maps all the lands, &c.—He was in hopes that some bargains had been made for lands out of lease or lives filled up.—He (Cheyne) can only assist Lord Gower but as a trustee, &c.—Our Parliament met to-day; the King came to the House of Lords, the Commons came up to the bar of the upper House, where the Lord Chancellor told them that the King would they should return back to their House, choose a Speaker, and present him on Monday noon at 12 of the clock at the bar of the House of Lords. Most people expect that this session will be a long and a warm one. P.S. The Bishop of Salisbury died this morning.

Fol. 10. 1715, Oct. 27, London. Duke of Kingston* to Catherine, widow of the first Lord Gower.—What I say I have several times thought of, and what makes me no longer delay telling it is the report of Lord Gower's having been here, which tho' not true makes me afraid of some inconvenient consequence to him. Taking for granted he has too good an understanding to trust his abbey land with a Popish prince, makes me ask if you think it not proper he do something like what I shall mention, he having been of age after the Parliament was sitting, and not coming up to it; come to town and assure the King he is not in the interest of the Pretender, as other Tory lords have done, or at least write a letter to whom he thinks proper to go to the King from him with such assurance; this can be no prejudice to his interest with any body but a Jacobite. Who would set up a Popish King to be the head of a Protestant church? Good God, what madness! If I am thought the first mover of it, it may not be so well approved of, as coming from a Whig; but 'tis no more than Lord Anglesey has done in Ireland, declared himself no Jacobite, but, as to the Church, the same principles he was of.

Fol. 8. 1720, Jan. 11, Kelham. The Marquis of Granby to Lady Gower. Offers congratulations on the marriage of her daughter.

Fol. 12. 1720, Aug. 28, Blenheim. The Earl of Cardigan to Lord Gower.—Congratulates him upon the birth of a daughter who will want a fortune if the South Sea continues to fall; he is almost frightened out of his little senses not knowing the true occasion of its fall; asks Lord Gower's advice whether to stand it or sell out.—I am got to Ombre every day, and lose my money as fast as I do in the South Sea, &c.

Fol. 13. 1722, July 10, Hamby.—The same to the same.—Complains of his ill health; he intends for Burleigh on Friday, to keep Lord Exeter's birthday.—Is not fit to undertake such a thing, but is resolved not to lose an opportunity of paying respects to him for reasons he (Gower) may guess.

Fol. 13. 1722, Feb. 20, London.—The same to the same.—Cannot answer you as to the time of the Parliament's rising, nor can Will. Morley; but he bid me tell you he defers writing till he can. The Lords have expunged the reasons for the Election Bill.

Fol. 15. 1723, Feb. 3, Hamby.—The same to the same.—Begs him to acquaint Mr. Cecil that an election is fixed for the 12th inst., and if his health will permit him to take so long a journey it would be of very great service to us; besides it would make him so popular that if ever he had any thoughts of standing for this county it would make all the gentlemen zealous to serve him. Sir Neville Hickman and I were to wait on the peer at Burleigh last Tuesday; we all dined at Stamford where most of the gentlemen of that side of the country met us; the peer and I paid the expenses of that day; Sir Nevill scarce met with any denial; I hear the other side brag much, but I can't find where their interest lies. Get Litchfield to send Sir Charles Buck down; I fancy Sir Thom. Sebright would come along with him if your Lordship would propose it. Tom Conyers is come to town; he is a very fit person to stir in this affair and to speak to those gentlemen who have votes, &c.

Fol. 9. 1716, June 13. Lord Winchilsea to Lord Gower.—Asks him to let Mr. Crompton know that Mr.

* The Duke of Kingston was father of Lady Gower, Lady Mary Wortley, and the Countess of Mar.

Bedford is to be found at his house near the King's Bench prison in Southwark; was desired by a friend of Lord Gower to say this.

Fol. 6. 1718, Oct. 10, Bromley. Fr. Roffen (Atterbury) to Lord Gower. Requests him earnestly to be present at the opening of the session and to persuade his friends also.—Asks him to urge the same to Sir W. Wyndham in as strong terms as he has written, and he will answer for Wyndham's allowing the reasonableness of the request.

Fol. 7. 1718, [] 25, Kelham.—The Marquis of Granby to Lord Gower.—On his return from Yorkshire found his Lordship's letter wherein is mentioned the gentlemen's desire of having the plate either before or after the day on which it is now fixt; to which he agrees, for his whole design in subscribing was to assist in promoting Lord Gower's pleasure, and to encourage a diversion he is so fond of himself as riding.—Begins his campaign to-morrow, and is of opinion that he shall end it successfully, having, tho' of different nations, a very good body of troops, and the new levies having already given signal proofs of their being capable of performing wonders.

Fol. 17. 1721, April 27. S. (Duchess of) Marlborough to Lord Gower. (The signature and address only are in the Duchess's writing.) Encloses a written paper for the perusal of Lord Gower, which she asks him to return as it will save a good deal of writing.—She hopes that he will read it not only because it relates to the Duke of Marlborough, but because it concerns that justice and equity to which every subject has the same right.—She knows the person whose reputation is chiefly concerned on the contrary side, makes use of all his abilities and all the opportunities a large acquaintance with the nobility gives him, to make very deep impressions on his own side of the question.—She only states facts fairly and justly and leaves it to others judgment.—She thinks her paper is drawn up in a more plain and intelligible manner than the lawyers, who must keep to particular forms, will suffer the printed case to be, &c.

Fol. 17. 1721, Aug. 17, Newpark. The Earl of Essex to Lord Gower.—Congratulates him on the birth of a son (who was afterwards 1st Marquis of Stafford).

Fol. 18. 1722, Oct. 5. The Earl of Bathurst to Lord Gower.—I received yours when Lord Strafford, Sir William Wyndham, and William Shippen, were with me. I communicated the contents to them, and they were so angry with you that it took up a great deal of time and several bottles of wine to appease them; that at this time of day Lord Gower should send to know whether he should attend in Parliament could not have been believed if it had not been under his own hand.—It was unanimously agreed that I should send a messenger on purpose to you that you may have timely notice to be here personally on Tuesday next, and we don't doubt but you will prevail with Lord Cardigan to come up with you; we desire also that you will give notice to all members within the week to be here at the opening of the session. We are all ready to vote any man into the plot who shall fail to attend upon this occasion; we shall attribute it to guilt or to a remissness which is equal to it. Give no room, my dear Lord, for any reflections to be made upon a character hitherto so unblameable, but come away immediately, and I will burn your letter and be ready to throw my gauntlet down to any man who shall dare to assert that you ever thought of staying in the country a moment after the sessions began.

Fol. 3. 1722, Nov. 17, Pasley.—The Duke of Hamilton and Brandon to the 2nd Lord Gower.—Recommends his cousin the Marquis of Annandale to his (Gower's) protection, he having been defendant in some law suits with his mother-in-law wherein he prevailed; and he is now called before the House of Lords by two appeals.—The Duke hopes for Lord Gower's interest and patronage for him.

Fol. 19. n. d. Lord Bruce to Lord Gower.—Friday morning.—It will be very material and necessary for as many of our friends as can to be here at our next meeting; I will take care to give notice to Lord Anglesey and Stawel; there are besides absent without proxies the Duke of Northumberland, Lords Exeter, Denbigh, Berkshire, Abington, Plymouth, Poulet, Strafford, Hereford, Broke, Maynard, Byron, Lexington, Barnard, Conway, the Archbishop of York, the Bishops of Exeter, St. David's, and Bristol. If you and other friends will take care of getting them to town, it will do very well.

Fol. 11. 1711, Feb. 22, Dupplin.—The Earl of Kinroull to Lord Gower.—Apology for troubling him upon such a subject as a case in the House of Lords, but poor

Lord Hyndford's case will be so sad a one, if Coll. Chestons (Charteris?) carries his cause against him, that I'm sure you'll easily excuse my concern for him when I tell you that he's my near relation, and that if he loses this cause his family will be entirely ruined;—the merits of the case I leave to Lady Hyndford, who will be glad of an opportunity to inform your Lordship of her case. I have writ to Bathurst; I pray talk with him &c.

Fol. 21. 1712, Oct. 7, London. A news letter.—News from Brussells, Vienna, and the Hague.—Edinburgh, the 30th Sept. Nothing of news here, but I'll oblige you with a fresh piece of Presbyterian cant which was poured out on Sunday last by Mr. Mackleven in the Talbooth Church; in his prayer after sermon, viz., O! Lord, there are two great beasts in the world, the Great Turk and the Pope of Rome; destroy them both and bring down that great enemy of Christ's kirk, the Tyrant of France. Bless our Queen; but, Lord, take a course with some dangerous and evil counsellors that are about her.—Falmouth the 2nd. Yesterday came in the packet boat in 7 days from Lisbon, with several passengers and brought letters of the 4th n. s. which give an account that the Spanish army under the Marquis de Bay, consisting of 15,000 foot and 5,000 horse, was set down before Campo Mayors, in which place is a garrison of 4,000 men, and Brigadier Maste has thrown himself into the same. We have an account from Cambridge that, on the 3rd inst., the Rev. Mr. Philip Brooks, B.D., fellow of St. John's College, a very learned and worthy member of that body was unanimously elected University library keeper in the room of Mr. Laughton, deceased. My Lord Treasurer has been indisposed, but Dr. Radcliff has set his Lordship to rights again. The Queen (God be praised) is in very good health, notwithstanding the Whigs give out the contrary amongst their party all the kingdom over, and further to cheer them they tell them that the Electoral Prince of Hanover will be here against the sitting of the Parliament.

Fol. 26. 1714, Dec. 20, London. Lord Carteret to Lord Gower.—Mentions that the King has created his mother Countess Granville and Viscountess Carteret, which is a title Lord Gower could not have taken, having two surnames already;—by this means the title of Bath is open to him (Gower), and he (Carteret) does not doubt he may get it.

Fol. 34. 1717, May 18. The Earl of Oxford to (Lord Gower).—Several of his friends advise him not to run the hazard of a third year's imprisonment, but to offer his petition to the House of Peers. Asks Lord Gower to be present; he is very ambitious of having the Duke of Rutland to present his petition, whom he esteems highly, and asks if Lord Gower thinks it would be agreeable for him to do so.

Fol. 33. 1715, Feb. 6, Lord Lansdowne to Lord Gower.—A committee of Lords, being appointed to meet on Saturday next in the Prince's chamber, at the usual hours of ten or eleven, about a Bill in which Lord Weymouth is interested, and it being expected that my wife and myself should appear to declare our consents, I entreat your Lordship to be there, and shall take it as a great favour if you will acquaint the committee that we are neither of us in a condition to attend, but that we freely consent to the Bill.—Asks Lord Gower to subscribe towards repairing the school and the church at Launceston: most of the Cornish gentlemen have subscribed, and he (Lansdowne) is their Recorder.

Fol. 32. 1721, Aug. 10, London. — to Lord Gower.—This day the King came to the House and made a speech, but I design to be in bed before it will be cried about. The substance was to thank the House of Commons for the supplies the last Sessions, and for enabling him to pay the debts of the Civil list; for taking care to restore credit, after the late calamitous times, when the enemies of the government were by pamphlets and reports endeavouring to inflame the nation; that they did well in punishing those that were guilty, and in taking compassion of those that were sufferers; that he had given an act of pardon to those that were unwarily drawn in to be in some measure partakers without knowing what they did. He desired them to discountenance profaneness and immorality, and to preserve the public peace in their respective counties. And then the Chancellor, by the King's order, prorogued the Parliament to the 19th of October next. Cannot say anything for certain about a dissolution, but a friend was told within these four days by a very considerable man of the Treasury that, within a little time after the prorogation, there would come a proclamation to dissolve the Parliament. These reports are not to be depended on. Lord Essex has been very dangerously ill at Newpark.

Fol. 32. 1722, May 1, London. The same to the same.—If every gentleman in England had exerted his interest with the same spirit that you have done, this new Parliament had been more agreeable to the inclination of the people in general than I am afraid it will prove; however, by a modest computation, I believe there will be about a hundred and seventy Tories; the new members are about two hundred, and, tho' they go under the denomination of Whigs, it may be a question whether they will dip their hands in the dirty work their predecessors have left behind them. The death of my Lord Sunderland has very much disconcerted the measures of the Court, and put their affairs into some confusion. As soon as he was dead, the executors and the Duchess of Marlborough sealed up his scutcheon, till his son returned from his travels. But the Lord President of the Council, Lord Privy Seal, and the two Secretaries of the State came and tore off the seals, seized what papers related to public affairs, and carried them away; which, as the world says, has put the Duchess into a very great passion, and she threatens them with a lawsuit.—I cannot pretend to tell you who will succeed him. The Duke of Dorset has the best pretensions to be Groom of the Stole, because he is the first Lord of the Bedchamber; whether there is any other person that has the same title to be first Minister of State, time must show.—Mr. Walpole's horses feel the weight of a first minister, for they never stand still from morning till night. His experience in affairs at home will gain a considerable share of power, but not being much conversant in foreign business, and not being able to talk at Court with the same easiness as he does in the House of Commons, the whole power will scarce fall to his lot. Our news from abroad seems to threaten war from all parts of the world, and we are very sensible of it here. There are great men daily going abroad to foreign parts, and 'tis now said that the middle of this month is fixed for the King himself.—If I am rightly informed there has been some dispute amongst the Ministry whether they shall meet and chose a Speaker, or be prorogued from time to time till His Majesty returns. The project of inoculation takes most prodigiously, notwithstanding the death of my Lord Sunderland's son. The young princesses they say are out of danger.—Sir W. Wyndham is expected in town shortly.

Fol. 45. n. d. Lady Mary Wortley Montague to Lady Gower.

Fol. 46. n. d. Countess of Gainsborough to the same. Fol. 47 and 48.—Letters from Mr. B. Noel to Lady Gower. Condolences; and an arrangement for Lord Gower's funeral.

Fol. 39. 1722, Oct. 16. The same to the same.—If ever Mr. Proby designs being a Parliament man, he should not become now, and give it up, having so much the start and advantage of Mr. Piggott, tho' Manchester is gone down, who sent a man in Old Bond Street, down to Mrs. Lyton's; but she told the man she was engaged, and would give her interest to nobody but Mr. Proby. To-day they are in the House of Commons like to sit late about the Habeas Corpus Bill, and they say never so full a House was scarce known as was in it yesterday. Above 500 members, and a vast many design of the Lords' side, to speak to-day to endeavour shortening the time. It can't be strong enough to throw it out. I hear all is concluded between Lord Burford and Miss Worden, who has 5,000*l.* when she marries, in prospect. Lord Exeter did not take his place on Saturday, as he desired, not finding Lord Gower soon enough that day, who he had a mind to go with him, but will do it to-day. The town is very full, and full of thought, and both sides either way of thinking.

Fol. 43. May 18, at night. The same to the same.—... Dyer's letter says Lord Anglesey is to be one of the Secretaries of State, and Lord Nottingham said at Burleigh he had a private letter of the same. Had Lord Gower been alive, I should have had reason for the sake of one, to have not been much displeased; but as it is, I have nobody I very much value can be turned out, or very much respect, or have a concern for, that will, I believe, be put in, since the Duke of Leeds' age I fear, will make him not be any more at the helm, and consequently he or his friends have little advantage by a change in the Ministry. The Duchess of Shrewsbury, I perceive, 'tis said, has found the art none else could do, as given out, of making the Queen laugh since the Prince's death, till she has; since her Lord's being Chamberlain has done it.

Fols. 35 to 43. Many letters from the Duchess of Rutland to Lady Gower, and her son and grandson.

The following extract only seems to relate to public events:—

Fol. 38. 1722, Sept. 29. The Duchess of Rutland to Lady Gower. We are here every day told of one or other taken up by the messengers, and of several more to be so; but I hope there is no other ground for some mentioned, than only their being of a party that won't give in to the measures of some of the Ministry, who would carry everything, and have no opposers to their villany. . . . For in all reigns we have heard of sum creatures whose pride and malice have had no bounds; and have made Kings, that would in themselves been the best of princes, through their artifices been lost in a great measure the affections of their subjects; but I hope that is not the case now, under the happiness, liberty, and property and riches we enjoy, in a King so tender and careful of his people; for I am confident His Majesty is under concern, to have been obliged to send the Bishop to the Tower, and the two Lords went there last night, Orrery and North and Gray, through their own want of consideration and indiscretion, 'twas said. Last night the Lord Arran was in custody also, but in this affair, as in all others, there is a world of false reports, and nothing scarce to be depended upon, but what one sees. Lord Exeter delivered the Stamford address, and was so graciously received, he did not wait two minutes, but was carried in by Lord Orkney to the King's closet. Some are of a very odd opinion, and that is, that this Parliament as soon as meets 'will be dissolved, and a new one chose; but this sure is hot brained fancies and conjectures, especially as care is, and will, 'tis likely enough, be taken to secure them who may do mischief, and are rude enough to not think right everything some would have them come in to.

Fol. 2. 1642, July 22, Stitnam. Thomas Gower to his uncle, Sir Richard Leveson, at Trentham.—Sent last week a large relation of all passages here. This week produces nothing but what you will hear from London; the petition from both Houses to the King, and his tart reply. Here the forces (I call them not army) lie quartered about Hull, the nearest about a mile off. Cannon baskets are providing, and materials for entrenching, but I believe the town will not be attempted, for the forces here are not 8,000, and the town hath 1,000 and more, and this week there are drawn out of several ships, lately come up, 700 musketeers, and besides the natural strength of the town, there are now outworks made, and they still add to them night and day. If you will have my opinion, I believe Hull is but the pretext to draw forces together, and will not be attempted. The Providence is drawn aground, and all the ordnance taken out of her for land service. Five regiments of horse are raising for the King, besides two of dragoneers.

Fol. 3. 1642, Aug. 5, York.—The same to the same.—Since my last the blocking of Hull (as I always believed), proving to no purpose, for Sir John Hotham's pinnaces commanded the river, and the ships from the Parliament the sea, the King drew off his forces upon Sunday last; but first Sir John Hotham had taken some boats, and in them divers gentlemen, as Captains Markham, Horner, Galton, Mr. Egerton, Mr. Falton-stall, Mr. Wright, and others; and the Wednesday night before the same, wherein the King expected an answer from the Parliament, Captain Lowinger and Captain Legarde sallied by night, and avoiding the highways, by passing the dykes upon portable bridges, they came three miles from Hull, and making a stand with 40 horse and some 200 foot, they fell into the town of An-laby, wherein Lieutenant-Colonel Duncumbe and the Major Frankland lay with their companies, and letting alone the corps du garde, took all the rest between sleeping and waking, beat up the quarter, surprised the sentinel (whom they slew), hurt some others, and carried 12 or 13 prisoners away. They also fired a barn wherein their ammunition lay (being half a barrel of powder), and frightened the regiment so abominably, that the next day at noon the highways were filled with runaways, and in three companies they could not muster 15 men. Some others such rising spread the contagion, and most of the trained bands began to examine why they should fight with one another, and why they whom it least concerned should lie in the works, and the Cavaliers more interes[t]ed lie at Beverley, and neither ease their watches nor assist in danger. Upon this, some horse were quartered near Beverley, all the foot called thither, and the magazine and ordnance is bringing hither as fast as possible. I need not tell you of the Leicestershire Warwickshire affairs, nor of the results of our Yorkshire meeting this day, all which will . . . only thus . . . our me . . . ath failed expe . . . both sides . . . we hear an answer . . . and remonstrance to the Parliament . . . not fully appear, only 'tis manifest that the . . . undertakes to raise, arm, and pay 5,000 curassiers, for three months, for His Majesty's security. The other day 40 men came out of Hull, who were charged by eight horse, who slew one or two, took four, and drove the rest headlong into the town. Fresh men come in daily, so, as 'tis supposed, there are about 2,500 men in the town. More are expected, and I apprehend they will send in so many as may awe this country, thereby to divert its assistance to the King. Every day we talk of the King's remove southward, but I cannot see how he can advance without better provisions, for as yet he hath more men than arms. The forces yet apparent are 500 horse of Carnarvon's regiment, 500 Grandison's, 500 Biron's, the Prince's guards, 500; Wilmot is raising as many. I have a command to raise 1,000 dragoneers, Col. Heron, 600, others 400. Six regiments of foot are raising, but unless Prince Robert lands, I see not how they will get arms for them. The Hull business, and ill-carriage of things, makes the King's affairs in worse repute than otherwise they would have been.

Fol. 4. 1642, Oct. 5, Pontefract. The same to the same.—This unfortunate country is still the scene of trouble; Mr. Hotham is issued out of Hull with 1,000 foot and 2 troops of horse (or rather two in one), and many of the country is joined to him, and they expect daily two regiments of foot and two troops of horse from the south; he will much trouble us, by being master of the water, whereby he can take and leave when he pleaseth; and this country being full of rivers, and he having possessed Cawood castle (the Bishop's house), within 7 miles of York, standing upon the river, we cannot force him, and he is safe, having his retreat by water, and can return at his pleasure, which will haggle out this country which hath no help from the King, but a great part of our gentry with him, little money or ammunition. Notwithstanding these difficulties, according to my duty, I am raising the county, and with part of the forces drawn together I am now within six miles of him; the Earl of Cumberland is providing at York; but a treaty of peace concluded, and since strangely deserted by the gentry of his part, hath much retarded our preparations, yet incensed the people against him and them. You will shortly hear what will be done; in the meantime I have a mighty burden upon my shoulders, being now to oppose orders of Parliament (for oath binds me to maintain the county in peace as far as I can, and repress the disturbers) and this without money or means, but the bare assistance of the people which I cannot make a foundation upon. My wife dares not come in Newcastle because the plague is there.

Fol. 5. 1652, July 31.—Thomas Gower to Mr. John Langley.—My nephew Dodington hath had notable success yesterday, all his claims allowed; . . . the same day was fortunate to the Countess of Darby, but unfortunate to the Earl of Worcester, who is come in without conditions or pass, and will (as most say) certainly smart for it. The additional Act passed yesterday and some private ones; our news at sea comes from Holland (and no other ways) that Blake hath taken nine Dutch men-of-war, sunk two, burnt one, taken as many busses as contained 2,000 men, whom he hath sent home without ransom. Yesternight a Newcastle merchant (who came post) affirmed that he saw both fleets within less than three leagues of each other, so as here is now great expectations of the event. In France, the King since the retreat of the Spaniard grows in reputation; Normandy is almost agreed, and Beaufort since his killing Nimours is come to him. The King of Scotland is going into the Low Countries; he hath made five privy councillors, my Lord Gerrard, Sir John Berkley, Crofts, Cooke, and . . . to the wonder of all about him. Mrs. Pooley and some others of that sort are coming for England, and Prince Rupert every day expected in Holland. The soldiers petition do much trouble the consciences of divers members of Parliament; and this day happening to read some heads of it, the name of the new representative did so trouble the stomach of a fat black Yorkshire gentleman, that though he be as tall a trencherman as any that is much higher than himself, yet the leg of a chicken was more than he could swallow; and indeed the business grows past jesting; they talk also of calling some members to account, but lest I be in the same predicament I will say no more.

Fol. 5. 1652, Dec. 21. The same to the same.—Since I writ last the French envoy hath mended his title and had audience this day; his message I leave to the Diurnalls and will only tell you such things as the Gazettes (I believe) meddle not with all. In France the Cardinal Mazzarin preparing for his entry into Paris was, it seems, resolved first to remove the Cardinal du Retz, being jealous both of his great abilities, power with the people, and the Pope's favour to him, who affects him particularly and also keeps up his reputation to make use of it to the maintenance of his authority in France, and for counterpoise to Cardinal Mazzarine (whom he extremely hates); this latter hath prevailed with the King upon pretence of a new combination to commit him close prisoner to Bois de Vincennes together with Madame Cheverense and Monsieur Grammond; upon which the Bishop of Paris and divers other Bishops and Abbots went to the Parliament desiring redress or at least intercession to the King; their answer was, they knew nothing of the cause nor any more but only Le Roy le commande; then they addressed themselves to the Duke of Orleans, who seeing how much he suffered in the person of his chief instrument Du Retz, and sensible, that it tended to his depression, used all means he could: but nothing prevailing, the body of the clergy went in procession through the streets of Paris and carried the sacrament publicly, imploring divine assistance for preservation of the liberties of the Gallican Church. The Pope resents it so high that at Rome they say they will interdict the Realm of France. The Prince of Condé hath at last a total rout, he hardly escaping, and among others the Earl of Castlehaven, who had command under him, is slain. The Portugall is agreed with us, and hath given 50,000*l.* for the goods of the merchants in his hands. The Lubeckers were bringing hither much provision for support of the fleet, and the Dutch have taken it by the way. The Spaniard rants high, in so much that Sir W. A.* (a Yorkshire member) told me he was a skirvy saucy fellow, but 'tis believed we shall not be long friends with Spain. The Swede demands restitution for the Ginny ships taken by us, and that in rough terms. 'Tis feared we have had a sore blow in Ireland, and that Phelim O'Neale is master of the field in Ulster. The Dutch be in the Channel betwixt Dover and Calais with 120 ships, and another fleet making ready. P.S. I was this day for the verses, but cannot get them yet, Sir F. Cobb being gone 10 miles. P.S. 2.—The French envoy had audience at a Committee of eleven, of which four understood him; he gave very good words; among other expressions he told them princes were not to be regarded unless they were just, and since it had pleased God to make them a state, his Master wished them much joy of it.

Fol. 6. 1652, Dec. 28.—The same to the same.—Here is little worth writing, most of the time being spent in endeavouring to take away the esteem held of Christmas Day, to which end order was made that who ever would open shops on that day should be protected by the State; yet I heard of no more than two who did so, and one of them had better have given 50*l.*, his wares were so dirtyed; and secondly that no sermons should be preached, which was observed (for aught I hear) save at Lincoln's Inn. I must beg excuse for saying the Prince of Condé was totally routed; though several letters from Newport, Ostend, and other places assured it, yet they say now his rear payed the shot, together with his baggage, that he hath saved the rest sore shattered. The breach between the Courts of Rome and France grows still wider, and on no slight occasions besides what I wrote last; for the Pope sent to summon Mazarine to Rome; the Nuncio who brought the Monitory was stayed at Marseilles and his papers taken from him. The envoy from France dined with a friend of mine to-day; 'tis a witty drunken fellow, a good scholar, and a roundhead Huguenot; his business (setting by the pretences) is really to get trade between Bordeaux and England, that they may vend their wines, without which they are beggared, and the King desires to do something for that town's satisfaction which stands yet in tickle terms; and next he is to mediate betwixt us and the butter boxes, who I assure you desire peace, and France no less, for fear of the advantages Spain gets by this war both by trade and other ways.

Fol. 4. 1652, Jan. 15. The same to the same.—The soldiers have appointed a Committee of 15 to order and present their petition or remonstrance, call it what you will, some here think to fool them as formerly; they say if this bout they do no good, the next shall; but I dare not tell you what judgment is here made of that affair. In France the King and Cardinal carries very high, but I should not say the Cardinal, for 'tis here believed that he hath laid down his Cardinal's cap, sent it to Rome, nay farther that he shall be High Constable and marry Madame de Longueville; Cardinal de Retz, his opposite, is to be at liberty and go Ambassador into Spain, as one whose great parts will be useful out of France but troublesome in it. The Duke of Lorraine is come down against the Hollander and hath taken Gelders; the pretence because he demanded his money of the Dutch out of the bank at Amsterdam, which they were not able to pay and he takes for denial; but, re vera, the King of Spain puts him on that business under hand, by that means doing the Dutch as much mischief as he could do himself, easing his own territories of that army which else must lie upon them, and himself maintaining the peace, his subjects have not the least detriment. The Hollander hath raised 10,000 men to resist him, which, they being so vastly in debt added to the burden of their great fleet, lies heavy on them, and hastens the underhand treaty with us. The Duke of York and Lorrain are fallen out, the former debauching the most of three regiments of Irish which were in his army to serve the French. The Pope hath seized upon a great sum of money of Mazarin's, discovered in the bank at Rome, and his choler is still high against France; all this tends to the advantage of Spain, who gets strength and reputation every day. Heert, the Spanish Ambassador, is discontented at the carriage of most of the English ladies who were at his entertainment, and they as much at him for giving the chief place and respect to Col. H. Martin's mistress . . . they are also much displeased at her for being finer and more jewelled than any, but whatever the matter was, she tarried there all night, and to that belongs a tale also; yet 'tis no small argument of the greatness of the Hogen Mogen Heeren Staten of England, that the Ambassador of the great monarch of Spain should make such an entertainment for such a property belonging to one of the Parliament of England.

Fol. 6. n. y., May 18. The same to the same.—I was forced to make use of my brother Howard's favour, to get a pass from the Lords of the Council to come to London to wait upon Sir Rich. Temple's extravagant meeting and undue practises, and that was the cause that I took not Trentham in my way . . . I will not rob the Diurnal of the news of this great plot which hath fever shaken this city; they talk of firing, burning, ruining; the cavalry completely armed beat the pavement two nights together; the foot guards were tripled, many very mean persons seized, yet I saw no disturbance in the suburbs, which it may be is the cause that the fear hath not extended to Hyde Park, where the young gallantry, male and female, are notwithstanding very jovial, and 'tis believed have dark designs, and really they say snock treason prevails much there; and though other be discovered it lies concealed till the attempt hath succeeded, though sometimes with as hot service as the French had at Ostend, who are now drawing a line about Dunkirk, the King and court being at Calais, whither my Lord Fawconberge and my Lord Howard go on Friday morn with complement and something to boot. The Duke of York is killed here with a long pistol which reached from Bapaulm to the Haye.

Fol. 7. 1653, Feb. 18. The same to the same.—Since w rote last here hath been a Plot discovered; the books will tell you the intent and persons discovered; some say it is real, others a Fanfara; but certainly it hath been managing three months last past, for one of the last counsell of, state told me that they then knew of it, had one among them daily, but despised it as a ridiculous thing managed by prentices and inconsiderable persons. However, some wise men believe that a couple of coy ducks drew in the rest, then revealed all, were employed to that purpose that the execution of a few mean persons might deter wiser and more considerable people. Boveringe hath had audience, tells the council that he hath a plenipotentiary power, that three other ambassadors are to be here next week, and if any accident retard their arrival, that he will sign the articles of peace, which assurance was here exceedingly relished and some great persons much pleased. But, this morn comes a gentleman from Ostend, who tells a lamentable story, viz., that Grave Maurice, bastard to Prince Maurice, Count William and Beverwarden, in behalf of the house of Nassau, have taken the field with 10,000 men, &c. &c. . . . but sit fides penes authorem, the news is not here liked, therefore not believed here. Here are new books, among which the Case of the new Commonwealth stated, and a Justification of the last Parliament are much cried up.

Fol. 7. 1653, Feb. 21. The same to the same.—The news I last wrote concerning Holland is believed, but worse and more rugged comes from Ireland; for Lieut.-General Ludlow (as is said) hath a great interest in the soldiery, and followed by Sir Hardres Waller, Sir Charles Coot and others, expresses no good opinion of our government; and though the report be suppressed by all means, yet it increaseth, and the rather because the Lord Henry Cromwell went post away on Saturday at midnight. Last night eight were drawn out of every company and sent away by boats to the ships, which raiseth many conjectures whether for Holland, France, or Ireland. The plot makes much noise, but few believe any thing of it, yet certainly there was something in it. From Scotland, for truth, Kenmore and Glencarne are beaten by Coll. Morgan; he had 1,200, they 3,000; yet, though totally routed, the Scots were so nimble that all escaped save 140; two castles were taken in the Highlands, one of them quitted, and upon the gates a sheet of paper fixed, and in great letters written—we had no orders to fight.

Fol. 8. 1657, March 22, Stitnam. The same to the same. . . . The last week two of my brothers and many others are carried prisoners to York, and I have notice given not to stir out of my own house, nor will they declare whether I shall follow my friends; only say that the respect to my brother-in-law is the reason they extend not the full rigour to me. My brother Wm. Gower was but newly returned out of France with my son, and wishes himself there again, having had no suspicion that keeping himself free from the company of those of whom they are jealous, that he should be made a prisoner.

Fol. 8. 1658, June 26. The same to (the same).—Here is little news. My brother Phil. Howard landed yesterday from Dunkirk, he tells us, &c. (of the warfare between the Spanish and French).—Our foot suffered much in the late fight, but did gallantly; Fenwick and I think all the officers of that regiment are slain; divers of the volunteers, and among the rest Drummond, once Major-General to Montrose. The French carried themselves basely, and being three times desired to charge, cried Ouy, ouy, ça ça, drew their swords, advanced a few paces, and they cried Attendez un peu, put up their swords, and would not stir; they still keep Mardike, and much disgust there is betwixt our men and they. General Lockhart, our ambassador (call him whether you will), made a long speech to the inhabitants of Dunkirk, told them the Protector was a man of a vast comprehensive soul, sought the good of all his subjects, though he was not of their religion, yet he had good thoughts and good will for all that believed in God and to be saved by Christ Jesus; that 'tis true the Papists in England were pressed hard, but it was not with his will, but being sworn to the laws of England he could not do otherwise, but they not being under the penalty of that law he would protect them in their own profession, and they should enjoy it without affront or trouble. The King of Hungary is certainly chosen Emperor, and a parliament will be after Michaelmas.

Fol. 8a. 1659, Dec. 17, York. Thos. Gower to Sir Richard Leveson.— . . . News from the north here is little; I hear General Monk lyes at Coldstream betwixt Kelso and Norham upon the border, and General Morgan at Cowbrain, eight miles from Carlisle. General Lambert is at Newcastle, where they still treat, and he had like to have surprised Berwick, as in the other side they missed Carlisle narrowly, so as advantages are sought during treaty. There hath been a great meeting of several gentlemen of quality at York, which some take ombrage at. And a great part of the news we heard when I was with you, concerning Sir H. Vane's coming northward, and the jealousies betwixt principal officers here and at London, were all Fanfaras.

Fol. 8a. 1659, Jan. 5. Thos. Gower to Mr. John Langley.—The last post there was no writing because of the stirs in this country which were occasioned and begun thus. The burden, but more the insolency of the soldiers, gave just occasion to all to consider seriously of the consequences if they should give General Monk, against whom they were marching, the least ruffle, or confirm their soldiers, if they should apprehend themselves the stronger by Monk's refusal to fight, which, though most rational in him, yet might, in his own and the adverse soldier's opinion (who looks not into the inside of business) be interpreted fear or weakness, and work effects accordingly. It was thought fitting also to give the city of London encouragement that they might see such a considerable province as this county join in the same design and endeavour to vindicate themselves from slavery; these and several considerations, too long for a letter, prevailed above the caution of many who thought it almost a desperate attempt to appear against 60 troops of horse quartered among and close by us; and therefore a considerable number of gentlemen gave assurance to meet at several places fit to join at a general rendezvous, but were a little hastened before the day, because the several meetings, not private enough, and some false brother had given notice at Newcastle; whereupon Lilburne was sent back to York with speed; three troops of horse and two companies of foot brought in more then before, and more upon their march, had they not been prevented; a party of horse were sent to seize upon my Lord Fairfax, and the Duke of Buckingham, who were at Appleton six miles from York; but a friend from the city giving timely notice they got away St. Stephen's night, and by daybreak went through Selbye, but lost one another, the old general passing Armin and Castleton Ferry into Marshland, the Duke over Lanrik Ferry towards Hull, whither his father intended also, but for some reasons went not; in the meantime it was given out and believed at York that they were gone to Leeds, from thence to Manchester, and Lilburne grew confident the design was broken; 'till Thursday night all was quiet save some parties of soldiers moving about, and the Quakers assembling at their several meetings; Friday morn by day, there met at Malton Sir Francis Boynton, Coll. Bethell, Sir Hen. Cholmley and many others, to the number of 300 horse, well armed and mounted, among whom Mr. Wm. Gower with above forty horse, half gentlemen, all well mounted and armed, and within an hour came in Capt. Strangways, of Lilburne's regiment, with most of his troop; as soon as he was arrived he excepted against Mr. Gower, professing he loved the man but could not be in a design where cavaliers were parties; the rest of the gentlemen generally opposed Strangways earnestly, but Mr. Gower, to avoid being a cause of separation, and it may be the ruin of the whole business, left the command of the men to Mr. Tho. Vavasour, and marched along as a private gentleman. I forgot to tell you that when the Duke of Buckingham lost his father in the night, after two days' wandering, remembering a meeting was to be at Malten, came to Hutten, within two miles, to an old friend's abode there, and was at the meeting, and the like exceptions by the same captain were made against him, though the Lord Fairfax was his father; that night they quartered six or seven miles off, and I met Mr. Gower at Gilling, where more men came to him, and persuaded him to go still, this being foretold him by myself; they rendezvoused at sunrise at Haresley, where Smithson (major to Lilburne), and Capt. Th. Lilburne, formerly put out by his Collonel and this Parliament, having been fetched back by his old soldiers, came in with their troops, and advertisement that the Irish Brigade, having left Lambert, would join with them, and notice also that my Lord Fairfax would meet them at Knaresborough; thither, being near 20 miles, they marched in deep snow; at Birrough bridge, formerly Isurium, they were faced by Hacker's regiment of horse, were drawn on both sides to charge, and the Duke of Buckingham put himself, with his sword drawn, in the head of Mr. Gower's party to lead them, and the old soldiers gave the new party leave to be in the front, who were ready enough to engage, but Hacker's men were content to draw off, and marched away. At Knaresborough they met the Lord Fairfax, who had with him 150 horse, and Capt. Wilkinson's troop come away from Lambert; in the meantime Lilburne demanded the city magazine of the mayor of York, who was ready enough to deliver it, but the Common Council opposed unless he would declare for Parliament, which he refused, and they sent to invite my Lord Fairfax, who next morn advanced towards York; at Hessam Moor the Irish Brigade being 9 or 10 troops met him, and jointly declared for Parliament, some being against single person and House of Lords, others of another opinion, yet all agreed against Lambert; all united under the Lord Fairfax's command with loud shouts, and faced York, sending a trumpet to summon it: Lilburne manned the walls, caused patrols of horse to ride the streets to keep in the inhabitants, and denied to admit them without Lambert's order: they without provided to storm in confidence of their party within, when as fourscore of the citizens notwithstanding the horse, yet (? got) with their arms into the minster and rung the bell, and a party of Lilburne's own men seized a church beyond the bridge, and cried Fairfax; their Collonel advanced first to persuade, after to threaten, but was forced to gallop off, and least all should serve him so sent out that he would be content to admit the Irish forces, but none of those of the gentry, and particularly excepted against those who had been his own officers; indeed he expected men from Lambert who lay at Rippon, seven miles from Knaresborough, when my Lord Fairfax lay there, as near York as he within four miles, and hoped to persuade the Irish, having new changed party. So they marched in, and next day my Lord Fairfax, and all the company, increased by 400 foot of Coll. Morleys, who came in to the Lord Fairfax also. In the meantime all Lambert's men save 200 forsook him; to those he made a brave speech and they resolved to live and die together; but within an hour he stole away with one man, and I hear came to Newpark to Coll. Lilburne's, who met him with a very few others, and since, Lambert is not heard of, and the Coll. is private in York. Upon news of this disbanding all the countrymen went to their several homes, and the Irish marched out of the town to other quarters; posts are gone up to London, as also the Duke of Buckingham, and whether the country shall have thanks or no is a question; and whether or not, they have surely prevented the Quakers, who had doubtless a furious design, their letters to several of their meetings to meet with arms the 6th day of the first month being intercepted. I am just now told that General Morgan with a great body of horse is within a day's march, sent from G[eneral] Monk after Lambert; and thus you have the relation of the sudden ruin of an army, accounted at least 9,000 men, without a blow, and by a divided party who could hardly hang together but against them; add farther, just in Lambert's vertical point when he was advancing, and a small favourable encounter had perfected his design.

Fol. 9. n. y. (probably 1644) Jan. 19. The same to the same. You are not to look for anything of importance here; all will be at London, where the scene at present lies, now General Monk is gone thither. I waited upon him at his departure; he carried three strong regiments of horse and four of foot; four are left here, one of which lies at Beverley, there being as yet no positive answer to be got from the Governor of Hull, but that he will deliver it to those who bear the image of Jesus Christ. Many wonder at General Monk's order, which he hath left in Scotland, there being no field army at all there, or other force, save what is in the citadel of Leith, St. Johnston's, Aire, and Inverness, and the castles of Edinburgh, Stirling, Dunbarton, Dunother, and some other few strong piles rather than castles. He hath confined Argyle and most of the chief of the Remonstrators, and seems to put a confidence in Glencarn, Rothes, Ogilby, Dairly, and others of Montrose's party; he hath licensed all noblemen to have arms for themselves and four servants; and all gentlemen for them and two servants; he hath above 20 sects in every foot company, and the Scots offered him to furnish him with 13,000 foot and 3,000 horse, and to give what assurance he thought fit not to meddle in his absence. These propositions refused, they offered 1,000 gentlemen on horseback, and every man an attendant armed; and at last, because he wanted horse, 1,000 horses. He gaineth in all places by his civility, but is so close that not anything can be guessed of his intentions, only he puts out and puts in which officers he pleaseth. . . . My Lord Fairfax hath laid down his arms, and with them an opportunity, in some men's opinion, to make himself great, and the nation quiet by a free Parliament; it is most certain he might have done what he list; Lambert's army disbanded and melted, only by the fame of his rising; the Irish Brigade sent an officer to let him know that most of them had served under him, and now offered themselves to be ordered by him, and venture their lives where-soever he would employ them; most of Lambert's men had the same resolutions. General Monk made a halt till he heard what his proceedings were, and we are assured London had their eye principally upon him; and though all this and more was fully represented, yet he chose rather to sit down contented with the thanks of the House, than to make use of these great opportunities. Some ascribe it to dulness, others that an order of Parliament hath more power upon him than all reason; some to farther design not yet ripe; some to one thing some to another, &c.

Fol. 10. (1644) Jan. 19. The same to Sir Richard Leveson.

Fol. 10. 1660, June 14. The same to Sir Richard Leveson.—Yesterday I sent my son post into Yorkshire to manage an election at Scarborough, where a new Burgess is to be chosen. . . . This day Mr. Edw. Progers returned from France, and now at court they talk of the Queen's return, and that in short time; her secretary, Sir John Winter, is gone to her, and there is a committee for vesting her jointure, and some say the Duke of York goeth for her. Bordeau, the late resident, is going, if not gone; and either Esperson or Harcourt comes ambassador extraordinary shortly. Those who gaped for preferment and offices in this great change fall of their account; for they were divided between the old servitors abroad and the new cavaliers at home long ago, and before either could hope for so happy change; and at present all gratifications and favours are the Presbiters' portion; if any of the King's party get anything it is inconsiderable. I forgot to let you know that I performed your commands to His Majesty, who spoke kindly of you and seemed pleased to hear of you. I write nothing of news from the House, it being wholly employed about naming the twenty. Whitlock 'scaped this day, and Coll. Artell supplieth his place; there is great endeavour in some to make the Earl of Salisbury one of the number, and he will hardly escape unless his fellow lords protect him.

Fol. 9. 1660, June 30. The same to the same.—The King dined yesterday at Copt Hall, to-day at Roehampton; returned both days in terrible rain and thunder, so as the fine feathers and gay clothes are come back utterly spoiled, and the brave gallants look like drowned rats, or as if they had been rolled in puddles, and the gilded coaches are become like to others. The Court grows regular, and the old orders come again into use; the Prince's chamber and gallery begin to be free, which before were pestered with mean people. The Presbiters begin to stir, and discover their opposition to ceremonies, and their desire to keep out the old ejected clergy, and 'tis believed as soon as the Act of Indemnity is finished that you will hear of greater opposition in that nature. In the meantime many of the King's party show much folly in putting in provisos against particular persons in things of small value, and which rather show passion than judgment; but I believe it proceeds from discontent, which ariseth from their opinion that the Presbiterians engross both profit and favour; and truly they do what may be to keep power to themselves and others from it. Here is a rumour to-day that the Princess Henrietta is privately married to the Duke of Anjou, wrought by the Cardinal to prevent the bestowing of her in the House of Austria, being extremely jealous lest the Emperor should have her; but I have been with my Uncle Winter, who is newly returned from the Queen, and he knows nothing of it. There is a proviso this day put in the Act to bar all the King's judges of the benefit of indemnity who came not and rendered themselves within fourteen days.

Fol. 11. 1660, July 7. The same to the same.—All the provisos are this day dispatched, and 'tis believed that Monday the Bill of Indemnity will be finished and sent up to the Lords, who will be very severe if their own words may be believed, nor do they reject any proviso though put in by a Commoner. One of the most active among them told me just now that the Earl of Salisbury and his fellows who dissolved the House of Lords in compliance to the army will be excepted, and that they will not spare one High Court of Justice man who hath condemned any of the peers, and according to that rule very many will suffer. The army grumble much at the new colonels and like not at all that the Earl of Northampton, the Lords Falkland, Hawley, Langdale, Daniell O'Neale should have regiments, and as little that the trained bands are settling in the ancient way by Lords' Lieutenants and Deputy lieutenants; but I believe when money comes in they will be yet more pleased. I hear at Court of a Don coming from Spain, forerunner to an ambassador extraordinary, a count of high esteem and near akin to the Privado; and it is believed that peace will be shortly concluded with that crown to the great joy of this city.

Fol. 11. n. d. The same to the same. . . . It is true the misfortunes of these times have fallen heavier upon me than almost any of my estate, being forced to pay again what the King had received of me; which being his own, I could not refuse him; and also the largest sheriffs account of England to pass when my balliffs and officers by advantage of the war made no accounts, and their sureties either dead or undone; so all falls upon me and turns to prejudice; yet I say not this to decline charge, but to let you know that, but for these inconveniences and great losses, I should rather have exceeded than fallen short of expectations.

I am glad to hear that divers whose fathers were compouncers are chosen; yet none in these parts venture at it, nor was it thought expedient among us; finding a great jealousy and aptness in the two parties to unite again against the royalists, it was thought better to decline particular satisfactions in order to general advantages; besides great care was taken that such were chosen who were very honest, yet free from exception.

Fol. 12. 1660, Aug. 14. The same to the same.

The Bill of Indemnity is returned from the House of Lords and will be speedily dispatched; the Commons for the most adhere to what they sent up; only agree with the Lords in excepting Coll. Hacker for life, and all the 20 for estate; the rest of the King's Judges to be banished, and the four grantees to be perpetually imprisoned, but that is not yet concluded. They are displeased that the Lords except none of their own House for life, there being as guilty among them as any in all things, saving being judges of the King. The last week Ludlow went from the Serjeant-at-arms, left a letter directed to the Speaker, told him that he had withdrawn himself, not out of distaste of the House of Commons upon whose words he had rendered himself, but for that he saw blood was thirsted for by those who hardly ever had attempted to draw any in either sort, and that attempted to invade the liberties of the Commons of England of which he hoped they would be careful; that when ever the House of Commons signified their pleasure and that they would maintain what they had promised upon notice left at a place he named, he would readily return to the place from whence he went. Eight Lords and more Commoners are gone into the city to advance the loan of 100,000*l.* upon security of the Pole bill; but it is suspected though the cow have milk she will not give it down; and the rather because Recorder Wilde made a long speech, showed four reasons why the city could not lend; 1. Delay of the Bill of Indemnity. 2. No performance with those who had laid out money upon public sales. 3. Innovations in church government, 4. Sudden decay of trade, which indeed is strangely gone, the most practised in that kind not knowing the reason, and though six India ships are returned very rich. The Hampshire frigate was assaulted by eight Spanish men-of-war, all as great as herself, yet is come off clear, extremely torn, to the great honour of our nation. But, sir, the great news is, which till more public, I pray keep to yourself, on Sunday the General refused to give the Lord Roberts [Robartes] Commission to govern the army in Ireland, which discontents the Chamberlain and others, and 'tis believed he will not go as being only trusted with civil but no military power. The consequences are many and important.

Fol. 12. 1660, Oct. 17. The same to Mr. John Langley.

The Parliament endeavours to put whatever the King offers or is about, into an Act that their power may the least go along with the King's, to which purpose the Declaration at Breda, and that concerning Church government are turning into Acts to oblige His Majesty to whatever he hath offered when circumstances of time, occasions, ceremonies, emergencies, and indeed necessity gave him reason to offer more than there was reason to expect; what is done concerning Lord Lieutenants and the Militia, I shall refer to the next, every day giving more light, though by this little day enough is seen.

Fol. 13. 1660, Oct. 31, *(King Street, Westminster.) The same to the same. I have been little at home since I saw you, being too much employed in country affairs, which our old lords and masters have left in extreme disorder, and the raising of the old number of 12,000 foot and the former proportion of foot hath been no small labour, especially there being few of the old stock of people left who had formerly managed business, and few of the new who knew which was to go about it; we have also three Lord Lieutenants, and formerly but one, which makes it more intricate; and though 12 regiments of foot, only five troops of horse, which are free troops not being disposed into a regiment; my son is captain of one of those. The King went hence Saturday last, and can hardly return till Saturday next, some say on Monday; the Queen coming to Canterbury on Tuesday last; this town is very empty till the return, although there did not so many persons of quality attend the King as was expected. I believe you hear of the young Ladies delivery of a goodly boy, who believes as well by that merit as other reasons to be a Duchess, she is very sick of the measles. The Queen and Princess Royal are, in show, extremely discontented and her great enemies, and indeed the whole affair is in a mist, and not fit for a letter no more than the several reports relating to the whole affair.

Fol. 13. 1660, Nov. 6. From the blew Lyon over against Salisbury House. Thos. Gower to Sir Richard Leveson.—The Houses met this day, and all I hear they have done, besides ordinary formalities, is the gift of 10,000*l.* to the Princess; there was some sharp expressions against multitude of French now in town, who eat the bread out of the mouths of the natives, there being as they say no less than 35,000 silk weavers come hither since '57. The children of Belial are not forgot, and the great conflux of the offspring of Babel who are not fit to mix or be conversant with the sons and daughters of Sion; they were the very expressions of a godly zealous member, and the noise in the streets agreeing with this and some pulpit doctrine, hath given the French Ambassador occasion if not desire to be gone, and the Queen begins to talk of return ten days hence. But the great news, and second to none but the King's happy restoration is this morn from Denmark, where as their own words speak it, in gratitude to their King's heroic magnanimity and sufferings for the safety of the people and kingdom and his singular virtues active and passive, they have by universal consent changed his election into a successive title, and given him and his successors the same power and succession by descent in his line and after the same manner as the Kings of France and England have, so as he is to be as absolute monarch as any King in Christendom; and now we talk of a match with his sister as a matter of consequence, and though but common discourse, yet great persons speak of it seriously. I saw this day the two English French Abbots, Daubigny the only brother alive of the last Duke of Richmond, and Montague the Earl of Manchester's, together with Sir Kellam Digby, the Queen's Chancellor. The lady in childbed recovers of the measles, and the child also, and her father was created Baron two days since; and if court whispers can be believed shall be a Duke, and if that be so, his daughter may without murmur be a Duchess; whether it be so or not, the noise and slights of her in every man's mouth almost last week are now stilled; the consequences I leave to you.

The court is now splendid, so many Princes and Princesses being together, and the town incredibly thronged, so as most new come wish themselves at home again. The Presbyterian makes his advantage of all, and for ought I can see intends to make the Parliament long lived by tediousness in settling the King's revenue. Every day gives new light as well as discourse. P.S. The Dutch Ambassador came into town this afternoon.

Fol. 14. 1660, Nov. 13. The same to Mr. John Langley.—At present there is little considerable; the French Ambassador Extraordinary hath taken his leave, and I hear goeth away to-morrow; as yet the opinion that the Queen follows him within a fortnight is upheld, and the rather because she is exceedingly bent upon the match of the Princess with the Duke of Anjou. The lady who pretends to be a Duchess is daily in more hopes to be so indeed; the King was on Sunday afternoon a long time at her father's, and the coarse language which was so rife when she first lay in is not only laid aside, but also they excuse themselves all they can who let any fall. The courtiers also make visits, which cause people who know how observant they are of every motion or appearance of favour, to make judgment accordingly. A few days will show what may be imagined; in the meantime it is good to suspend in so delicate a matter. An ambassador is come from Venice and another not far behind from Florence. The Parliament are in consideration of the Militia, which, being the great quarrel before, is hoped will be done to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Fol. 14. 1660, Nov. 20. The same to the same. The House of Commons having been employed about the manner of raising 1,200,000*l.* which they have promised for a revenue for His Majesty, settling the militia, attainting the rest of the King's judges, raising 100,000*l.* in lieu of the Court of Wards, where the great question is whether by a Land tax upon the Excise or assessment according to estate of every individual person; and from thence arise new questions which spin out time and still demonstrate that old ways were good; there are other debates arising upon the manner of settlement, because some of these courses can only raise it for a time, whereas the consideration for the Court of Wards is to be for ever. The Presbyterian party get strength and power; some of the principal receiving daily the several marks of favour. Maynard and Glyn knighted and made the King's serjeants, Broun, judge in the Common Pleas; I will make no descant of the men, you have known them all. Here is again strange superstitions from the great tide on Friday night last; though I be far from one of that number who much regard them, yet I will give you an account of it, in regard it is strange. At five in the even there was the lowest ebb that I ever saw, and whereas it should have flowed only till nine, and was a land tide as they call it, and should have kept within the banks, it flowed till one, and went quite over the mill banks, and boats rowed in Westminster; then whereas it should have ebbed eight hours it flowed again within four, and was still water next morn at the bridge at ten of the clock; and the observers add farther that there was no wind or other accident which might cause alteration of tides. The Queen sets forward for France the 2nd of December, and is so earnest for the match of the Princess Henrietta with the Duke of Anjou, that the cold weather cannot allay the heat of that desire, nor the Princesses indisposition by a great cold retard the journey.

* The Pewterers, next to the Swan Tavern.

Fol. 15. 1660, Nov. 24. The same to the same. . . . Since the King declared that he would dissolve the Parliament, some of the old presbyterians assembled and were drawing up reasons why the King should only adjourn and not dissolve, there being so much business on foot that it cannot in so short time be dispatched; it was resolved first to present it to the Lord Chancellor, by him to be represented to the King, but upon better consideration I heard, not an hour since, they have let it alone. They of late build much upon the Chancellor's favour, I hope without ground though not without appearance; that party carrying all places and profits. Lenthall the last Speaker's son was committed to the Tower, for counterfeiting the Great Seal; his answer is slight, that a friend in Italy very curious in all seals desired the King's, whereupon he got the impression with such clay as tobacco pipes are made of. The news of Mexico holds yet, and of the Turks progress in Transylvania, as also the Queen's journey upon Monday seven night. The Bill for settling the Trained bands by authority of Parliament goeth on shortly, for the Pr. (Presbyterian?) finds himself outwitted and that it will strengthen the King's power instead of lessening it; but it is called on, and if the short time hinder not, will pass. The Bill for restoring the Duke of Norfolk was read in the House of Commons, and must be so again of Monday, but was opposed, particularly by Bamfield, Sir J. Northcote, Pim, and others.

Fol. 15. 1660, Nov. 29. The same to the same. . . . I am to find out something whereby I may be reimbursed the money which I lent to the King; for to have it in money as yet there is no possibility; and it is as hard a matter to find any manner of profit whereunto there are not already several pretenders as may be. I am told that Hanbury Park in Staffordshire is the King's, and not disposed, at least not so but that a great advantage may be got by it, and that it may be attempted without prejudice to any; I pray if it be within your knowledge let me understand of what nature or value it may be, or as near as can be guessed without a strict or open inquiry, for that may be dangerous; and if it seem to be near the value, to which I pretend, I will, God willing, send purposely about it. . . . Alludes to the proposed marriage of his son with a daughter of Coll. W. Eure, whose father Lord Eure was slain at Marston Moor; her sister is married to Mr. Danby.—Yesterday the Bill was brought into the House to turn the King's Declaration concerning Church government and ceremonies into an Act; it induced the greatest dispute of any yet, and with much vehemency, but was thrown out, the House being divided, 158 being for the Bill, 180 for casting it out. The Presbiter strove as for life, and which you will wonder at, some of the old commonwealth party joined with the Cavaliers. P.S. The news of the revolt of Mexico holds still, and the Queen stays here three weeks.

Fol. 16. 1660, Dec. 11. The same to the same. His son has gone abroad with his (Tho. Gower's) brother Howard (the new Earl of Carlisle,* having exchanged his former title upon the death of the late Count (Countess?) and not yet returned. . . . The Parliament, or some of them, are yet in hope of six weeks' time to sit; yet I heard the Sol. Gen. Finch speak of it, and he is a knowing person; however they spin out time, and of late do little, as if they would cut out work. But I can almost assure you that the lady, newly church'd, shall be acknowledged a Duchess shortly, whatever is said to the contrary. I must recall what I caused my son to write concerning the taking of Ludlow; another was mistaken for him, and could not persuade them the contrary. The King holds the Dutch to very hard terms, demanding not only reparation for the old business of Amboina, but also for 300,000*l.* laid to their charge by the Spanish merchants and adventurers of Guinny. I will not trouble you with the sinking of a ship worth many thousands intended for the Gold Coast in the great storm last Saturday night, &c. P.S. I am told that yesternight the King, Prince Rupert and the Duchess of Albemarle christened the child of the Duchess at Worcester House.

Fol. 17. 1661, May 21. The same to the same. . . . The House of Commons are wholly intent upon the two Bills for the Militia and the King's safety; against some clauses in the latter the two Aldermen of London made several objections, little to their commendation. The House of Peers debated till two this afternoon, whether the bill to condemn the Earl of Strafford should be nulled or repealed; it was carried for the latter by five voices, but disputed with great heat on both sides. A rumour is spread this morn that the Spaniard hath taken Olivenza, and is in a capacity to march to Lisbon, if not hindered by want of carriages for victual, seeing he can hope for none by water. Seventeen great ships and three victuallers are now in the Downs, which are believed by some must bring home our Queen, but certainly must touch at Portugal, though I suspect they go farther. The Dutch are arming apace; 23 great men-of-war ride now in the Texel, besides the fleet already abroad, and the Spaniard hath drained all his garrisons as on the French as German frontier to lodge them about Dunkirk. We have a new fleet making ready with all expedition, and volunteers raising, most say for Dunkirk, but some few that they are to garrison Tanger as soon as we receive it from the Portuguese.

Fol. 18. 1661, May 28. The same to the same.—This day I understand from a wise man that the Spaniard and Portuguese are in treaty both in Madrid and Lisbon, that many articles are agreed, and whatever issue will be, it breedeth jealousy; and some state astrologers will persuade themselves that the great tameness of the Ambassador of Spain is only to amuse us and take away the suspicion of what countermines they are working; they say his speeches and his actions agree not; that having declared he would go away as soon as he was certain the match with Portugal was concluded, and he now pretends new instructions lately received, when it is certainly impossible that they could come out of Spain hither since the King's public declaration. Out of this bulrush they pick nuts indeed, some which I must leave to your imagination. The news holds that the Dutch have made peace with Portugal and leave their own West India Company to shift for themselves, and offer to make our King umpire of all differences. The fleet is now all in the Downs save four ships, and is expected they set sail for the Mediterranean within eight days, but still it holds that they touch not in Portugal as they go, whatever they do in their return. Three days hence will produce much news.

Fol. 19. 1669, Oct. 8. Thomas Gower to (his son) William Leveson Gower at Stitnam.—After writing about business he sends "his service to my Lady Jane; "I doubt not she hath ere this received her letter in blank verse, but she is to expect another from Sir R. Howard unless his muse be out of humour, because my Lady Bathe won his money at l'hombre last night; but if my lady have a rime from her uncle Pridesaux, she will easily believe that the Burgesses in Parliament drink rather water than wine, if the poetry be rightly considered; but whether all prove rhytme or verse, they are, together with myself, who will venture no higher than prose, her very humble servants."

n. d. The same to the same at Stitnam.—I do not say, as Sir Henry Blount did, that I am glad to hear it was reported I was dead, but give God thanks that I am in good health. . . . Yesterday Sir Job Charlton and myself were to dine with my Lord Bath in order to your affairs, but the Danish Ambassador came thither, so we quit the field as likely to be too hot for men of business. Sir P. Munokton is sheriff, T. Fairfax under-sheriff, but he will not hear of W. Hayes as too much friend to Mr. Peables. The Lords have rejected the Bill of Judicature; the House of Commons have voted a Bill against Conventicles, and been this day hard upon Sir G. Carteret, so I believe we shall shortly be despatched.

Fol. 25. n. y. Feb. 23, Stitnam.—The same to the same. . . Sir William Wentworth prosecutes his pretences, claims the performance of the promises and engagements made when he desisted the last time to give way to Sir W. Frankland. My Lord of Darby was then engaged for him, and 'tis believed, will not break his word; the burrough holders acknowledge the contract made with him at the last election, and in order to the next, he hath given them two treatments; for they were begun to solicit before Sir Thos. Ingram died, and should he surcease, there is another dangerous competitor who appeared the last time, Mr. Robt. Wharton, who is backed by the endeavours of most of the neighbouring gentlemen. Mr. Talbotts, Menhills, and Lockwood have votes, are his kinsmen, yet in regard of former promise, the Menhills are for Sir Wm. Wentworth, but after him for Wharton above any, and the others solicit and treat the burrough men in Wharton's behalf. Sir John Key and Sir Jeremy Smithson are pretenders, but to little purpose, though the latter say he will spend 1,000*l.* and hath promised bribes to particulars. I opened the enclosed from Sir W. Frankland, and whatever neutrality he pretends, he with Mr. Frankland were soliciting for Sir Wm. Wentworth. "The burrough holders take any man's treat, and while they are treated with cups will say "much but perform little." Says that without Lord Darby's interest he, Gower, is not likely to get on.—Lord Darby has already given Cowgates to several upon condition they vote for Sir W. Wentworth, &c. &c.

Fol. 23. n. d. Thos. Gower to Mr. John Langley. (The corner of the letter where the date might have been is torn of.)—Since the game is likely to be played here, if it grow desperate, I shall, God willing, timely advertise Sir Richard Leveson, that he may provide for the safety of his stake, whatever becomes of his servants here. After His Majesty's arrival, we were in a calm, 'till the unfortunate voyage to Hull raised this horrid storm, which hath ever since dangerously tossed us, and the worse because we have fallen asunder among ourselves, though as yet, God be thanked, we have only made paper wars. All which hath passed, printed or written, you shall receive entire; in the meantime rest content with this short account. His Majesty summoned us this day; his propositions were that treason was so countenanced that he feared danger, and therefore desired our advice and concurrence for a guard; we have chosen a committee to frame an answer, who cannot agree upon it; some desiring to refer it to the Parliament, others to offer freely. The freeholders being not called with the gentry, have delivered a protestation that nothing done without their consents shall bind them. Three hours ago His Majesty hath declared that he is resolved to raise a regiment of foot of the trained bands for his guard; the horse he desires to consider of; which hath caused above 1,000 of the gentry and freeholders to join in a petition wholly to decline any guard, but I have yet stayed the delivery in hope of concurrence, and I see some hopes of drawing things to a better way, for this must if followed on, produce such a breach as will hardly be repaired, and if we can devise how to satisfy the King and not do contrary to the present state and swing of affairs, you will say 'tis not ill handled. I hope my next . . . bring you better news, in the meantime know we desire to obey the King . . . but not to sunder them but for the present we think him too low . . . have a bad game to play, all my aim is to discharge my oath, my duty . . . peace of this country if possible.

Fol. 24. n. y. 30 June. The same to the same.—Here is little news which the Diurnals will not give you an account of; that of Turkey is hoped will prove only a false alarm; but it is but hoped, for there are no letters contradict it; only one from Marseilles saith that all the English are clapt up and their goods seized, and that is the best they yet look for. The French are before Landrecy, and the Archduke preparing to relieve it; to which purpose the Emperor hath sent 12,000 men. The Swedes great army gives ombrage to friend and foe, and look a squint upon Holland and Poland. The commitment continues still, but for aught I can yet learn our good friend hath no manner of prejudice upon him. C. Backhouse is yet here, and those gentlemen which were said to be sent to the Barbadoes are not gone, and some of them in the Tower yet. I saw this day a manifesto of the Duke of Savoy justifying his act against the Valdenses, &c.

Fols. 26 and 27. 1670, Feb. 13, and 1671, March 26, Whitehall.—Two letters from the Earl of Bathe to Sir Thomas Gower on family matters.

Letters of Jane, Countess of Bathe, daughter to Sir Peter Wyche, wife of John Earl of Bathe. Also letters of Lady Jane Leveson, wife to Sir William Leveson Gower; and letters of Sir W. L. Gower; and letters of Lady Katharine, widow of Sir Richard Leveson, K.B.

Fol. 30. 1690, Jan. 15, London.—Sir W. Leveson Gower to Mr. Linfield (evidently his son's tutor).—

. . . My Lord of Leicester seems to be the wisest man of his country, if not of the age he lives in; he is civil to all the men of wit or soul who visit him, without taking notice of what opinion or party they are of, and leaves the stage free to those who have a mind to be actors.

Fol. 31. 1672, July —, and Nov. 18, Trentham.—Lady Katharine Leveson to her nephew Mr. William Leveson, the last is directed to him at the Earl of Bathe's lodgings at Whitehall.

Fol. 32. 1672, Sept. 8, Whitehall.—A true copy of the Right Hon. the Earl of Arlington's letter to Madam Danby.—The burgesship of Malton in Yorkshire, being vacant by the death of Sir Thomas Gower, he asks her to favour Mr. Leveson Gower with her credit in the election.

Fol. 33. 1672, Sept. 29. Madam Danby* to Lord Arlington.—Her tenants at Malton are ready to comply with her desire for the election of her cousin Leveson to the burgesship of Malton. If His Majesty's commands together with her own inclination to serve her cousin had not prompted her to assist him, his (Arlington's) desires would have been sufficient.

Fol. 33. 1672, Sept. 21. Madam Danby* to W. Leveson Gower. Advising him how to proceed in the above matter.

Fol. 34. 1670. Nov. 12, York. Phil. Monckton to William Leveson Gower at Stitenham. The writ for the election of a burgess for Scarborough will be there upon Monday, the election being on Wednesday. Asks for Leveson's company on Tuesday; he will meet him at Seamore where he will meet Sir Thomas Slingsby and others.

At the back of the letter are four verses of five lines beginning That I Aurelia do adore, ending, To attend her leisure.

Fol. 35. 1671, Aug. 13. Ed. Gower to William Leveson Gower.

Fol. 36. 1672, Oct. 16. Tho. Fairfax to W. Leveson Gower.—The King being at New Market the business cannot be prosecuted till his return. (About getting a friend an office.)

Fol. 36. n. y., March 3. The same to the same.

Fol. 37. 1674, Feb. 11, Stitnam. Plaxton to W. Leveson Gower.—He has been to Malton to get their and their adversaries polls reviewed—he and his friends are confident of success. Mentions those who are willing to come to town and gives other particulars relating to affairs at Malton.

Fol. 38. 1688, May 5, London.—(Lord) Granville to Sir William Leveson.—As for the ceremonial part of our journey, the compliments which were made my Lord wherever he past, and the manner of his being received by the gentry of the two counties, without doubt you know . . . he gave great satisfaction to the country, so by the answers he has brought he has likewise pleased the Court, His Majesty having declared himself well satisfied with what he has done. The answers of the Roman Catholics were all positive to the questions; the dissenters were divided; some were positive, others doubtful, desiring that the questions might be debated by a free parliament, and in case a reasonable expedient or equivalent could be found, they were ready to serve His Majesty in all things, which was also the unanimous answer of those of the Church of England. These answers being delivered with great submission and duty, the King has been pleased to take them in good part . . . The town is as empty of news as the Court; we have had a new play called The Fall of Darius (written by Crown), by which the poet, though he could get no fame, yet had a most extraordinary third day by reason of the King's presence at it; the first day of its acting Mrs. Bower was taken so violently ill in the midst of her part that she was forced to be carried off, and instead of dying in jest was in danger of doing it in earnest. Mrs. Cook is dead and Mrs. Boute . . . is again come upon the stage, where she appears with great applause. We are promised this week another new play of Shadwell's, called the Alsatia Bully, which is very much commended by those who have had the private perusal of it. Besides plays the town is fruitful in scandal; I have enclosed you a sample of that which some commend.—Mentions the high esteem in which Lady Wyndham is held in Somersetshire.

At the back of the letter is a poem, called "The New Litany," very much worn in places, evidently being the enclosure to which he alludes.

Fol. 39. 1688, Aug. 25, London. A news letter directed to W. Leveson Gower, at Trentham.—(There is a note signed B. B., and dated Stone, Aug. 27, on the cover.—This last night about 12 a clock came an express that went for Chester, with orders speedily to march the regiment that is there to Hull.)

The Marquis de Abbeville, that had leave to come from Holland is dispatched thither again with all expedition. An extraordinary council was held last night at Windsor, where I am told the calling of a Parliament was resolved on. The Commissioners of the Navy are gone down to Chatham and Portsmouth to hasten the fitting out 10 men of war with all expedition; they will be three and four rate frigates, and those of five and six rates that are now out will be turned into fire ships. The preparations of the Hollanders alarm us very much, but His Majesty has commanded such care to be taken that we shall be in such a condition as not to fear any insult from them. (Gives news from Brussels, Vienna, and an account of the battle of Belgrade.)—Yesterday Sir John Iles, one of the aldermen of this city, kissed the King's hand in order to be Lord Mayor for the year ensuing. Mr. Timothy Hall, pursuant to His Majesty's congé d'élire, directed to the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, was chosen Bishop of Oxford the last week, and a return made thereof, but there was no Mandamus to admit him a Doctor.

Fol. 40. 1688, Dec. 4, London.—A news letter to the same. A trumpeter having been sent to the Prince of Orange for passport for the Commissioners that are appointed to treat with him not being returned, they went from hence on Sunday, and lay that night at Windsor, yesterday at Reading, the head quarters of the King's army, where they will stay to expect the return of the trumpeter. There are but three Commissioners sent, viz., the Lords Halifax, Nottingham, and Godolphin. The Lord Dartmouth having received a letter that His Majesty had resolved to call a free Parliament, he immediately called a council of war, who have sent an address of thanks to His Majesty, signed by himself and all the captains of the fleet that were present, the substance of which was that they did believe the only way to preserve his person and government to him was by a free Parliament. With this address the Lord Berkeley and Captain Layton were ordered to attend His Majesty, which yesterday they did, and my Lord Berkley read it to His Majesty. Yesterday we received an account that the Princess of Denmark lay on Wednesday last at the Earl of Northampton's, went thence for Leicester, and was expected at Nottingham last Saturday, where a house is taken for her; several Lords and gentlemen went thence to meet her, the bells were ringing and other demonstrations of joy were preparing against her coming, and during her stay there she will be entertained by the Earl of Devonshire. The Princess of Orange and Denmark stayed at the Earl of Bristol's till Friday last, and went thence to Bruton, the Lord Fitzharding's house, and designed for Bristol, which city was delivered to the Earl of Shrewsbury, who is made governor of it by the Prince of Orange; he with 200 horse and 500 foot entered the place the 1st instant, and at the Tolsey was met by the Mayor and Aldermen, to whom he delivered a letter from the Prince, in which he assured them that he was come for the defence of the Protestant religion, their liberties, and properties; and therefore having great confidence in their fidelity he had sent no more soldiers, being unwilling to burthen them; while this letter and the Prince's declaration were reading, the soldiers were quartered, the people generally receiving them very well. Newcastle, Hull, Barwick, and Carlisle still hold loyal to His Majesty notwithstanding all reports to the contrary. The rabble have burnt a Popish school and chapel in Lincoln, which endangered sundry houses. On the 29th past, Admiral Herbert, with about 200 sail came into Plymouth Roads, having sailed from Torbay the Wednesday before, where they left 20 sail. All the report of the French landing in the west rose only from a French man-of-war putting into Falmouth, the one to ship a leak, and the other went off to sea without landing one man. The Earl of Bath summoned all the deputy-lieutenants, justices of the peace, and other gentlemen of the county to meet him at Saltsah, in Cornwall, the 1st instant, which they did; to whom he read the Prince of Orange's Declaration, and then the greatest part of them signed an Association in defence of the Protestant religion:

Fol. 41. 1688, Oct. 20, London.—A news letter for the same.—Precepts being issued out by the Lord Mayor of this city requiring the common council men to meet at the Guildhall, yesterday the greatest part of those that were living came about four in the afternoon, and being sat, Deputy Langhorne (one of them) desired to hear the instruments read that restored their Charter; which being done, he observed there was a clause in them that ordered the choice of common council men to fill up the places of those that were dead; and observing to my Lord that a common council was a temporary office, and only chosen for a year, he believed their year being long since expired they could not proceed to act anything. My Lord Mayor then asked the question of (P if) what Deputy Langhorne said was the sense of them all; they unanimously declared it was; upon which his Lordship adjourned, and desired them to consider of it; assuring them that he would send lawful summons to every Wardmote according to the custom of the city. Yesterday Sir Humphrey Edwine and Sir Thomas Lane were chosen Aldermen at wardmote, and returned to the court of aldermen, who swore them in the afternoon. This day the Lord Cornbury's regiment of dragoons marched through this city into Surrey.—Spanish news.—200 hackney coaches are added to the 400.—My Lord Dartmouth is now in the Gun Fleet Road, and will sail to-morrow for the Downs, where a Council of war will be held for opposing the enemies' landing. The Bishops being well assured of His Majesty's gracious intentions and favour for the Church of England, are gone into their respective dioceses to dispose the mind of the people to the defence of their King and country.

Fol. 42. 1689, Sept. 18, Chester. A news letter directed to Leveson Gower at Trentham. (On the back is a short letter from George Mainwaring saying that he sends all the news, and in a P.S. this day the Commissary by order from the Duke is going with all the wagons to Hylake to be shipped.)—Yesterday came to this city Mr. Palmer, Chaplain to Sir Hen. Ingoldsby's regiment; he left Carrick-Fergus on Friday last, and says that the Irish left the garrison of Charlemont as soon as they perceived the English approach without striking a stroke, and retreated to the Newry; being followed by the Duke's forces, they set fire to the town which consumed all but four houses before the Duke's could reach the place, and then they fled to Dundalk, which they left without doing any harm, being closely pursued by our army which followed them till within 8 miles of Tradarath near the Lurgan Race, where the Duke is encamped waiting for the big cannon and baggage which were shipped off at Carrick-fergus a Fryday last, and were expected there a Saturday; and from thence the Duke sent a message to King James that he had numbers of the Irish in his power every where about him, and if he see any more such doing as burning of towns, and if any house in Dublin were burnt or any Protestant there hurt, he would not spare man, woman, or child; there was also a messenger sent from King James directed for Count Schombergh, who was told that they formerly knew such a one in France, but that their General was a Duke and Peer of England, and if any message came for him it would be received. The Duke of Berwick is in Tradarath, and it's supposed that there are about 20,000 Irish in the town, and entrenched about it, where, if the Duke find any difficulty to beat them, he will proceed to Dublin another way; that upon the Duke's message to King James, most of the Protestants that were in restraint are at large, and allowed more freedom than of late they had; this minister assures us Mr. Harbord, with the money that went lately from hence, arrived at Carrickfergus a little before the great storm, as also did the Lord Huit's regiment and the rest that went with them.

Letters of Mr. Edward Gower.

Fol. 43. 1658, June 29, London: Ed. Gower to Sir Richard Leveson. . . . As for news there is little or none; that at Court was that the Swede was fallen with his whole army into East Frisland, but since, this is contradicted. The Hollanders have been put to a great fright; for the States General issuing forth some bills for the levying of some moneys which they had occasion for, caused little less than a mutiny upon the people, who denied to pay any, but since the business is taken up. They say the King of Hungary is certainly elected Emperor. Mr. Terrick having led the way, there is since him, some say six, some eight French merchants broke. Mr. Terrick oweth in all but 16,000*l.*; he offereth his creditors 7*s.* 6*d.* at pound; this is all he will give.

Fol. 48. 1660, April 15, Stitnam. The same to the same. . . . The militia for this county is settled in three regiments of foot, 1,000 in each regiment, and three of horse, 400 in each regiment, all in the hands of very honest men. Most of our burghesses are chosen, and though all our endeavours were used to the contrary, yet Luke Robison is returned Burgess for Scarborough, upon Vice-Admiral Lawson's account; but a very wise man saith we shall not have above three scabbed sheep in our flock.

Fol. 48. 1660, April 21, York. The same to the same. —Upon Thursday the 16th instant, there came into York 32 soldiers of Capt. Peverall's troop; Smithson's Collonel to the regiment, Lilburne formerly Coll.; these dispersed themselves by two and three together to the Inns, where they were observed to demand quarter either without billet or officer to quarter them, which say some was the cause why Coll. Bethell suspected them; hearing also they gave out some high words, he (as Governor of the town) sent out some to enquire of some of them from whence they were, who was their officer, what their business, with such like questions, but could receive no good answer from any of them; which was the cause that he and one Major Walters coming privately to their inns, found their horses bridled up to the rack, their saddles on; about 12 of the clock in the night they went up into their chambers, where they found them asleep upon their beds in their clothes, their boots on, with their swords drawn, their pistols loaden, and some of them cocked; as soon as they had seized on them, and had them under examination, they confessed they had a design upon the city, and there were 80 townsmen that were to have been ready upon the same confederacy, and also that the foot then in the town, which were four companies, had some of them promised to assist them. This gave no small alarm to the city, who the next day agreed with those foot soldiers to give them crowns a piece to march out of the town, which they did accordingly; the town hath ever since kept very strong guards, 80 foot of townsmen at every gate, and they have four troops of Bethell's horse in the town. The townsmen that were discovered were all Lambertionians and sectaries. Upon Thursday the 19th there came another troop of the same regiment to the gates, and would have had entrance, pretending their business was to quarter in the town; but the guards kept them out; on Friday two more of the same, but were likewise refused. There are 1,000 citizens who have listed themselves under my Lord Mayor, who are resolved to keep very strong guards till they can get their militia raised, which is not yet done by reason of some false brethren, but will be done very shortly. The soldiers are very high, but 'tis thought all is but wind. Coll. Salmon was seen in this country on Thursday last, and a party of horse was employed to snap him, but 'tis not yet done. Lambert we hear nothing of as yet.

Fol. 49. 1660, May 4, Stitnam. The same to the same—and one to Mr. John Langley of the same date. Complimentary.

Fol. 50. 1660, May 22. The same to Sir R. Leveson. —I make no doubt you have intelligence by this post that the King is landed, of which as yet there is no certainty; only I was informed by one that came this day to London and from him on Sunday that he intended to move on Monday, and that his goods and servants were embarked; to-morrow I march with the General to meet him, where will be an incredible show of nobility and gentry. . . . Your kinsman Sir Henry Mildmay was taken making his escape beyond seas. . . . Desborough is brought into Whitehall, prisoner, and Hewson is taken.

Fol. 52. 1660, May 29, London.—The same to the same.—I take the boldness to present you with this happy news of His Majestie's safe arrival at Whitehall, where, as also upon the road, he was received with the greatest acclamations of joy that possibly could be, such as it is impossible for me to express; he landed upon Friday at Dover, and went that night to Canterbury, where he staid till Monday. The volunteers that rid in the General's life-guard, which were near 120, were allotted to be His Majesty's life-guard, which they performed, though they were every night upon duty, with a great deal of willingness: amongst the crowd

I was one, and do not certainly know but that I may be upon the guard this night. . . . I see my Lord General Monk created Knight of the Garter; there were made Knights Bachelors, Philip Howard Captain of the life-guard, Coll. Rostler, Massey, Alderman Robinson, &c.; these were all made at Canterbury.

Fol. 53, 1660, July 12. The same to the same.—The discourse of the town is of the petition from Somersetshire and Dorset for establishing of the Church in the same splendor and ceremonies that she was in in King James' and Queen Elizabeth's times; for the votes of the House, the weekly pamphlets will furnish you only thus much; of Luke Robinson, he is turned out of the House, where, before his exit, he made a recanting speech at the bar of very near half an hour long, all bathed in tears; he served for Scarborough, where my father is now engaging his friends to choose him Burgess.

Fol. 53, 1660, Aug. 2. The same to the same.—Yesterday the Lords excepted these four following out of the Bill of Indemnity, viz., Sir Arthur Haslerigge, Sir Henry Vane, Mr. Thomas Scott, and Coll. Axtell. The Bill for Pole-money was returned this day to the Commons from the Lords, with some amendments which the Commons have approved of, and it will be shortly passed. The Court is modelling itself as it was in the late King's time, that is, that persons are to come near the King's person as they are in quality: a Privy councillor into a lobby near the bedchamber, a lord's son into the antechamber, others (except public officers), though persons of quality, no nearer than the Presence chamber or gallery, persons that do effectually wait for business into the Privy chamber.

Fol. 54, 1660, Aug. 9, Westminster.—The same to the same.—Yesterday the Commons made an order that no Bishop, Dean, nor Chapter, Prebend, or other clergyman should let any leases without first acquainting a committee, by them appointed for that purpose, with it; the Lords have made an order that those purchasers who were either abjurors, rumpers, decimators, or major-generals, shall not have any the least consideration allowed them, but they must return their unjust got lands; upon several petitions to the Lords concerning having those left to the law who sate as Judges in the pretended High Courts of Justice they are graciously pleased to give unto the several petitioners leave to pick out of every several high court of those that sate as judges, one such as they themselves shall think fit to be excepted out of the Bill of Indemnity, and to be left over to the law, which will undoubtedly make them examples according to their deserts; amongst the number I can hear as yet of no more that are pitched upon, saving these four following:—My Lord Capell's friends have pitcht upon Major Edward Wareing, Shropshire Waring, Lord Derby, Major Croxton, Lord Holland, Capt. Blackwell, who, I hear, is already dead, Duke Hambleton, Capt. Stone. The Prince de Linnye is coming over to desire the Princess Henrietta Maria for the Emperor; but we have a report here that the French will not part with her, but intend her for le Duc d'Anjou; she is worth striving for, being esteemed, for beauty and parts, the Phoenix of this age.

Fol. 54. 1660, Aug. 11. The same to the same.—This day the Lords returned the Bill of Indemnity to the Commons with several amendments and exceptions, as, for example, to have all suffer in general that sat as judges upon the late King, one out of every High Court of justice that sat, and such like, which the Commons will not as yet at all consent to, and say those whom they have already excepted they will confirm, but none more; their reason is this, many that were the King's judges and others have rendered themselves prisoners upon their proclamation; their words being passed, they cannot recall it; if they do, it will look like a trepanne to promise them their lives upon surrendering themselves within such a time, which they laying hold of, appear; and after this they to go back with their promise and declaration. This makes a great noise, and it is thought the Act will not pass yet in haste.

Fol. 50. 1665, Aug. 14, Westminster.—The same to the same.—Sir Richard having recommended him to learn Italian, and having given him an Italian dictionary and some other books, he, to show him his advance, has enclosed a translation of some Italian verses which he has made in his leisure hours. 16 lines. The Italian is on one side, and the English opposite. Begin, to a settlement of the Church here very high; the singing men and organs are preparing. Prayers, I mean Common Prayer, are settled in the Minster, as formerly, twice a day.

Fol. 58. 1660; Nov. 3rd. From the Blue Lion, an apothecary's shop over against Salisbury house, in the Strand. The same to the same.—The Queen came yesternight late by water to Whitehall; with her the King, Princess Royal, Princess Henrietta Maria, Duke of York, Princess Rupert and Edward, a most brave and full Court, all lodged at Whitehall. This morn Prince Rupert, who had a patent from the late King to be Lord President of Wales and the Marches thereof, delivered it up to His Majesty, with this compliment, that he would hold nothing by any greater right than his favour. There must be no standing regiments of horse nor foot in England; all are to be reduced to 40 companies of foot for garrison, of whom there must be no colonels, only captains; all Governors of towns are to be reduced to the same model, though he have several companies in the garrison, he is but captain and receives no more pay, nor any thing for being Governor. 'Tis said also, and by persons near business, that there must be, say some 6, others but 4, troops of horse in the nature of guards; the King's to be commanded by the Lord Gerard; the Duke of York's, whose officer is not yet declared; Prince Rupert's commanded by Colonel Thomas Daniell; the Duke of Albemarle's by Sir Phillip Howard; the other two not fully resolved upon are to be commanded by the Dukes of Buckingham and Richmond; none to be commanded by a person under the quality of a Duke. As concerning the Chancellor's daughter rumours are uncertain as yet; no result of any thing, only 'tis observed the Duke never yet saw her since she was brought to bed, &c.

Fol. 58. 1660, Nov. 10. The same to the same.—Yesterday morn the House was taken up with a squabble betwixt Sir John Owen, a Parliament man, and Sir John Robison, Lieutenant of the Tower; the business is too long to relate, only thus much I shall make bold to tell you; Sir John Owen, coming into the Tower with his two sons, went to see a kinswoman of his, the warder's wife, that keeps Hasslerigge; upon his return the warder at the gate stopped him, and though Sir John Owen told him who he was, he would not let him go; there he kept till twelve o'clock at night, at which hour the Lieutenant coming in, after some words in passion interchanged, the Lieutenant put him into a room with his sons, and put a padlock upon the door; the next morn let him go without saying anything to him; this was brought into the House, as an abuse to a Parliament man, and caused many disputes; at last it was referred to the Committee of privileges to consider of; this, though not worth your patience in hearing, yet was thought worth the canvassing in the House. There is a new Bill a drawing up against Sir Henry Vane; upon Monday next my Lord Chancellor must be created Duke, the title I know not. My Lord Howard and his lady are reconciled and together again. The Earl of Carlisle and his lady * are both dead, and my Lord Howard is to have the title and to be Earl of Carlisle. This day was a Bill brought into the House to provide against women that separate themselves from their husbands, and after claim alimony, and take up things upon their score. It was, after much debate whether it should be thrown out of the House or no, at last referred to a committee. All is well at Court; the only talk there is of the match betwixt our Princess Henrietta Maria and the Duke of Anjou. This day the House of Peers went generally to kiss the Queen's hands in the Banqueting house.—P. S. In the afternoon yesterday the House of Commons went to give the King thanks for his Declaration concerning ecclesiastical affairs, and are about to draw a Bill according to the heads of the Declaration. 'Tis said Sir Hen. Martin, Tichburne, August: Garland, and Hewlet will all four be hanged.

Fol. 59, 1660, Nov. 15. The same to the same.—Yesterday the French Ambassador, le Duc de Soissons, after having had the King's consent to the marriage between the Princess Henriette Marie and the Duke d'Anjou, went away well pleased. The Dutch Ambassador hath had his audience, and hath presented the King very richly with a bed and some gold plate, with other rich moveables; this day the Dutch Ambassador was to kiss the Queen's hand, with four or five coaches and at least 50 or 60 lacqueys, all in mourning. Monday come three weeks, 'tis thought the Queen and the Princess Henriette Marie return for France. This morn the King went to Hampton Court; this day the Lord Chancellor was attended and complimented by the Vice-Chancellor of Oxford, and by many of the Masters and Fellows of the College in their red hoods and square caps. The Parliament have brought in many Bills, as for highways, for settling the rates, for the trained bands, for provision against alimony for wives that do without good cause separate themselves from their husbands, as also a Bill of attainder and confiscation of the estates of those that were executed, of those that are condemned, and of Ireton, Cromwell, Hewson, &c. Lisle is for certain got into a French monastery; but they have passed but one Bill which is for 70,000*l.* a month during six months to begin in January next. . .

Fol. 59, 1660, Nov. 17, London.—The same to the same. . . . The Commons, or some of them, were very fierce in voting down the Lord Lieutenants, and consequently the deputies, but upon second thoughts laid it aside; this happened upon a misdemeanor committed against a parson by the Earl of Derby, or some of his men, the particulars of which I cannot learn; only thus much I hear, there was a letter of complaint read against him in the House. The news upon the Exchange is that the Great Turk hath given them a great blow in Transylvania, and advanceth so that they begin to be fearful of him in Germany.

Fol. 60, 1660, Nov. 20, London.—The same to the same.—This morning the Parliament brought in an impeachment against Mr. Phillips, who writ the scandalous pamphlet The old Parliament Revived; and it is sent up to the House of Lords. Yesternight at the Fleece Tavern, being much company and very merry with kettledrums and trumpets, there happened this disorder or rather mischance:—The gentlemen were discoursing of the play which they then came from, by name the Unfortunate Lover; * at the latter end of the play there was a duel upon the stage; which they, discanting upon, drew their swords in jest to shew wherein they failed; in their folly Sir Robert Gaskholl received a chance thrust in the hand, which, with the ebullition of blood, caused a pass, in which Sir Robert Gaskholl his heels flew up, and the Scotchman unfortunately followed home his thrust, and ran him, sitting in his chair, through the body; within half an hour he died, and the Scotchman is taken. Yesternight the King, Queen, Princess, &c. supped at the Duke d'Albemarle's, where they had the Silent Woman† acted in the Cock-pit, where on Sunday he had a sermon. This morn the Countess of Carlisle was fetched from Salisbury House in great state, where she lay in state to be buried in the country.

Fol. 66. n. d. [1660, Nov. 22?] The same to the same.—This day the King hath declared to both houses that this Parliament shall be dissolved the 20th of the next month, and that he will immediately call another. The Parliament have given 100,000*l.* for ever, to be raised out of the Excise in lieu of the Court of Wards. The Irish debates were ended last night in prejudice of the Irish expectations, the sale of lands confirmed to the adventurers, yet so that no grant for service in, or arrear transmitted out of England be admitted, but only for the benefit of such as have served in Ireland, and with some consideration of the ancient proprietors. This was done at the Council, and the Duke of Albemarle, if he continue in that mind, hath declared that he will go for Ireland. This day brought news that the Vice Roy of Mexico hath revolted from the King of Spain, and is followed by all that great empire. This Lord Mayor of London is troublesome to the clergy of the old stamp; the Bishop sent to him that the church might be fitted decently, and he would provide ministers to preach there; his answer was that he would make no provision for any of the singing men, and when he saw the names of those he intended for preachers, if he liked them, they should have admittance. In the mean time the city do not pay the 100,000*l.* they promised to lend. This day the House of Peers voted the restoring of the Duke of Norfolk; 'tis observed many of the Parliament men are not pleased at this their so quick dissolution as they term it, not knowing whether they may be chosen again or no.

Fol. 60, 1660, Nov. 24, London. The same to the same.—Here was a rumour that some of the Parliament men were about to draw up a remonstrance to let the King know that there were several undeniable reasons for their longer session, and that it was impossible for them to quit their hands of so much business as they have undertaken in so short a time; but of this I hear no certainty. [This] morn the message from the House of Lords was read, which was to desire the consent of the Commons to pass a bill for the restoring of the

SUTHER-
LAND.

Duke of Norfolk; the bill was read in the House and is appointed to be read again upon Tuesday next, and 'tis said it will pass without much opposition. Sir John Lenthall is sent to the Tower for counterfeiting the Great Seal of England. His excuse is upon his examination that he hath a friend in Italy that is very curious in seals and that it was for him that he took the print; but this will not save him, for it was answered he might have had an old seal from off some patent; he hath taken out his pardon under the Great Seal, and by this means he had the opportunity of doing it. . . . My cousin Doddington's office he never enjoyed since, as I am informed, Thurlow had his exit; but I am sure he never had it since the King came in; it is Sir Thomas Fanshawe [his] office, who hath had a patent for it above 20 years, neither had John Doddington any consideration for his money, nor ever received above 6 months profit. The Queen is still resolved for her journey on Monday come a sun'night with the Princess Henrietta and Prince Edward; the Princess Royal stays all winter.

Fol. 61, 1660, Dec. 4, London. The same to the same.—It is confidently reported that the Parliament hath forty days longer given them to sit; this though hotly talked is not at all credited. On Saturday night at midnight was Major-General Ludlow taken at one Michael Oldsworth his house, Secretary to the late Earl of Pembroke; Ludlow married this Oldsworth's sister; he got out of the house, but was taken endeavouring to make his escape. The Parliament of Scotland is to sit within 10 days, &c. P.S. The bill for the Duke of Norfolk's restoring is passed the Commons yesterday.

Fol. 57, 1660, Dec. 8. The same to the same.—News we have little, nothing of certain; many things contradict, as that of Ludlow's being taken and the German Duke's being here. My Lord of Argyle and Judge Swinton, one of Cromwell's judges for Scotland, are both sent to Scotland, there to receive their condign rewards. We hear the Parliament of Scotland have voted down the League and Covenant, and some say they have voted it treasonable. The Parliament here must sit no longer then the 20th instant, much against their wills. They have finished the Bill of attainder and given the King their estates with this proviso in the Act, that he may lease them out but cannot sell them. I hear by the bye that most of them are begged of the King before he hath got them. I hear nothing of the Bill for the train band nor for alimony for women. P.S. I hear all the prisoners that stand condemned and are in the Tower are to suffer.

Fol. 61, 1660, Dec. 13, London. The same to the same.—We have here some rumours of a plot, which we hope is discovered, of which I can hear no particulars, only that one Major White is taken, who is said to have in his pocket a list of 6000 men that have listed themselves in Ireland in order to oppose the present power; this White was a major in Ireland all these wars, and hath been since this late happy return in Flanders, where as it is said, he once saved Scott from being taken; he is now fast in the Gate House, and warrants issued forth for the apprehending of several other persons. We hear from Ireland that there are six troop of horse there that have refused to disband. Scotland proves honest above expectation; the Parliament there vote down Presbytery and the Government. 'Tis said this plot is as general in England as Ireland; 'tis hoped now the worst is past, and that the danger is over. The House are resolved to sit forenoons and after during this session; there were several complaints brought this day into the House against Lords lieutenants and their deputies, and the Act for settling the trained band was this day read, but referred, not passed. The Coronation must be the beginning of February; the Lords are stinted in the number of their footmen; a Lord is to have 6, a Viscount 8, an Earl 10, a Marquis 12, a Duke 14, the Duke of York 16, the King 20; this is new but certain every one must be known by their distinction as they pass.

Fol. 62, 1660, Dec. 15, London. The same to the same.—The rumour of this late conspiracy is still hot in the town, though many are of an opinion it signifies nothing. Major White is taken and clapt up in the Gate House, and as I hear was this day to be examined; there is but one witness against him, who is a porter. I hear there are four more seized of and sent to the Tower, and that Lambert should have been tampering with some in the Tower to have endeavoured an escape; this is but news. The Queen began her Christmas here this day, and will for France upon the 25th instant; the Parliament will dissolve upon the 20th; the Bill for the trained band was read twice; what is done in it I cannot hear. The Bill for settling the half of the excise upon the King as hereditary is passed, as also the Bill for 100,000*l.* a year in lieu of the Court of Wards. We hear from Yorkshire of very tempestuous winds, many houses and churches overthrown, and that Argyle is cast away going for Scotland, and with him Swinton.

Sir John Hotham hath lost all the roof of his house and his chimneys in this storm.

Fol. 62, 1660, Dec. 20, London. The same to the same.—The Parliament do not dissolve till Monday night, the Lords will not agree to the Bill for taking away the Court of Wards, which the Commons are troubled at, and say if the Court of Wards must not be taken away they will not give their consents to the passing the Bills for settling half of the excise upon the King and his successors. The plot is not yet known so well as that I can have any perfect relation of it at any hand more than that there should have been such and such things done as I mentioned in my last; neither day nor hour appointed for the effecting of it. All agree some mischief was intended by reason that the heads of the Phanatics from all parts of England were flocked thither; for my part, if I may be so bold as to spend my judgment, I think something was intended, but that it was crushed in its embryo. The Princess Royal is this day fallen ill of the small-pox, which hath occasioned, as I hear, the Queen and Princess to put off their intended journey. The Princess Henrietta is this night removed to Newport House; to-morrow she goeth to St. James's for fear of the small-pox. The Duke of York takes very well to his Duchess, carryeth her to plays, and several persons of quality go to kiss her hand; she is as yet at Exeter House with the Chancellor. Col. Desborough was taken upon Wednesday morning; after he was examined he was sent to the Gate House. Major-General Massey hath 3,000*l.* given him by the Parliament, and Captain Titus 2,000*l.* Mrs. Jane Lane, though deserving much more than both, but 1,000*l.*; 'tis observed the Presbyterians are best rewarded. Vice-Admiral Lawson (now Sir John Lawson) had letters from the King, Duke of York, Princess Royal, Princes Rupert and Edward, and from the Duke of Albemarle to the House of Commons in his behalf, intimating the good service he had done the King in being instrumental in the last happy change; but these proved not successful, for they moved the business and gave him not so much as the thanks of the House, whereas he expected a large gratuity or badge of honour.

Fol. 44, 1660, Jan. 16. The same to the same.—For news, here is none but talk of the Phanatics who have not done anything since my last. The Princess is recovered of the measles. The King of France is come to Roan (Bouen), the Duke d'Anjou to Havre de Grace to meet the Queen. I have here enclosed sent the Scotch diurnall, not that there is anything of extraordinary in it, but because it is new, and the first of this kind I have seen.

Fol. 63, 1660, Jan. 19. The same to the same.—Upon Monday at the Old Bailey were sixteen tried of these late disturbers; all were condemned, eight executed this day, whereof Veneur, who through a mistake I formerly writ you word was dead of his wounds, was one and their head; six are to be hanged to-morrow; two, who were penitents, are reprieved. I hear there came one of their cabal in his shirt to the Sessions House, and told them he was come naked and without arms to tell them he was one of those that were in arms, and that he had done execution upon the Lord's enemies, and desired he might suffer with his brethren; he was apprehended, but not that I can hear of indicted; they all pleaded undauntedly, Not guilty; they were hanged upon gibbets in several places of the city, drawn thither as traitors upon a sledge or hurdle, though indicted for murder. I cannot hear that those that are reprieved confess anything, or that they discover any more of their confederates. The King's guards, both horse and foot, are now settled; three troops of horse, the first His Majesty's, commanded by Lord Gerrard; the 2nd, the Duke of York's, commanded by Sir Charles Bartley; the 3rd, the Duke of Albemarle's commanded by Sir Phillip Howard, the same troop that was the General's life guard: each troop must consist of 140 men; they are to have 3*s.* per diem. The foot guards are to be, some say, 20; the least that are spoke of are 14 companies of foot commanded by Coll. John Russell, my Lord of Bedford's brother. The oldest captain, his name I have forgot, was formerly one [of] His Majesties major-generals; most of these companies are to be commanded by those that served the King in Flanders, these three only excepted, that I can hear of, viz. Coll. Wheeler, Coll. Tho. Daniell and Lieutenant Coll. Thomas Howard, my Lady's brother; the common soldiers too are to be those that served the King in Flanders, who are now at Dunkirk; there are 1,300 of them; I hear they are about to come over shortly. The Princess is safe recovered, and some say safe arrived with the Queen Mother in France.

Fol. 63. 1660, Jan. 24, London. The same to the same.—The news here is of the grand revolt in France; it is credibly reported the King of France came not to Roan (Rouen), where he now is, so much in compliment to our Queen as because he was jealous of some troubles in Paris occasioned by the manufacturers joining with the Prince de Condé, who hath declared the King a bastard and himself the lawful heir to the Crown; tis said this discontent was occasioned by the King's forbidding of all sorts of laces, bone or loom, to be worn. The guards are to be settled as I mentioned in my last; persons of very good quality carry colours in this guard, namely, Sir John Talbot and Sir Henry Joanes: there is besides the three troops before mentioned one regiment of horse called the Royal Regiment, commanded by the Earl of Oxford; the Earl of Darby his second brother, carrieth the colours; they are to have 3s. per diem as long as they attend in the city, 2s. 6d. when they live in the country. My father was told by Henry Howard of Arundell House, that these reports of France are but chimeras and not one word true; more, that he had this night a letter from Paris, and that it mentioned not anything of it. If I may spend my judgment, I believe the Queen's stay at Portsmouth may have occasioned this; the reason why she stays I cannot hear, but am assured at court that all is well.

Fol. 64. 1660, Jan. 26. The same to the same.—I mentioned nothing in my last of the disgarrisoning all the inland garrisons of England; and the reason was I had no assurances of it, which since I have, and particularly those of York, Shrewsbury, and Ludlow; these four following Lords were all with the King yesterday contesting for a troop in the Earl of Oxford's regiment. My Lords Mandevill, Windsor, Richard Butler, and Falkland; the King answered one of them that if he had a troop in this regiment he must not think to stay here to play at Hombre, the new game at cards now in fashion at court, but to lie and quarter abroad in the country, there to attend his service. The news of France is all false; the Princess hath been very ill again of a fever, but is now recovered, who with the Queen is yet at Portsmouth. This day the King went to Hampton Court, and its thought he will return this night. By Prince Rupert's means my cousin John Dodington hath got to be secretary to the President of Wales, my Lord the Earl of Carberry: Sir Richard Temple, as I am credibly informed, is in treaty with the Earl of St. Albans to have his half sister in marriage, &c.

Fol. 44. 1660, Feb. 14. The same to the same.—We have it credibly reported here that we shall have a Parliament by the 6th of May, but I was told it by one of the Council this day that they heard nothing of it at the Council table. We shall have the coronation undoubtedly on the 27th of April, and I hope we shall enjoy your company here at that time. This day the Portugal ambassador had his audience, and, as a courtier told me, the King modestly denied his request, which was in order to a match with our King.

Fol. 45. 1660, Feb. 16. The same to the same. . . . I hear at Court that Goffe and Whaley are taken in the Indies, how true is expected.

Fol. 45. 1660, Feb. 19. The same to the same.—We have it credibly reported here that there is like to be a breach betwixt us and the Spaniard; the occasion was this; the Spaniards were building a bridge over a channel from Bourbourg towards Dunkirk, which the Governor saw might be of inconvenience if finished, and for that cause made it be fired by some of his men, which the Spaniard took so ill that he refused to send into Dunkirk the taxes agreed on by both sides, which the Governor knowing the King's pleasure concerning it hath sent to demand, and if they refuse prepares to endeavour to make them pay. 'Tis here credibly reported amongst many, though secretly, that the King is married to the Prince de Lynnie his niece, though it is thought by men pretending to know something, there is no such person in nature; some say to the Governor of Bruges his daughter; both which are false, if himself and friends may be credited.

Fol. 46. 1660, Feb. 26, London.—The same to the same.—I hear 'tis resolved at the council table that for the conveniency of the commonalty all people are for this Lent permitted to eat flesh three days a week, fish being very scarce, and indeed not to be had. No more plays at Court after this night, and but three days the week at the play houses.

Fol. 46. 1660, March 2. The same to the same. This evening came attended through the city with twelve coaches, every coach six horses in it, an ambassador from Portugal; his quality, titles, business, if I can by any means learn, you shall hear in my next. My father is preparing to go for Yorkshire, to be, if he can, chosen a Parliament man, burgess for Malton. I could wish with all my heart he had some assurances of it, for in this ensuing Parliament he will have two particular businesses of more than ordinary concernment.—P.S. The Coronation is certainly to be April 23rd 1661.

Fol. 47. 1660, March 5. The same to the same.—The ambassador I mentioned in my last is Count Maurice de Nassau, who is come in a compliment to the King to know what shall be done with the Prince d'Orange; when the old Prince d'Orange died he left for guardians to his son the Princess his wife, Count Maurice de Nassau, and the Duke of Brandenburg; when the Princess Royal died, she prevailed with the King to supply her place, which he accepted of; the Cardinal of France is certainly dead, and 'tis said the Cardinal de Rhets [Retz] is to be Ministre d'Estat; our young Princess is to be married to the Duke d'Anjou upon Saturday next, and 'tis said the Queen is returning for England. The Duke d'Albemarle is to be Lord High Constable of England during the ceremony at the Coronation: that ended, his staff is to be broken.

Fol. 47. 1660, March 7. The same to the same.—Here are very strong endeavours to be Parliament men, especially by the Presbyters; 'tis generally believed the Bishops will be admitted into the House of Lords. The King went to Banet[ead] Downs to a horse course.

Fol. 66. 1661, April 10, Stitnam.—The same to the same.—We have been at the election at Malton, where my father had the majority of voices; but Mr. Darbye, Lord of the town, returned himself in an indenture with Sir Tho. Heblethwaites, so that it must come before a Committee of privileges. I have an answer from London that the number for Knights of the Bath are completed, and that they are to be but 70, so that I was much too late.

Fol. 67. 1661, April 30, King Street, Westminster. The same to the same. Encloses some of the best Panegyrics that are extant; the press floweth with them, but never were there so many barren ones as now, though they have so good and copious a subject. . . . All our expectations now here are who shall be our Queen; and the King hath referred it to his Council, and saith he will be guided by them in it; I hear yesterday it was debated at the Council table, and resolved for the Portugal, who will change her religion, and with whom we must have eight millions, and that the Duke of Ormond and my Lord of Inchiquin are shortly to go to Portugal to manage that affair. This morn my Lord Duke of Buckingham told me nothing was resolved of at the Council table, but put off till Thursday, but he verily believes it will be the Portugal. They talk already of raising an army to go for Portugal; and there is a proclamation to re-call all English mariners from foreign Princes service, and that they shall have employment at home. Another proclamation from the council table to forbid gold and silver lace or Flanders dentelles, more than to wear what are already bought, and some time given to put off those they have.

Fol. 68. 1661, May 2, London.—The same to the same.—I here enclosed send a paper, which on my opinion is a very great motive to make me credit the common report vogued here with the match with Portugal; to that effect this night the Duke of Ormond goeth towards Gravesend in the King's barge, and so for Portugal, together with my Lord of Inchiquin; 'tis reported here we must (I mean the King) be moderators between Spain and Portugal, and so drive on a general peace; which if it happen, he shall have the just title of peacemaker. Here is come out a list of the Parliament men elected, which because in many things it is defective, I have not sent. It is credibly reported Dr. Bates is dead, how true I know not. Yesterday the King and nobility were all at Hide Park in more then an ordinary equipage.

Fol. 69. 1661, May 2, London.—The same to the same.—I failed the last post; the truth is I was at a play at court engaged with some ladies, and got not home till after two o'clock at night. The news in the House is, that the citizens that serve for London seem dissatisfied at this vote to oblige them to receive the Sacrament; they were told if they did not observe the vote they must be made to undergo its penalty; they replied they are freely chosen to serve in Parliament, and 'tis not a vote in Parliament can thrust them out. The news is that the Spaniard have taken Puerta Porta, one of the chiefest and strongest towns in Portugal; 'tis reported also that they have made an inroad into the country as far as Braga; but the latter is stiffly contradicted. The Spanish Ambassador, who formerly had ranted that he had instructions from his master to be gone as soon as the King should declare he would match with Portugal, did this day, having audience, profess his instructions were altered, and that now he was to stay; it was thought at first to be but a rant, now it is concluded so, and he is laughed at by most for his pains. —Encloses some papers. —I hear the Parliament sits not to-morrow, but is adjourned till Monday by reason of taking the Communion on Sunday. P.S. Argile is condemned, and is to be hanged as this day. Montrose his trial I will send you, but it is too large for a letter.

Fol. 70. 1661, May 7. The same to the same.—Upon Sunday last about 3 a clock at noon the Duke of Cambridge departed this world, lamented much by his mother; he was buried by torchlight on Monday, accompanied by some of the household, none of quality that I could see; very few lights, not above 30, and those carried by the King's and Duke's footmen in their liveries; a canopy of black velvet carried over him, supported by four mourners, the Duke carried under it by six more; all in deep mourning. None goeth into mourning for him, unless it be the Chancellor. This day was spent by the King and Court at Hide Park, in viewing the city Trained bands with the auxiliaries, all commanded by my Lord Mayor as General; one regiment of horse, not at all liked, commanded by Sir Nicholas Crispe, where my cousin, John Bromley, carried a colour. There was at the west end of the park erected a scaffold, wherein was a chair of state for the King, and another chair for the Duke of York, with several scaffolds round about, where were persons of quality. After the King was seated, there passed by him only one regiment of foot, and Sir Nicholas Crisp's regiment of horse; then my Lord Mayor's troop of horse, commanded by Sir Will. Muddiman, all citizens. For state before him was led a goodlike horse, with bridle, saddle, and furniture, after the Indian manner, and a tall swarthy complexioned man leading him clad also in a loose garment, cap, and boots or buskins after the same manner. From about six score of the King's scaffold was the foot drawn up six deep in length and an interval betwixt, where the King passed through; this line of foot reached on both sides from the King's chair of state to the park gate; every regiment had his tent set up in the rear; the King stayed there about an hour and half, after whose departure the opposed regiments fired against one another in the manner of skirmishes. . . . Great preparations are making against the grand ceremony we must have to-morrow.

Fol. 71. 1661, May 11, London.—The same to the same.—I, here enclosed, send you the King's and Chancellor's speeches, and can send little of news with them, save only that the Speaker waited upon the King at the Lords' House yesterday about four in the afternoon, where, according to the custom, the Speaker very urgently pressed his insufficiency, and made the closure of his speech in these words, That his inabilities were such to perform so weighty an office that he wanted abilities to excuse himself enough, and then made a pause; to which the Chancellor answered that he was so well known to the King, that he must give over excusing himself, and cheerful accept of the employment; with all added that the King was sensible of his abilities, and that he had shewed himself a good orator and an able man in endeavouring, in such language or terms as he did it, to disable himself. Then the Speaker replied, since it was His Majesty's command that he should receive it with all cheerfulness, he did, and humbly begged that whatever he did or said amiss might be looked upon as rather an error in judgment than anything of willingness. Then he addressed himself to the King, and told him he hoped he would take it in good part if he declared that he was astonished at the glory of his presence, as that the presence of his glory and lustre had almost cast him into an ecstasy, and that he could almost say with St. Paul that now he was wrapt up into the third heaven. After having spoken much and very well in praise of the King, something of his undoubted descent and right to these crowns, next in commendation of the Lords, and last of all of the Commons; he concluded humbly begging in the name of the Commons these four things or petitions:—1. Freedom from arrests for all members and their servants; 2nd. Freedom of speech; 3rdly. Freedom of access; 4thly. A benign construction of their actions: all which, the Chancellor told them, the King, being assured of their loyalty, did grant them; after which the House dissolved 'till this morn at eight of the clock, when they chose a Committee of privileges to consider of double elections, which the said Committee is now sitting about. I must here, with Mr. Speaker, beg the favour of a benign construction of what I have written, fearing

I have been too bold in undertaking to deliver the heads of a speech whereof I was not suffered to take any notes, but I will make use of Martial's words for my apology:

Da veniam subitis non displicuisse meretur
Conatur studiis qui placuisse tibi.

I hear of a petition of some of the poorer sort of the King's officers are about to present to both Houses. The Duke of Ormond goeth for Portugal, and I desire a word from you whether you would advise me to go or not; I can get to go with the Duke. P.S. It is reported the Earl of Chesterfield goeth as General of the Fleet, who lately married the Duke of Ormond's daughter. I forgot to let you know the Chancellor told us the King intends a progress this summer in Worcestershire, and will, about the latter end of July, adjourn the Parliament.

Fol. 72. 1661, May 16. Old Palace Yard, at Mr. Aldridge's over against the Sun and Shears.—From the same to the same.—Yesterday the House spent in examining the impeachment that was given in against Sir John Marley, and after all, at last, referred him to the Common law; and I hear Mr. Liddle, his accuser, will let it fall, and so it will come to nothing. This morn was spent in providing a bill for securing the King's sacred person. The Lords have made an order that no petition shall be received by them that is not signed by a Grand jury; this day the great dispute between the Earls of Oxford and Lindsey was before the Lords; what was done in it I cannot hear; it was whether hath the more right to be Lord High Chamberlain of England. The Queen of Bohemia is landed at Gravesend and expected into town to-morrow. This evening my father's business came before the Committee for elections, whether he or his adversary were returned by the proper officer; my father was returned by the bailiff of the burrough chosen by the burghers to manage the election; Mr. Danby, his antagonist, is returned by the bailiff of the manor, who hath made former returns, and upon the question it was resolved neither bailiff had the right of returning burghers, but that the right was in the burghers, and, therefore, neither party is to sit till the merits of the cause be heard. None appeared more against my father in this business than Sir Richard Temple, though a stranger to the other party.

Fol. 73. 1661, May 18, London. The same to the same.—As for my journey to Portugal, I shall scarce attempt it, by reason that neither the Duke of Ormond nor the Earl of Chesterfield goeth; only my Lord of Sandwich with whom I have no acquaintance. 'Tis reported here, but falsely, that the Prince Orange should be dead, of the small-pox. The Parliament have voted the League and Covenant to be burnt by the hand of the hangman and to be taken down in all churches and other public places. The Queen of Bohemia was landed this morn at two of the clock at Somerset stairs. Some Bills are preparing for indemnity, the settlement of the Militia, &c.

Fol. 74. 1661, May 28. The same to the same.— . . . Puerta Porta is not taken; Coll. Buderforth is appointed governor of Dunkirk, a Scotchman; the Earl of Peterborough is Governor of Tangers, a fort we have of the Portugall by agreement in the mouth of the Straights; he is to choose whom he pleaseth for a deputy governor, and to have 15 companies of foot out of Dunkirk. This day some Acts of the late Rump Parliament were burned by the hand of the hangman by virtue of an order of Parliament to that effect. The Bill for the Militia takes up almost all the time in the House, and I cannot hear they have made any considerable progress in it yet. The warrant for the execution of Argyle is signed by the King, and sent down. To-morrow is a great feast here and I believe throughout the kingdom.

Fol. 75. 1661, May 30. The same to the same.—Yesterday was spent in solemnizing the great anniversary, which was observed in all churches very punctually, and a book printed on purpose for that day and published by the King's command. Doctor King, bishop of Chichester preached before the King; the close of the day was spent in ringing of bells and bonfires. This morn the House of Commons voted in the Bishops, and the repealing of the Act that excludes them; 'tis thought the Lords will scarce pass it with so little difficulty: some do not stick to say they will oppose it there. This morn also the Commoners voted the King a Benevolence; which, if every man's affections must be measured by their abilities in giving, will fall heavy upon the poor Cavalier, whose good will to His Majesty hath already drained their purses too much to be able to come in competition with the gaining Presbyter or saving neuter; many are highly displeased at these Benevolences, alleging it to be unparliamentary; but we think no man ought to be so, since in the House it was declared every man is left to his own will and discretion. I have here enclosed sent a list of the Lords of the Upper House.

Vol. IX.

Letters by Edward Gower, S. Charlton, W. Smith, Robert Shelton, Thomas Langley, Andrew and Francis Newport, and John and Charles Talbot.

1660, June 9, London. Edward Gower to Sir Richard Leveson.—Yesterday morning by five of the clock the King went for Hampton Court and returned before dinner; after dinner he had a conference with the Commons in the Banqueting house, where they gave him thanks for the gracious favour he had conferred upon them in giving them an Act of Indemnity, which they would accept of, and came to claim it in the name of the Commons of England. The King told them that as soon as they had excepted such as they would except he would confirm it, and desired them to do it with all the expedition possible. Here enclosed is a list of those that are already excepted out of the Act of Oblivion; more some report are already excepted, but I cannot hear it for certain, and therefore shall omit till I hear more. A party of horse went forth the last night to have apprehended Hugh Peters; they found clothes and writings but missed of him. Here is a report at Court that the Marquis de Caracena hath apprehended Scot in Flanders, and will send him over shortly, how true I know not, 'tis suspected. The French Ambassador is gone and Prince Harcourt is to come over Ambassador.

The Queen Mother is sent to, to come over, and she must have her jointure. The King's chapel is making ready for him; amongst other things there are 12 singing boys provided, and a pair of organs setting up where Noll's seat was. We had the last week a great talk of the City's petition to the House of Commons against Bishops, but it was crusht in the shell, for (as I hear by some Parliament men) it was spoken of in the House and much resented which was the cause (the citizens having timely notice of it,) it never came to light. Places here are none to be had for those that have not money to lay out. I am fearful my father will scarce get a grant confirmed which he had from the late King, though he have it under his own hand, for the herbage of New Park in the Forest of Gawtress, not worth above 250*l.* per annum.

The names of those that are already excepted out of the Act of Indemnity: Major-General Harrison, Coll. John Joanes, Mr. Seay, Tho. Scot, Corn. Holland, Lord Lisle, John Backstead, Lieutenant of the Tower; Mr. Phellips, clerk; Cooke, Solicitor-General; Serjeant Dandy, Mr. Broughton. Some say Sir Hen. Mildmay who is prisoner in Dover Castle; he petitioned the Parliament to remove him to the Tower, for he thinks he shall be eaten up with lice where he is.

1660, Aug. 4, London.—The same to the same.— . . . The only tug is betwixt Episcopacy and Presbytery; the young men (though the old men who are generally presbyterians are more cunning) are careful not to be outvoted in this point; and though the Presbyter would have the church settled in Parliament, the other party are resolved to put it off with delay, and by that means compass their design, which is to have it settled by a Synod, where things may be fairly canvassed, after the dissolution of this Parliament. The chief rumour of the town is, and it is reported so at Court too though not credited, that the presbyterians of Scotland should be troublesome there and in arms. It is also reported that the Queen should be landed, which was caused by the going off of the guns at the Tower and the ringing of the bells. The reason of that noise was this, Alderman Robinson governor of the Tower, now Sir John Robinson, hath this day a son christened in the Tower, to whom His Sacred Majesty was godfather; great doings there was, and great feasting and banquetting. I hear Lambert, Vane, Haslerigge, and the rest of the prisoners were sent on shipboard during the time of the King's being in the Tower; the reason why is that the old custom ever was when the King came into the Tower to have all the prisoners released; this is only a bare conjecture.

1660, Aug. 7, London.—The same to the same. . . . Yesterday the House of Commons was very severe against the Bishops, and made an order they should have no power to let leases not till they had taken some order in that affair; this day they made the same, concerning Deans, Chapters, and Prebends. The King had made an order empowering my father and another gentleman to keep this summer's profits of the Deans and Chapters' lands of Yorkshire in their hands till it were decided by due course of law whose they were to be; which being told in the House, it was moved that my father might be sent for and examined by what means he had procured this warrant (which he knew not of till it was brought to him); but upon second thoughts he was not sent for; but this day I hear some of the House have prevailed so far with the King, as to call in the warrant and others of the same nature, in other countries. Here is a complaint at Court that the young men absent themselves from the House, and by that means give the old men, who are most of them presbyterians, the advantage; nor pleasure nor profit ought to be thought of where business of such concern as this of church government and purchasers' estates are in debate. This morning there happened an unlucky dispute in the House of Lords betwixt the Duke of Buckingham and my Lord of Bristol.—(Gives an account of it much the same as in previous letters).—I hear the Lords are resolved to take the life of one Commissioner of each High Court of Justice that sat. P.S. My Lord Duke of Buckingham hath the regiment granted to him which was last Major-General Gibbons his; it lies now in Kent.

1660, April 28, London.—A Jamaica (S. Charlton) to (Sir Richard Leveson).—Both Houses of Lords and House of Commons sat yesterday according to their appointment; there were of the Lords 18 or 20 the first day, and to-day it is thought there will be half as many more, and in the House of Commons there were above 300; the Lords have chosen the Earl of Manchester their Speaker, and the House of Commons have chosen Sir Harbottle Grimston for their Speaker; it is thought this Parliament will not sit above 3 weeks or a month, before which time be expired it is really believed that the King will be here, and then he will call a real Parliament; this is the opinion of most men.

1660, April 28, London.—The same to the same.— There hath been no new matter, nor like to be, till Tuesday next, because both Houses have adjourned till then, and have ordered a fast to be kept by both Houses upon Monday next at St. Margaret's, Westminster, where Dr. Reynolds, Dr. Gaudin, and Mr. Callamy, perform the exercise for the whole day. Some say that upon Tuesday the grand business for the voting of the bringing in of the King will be resolved upon.

1660, May 10. The same (to the same).—The two Houses of Parliament have voted the Crown and Bishop's lands to be restored; also they have voted the King to be sent for with all expedition; and therefore they have ordered General Mountague to make all possible haste for Flushing, and by him they have ordered 30 thousand pounds to be sent to pay the King's charges. A Parliament man told me all this yesterday night, and moreover he assured me that, if it pleased God to send him a safe passage, that the King would be at Dover by Tuesday or Wednesday next, and that the Parliament Commissioners and the City Commissioners are resolved to set forth from hence toward Dover upon Monday next, and General Monk with some of his own troop and many volunteers and the auxiliaries of this city are ready to march towards Dover to meet the King and to conduct him in London; the Parliament man told me likewise that General Monk is to be created Duke of Somerset so soon as the King comes over; the same party told me that the House of Lords send down to the House of Commons that they would give their consent that they might have the nomination of the King's servants of his household, but they refused their motion and were very much discontented at them for it, and returned them answer that they thought it all the reason in the world that it should be left to his own freedom; the Houses have voted the King a hundred thousand pounds per annum in lieu of the Court of Wards; this day all shops have been shut up in this city and suburbs, as a day strictly observed for thanksgiving in all churches for our deliverance from the late tyranny and oppression. P.S. I am told that the Oxford Lords do sit in the House.

1660, May 15, London. The same to the same. In his last he gave a hint of some proceedings in both Houses against those that sat in judgment upon the late King's death.—I shall now assure you that they do now very vigorously prosecute them, in so much that they make them fly, and they know not whither to go for shelter; for the hand of God is powerfully and justly against those cruel murderers, and no man pities them; they have voted that the Serjeant-at-arms shall forthwith take them all into safe custody and secure them, and order taken that all the ports of England, Scotland, and Wales shall take notice and apprehend them. The Parliament hath an exact register of all the names of those that had any hand in the King's trial, and all the passages to a man, to a day, to an hour, and to a tittle, of what passed in that trial; and I am told that the Parliament is resolved not to let any one man that is alive that had a hand in that trial escape without condign punishment; they have resolved already that seven or eight of them shall suffer without mercy or pardon, and some of the rest shall forfeit their whole estates, and the rest shall be banished. All that have bought Deans and Chapters' lands, and Bishops' lands, must restore them again, come to the King, which the persons are not living that possessed them before these times, and those that are living shall enjoy their own, and those that have bought Debentures at a low value must pay the full value or be reimbursed of their money they paid for them. The benefit of these businesses will be ordered by the Parliament. They say Coll. Joyce hath hanged himself. We shall not know yet who the persons be that are designed to suffer in this business without mercy. Tichborne is thought will be one, and Scot another. There are seven of them in the House, and they have submitted to the mercy of the Parliament. This is all I can learn of the proceeding in both Houses. By this time we suppose the Commissioners are arrived in Zealand, and will not be 12 hours after they are landed before they will be with the King, and after they are with the King, it is thought they will not stay above a day, but will wait upon His Majesty immediately for England, and, if the wind stand fair, he may be at Dover upon Saturday night or Sunday next.

1660, June 3, London. S. Charlton to (Sir Richard Leveson). He had heard from a Parliament man, and a near friend, that the Parliament had not finished the qualifications which are to be mentioned in the Act of Pardon; eleven of them they have gone through and finished. They were also upon settling a tax of a hundred thousand pounds for 12 months, which money being raised, would pay all the nation's debts, so that afterwards there will be no more taxes. His friend also told him that, yesterday Prin fell upon Sir Anthony Ashley Cooper, for putting his hand to the instrument to settle the Protector, and that my nephew Job Charlton seconded Prin, and was very violent against Sir Anthony; how he will come off my friend could not tell me. . . . The King and the two Dukes dined upon Saturday last at Roehampton, at the Countess of Devonshire's, and General Monk with them, where they were gallantly treated, and after dinner the King and the two Dukes danced with the ladies above an hour, and danced rarely well, as one that saw them dance told me, who hath very good judgment. . . . Sir Thomas Leigh is come to London; Mr. Charles Leigh's brother-in-law, Mr. Brown, is knighted. We have such a number of new knights and knight baronets made every day, that they are too common; a man may have a patent for a knight baronet for 300*l.* or 400*l.*; if any man in your country has a mind to one at that rate, I can procure him one. P.S. The French Ambassador, Mons. de Bordeaux, that hath lain so long here, is gone for France; he would fain have had audience of the King, but He would not grant it him, nor hear of him, so that he was defeated and went privately away. The Queen Mother will be here very speedily, and the Princess Royal of Orange.

1660, May 19, London. A Jamais to (Sir Richard Leveson). They have been ever since upon the business of the late King's Tryars . . . have so frightened them that they are all fled and gone. . . . but here is a rumour that some of them are taken here. . . . A strict order that all their estates shall be immediately seized . . . , their persons apprehended and secured wheresoever they may be found. I doubt not but Mr. Thomas Langley doth constantly send you the weekly pamphlets that come forth. . . . Here are several pictures in black and white of the King and his brother and General Monk, which I intend to send you some. We cannot yet hear that the King is come from the Hague; only it is supposed that he is there, because the last news that came from Breda was by one that came from thence, and was in Breda upon Friday last was a sennight, and then the King was there, and did intend to set from thence towards the Hague upon Monday last; and as this person was coming over he met the ships that carried the commissioners half seas over, so that it is thought they are with the King at the Hague, and that they will make all the haste with conveniency that possible may be for their return; but for these three or four days we have had very blustering winds, which do continue still, so that it is thought the King will not venture to sea 'till the weather be better settled; here are great preparations making both in Kent and Essex and in Suffolk for his entertainment and reception, and a number here in the city only wait for the news of his landing, and then they resolve to begin with all expedition; and some say the General will not stir 'till then, because they are uncertain whether he will land in Kent or in Essex. Both the Houses have begun to do something in order to the settlement of Religion and Church government; they have absolutely confiscked to the King's use all the estate of Oliver Cromwell, deceased, and Pride's and Bradshaw's, and Ireton's that married Cromwell's daughter, and own nobody that are tenants to the King's lands, or dean and chapters' or delinquents' lands. will pay one farthing of rent. Sir William Brearton at Croydon had caused a great deal of wood to be taken upon the Bishop's lands, but nobody dare buy it or carry it away. My Lord Leigh came to town two days ago; but neither he nor my Lord Newport will sit in the House till the King comes, &c.

1660, May 22, London.—The same to the same.—Gives an account of the preparations to meet the King at Dover, and of the intended escort to London and his reception there . . . The wind being now very fair, we expect that he will be at Dover by to-morrow night. Here is such a general desire of his arrival, the like was never known. I heard yesterday for a certain that it was Hugh Peters that struck off the late King's head, and there is one that will take oath of it.

1660, June 30. W. Smith to Mr. John Langley.—Here are daily expected Embassadors from all Princes; none are yet come but a Dutch Embassador and an envoy from Brandenburg. . . . The Duke of Epemon is expected to be here next week from France as an extraordinary Embassador; and then the Lord Jermyn Earl of St. Alban is to go for France in the like condition, and is also to bring our gracious Queen and her most beautiful Princess Royal the Lady Henrietta, who now resides with Her Majesty. The Parliament have advanced and presented 20,000*l.* for Her Majesty's accommodation at present; and such of her lands as they have rescued from the rebels are again returned into Her Majesty's possession. The Parliament endeavour to raise estates for their Royal Highnesses the two Dukes out of the confiscations of such traitors as they daily convict; as yet none of the villains are brought to their arraignment, because the Courts of justice are not filled, nor are either of the Chief justices as yet appointed. His Majesty and his royal brothers are daily feasted; till yesterday they were usually entertained at supper; but then the Earl of Middlesex feasted them magnificently at his house at Copthall, after they had spent the morning in hunting with great content in Waltham forest. This day they are all gone to Roehampton near Putney to be princely entertained by the Countess Dowager of Devonshire, where it is hoped the sauce will savour of Aurum Potabile or rather Portable. . . . We have now little said of our great General (whose titles he sets forth). General Mountagu is Earl of Portsmouth, Lord Admiral in present charge under the Duke, and Knight of the Garter. P.S. As yet men of my loyalty have only [our] months filled with laughter, and our hea[]. His Majesty, having not hitherto found enough in honours and offices to satisfy his enemies, expects his loyal friends will stay till he be more able; nevertheless some unhappy wit, amongst other queries scattered in a paper in the Privy Chamber made one whether it were not fit His Majesty should pass an Act of Indemnity for his enemies and of Oblivion for his friends.

1660, June 30, London.—The same to the same.—Last Thursday was a day set apart for thanksgiving for His Majesty's restoring to his lawful inheritance, which was performed very zealously in all churches here in the City and in all neighbour parishes in these parts. Yesterday I spake with my Lord Leigh, who told me that there was little or nothing done in the Lords' House; for it was motioned there that the House should adjourn 'till Tuesday next, but it was carried to the contrary; and the reason was because of the daily vast charge of 2,000*l.* a day for the army, and therefore it was necessary that they should not adjourn but rather use all labour and diligence to take burden off the nation; so that [it] is supposed that that business will be the chiefest employment of both the Houses 'till they have found out some remedy to take it off; the Presbyterians have been very busy and earnest to hinder the settlement of religion in the Episcopal government, and many Scots are come hither to assist that work; but they cannot prevail. Alderman Sir John Robinson is made Lieutenant of the Tower, and they say Major-General Massey shall be Major of the city militia. I was yesterday at Dorset House. . . . It seems the Chancellor Hyde hath his lodgings in that house, and in the hall he keeps the Seal such days in the afternoon according as he doth appoint it. P.S. The King went yesterday to Copt-Hall to hunt the buck; the Lords invite the King very oft, and the two Dukes, and [He] is very freely merry with them, and he will not have them provide above ten or twelve dishes for him at most.

1660, July 7, London. The same to the same.—The Bill of Indemnity and qualifications therein to be inserted are not yet finished, which is all the business the House of Commons, upon the main, have been employed in this week past. Upon Thursday last the great entertainment of the King, the two Dukes of York and Gloucester, and all the Lords and Commons of Parliament was performed with as much sumptuousness as can be imagined, which cost the city as it is reported about 5,000*l.*; but the day was not so favourable as it could have been wished, which did wholly eclipse the glory of it; for it rained all the forenoon and most part of the afternoon, so that the King and all the nobles came in coaches, which otherwise were resolved to have passed through the city on horseback; which if it had performed after that manner, would have been a very glorious sight, for all the citizens were prepared in all their gallantry in as high a manner as when he first came into England.

1660, Aug. 4, London.—(The same to the same? The signature is torn off.) The only business that hath passed in the House of Lords since my last is that they have excepted four more for life then were excepted before, that is to say they have left them out of the Bill of Indemnity, to be tried by the law; and these four are Sir Arthur Haselrig, Sir Henry Vane, Major Lambert, and Colonel Hacker; they say there is one more or two, but I cannot tell their names for certain; but the report goes that Dezborrow is one of them. I hear that His Majesty hath given out warrants to take possession of all his lands in all counties, and immediately to take them out of the hands of all those that have bought them, during the Rebellion, and the like speedy course is taken for Deans and Chapters and Bishops' lands. I heard another say that those that have bought the King's lands do proffer the King two hundred thousand pounds and the fifth part of the true value of the yearly rent if His Majesty will pass the lands over to them by a fee farm, and they will pay him the fee farm rent besides; which His Majesty will not hearken to as I am told. The Bill of Indemnity cannot be yet passed in the Lords House. His Majesty is gone this morning to the Tower, to be godfather to a child of Sir John Robinson's, Lieutenant of the Tower. I hear Sir Thomas Midelton is made a viscount, Sir George Booth, a baron, and Mr. Perpoint, a baron; the Lord Roberts is to go deputy for Ireland.

1660, Aug. 7, London.—The same to the same.—The Bill of Indemnity is not yet past in the House of Lords, neither is it like to pass in haste; for I am told that the Lords have had several conferences with the House of Commons, but cannot agree upon several particulars which the Lords would have altered in their Bill; and likewise the Lords would have many more excepted in the Bill, which the House of Commons will not consent unto; and that the case stands at present 'twixt the two Houses, so that the House of Commons lets the Lords go on in their work, and the meantime the House of Commons are fallen [to] the business of the Church government; and the King lets them both alone, and he settles the Bishops both for Ireland and England, and his own chaplain for his household; but I hear that yesterday there was an untoward falling out betwixt the Duke of Buckingham and the Earl of Bristol, &c., &c.

As for Whitehall, it is every day in the morning as full that a man can scarce wedge in between them; a number of the clergymen and the rest petitioners for preferment and places about the court. Here are seven of our East India ships lately arrived in the Downs from several parts of those Indies that belong to the new joint stock; my Lord Leigh hath got leave of the House to go home for a month or such a matter for his health's sake, so that to-morrow he goes thence towards Stoneleigh; and from thence as I understand he intends to go to the Bath. This day I saw Mr. Goode here in London, who is newly come from Oxford, where this last act he proceeded Doctor.

1660, July 9, London.—Robert Shelton to Mr. John Langley.—Since my coming hither it hath been my whole business to wait upon Mr. Andrew Newport and Mr. Sharington Talbot. I delivered Mr. Andrew Newport both letter and token, who orders me to call upon him a little before my coming down. Mr. Talbot orders me to come to him to-morrow morning by six of the clock, for he intends to present the gold to His Majesty before ten of the clock, for he is ordered by the King to come pt.

(post?) to-morrow to the Lord Digby's about some business of concernment, and from Cossill intends our master a visit at Trentham, and give him an account from His Majesty concerning the reception of the purse which I have bought and in readiness against morning; this day hath play day for His Majesty, Dukes, General, and others accompanying them have been pr feasted at Yeild Hall by the Lord Mayor the Assizes are not yet known; there are no [more new] Judges yet added, only Judge Atkins in the Exchequer and made knight, &c. (Seal, a pelican in her piety with R. H. in right hand corner.)

1660, April 28, London. Samuel Terrick to Sir R. Leveson. Yesterday being Friday, the House adjourned till Tuesday next, and then at 8 o'clock in the morning it meets to take into consideration the grand business for a settlement; for till that be perfected nothing will be binding that we do. It is whispered that the General hath a letter from the King to present to the House; if so, then shall have it Tuesday; he intends to cast himself wholly upon his Parliament.

1660, May 8, London. Samuel Terricke to Lady Katherine Leveson. Mentions the proclamation of the King in Palace Yard and other places, and the Houses' desire for the King's speedy return, and that the House has appointed a committee to consider of a yearly revenue for the King, with power to receive information &c., for the discovery of the Crown Jewels, &c.

1660, May 15, London. The same to the same.—Mentions that the Commissioners of both Houses with a letter signed at Sion House by 118 ministers Episcopal and Presbyterian had gone to meet the King at Breda, and that it is expected that the King will stay at Cobham House for some days on his landing.—Parliamentary news.—There is 10,000*l.* sent the Duke of York, and 5,000*l.* to the Duke of Gloucester; the King of Spain hath presented His Majesty 25,000*l.*; the Dutch, it is believed, will present him with a very considerable sum; there will be a discovery made of 20,000*l.* to a committee of Parliament; likewise there hath been seized goods to a great value which were concealed [by] Mrs. Elizabeth Cromwell, late wife to Oliver. This day the House hath assigned 30,000*l.* for the putting of Whitehall, St. James, and Somerset House into order for the reception of the King. This day Secretary Thurlo is charged with high treason, and ordered to be taken into custody. P.S. Alderman Viner, a goldsmith, is ordered this day to provide a crown and sceptre with all speed.

1660, 3 July, London. Samuel Terricke to Sir Richard Leveson.—Mr. Ayliffe tells me that he hath acquainted you that my Lord Seamar, Chancellor of the Duchy, hath appointed you Lord Steward as formerly, which I know will be pleasing to the copyholders. Your name is inserted in the address to His Majesty.

Letters by Mr. Thomas Langley.

1660, April 26. Thomas Langley (to Sir Richard Leveson).—Yesterday in Parliament when the Lords [sent] to the Commons to join with them in observing of [the] fast next Monday, Luke Robinson stood up and asked the Speaker who made them a House of Lords? and to that purpose, having done what he had to say, Henry Finch the Councillor spoke, and told the Speaker that they had heard a very good sermon that morning by Dr. Reynolds, who told them they were to be the physicians and healers of the nation, being sorry that the gentleman that spoke last should forget it so quickly in moving that question, (or to the same purpose), desiring the Speaker that it might be put to the vote whether there was a House of Lords or no, which was done, and the House generally formed it.

1660, May 8. The same to the same.—Account of the King's proclamation by the Lord Mayor, &c. (which he sends in print).

A letter of the same date to his uncle Mr. John Langley, giving a similar description.

1660, May 11. The same to Sir R. Leveson.—To-morrow the King is to be proclaimed in Southwark by our Lord Mayor, &c.

[1660] May 12. Thomas Langley to Sir Richard Leveson. The Commissioners are gone towards the King; those of the army that are appointed march about Tuesday or Wednesday next; there's a thousand apprentices and young gentlemen out of the city are to go all in white doublets with bloome colour scarfs about them to bring the King in, who go on foot. Whitehall is fitting up for His Majesty's reception. The prisons here grow full of such as cannot rule their tongues, and may of the grand rebels are run away. The old beldam protectoris is also gone; being searched after, ten load of her rich goods were seized last night by the water side, in a costardmonger's house, supposed for to be shipped away.

1660, May 19. The same to the same.—There is a report that the King is gone to Amsterdam, invited by that place to receive their treatment, who its said will present His Majesty with 100,000*l.* and from thence will take the first wind to come for England, &c.—Five of the late King's judges, with Haselrig, Liles, Scott, Mildmay, and another taken near Dover.—Orders for the King's reception.

1660, May 22. The same to the same.—We expect to hear every hour of the King's landing. . . . General Monk, it's said, marches to-morrow with his lifeguard only; the rest of the army lies still, there being several volunteer troops of gentlemen and citizens very richly habited and bravely mounted led by several eminent persons, as Coll. Robinson, the troop of citizens all in buf cotes very richly laced, the Lord Mordant a troop of Spanish merchants, all in black velvet coats, the Lord Maynard a troop of Essex gentlemen, Squire Hales a troop of Kentish gentlemen, the Earl of Northampton another troop, and his brother Sir William Compton leads a troop called the Lady Monk's troop, and some others go to meet the King and march away to-morrow. Disbrow was brought prisoner to town this night out of Essex. To-morrow the Papists are to be banished from about the City.

1660, May 24. The same to the same.—The King came to anchor yesterday morning at 9 o'clock in Dover road; a letter being sent to the General Monk that His Majesty would not land till Monk came to him, which post met Monk at Greenwich as he was going, who so soon as he had read the letter drove away with all speed, saying he would not sleep till he came to His Majesty, which is conceived he is before this time, and that the King is not yet landed; for as soon as he lands, the great guns are so ordered and laid along the coasts in forts and ships which are to take the report one from another, till it come to the Tower of London, that we shall hear of it in three or four hours time, when the King lands; besides the life guards and several commanders of the army, there is gone first the Lord Maynard's troop, next the Earl of Northampton's troop, next went Coll. Robinson's troop, next the Spanish merchants, Mr. Fowler leading one of the divisions of it with their footboys in white doublets; last went the Duke of Buckingham with his troop; all these are volunteers in such high equipage not to be expressed. This day went two army regiments, the Lord Howard's, and the Lord Falkland's; the commanders and officers rich and brave. General Browne is preparing to be not inferior for garb to march out some ten miles that day the King comes through the city. P.S. Brown's troop are in silver doublets, and their swords hung in black scarfs.

1660, June 7. The same to the same.—There past in the House this morning to be exempted from pardon five more besides the seven in the book; Coll. Harrison scorns to ask pardon; he saith the Protector kept him in prison a great while, and now the King is come he will take away his life and ease him of that trouble.

1660, June 16. The same to the same.—You shall receive by the carrier the Act for Assessment, wherein your honour is a Commissioner for Staffordshire; there's some thirteen agreed on by the Parliament towards making up the 20 that are to be excepted, besides those that were the King's judges. Whitlock is got off with much ado; they are coming among our Aldermen again; the Earl of Salisbury shall be degraded it's said. The King and Dukes are all gone by now to the Lord Mayor's to a supper or banquet in their coaches, it being about 10 o'clock at night.

1661, May 16. Robert Milward to Sir Richard Leveson.—The Presbyterian is so inconsiderable in the House that the more prudent men of that party are silent. An Act passed the House this day, and ordered to be ingrossed, wherein the Covenant is condemned, as also the legislative power of the Lords and Commons without or against the King; and whosoever shall by word seek to maintain either incurs the penalty of a Premunire: it is ordered that the Committee of confirmation of public acts shall not ravel into the late acts of the court of wards, the judicial proceedings, His Majesty's revenues and the Act of Oblivion. I can assure you the last would never have received a full confirmation, however it may yet fall out, but in obedience to His Majesty's desires, who is not only the Sovereign but the favourite of the kingdom. As to the Act concerning Ministers, I believe we shall make bold to correct it. The Queen of Bohemia is landed, and daily expected here.

[1660], May 12, Saturday. Andrew Newport to Sir Richard Leveson. The commissioners of both Houses went hence yesterday towards the King, and 'tis believed they will meet him upon his way, so that we expect him here this day sevensnight at farthest: much company will go hence on Monday and Tuesday to meet him at his landing. . . . To-day the House was upon the Act of Indemnity, and in discourse of what persons were concerned in putting the King to death: young Lenthall said that those persons which first raised arms against the King were equally guilty of the King's death with those that sate in judgment upon him; which so enraged the Presbyterians that he was ordered to withdraw, and it was much pressed he should be sent to the Tower and expelled the House; but at last he was only called to the bar upon his knees, where he recanted, and was restored to his place. Those members that were the King's judges and to-day in the House were required to speak for themselves. Coll. Ingolsby began, and confessed his fault with great penitence, and desired the mercy of the House, which he will undoubtedly have; after him four more did the like, Morley, Gourdon, &c., but what their lot will be is uncertain; several in the same qualification are run away; Sir H. Mildmay, Scott, &c. Commissioner Lisle hath put a petition into the hands of several members, but it will not be read in the House. There are two captains sent hither to-day from the fleet, and put in irons into the Tower, for designing to blow up the ship that the King should board; this makes it believed the King will come privately hither; besides that several desperate persons threaten him much when he comes, some of which are daily sent to prison. Mr. Pryn told the House to-day that he would discover 200,000*l.* sent hither to the factious party to enable them to keep out the King; and a Committee is appointed to consult about it; 'tis said that the Cardinal sent it and offered further assistance of money and men. The fleet is ordered to be at the King's command; and he is desired to make haste to the exercise of his regal power. P.S. Coll. Okay went to the King to-day, and was on his knees to ask the King's pardon for being one of his father's judges, but the King referred him to the Parliament.

1660, Aug. 7, London. Fra. Newport to Sir Richard Leveson. The Act of Indemnity, I believe, will not now long stay with the Lords; this week I think will give a despatch to it; if the Commons will agree to those alterations by them made, which is doubtful. This day the Lords agreed upon one of every Court of justice that sat upon their own members to be excepted out of the Act of Indemnity, and that the nearest relations of those Lords who suffered should name those single persons, and likewise, I should have told you, one of the Court martial to be excepted who sat upon the Earl of Derby. My Lord of Derby for that court named Croxton; Lord Paget for Lord of Holland, whose daughter he married, named one Blackwell, that is dead, and would name no other; Lord of Denbigh, for Duke Hamilton, who married his sister, named one Wibert; and my Lord Capell, for his father, named our countryman Waringe the late sheriff; and these four are as they now stand wholly excepted out of the Act. The Pole money bill stays for the Act of Oblivion, which the Commons will have go hand in hand with it; all private provisos which have been offered to the Bill of Oblivion are agreed by the Lords to be laid aside, which otherwise would never have retarded the passing of the Bill. . . . We can have no answer yet from the House of Commons concerning our writings by which we passed away the impropriations; some of them say they have them not, and many of the Presbyterians labour hard to have them confirmed to the churches; but I hope we shall prevent them by a Bill first put in for the restoring of them to us; in the meantime we gather them de facto. Prince de Ligne is expected Embassadour from Spain, but the King can get ne'er a House here to receive him. The last letters from France said the Cardinal continued ill. No Master of the Rolls is yet named here. 'Tis said the match is agreed on between Monsr. of France (the King's brother) and our young Princess Henrietta Maria, who is said to be one of the handsomest ladyes in the world. No doubt my brother Andrew hath told you that as the Act of Indemnity now stands with the Lords, all that sentenced the King or signed his death are wholly excepted, and only four more wholly excepted, which are four of those twenty the House of Commons sent up to be excepted, but not as to life; and these four to-day named before; how far the House of Commons will agree with us in these votes we yet know not.

Houses, and there was imparted to them letters from Scotland importing that the Scots having made it appear how much they rejoice in the happy restoration of His Majesty to his most just and undoubted right, and having by their actions given signal testimonies of their faithful zeal and affection as well as obedience, they now desire that His Majesty will trust them so far as to trust them with their own country, and will please to take out all the English garrisons, and only reserve some small inconsiderable English force in some few centre places which His Majesty shall think most fit. The same day the King was at the House to put them in mind that they should not offer to entrench upon the Act of Indemnity; this day the Bill for the Militia was passed in the House of Commons, intituled to be an Act for the further securing and preserving the King's person and these kingdoms. I suppose you have heard already of the resolves for burning the Covenant; and this day the Lords passed the same, and to-morrow it is to be burned in the Palace Yard, Westminster, and over against the New Exchange, Temple Bar, Fleet Conduit, and Cheapside, and over against the Old Exchange, by the hand of the common hangman.

n. y., April 26. John Talbot to Sir Richard Leveson. —The Gazette only omits this, that yesterday four of the nobility took their places in their House; Earls of Middlesex, Dorset, Rivers, and Lord Peters; some of the others which are under the notion of the young nobility, that is such who are no otherwise incapable of sitting but because they acted not heretofore with the Lords, they have been desired to forbear for a few days, but 'tis believed will shortly sit also: this day we requited their kindness, for we sent Mr. Herbert to acquaint them that the House had appointed this day fortnight for a day of thanksgiving to be observed in London and Middlesex, and this day month for the rest of the nation, and desired their concurrence, which they assented to; this morning was spent in the nominating a Committee of privileges, and this afternoon they did sit to consider of double returns, which are many, and report thereon to-morrow to the House; the bugbear of qualifications is not yet taken notice of, and I do not find the temper of the House to be so Rumpish.

1660, May 15th. Charles Talbot to Sir Richard Leveson. 'Tis believed that the King will be at Dover upon Thursday night next, and that General Monk and we all shall march out of Town that day to meet him in as much glory and gallantry as the time will permit, and we hope his coronation day will be the 29th of this month which is his birthday. The Houses sit close, and are upon the question of the late King's murderers; and some say not above seven of the Judges that are living will be spared. Thurlow was this day impeached of high treason, and we hear apprehended; who yesterday said that if he were hanged he had a black book which should hang half of them that went for Cavaliers, from which accusation you and I are free. Dick Willis and his brother are condemned of treason. The murderers of the King were so confident in their villainy that they have left their names and seals in a book covered with black velvet which now discovers them. A ship is stopped that was carrying two hundred thousand pounds in money and goods over for the King's service.

1660, July 2, London. The same to the same. —Thanks Sir Richard for his letter and says that in the latter part of it he desires Talbot to recommend him to the King; promises to do it, but urges him to do it himself "knowing you are (as you have ever deserved) to be highly valued by the King, who does not forget such friends, and the addition which you intend to confirm it by, being so highly noble, will both imprint you in his memory for ever and be a great advantage to me although but your messenger." . . . The factious here hinder the justice which we expected upon several wicked men condemned and of more daily taken; the settling of the King's revenue and the militias of the counties, the Deputy lieutenants not being nominated; nor do we know what will become of our guards; for one day 'tis reported we shall stand, and the next that we shall not; but if so all will not go well. P.S. The King hath made choice of an army regiment of horse to be his own, and great men will be officers in it, and I hope good men soldiers. The two Dukes have each a regiment also.

1660, Aug. 7, London. The same to the same. —Although I find the King still gracious to me, yet other people supplant me in all my designs, so that I have the good fortune to serve my friends but cannot benefit myself any way; therefore I intend not to stay long here The Lords have this day voted that four men which did judge the four Lords should die, of which old Waring and Coll. Croxston are two; and the Act of Indemnity is past their House, and to be sent to the Commons, who this day sent to them the Bill for Pole-money, and they are hastening the Bill for Excise, after which 'tis thought the Parliament will be adjourned or dissolved

There are many letters from J. White, who was evidently a steward or bailiff, to Lady Gower.

1709, June 25th, Newcastle. Will. Burslem to Lord Gower. In a postscript, —At the sealing up of this Mr. Thos. Fenton brought me the inclosed poem made by his brother Elijah who is schoolmaster at Seven Oak in Kent; it is intended to be printed, but not without your Lordship's approbation, which is desired may be known; it will not be printed alone, but with other poems of the like nature.

1710, Oct. 11. Trentham. Pa. Wood to Lady Gower at Belvoir. The election for this county at a meeting of the gentlemen on Wednesday last was settled, and Mr. Paget and Mr. Ward agreed on for this time, and Mr. Bagott the next; Sir Bryan Br . . . ns interest was taken little notice of, and what he had he offered to Mr. Ward in hopes to have kept open the breach between Mr. Bagott and him, but is happily prevented by their accommodation. Mr. Foley and Mr. Chetwind are returned for Stafford Town; but Mr. Hen. Vernon petitions against the latter upon the right of the electors, and hath a good colour for it.

Letters by Lord North, Lord Thurlow, William Pitt, and others.

Eleven Letters by Lord North to Earl Gower.

1771, June 13. Downing Street. —Has received a summons to a Council at St. James's. If necessary, he will be there, otherwise he will be glad to be excused. "I am now, like Prince Volscius, with one boot on and the other off, and wait for your Lordship's decision." "P.S. I have written by His Majesty's command to the Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry, to offer him the vacant bishoprick of Durham."*

(1771), Sept. 30. Sir Lawrence Dundas not having received much benefit from the great doctor Le Fevre is advised to pass the ensuing winter at Nice. He presses for the dignity of a Privy Councillor before going abroad. Lord North wishes that the request had not been made, but the King consents if Lord Gower has no objection.

1773, July 22, Bushey Park. In order to accommodate the holders of unlawfully diminished coin, to forward the purposes of the Act passed in the last session of Parliament, and to restore the gold coin of these kingdoms if possible to its legal value without a re-coinage, the Treasury has proposed to the Bank to receive all unlawfully diminished gold money by weight at 3l. 17s. 10½d. per oz., and have promised to recommend to Parliament to indemnify them for any loss they may suffer by carrying this measure into execution. The Treasury has directed the inclosed order † to be sent to the receiver of the Public revenue. . . . The necessity of taking this step without delay has prevented me from communicating it previously to His Majesty's confidential servants, but I hope you will not disapprove of it.

1773, Oct. 18, Bushey Park. —Sends a copy of an extraordinary and rather captious letter which he received last night. As it equally concerns the rest of His Majesty's servants, he has desired a Cabinet to be called on Thursday next to consider of the answer which it may be proper to return.

1774, Sept. 30, Downing Street. His Majesty has this day dissolved his Parliament, and I am no longer a member of the House of Commons. I hope, however, very soon again to be in that august assembly and to meet all your Lordship's friends there. . . . Has written to Mr. Whitworth who, he thinks, has been misrepresented to Earl Gower.

1774, Sept. 30, Downing Street. When I wrote to your Lordship yesterday I forgot the principal business I had to mention, viz., that the Lords of the Cabinet at London and in the neighbourhood have thought it right to make some alteration in the list of the 16 Peers and to remove those Lords who are not able to give due attendance in Parliament. In consequence, your Lordship's brother-in-law, Lord Dunmore, will be omitted, but another brother-in-law of your Lordship, Lord Galloway, will be put in his room. If Lord Dunmore should return to England to reside here he will certainly have a preferable claim upon a vacancy. Your Lordship will find one peer left in the list whose attendance in the House of Lords is not very constant, but we trust you will not complain of our partiality, though his name is continued there, and Lord Dunmore's omitted; I mean the Earl of Bute. I shall see Lord Mount-Stuart this morning, and ask him if his father chooses to continue. If he does, a Dowager first Lord of the Treasury has a claim to this distinction, and we do not now want a coup d'état to persuade the most ordinary newspaper politician that Lord B. is nothing more. . . . Either Mr. Robinson or myself will be always upon the spot (Downing Street) during these bustles.

(1776, Nov. 20; so indorsed), Downing Street.—“Some days I spoke with your Lordship at James's, I had received His Majesty's directions to acquaint Lord Buckingham with his intention of nominating him to the Lieutenantcy of Ireland, but I had not executed his commands, having been stopped by a conversation His Majesty had held with Lord Dartmouth. Lord Buckingham was certainly not the first object of my choice. But when he applied to me I told him that if the persons whom I had recommended should not succeed, I should be glad to see the Lieutenantcy conferred upon him.” All his recommendations having failed, he was obliged by his engagement with Lord Buckingham to propose him. “His Majesty hesitated for some time, but having no objection to the person, and perceiving how I stood pledged, he gave me authority to apprise Lord Buckingham of it which he has since confirmed.” But for these circumstances he would gladly have obeyed Earl Gower's commands in soliciting the Lieutenantcy for Lord Carlisle.

1778, Feb. 10, Downing Street.—Compliments Lord Gower on the public-spirited offer which he had made, but says that there is no new arrangement on foot, nor could there be any arrangement with the interest of the King and public by which Lord Gower could be permitted to leave his present situation. All that had passed respecting a great man (which was very little) had been communicated to Mr. Rigby, and it did not amount to much. Most of the members of Parliament whom I have been able to sound prefer a declaration that the British Parliament will not tax America to the repeal of any Acts. The latter measure is equally mortifying, but the former more effectual to the purpose of inducing the Colonies to treat with this country. The possibility of levying taxes in America by the authority of Parliament is universally given up, and therefore they say that nothing material is lost; besides that, if an expectation of a contribution on the part of America is held out, and that business seriously recommended to the Commissioners, this measure is more consistent with my conciliatory proposition than the other. I wish to have your Lordship's opinion on that point, and for that purpose to see you here with the rest of the Cabinet at 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

1778, May 8, Friday night, 10 o'clock, Downing Street.—A note of three lines, with a copy of the following letter—

1778, May 8. Lord North to Lord Sandwich. (Private.) I have shown your Lordship's letter, the letter which you received from Admiral Duff, and the list of the Spanish fleet, together with the inclosed extract of the advices from Paris, to Lord Weymouth, Lord Dartmouth, Lord Gower, and Lord George Germain. They are all of opinion that nothing contained in these papers will justify a change in the destination of Admiral Byron's fleet; they continue to think that every dispatch should be used to send the fleet off to North America, unless you should, before the departure, receive certain accounts that the Toulon fleet is arrived at Cadiz, and either continues there, or has sailed in a route which clearly indicates that its destination is towards a different quarter of the globe. I think it highly probable that you may already have received by the Proserpine such intelligence as must put out of doubt the proper line to be followed. In the meanwhile the sentiments of all the Cabinet Ministers in town are unanimous for sending the fleet to North America as soon as it can sail. It may be the intention of Spain to assist Mr. D'Estaing with a squadron in his expedition to North America. In that case, it is to be wish'd that our fleet should be stronger, and this contrary wind, if it continues, will afford an opportunity of adding some ships to Mr. Byron's squadron. Although I am not one of those who think an invasion of these islands impracticable, nor am convinced that France and Spain will not attempt it, yet I think the enterprize so arduous that they will not for some time be able to carry such a project into execution. The danger of our army and fleet in North America appears to me more probable and more immediate. Besides, altho' I pay little credit to the sincerity of the Court of Spain, and believe that they harbour very hostile designs against us, I cannot conceive it possible that they would hold such a pacific language just at the very moment that they intend to unite in an attack upon our possessions in Europe. P.S. If you can contrive to send a ship load of prisoners to be exchanged in America, I should think it advisable to do it without delay.

1779, Oct. 17, Waldersh.—The King not having any prospect of forming an Administration upon the plan of a coalition with parts of the Opposition, which promises in His Majesty's opinion any good to himself or the public, has ordered me to resume my former plan, and I have accordingly written to Lord Carlisle according to what I mentioned to your Lordship last week, notwithstanding the little hopes your Lordship's conversation gave me . . . His acceptance of a place at this moment can give you no uneasiness, and will not appear to you inconsistent with the close connexion which subsists between you.

No date.—Informing Lord Gower (lest the King's message had not reached him) that the King intended to appoint Lord Bathurst President of the Council to-morrow.

Twenty-two letters by Lord Thurlow to Lord Gower.* The earliest are indorsed as 1779, Oct. 12 and 18, and Feb. 1780. These, and one without indorsement are seemingly political, but written in such obscure terms, that few, if any, but the addressee could understand them. That of Feb. 1780 relates some talk with Lord No. (North).

[1780, Feb. 7.] . . . Your objection is indisputable; first because it is a matter of feeling which is not directly a subject of dispute; and, secondly, because leaving your proxy with a Minister might have been thought liable to cut very close, if not to cross the idea on which you resigned . . . But I don't suppose the same objection would have lain against giving it to the Duke, who seems to have stood all along in the same situation in which you are now placed.

1781, Sept. In this, after remarking upon the affectionate and intelligent nature of Leveson (Lord Gower's son), he says, “I suspect that the reason why promising parts so often disappoint the expectations conceived of them, is because they are not taught to command their attention. It seems to be the habit of attention which produces memory, reasoning and the other powers which are comprised in the general word understanding; and attention seems to be the effect of curiosity; and that again is abundantly excited in lively minds by all things around them, particularly new objects; but the ideas must be simple or at least distinct, and perfectly comprehensible; and in the ordinary course of accident, elementary notions, such as science is made up of, certainly do not stand the fairest chance . . . What I propose will appear a strange substitute for a dry employment (i.e., the exercise of learning mere words), but I fancy it will be attended with other advantages which will make the experiment a good one. It is Arithmetick, to be followed up afterwards with Geometry, and at length Algebra. All which I verily believe a boy might well master before he goes to the University; and if not before, not one in a thousand will master them afterwards; and yet they are the indispensable foundation of a great part of science, which is both useful and ornamental; and for the rest, they form a kind of practical logick, of ten times more use than the art so called, which for the most part is rather a curious refining-upon language, attended, however, I admit with no inconsiderable advantages . . . At what over time of life they are learnt, the rationale of them "is so immense that the elements must at first be got merely by rote."

In the following (undated) letter on the same subject, Lord Thurlow says: "If they were compatible, I should prefer Arithmetic and Geometry to Languages. . . . Besides, I am afraid, that if these dry elements are not learned early, they will not have so good a chance for attention afterwards as Languages will."

1782, July 6, Saturday. The measure and degree of the present agitation remain uncertain, and still more the time and manner of its subsiding. Lord Rockingham's death opened the scene. You know the lictors and their parts. Had he lived through another session, the machinery (there is room to imagine at least) would have broke down; not so much by the incongruity of its essential parts and internal construction, as for want of external bearing and sufficient effect upon the object it should have acted upon. . . . Upon the death of Lord Rockingham the principal pretender to the succession was Charles Fox. If that had proceeded smoothly, the place would have been occupied with more energy; but the measure might have met with some degree of unfavourable acceptance to counterbalance that. The last idea, or some other wishes of the party prevented the pretension from taking that simple form, and the Duke of Portland's name was held forth, or some other without naming him of a similar description. The King cut this short by naming Lord Shelburne; explaining that such was his original idea in the forming the new Administration; but that way was given to Lord R. personally. The party professed to acquiesce for some time; and even Charles Fox seemed to think it might be endured, if other arrangements, and particularly the new modelling of the Cabinet, were admitted. This at least was the style of his conversation on the Wednesday. But on the Thursday he turned short. About 3 o'clock he told Rigby that he had brought the Seal with him to Court. But after that he converged with Lord S. in the window, and acquainted him that before he could resolve upon staying, he must ask them one question, Was he to go to the Treasury?—Yes.—Then I must resign. But I wish to accommodate, and to hold the Seal for so many days as may be thought necessary to a new arrangement. Lord S. told the King this; and Mr. F. went in immediately after and left the Seal. This last conversation lasted about three minutes, the King recommending it to him to reconsider it, and he declining. Lord John came in only in respect to Lord R. and he declined that or any other office. It was at first understood amicably enough, and scarcely with positive refusal; but that stiffness, and the report of to-day (but I don't know this), is that Mr. Fox's resignation is one of his reasons. It is confidently said by Charles Fox and indeed expected, that the D. of Portland will also resign, and C. told me he was going to meet him at Welbeck. Lord Keppel's situation seemed impossible to be given up so abruptly in the first outset of his campaign, and he had agreed accordingly to stay till winter. Some few of the Board of Treasury, Lord Althorp included, were expected to follow, and this seems to close them. Mr. Pitt was to take a capital place, either Chancellor of the Exchequer or Secretary of State as the occasion might require; and Lord Temple or Lord Grantham were thought of for Foreign Secretary. You guess how that deliberation would be weighed. But the thing seems to be going much further now; for I have just received a letter from Lee to resign the office of Solicitor General (of which you will not talk because I have not seen him, and I mean to try, tho' without expectation of success, to persuade him to stay). In his letter he refers not only to the death of one excellent friend but to the succession of a great many others. How far this goes I don't know. There was a meeting this morning at Lord Fitzwilliam's, and I know that Lord Temple and C. F. were to be there amongst others. Till this term the D. of Richmond stood firm, and Conway, Camden, Grafton, &c. These last were not of that meeting, and if they shrink it will not be in concert with the former. . . . By Monday I shall hear more and give you a better account.

1782, Thursday, 12, Buxton.—Has learned on the road that our fleet was to sail on last Friday: and of Sir Wm. Pepperell's letter he only knows that if it be true it flatters him (Thurlow) and supports the opinion he has always entertained of things in that quarter. . . . The absence of Lord Mansfield, who has been with the Bishop of Worcester, made it necessary for me to stay the prorogation of Parliament, which is, as you know, to the 10th of October: and Lord Shelburne talks of carrying it over Christmas; but this was upon an occasion when the perfect order and economy of the Treasury was upon the tapis. . . . This is my second day at Buxton; after a battery and regular drinking of the water and a very long ride, I have dined at a side table with Lord Frederick Cavendish.

(n. d.) Having nothing else to do, I go to bed before nine. I dine at a side table with Lord Hood and his ladies, amongst whom are three of the greatest beauties of this place.

Another letter (evidently while at Buxton or shortly after leaving), gives an account of an excursion.

n. d. Gives the hint last given to him that the Parliament is likely to be prorogued again. . . . The coach is at the door, and I must go to meet a Committee of East India Directors. (He mentions that summer is coming on.)

Thursday.—I have staid so long at court that I have not time to write. The loss of the Island seems to be nothing in comparison of the 700 men which are taken. Nor am I very sorry for the 160,000l. belonging to the former plunderers supposed to be captured there. The Marquis de Bouillon make an attack with a less number than those he besieged, and of that number could land no more than 300, and then his boats having steved by going to a wrong part of the island. If treachery could have found a plausible reason for giving up the other, the works were undermined, and the soldiers had no ammunition; 5 rounds instead of 60; although the Commander had notice openly given him, which he affected to slight the day before.

Friday morn.—I was sent for this morning to the King, chiefly I think that I might not understand myself to have been so wrong as I thought. But His Majesty thinks, and very justly, that your opinion is better, or at least so good an addition that it ought not to be omitted. He therefore sent me hither to desire you would go to the Queen's House as soon as you can make it convenient.

An undated letter is written after his return from France, where he went in August.

(An undated letter of 8 pages.) . . . I feel very pressingly the want of that assistance which I had in the beginning of the year, and without which I could not have acted at all; with this difference, that then I was obliged to act, and now I can hold back. In the Conversations I am now referring to, your name, as you may easily imagine, did not fail to be mentioned in terms which only you can give an answer; but which you cannot answer without a larger communication than can easily be made in this manner. (But he says there is nothing in it to bring Lord Gower up before the time he had appointed.) The only business of which notice has been given is the East Indian, but no particulars of that plan, which can be depended upon, have yet transpired. That which is talked of is appointing the Directors by Parliament, and also nominating the Council in the same manner; by which measure the modesty of the Ministers seems to mean to transfer from themselves the credit of withdrawing Mr. Hastings, &c., and appointing Mr. Francis, General Smith, and Mr. W. Burke in their places, only receiving to themselves the patronage, in a shape for which the King is to have no thanks, and over which he is to retain no power. This is thought, I suppose, to be their wish, and from thence inferred to be their purpose, but it appears to me so unprincipled, irregular, and rash, that I do not impute to them so much want of common sense. The rumour, however, proceeds to suppose that they have divided about it, and that Lord Stormont still retains a contrary opinion, but that Lord North has been reconciled to it by being allowed to nominate his faithful friend Mr. Francis, who is become so at the instigation of those more faithful Counsellors under whose conduct he has taken that creditable part for which the world is now admiring him. To this last article his Lordship's late conduct affords some countenance. When as Secretary for the Home Department he allows the Secretary for the Foreign not only to read the speech at the Cockpit but to make the motion relative to the East Indies, which is the proper business of his office. For the rest of their publick politicks the same rumour says that they have hazarded very lavish propositions to every Court of Europe to procure that, or the appearance of that, for want of which among other, a thousand other, causes we suffered much abroad and the Ministers no less at home. Russia for example is said to [have] the offer of 15 ships of the line to be sent into the Mediterranean. and after that an armed neutrality in imitation of that foolish but mischievous vanity in the late war, is proposed with Spain. Supposing a perpetual enmity between us and France to be the irrevocable doom of Heaven, and the false and peevish conduct to be not the accidental caprice of this hour, but the natural result of her situation; supposing on the other hand the disposition of Russia and Spain to be more steady to their actual interests than the form of Government in both, and additional circumstances in the last seem to promise; the first conception of the idea seems to be just, and to depend only on the discretion and reserve with which it may be conducted for its real value and merit. But it was observed that Mr. F. played the game of politics as dashing as he had done that of cards, and if the new adventure should turn out like the old one,——. As to their private or interior politics the same rumour says they proceed in the very channel in which they set out, and consequently tend still to fret and embitter more than to conciliate. This is perfectly astonishing, because a line of conduct seems to open, so obviously wise and so merely simple, that no objection can be made to it but the downright honesty of it—I mean the line of employing their power and opportunity which are manifestly in their hands, to arrange the Prince in the prudent, reputable, and agreeable part of duty to the father and kindness to his brother as the price of those gratifications which seem to engage his attention. But this line is not taken, and things remain accordingly in a situation painful to the Individual and mischievous to the Publick. On the other hand your experience in affairs does not want the assistance of what passed in the spring to form the reflections which that suggests and impresses deeply on me. The danger of relapsing into that situation must prevent any step being taken without having prepared an arrangement which promises, and that pretty confidently, a different upshot from the former. When those who acted in that scene present themselves to the view, it is impossible to forget either the events or the causes which appeared to produce them, and consequently to proceed without seeing to their being removed. This sensation probably has effect where any movement ought, I think, to begin; for I can't bring myself to like it as well, that it should begin elsewhere. The same sensation will produce a degree of reluctance in others to coalesce in a system which may possibly end so very contrary to their public opinions and genuine judgments. This end, however, seems to be the object of few, and they seem to be growing sensible both of their need of assistance and of the necessity of conforming in some degree to the publick and genuine sentiments of those whom they are looking to. Such communications as these have led to the Conversations I alluded to before respecting you, and I believe this outline (loose and shadowy as it appears) is almost as distinct a view as I know how to convey in this manner.

DUKE OF

(n. d., 8 pp.) . . . As to our Politics, altho' there is affectation enough of consulting me, I don't feel myself at the bottom of them. Some little natural jealousy is irresistible, that when I speak of our bottom as much too narrow, it may be that I am weary of standing alone in a strange land. This is so true in fact, that I am not surprised it should be observed; nor that it should operate to the effect of creating suspicions. And yet I mistake things strangely if I am not right in my thoughts of the matter. Fox, who certainly turned out the last minister proprio Marte, and must certainly have a certain following, carries out with him the immediate friends of Lord Rockingham, all the Cavendishes, Spencers, Keppel, Burke, &c., to the number of about 50 or 60, as Rigby computes it, in the House of Commons. Keppel professes to stay only in reference to his situation. Such an apology for staying seems, in my poor judgment, a fair extent of the reward due to the measure; and yet I have heard a bird in the air sing that he is to receive extraordinary compensation for so indispensable a piece of condescension. The Duke of Richmond seems to preserve his connections with his nephew, and remains to do God knows what; but he remains. The rest of the Cabinet is differently affected, but with what variety both of sentiment and energy you know us all enough to weigh. For the rest, the Government is sufficiently disabled and impotent by the loss of these opportunities to conciliate, without which I protest I don't see how the thing is to be done; and our acquisitions and substitutions are surely not all of the most promising sort. You will have heard of the list which kissed hands yesterday; *Lord Shelburne, William Pitt, young Elliot, Jackson K. Counsel, Thos. Townsend, Lord Grantham, Pratt, Awbrey, Sir Geo. Younge, Lord Rockingham, Lord John Candish, Montague, Lord Althorpe, Lord Shelburne, Mr. Fox, Lord Duncannon (Admiralty), Jack Townsend, Tho. Townsend.—I don't know the news of this morning, but I understood this morning that Col. Barré was to replace Burke at the War Office, which I confess I wished for the Lord Advocate, who it seems is to succeed Barré as Treasurer of the Navy; but I have not heard upon whom his situation falls; I mean of Lord Advocate, for the Signet is to be given him for life, with a great sweep I suppose in Scotland. Unless there were some one to whom it might be desirable to give his place, I should think a little more ceremony in the profusion of the few things there is to be given might be advisable. The place of Solicitor General is talked of for Sir Pepper Arden. If this does not demonstrate too narrow a plan, perhaps you know how to explain it otherwise; for I hear you have had an express sent down to you, which must mean nothing or furnish you with the means of giving me a better notion than I yet possess of things. You will have heard from other hands that Fox undertook to explain to the world the ostensible reason for quitting; which he wished should be understood some great and essential ground of Politics, and in particular some one on which the prospect of peace would mainly depend. In this he entered so fiercely on the abuse of Lord Shelburne, and was followed with so much acrimony by the rest of his friends, that he is said to have left an impression much to his disadvantage. It seems to have been confessed by them all that if his friends or the D. of Portland or of Richmond could have succeeded, there would have been no resignation. At the same time many people doubt whether the House in general entered more into his invective against his rival or the contempt of him and his motives. In the meantime Lord North seems to have fared better than usual: for his former enemies have prodigious advantage by comparison with his present successor. Yesterday Lord Shelburne took an opportunity of retorting; which Lord Derby took an opportunity of a strange sort to call for an explanation of to-day while we were waiting for His Majesty. Fox had writ to him in the morning to complain, and insisted that either he should retract an assertion which fell from him that Mr. Fox had never imparted to him any other reason for resigning than his, Lord S. taking the Treasury. Fox acknowledged this would have been a sufficient reason, but insisted that he had on the Sunday before declared in the Cabinet, that he would resign. It was true that he had so declared; but it was promised it should not be imparted to the King, and as F. said, for fear of hurting Lord Rockingham's health. Lord S. contended that he had many times made such peevish declarations before, and if he had meant that for peremptory it would not have consisted with any duty to the King to keep it a secret from him, whatever it might have been proper to do as to the rest of the world; and as it was admitted no other declaration had been made, he thought himself justified in the opinion he delivered of it.

n. d. Stratford-on-Avon.—He notices the richness and populousness of the country between Stafford and Stratford-on-Avon; and calls "The Stars" the worst house in Stafford, whence he posted to Wolverhampton, and finds fault with "The Swan" there. He wished, but could not go to see Warwick Castle, because of bad roads.

n. d. In the next letter (written a few days after) he tells how he went to Woodstock, and went to Blenheim, where he was much pleased with the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough and their daughters, the Ladies Elizabeth and Caroline. He got to Salthill the same night, and reached town only time enough to attend the Levée. . . . Of public news I can give you no account, having seen no ministers; but I find that the account from Gibraltar is confirmed in all its parts. Baccelli has written to the D. of D. that the siege of G. is raised, that the fleet is arrived at Algeiras, but comparing circumstances, that is the combined fleet. There is also good news from the E. I. (East Indies?). I go to Cudland to-morrow.

n. d. There is no use in telling you, that we are under dreadful apprehension of a third party, unless I could bring together the thousand little circumstances which foment that apprehension, to which must be added comments upon defective or misrepresented stories, conjectures, &c., &c. To these must be added a number of false views, ill-conceived aims, unreasonable pretensions, causeless jealousies, and all that muddle which makes the intricacy of low and foolish Politics. If I rate these things properly, and am right in laying them quite aside, Lord North, who is watched as the Leader of this

* The following names are in two columns. The 2nd column beginning with Lord Rockingham.

DUKE OF SUTHER-
LAND.

181. The Countess of Nottingham's letter in answer to the King of Denmark's disgraces to her husband. (This was printed by Mr. Payne Collier in the Egerton Papers; for the Camden Society. It had been previously printed in the Cabala.)

183. A letter of Secretary Walsingham to the Chancellor of Scotland touching the death of the King's mother.

204. [Received 1583, May 8.] Queen Elizabeth to the Lord Treasurer Burghley. Begins, Sir Spirit, I doubt I doe nickname you. (Printed in Nares's Life of Burghley, vol. 3, p. 213.)

206. 1645, Jan. 15. His Majesty's (Charles I.) letter. (Printed.)

211. 1645. The Parliament's answer to His Majesty's 2 letters concerning his personal treaty with them, the one dated the 26th, the other the 29th of December last.

216. 1645, Jan. 29. His Majesty's letter to the two Houses of Parliament. (Printed.)

226. 1645, Sept. 4. Sir Thomas Fairfax, his letter to Prince Rupert when he summoned Bristol.

231. 1645, Aug. 25. Engagement, signed and sealed by Fairfax and Cromwell, for the safety of the persons and estates of the citizens of Bristol, if the city should surrender.

233. Further instructions to the citizens of Bristol that shall endeavour the delivering up of that city to the Parliament forces.

236. 1645, Oct. 14. Basingstoke. — Lieut.-General Cromwell to Mr. Speaker upon the taking of Basing House.

241. Lord Treasurer Burghley to Queen Elizabeth. Begins, I know not in what manner of words.—He laments the Queen's displeasure and offers to surrender all public employments. (See Nares's Life of Burghley, vol. 3, p. 212.)

247. Lord Treasurer Burghley to his son. A long letter, giving rules for conduct in life. Begins, Son Robert, the vertuous inclination of thy matchless mother. (Printed in the Appendix to Nares's Life of Burghley.)

259. 1572, Oct. 9. Sir Edward Dyer to Sir Christopher Hatton. (Printed in Nicolas's Life of Hatton.)

265. 1640, Aug. 28. Petition by the Earls of Bedford and Essex and eight other Lords, that the King would summon a Parliament.

271. 1578, July 2, Antwerp.—The substance of Her Majesty's Ambassadors negotiations with the Prince of Orange, and others deputed by the States of the Low Countries.

292. 1592, July 28, Antwerp. The substance of the Conference between the Lords and the Emperor's ambassador.

304. Instructions to A. B. to be sent to the Scottish Queen. (These are for Robert Beale and not for Walsingham as stated in the margin of the MS.. The Calendar of State Papers for Scotland gives the date as 4 May 1584.) Beale was to see if Mary would stand to her two offers made to Wade: 1. That she would get her son to deal favourably with Angus and Mar, and the rest of the English faction in Scotland. 2. That she would order the Bishops of Glasgow and Ross, her Ministers in France, to stay their practices against England.

312. Secretary Walsingham to the Regent of Scotland. (What seems to be an abstract of this letter is in the Calendar of State Papers relating to Scotland under the date of June 4, 1574; but the letter is said to be from Queen Elizabeth. The writer of the letter in the volume now under description could not have been the Queen; she would not have written. "In the meantime I most humbly take my leave.")

313. The conditions whereupon the Queen of Scots will be content to resign her estate to her son.

315. 1564, Feb. 6, Edinburgh. Thomas Randolph to the Earl of Leicester.—The Queen of Scots is favourable to the proposition that she should marry Leicester.

322. 1575, March 13 (15th P). Queen Elizabeth's speech in the Parliament House. (An eloquent speech. Its effect was that she declined to marry. It is not mentioned in Sir Simonds D'Ewes's Journal.)

331. Instructions for certain gentlemen sent abroad.

333. The effect of a speech from John Crook, Esq., Speaker of the Parliament, to Her Majesty, in the name of the Commons, the last of Nov. 1601, at Whitehall, in the Counsel Chamber.

337. The Queen's speech.—(This and the preceding item are, with considerable variations, in Sir Simonds D'Ewes's Journal.)

THE MANUSCRIPTS OF THE MOST HONOURABLE THE MARQUIS OF LANDSDOWNE.

SHELburne MSS.—II.

(For the arrangement of these papers see p. 125 of 3 Rep. of the Hist. MSS. Commissioners.)

COLONIAL AFFAIRS AND PEACE WITH AMERICA, 1766-1783.

Vols. 43-88.

The majority of the papers in the volumes comprised under this division are either copies of papers or original letters written to or by Lord Shelburne during the period of his official connection with American affairs. Interspersed with these, e.g. in Vols. 45 and 46, are papers relating to the foreign politics of Europe.

Several of the papers in this Report are printed in Vol. 1 of my Life of Lord Shelburne. Others will appear in the succeeding volumes:

Vols. 43 and 44.

Two large folio volumes labelled Assiento papers. They contain copies of papers, and many original letters and documents relating to the Assiento affairs, from 1718-48. Each volume has at the beginning a list of its contents. The Assiento is the name by which historically the contract between the King of Spain and other papers for furnishing the Spanish dominions in America with negro slaves is known. It was transferred to England and vested in the South Sea Company, in 1713, by the Treaty of Utrecht. The differences with regard to it were one of the causes of the war with Spain in 1739, and the fall of Sir Robert Walpole. The Treaty of Aix la Chapelle continued it in the hands of the South Sea Co. for four years, after which it reverted to Spain. As all the papers in these two volumes relate to the same subject, no detailed list has been given.

Vols. 45-46.

Two volumes bound in red morocco and labelled "American Papers." The first volume contains copies of queries to Governors, and their answers, with projects, plans, representations, &c., from 1705 to 1724. The second volume contains copies of several letters and documents from 1686 to 1766. Both volumes are important for the early history of the American colonies.

Vol. 45.

Orders and instructions to the Captains General and Governors in Chief in and over our colonies and islands in America, and of the several laws relating to trade and navigation.
